and euery daye: ſodaynly doeſt thou * trye hym.

Why goeſt thou not from me, nor letteſt me alone, ſo longe tyll I maye ſwaile downe my ſpytle? I haue offended, and what ſhal I do vnto the. O thou preſeruer of men: Why haſt thou made me to ſtande in the waye, and am ſo beuie a burthen vnto my ſelfe? Why doeſt thou not forgyue me my ſinne? Wherefore takeſt thou not awaye my wychedneſſe? Beholde, now muſt I ſleepe in the duſt, and yf thou ſekeſt me tomoze in the moynynge, I ſhal be gone.

The viii. Chapter.

¶ Job is excuſed, and noted to haue deſerued his payne. A deſcription of hypocryte.

¶ Then answered Bildad the Subite and ſayde: howe longe wilt thou talke of ſuche thynges? howe long ſhall thy mouth ſpeake ſo proude wordes? Doeth God peruerſe the thyng that is lawfull? Or doth the almyghty deſtroy the thyng, that is ryght? For ſeing that thy ſonnes ſpinned agaynſt hym, dyd not he puniſh them for theyr wychedneſſe? Yf thou woldeſt now reſorte vnto God by tymes, and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghty, yf thou woldeſt lye a pure and a godly lyfe, ſhulde he not awake vnto the immedyate, and gyue the the beautye of ryghteouſneſſe agayne? In ſo moche, that wherein ſouer thou haddeſt litle afoze, thou ſhouldeſt nowe haue greates aboun-dancer.

Enquyre (I praye the) of them that haue bene befoze the, * and ſearche diligently among theyr fathers. For we are but of yeſterdaye, and conſpyre not, that * our dayes vpon earth are ſlender but but a very shadowe. Shall not they see we the and tell the prea, and gladly confesse the same?

May a rushe be grene withoute mofnesse?
Or may the grasse growe withoute water? No, but (or ever it be shot forth, and or it be gathered) it wytheth it be of any other herbe. Euen so goeth it wyth all them that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought, his confydence shall be destroyed, and his trust shall be a spiders webbe. He shall leane vpon his house, but it shall not stande: he shall holde hym fast by it, yet shall it not endure. It is euen as a grene tree before the Sunne, and sheweth forth the branches in his garden. It taketh many rootes by a wellpde, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones. But yf it be taken oute of his place, euerie man denyetht it, sayinge: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it with hym, that re-topseth in his owne doinges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth.

Beholde, God wyll not cast away a virtuous man, neyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye.
Thy mouth shall be fylled with laughynge, and thy lippes with gladnesse. They also that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwelling of the vngodly shall come to nought.

¶ The .ix. Chapter.

¶ Job declareth the benyfyces of God, and that manne ryghteousnesse is necessarye.

Job. xix. 1.

In answered, and sayde: I knowe it is so of a truche. For how maye a man (compared vnto God) be iustified?
Yf he wyll argue wyth hym, there is not one amonge a thousande that can answer hym. Concernynge suche as be wyse of herte, or myghtye in strength, who euer prospered, that tolde parte agaynst hym? He translateth the mountaynes of euer they be aware. It is he that ouerthroweth them in his wrath. He remoueth the earth out of her place, that the pillars thereof shake withall. He commaundeth the sunne, and it receyeth not: he closeth by the starres, as it were vnder a sygnet. He hym selfe alone spreadeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waters in the see. He maketh the waues of heauen the Orion, * the seven starres, and the secrete places of the south. He doth great thynges, such as are vnsceacheable: yea, and wonders woutt nbbze.

Job. xix. 2.

Job. xix. 3.

Lo, when he goeth ouer by me, I shall not se hym. And when he departeth by me, I shall not loke vpon hym. I shall not perceyue hym. Yf he be halfe to take any thyng a waye, who wyll make hym restore it agayne? Or who wyll saye vnto hym: what dost thou? he is God, whose wrath no man maye withstande, but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder hym. howe shall I then answer hym? Or what wordes shalbe I fynde out agaynst hym? Yea, though I were epphtons, yet might I not geue him one worde agayne, but meke ly submyt my selfe to hym as my iudge. Yf I had called vpon hym, and he had answered me: yet wolde I not beleue, that he herde my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tēpest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He wyll not lette my spyte be in rest, but fylleth me with bytternesse.

¶ Men wyll speake of strengthe, lo, he is stronger: ¶ Men wyll speake of ryghteousnesse, who dare be my recorde? ¶ I wyll iustifie my selfe, myne owne mouth shall condemne me: yf I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall repproue me a wyched doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare: yet am I werpe of my lyfe.

* One thyng it is, and therefore I sayde: he destroyeth both the ryghteous and vngodlye.
And though he slap sodeynly with the scourge, yet wyll he laugh at the punishment of the innocent. As for the world, it is gyuen ouer into the hande of the wyched, and he shall cover the faces of the iudges therof. Is it not so? where is there any, but he is suche one.

* My dayes are more swifte then a runner: they are gone, and haue sence no good thyng.
They are passed awaye as the wyppes that be good vnder sayle, and as the Egge that flyeth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynyng, to leaue of fro my wrath, and to comforte my selfe, then I am afrayed of all my sorrowes: for I knowe that thou wilt not iudge me innocent. ¶ I be then a wyched doer, why laboure I in vayne? ¶ I wash my selfe wyth snowe water, and make my handes neuer so cleane as the wel, yet shalt thou dyppe me in the myle, and myne owne clothes shall despyle me.
For he that I must geue answer vnto, and to whom I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any dayman to laye his hande be-twene vs: Let hym take his rodde a waye from me: yea, lette hym make me nomore afrayed of hym, and then shall I answer hym wythout a nye feare: for as longe as it is thus, I can make no answer.

¶ The .x. Chapter.

¶ Job is sorrye of his lyfe, and seeketh out his fragi-lite before God. He declareth the tyme to repente, A description of death.

In greued my soule to lyue: I wyll make my complayne, and wyll speake out of the very heynesse of my soule I wyll say vnto God: O do not condemne me, but shewe me the cause wherefore thou contendest so with me: Thinkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to caste me of, (being the workes of thy handes) and to mayn-tayne the counsaile of the vngodly? Hast thou fleshye eyes? or dost thou loke as a man lo-keth? Or are thy dayes as the dayes of man, and thy yeares as mannes yeares? That thou makest suche inquisiçon for my wychednesse, and searchest out my synne? Where as (not with-standyng) thou knowest that I am no wyched person, and that * there is no man able to deli-uer me out of thy hande.

* Thyne handes hath made me, and fashyoned me all togyther rounde aboute, whylste thou then destroye me sodeynly? O remembre (be-seche the): howe that thou madest me of the moude of the earth, and shalt hyunge me in to dust agayne.

Hast thou not turned me, as it were imple, and turned me to crabs like these? Thou hast covered me with shynne & fleth, & iopned me together with bones & sinowes. Thou hast grauted me lyfe, and done me good: and the dyspget hede that I rokest vpon me, hath perserued my sperte.

Thou hast hyd these thynges in thyne hert. I am sure that thou remembrest this thyng. Pf I byd synne, thou haddest an eye vnto me, and walt not declare me innocet because of mine offence. Pf I haue done wychedly, wo is me therfore. Pf I haue done ryghteously, yet darre I not lyfte vpon my hede so full am I of confusion and se myne owne myserye.

Thou hunttest me out (beynge in heuynesse) as it were a lyon, and troublest me oute of measure. Thou byngest frethe wytnesse agaynst me, and thy wrath increaseth thou vpon me, verie many are the plagis that I am in. Wherfore haste thou brought me out of my mothers wode? What I had persyded, and that no eye had sene me. Pf they had carped me to my graue as soone as I was borne, then wold I be nowe as though I had neuer bene. Are not my dayes fewe? Let hym then leaue of fro me and let me alone, that I may ease my selfe a litle afore I go thither, from whence I shall not turne agayne enen to the lande of darkenesse and shadowe of death: yea, into the darke cloudy lande and deadly shadowe, where as is no order, but terrible feare as in the darkenesse.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Job is vniuersally reprehended of Sophar. God is incomprehensible. He is mercifull to the repentant.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayd: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shulde he that habileth muche be commended? Shulde men geue eare vnto the onely? Thou wylt laugh othert men to scoorne, and shall no body mocke the agayne? Wylt thou say vnto God. The thyng that I take in hande is perfite, and I am cleane in thy syght? What God wolde speake & open his spyces agaynst the, that he myght shewe þe (oute of hys secreete wysdome) why he rewarde the double as he was appoynted to do: the shuldest thou knowe, that God hath forgotten the, because of thy synne.

Are thou able to fynde oute the secretes of God? Wylt thou attayne to the parfines of the almygdelye? He is hyer then heuyn, what art thou able to do? Deper then the hell, howe wylt thou then knowe hym? Hys length exceedeth the length of the earthe, and hys bredeth the bredeth of the sea. Though he turne all thynges vpon spede downe, close the in gather them together, who wyl turne hym from hys purpose? Why dost thou so?

For it is he that knoweth the vanite of man, he seeth they wychednesse also. Shulde he not then consyder it? A wayne body exalteth hym selfe, and a mā newe borne is lyke a wyde asses colt. Pf thou haddest nowe a ryght herte, & lyftest vpon thyne handes towards him: pf thou woldest put away the wychednesse whych thou hast in hande, so that yn vngodlynesse dwelle in thy house, then myghtest thou lyft vpon thy face with out shame, and then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no neede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy mysery, and thynke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shouldest thou be as cleare as the noone daye, and sprynge forth as the moynynge. Then myghtest thou haue coforte, in the hope that thou hast: & sleepe quetly, when thou art buryed. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and noman make the afraid yea, many one shoulde set marche by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly: they shalbe consumed, and not escape: they hope shalbe myserye and sorowe of mynde.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Job throweth vpon payence, declaring the myght and power of God.

Job answered, and sayd: Then (no I doubt) are the men alone, and wysdome shall perpe the wrythpon. But I haue vnderstanding as well as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whome God heareth, is mocked of hys neyghbour: the godly and innocent mā is laughed to scoorne. Godlynes is a lyght dyspyled in the hartes of the ryche, and is set for them to stumble vpon. The houses of robbers are in welch & profperitie: & they that maliciously medle agaynst God, dwell without care in those thynges that God hath gyuen echely wryth hys hande.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Job reponeth bya scowles with theyr owne sayenges, and condempneth popye lye.

In al thys haue I sene wth myne eye, heard wth myne eare, & vnder-stand it. Loke what ye know, that same do I know also, neither am I inferiour vnto you. Auerthelesse, I talke with the Almighty, & my desire is to commen with god. As for you ye are workmaisters of lyes, & vnpropheteable pbyscions al togther.
Wolde god ye kept your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyse men. Howe heare my chyldyng, and ponder the sentence of my lippes.

Do ye speake iniquitie agaynst God, & talke agaynst hym wth dyscreyte: Wyl ye not accept the person of hym? Or wyl ye contende w God?
Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to re-kenyng? For as one mā mocketh an other, so do ye mocke hym. He shall punyssh you, & reproue you, yf ye do secretly accept any persone. Shall he not make you afraide, when he sheweth him selfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you your remembraunce is lyke vnto a sparke, and your bodies lyke the claye.

Holde your tonges, for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sojowne shalbe the lesse.
Wherefore do I beare my selfe in my teth, & and put my soule in mine handes? Lo, though he slay me yet wyl I put my truste in hym. But I wil reproue myne owne wapes in his syght he shall make me whole, & there maye no pproyte come before hym. heare my wordes, and ponder my sayenges with your eares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, & knowe that I shal be founde ryghteous. What is he, that wyl go to lawe wth me? (As hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tonge, and dye. Auerthelesse, graunte me two thynges, and then wylle I not hyde my selfe from the.

Wythdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearefull dyde of the make me afraide.
And then call me, and I wyl answere: or els let me speake, and geue me thou an answer. Howe many are my mysdoes & synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences: Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemy? Wylle thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a flyng leafe, and folowe vpon dype stubble?
For thou lapest sharply to my charge, and punysteth me: for the synnes of my yowthe. Thou puttest my fete also in the stocks: and lokest na-rowly vnto all my pathes, and markest steppes of my fete where as I (not withstandinge) must consume lyke as a foule carpon, and as a clothe that is mocheaten.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Job describeth the lyfe of man, and prophesyeth of the resurreccion. Howe suffereth the goodly, yf they obteyne that they loue for.

In that is born of woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is fulle of myserye. He cometh vp, and is cut downe lyke a flower. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer contynueth in one state. Woe it thou open thyne eyes vpon suche one, and dysngest me in thy iudgemente?
Who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vncleane thyng? No bodye. The dayes of mā surelpe are determyned, the nombre of his monethes then are knowen only vnto the. Thou hast ap-poynted hym his boundes, which he can not go beyond. So fro hym that he maye rest: (a litle) vntill his daye come: whiche he loketh for, lyke as an hyzelyng doeth.

If a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyl sproute, and shote forth the boun-ches agayne. For though frote of it be waxen olde, and the stocke therof be dead in the grounde yet when it getteth sent of water, it wyl bud, and dyspunge forth the bowes, lyke as a tree that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished and consumed away, what becometh of him?

The cloudes when they be dyed vp, and dry-uers when they be emptye, as fylled agayne the rowe the flowing waters of the sea, but when man slepeth he ryleth not agayne (of his owne strength) vntill the heauen peryth: he shal not wake vp, nor ryle out of his slepe. What thou woldest hepe, and hyde me in the hell, vntill thy wash were fylled, and to appoynte me a tyme wherein thou myghtest remembre me. Wape adeade man lyue agayne? All the dayes of my lyfe wyl I wape tyl, tyl my chaungyng shal come. Thou shalt call me: and I shall answere the: despyse not thou the woyle of thyne owne handes.

For nowe thou nobrest all my goynges, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synnes. My iniquitie is laded vp, as it were in a bagge: but be me a fall vnto my wychednes. The moystay-nes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are remoued out of their place, & waters pearce thow the very stones by lytle & lytle. Cloudes washe awaye the grauell and earth. And destroyed is the hope of mā: Thou pynaplest tyll agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungeth his estate, and puttest hym from the. And whether his chyldren come to worshippe or no, he can not tell. And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth: his selfe must haue trausple, and whyle the soule is in hym: he must be in sojowne.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Eliphaz reproueth Job because he asseybeth himselfe and putteth in hym selfe. He describeth the curle that falleth on the wyched, ascharging Job to be one of the number.

When answered Eliphaz the Themanite, and sayde: Shall a wyse man assewe be the seynce of the wynde, and fylle any mans belly, as it were the wynde of the East?
Shal he reppour with a woyle that is nothyng woyle woyde, and speake the thynges: wherfore can do no good: As for shame, thou hast set it aside, els wouldest thou not make so many woordes before God, but thy wychednesse teacheth thy mouth and so thou hast chosen a crafty tongue. Thyne owne mouth condemnerth the, & not I, yea, thyne owne lippes shalpe an answer agaynst the.

Arte thou the fyrry ma, that euer was bozne O, wast thou made before the byls/baste thou berde the secreete counsell of God that all wysedome is to lytle for the: What knowest thou we knowe not: And what vnderstandest thou but we can the same: With vs are both olde and aged men: yea, suche as haue luyed longer then thy father.

Thynkest thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God: With the is a lyunge woerde.
Wher doth thyne here to bewytche þ. And wher foze wyphkest thou wyth thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so puffed up agaynst God, & lettest such woordes go out of thy mouth: What is ma, that he shuld be cleene: what hath he (which is bozne of a woman) wherby he myght be ryghteous: Beholde he doth not trust his saintes: yea, the very heauens are not cleane in his syght. Howe much more then an abhominable and vyle ma, wherby dyphkest wychednesse lyke water: I will tell the, heare me: and I wyl shewe the þ I haue sene: whiche wyse men haue tolde, and hath not ben hyd from the: fathers vnto whome only þ erth was geue & no strainger went among the.

The vngodly soroweth all þ dayes of his lyfe as it were a woman with a chylde, and the nombze of a tyzauntes peares is vnkowen. A fearefull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered oute of darkenesse, for the sweard is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his luyng, he seeth playnyte & the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorow and carefulnesse wyl make him asfayde, & compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge w his hoste ready to the barayle. For he hath streched out his hande agaynst God, & armed him selve agaynst the almyghty. He runneth proude lye vpon hym, and with a styffe necke fygherth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth his face wyth fastenesse, and maketh his body well ly-kyng. Therefore shall his dwelling be in desolate cityes, and in houses which no man inhaby-terth, but are become heapes of stones. He shall not be ryche, neyther shall his substance continue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shall neuer come out of darkenesse, the flame shall bye vpon his braunches: with the blast of the mouth of God, shal be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vanitie, and yet is he out of the waye, & va-nitye shal be his recompence.

He shall perper, asoze his tyme be doyme out, and his braunche shal not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntimely grape fed þ vyne: and shall let his floure fall, as the olyue doth.
For the congregacyon of hypocrites shal be desolate and vnfutefull, and the fyre shal consume the houses of such as are greedy to receyue gyf-tes: & he conuertyth transayle, and bracteth vanetye, and thes hope byphgerth forth decepte.

The xvi Chapter.

Now vnderstond his myserie, sayeth that he suffereth more then his wychednesse hath deserued.

Ob answered and sayd: I haue oft-mes berde suche thynges, myserable geuers of comforte are ye, all þ sozte of you. Shall not payne woordes yet come to an ende?

O, hast thou yet any moze to saye: I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God that your soule were in my soules stede: then shoulde I heape vpon woordes agaynst you, & shalpe my bed at you. I shoulde comforte you with my mouth, and release your payne with the talking of my lippes. (But what shall I do) For all my woordes, my sorowe wylle not cease: and though I hold my tongue, yet wyl it not departe from me. But now that God hath set me aduersitie, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon.

And that thou hast tyllied me wyth wyphles, my floure is recozd, and my leane is exposed vpon agaynst me, & beareth wyphnes agaynst me.
He is angrye at me, he hateth me: and gnaweth vpon me wyth his teeth. Myne enemye shoul-deth vpon me wyth his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpon me, & snypeten me vpon the cheke despytefullye, they gather them selues togyther agaynst me.
God hath put me in pteace wyth the vngod-lye, and deliuered me into the handes of þ woeked. I was in welth, but he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and sette me as a marke for hymselfe.
His archers compasse me rounde about: he wounded my loppes, and doth not spare. My boweis hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gyaunte. I haue sowed a sacke-clothe vpon my lhyne, and lye wyth my beate in the duste.

My face is swollen wyth weppynge, & myne eyes is the shadowe of death. Howbeit there is no wychednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my blood, and let my cryenge fynde no rowme.

For lo, my wyphnesse is in heuen: and he that knoweth me is aboute in the beyghes. My fren-des gyue me many woordes to scozne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a bo-dye myght please wyth God, as one man doeth wyth another: yet the nombze of my peares is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The xvii Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth alwaye, and yet heary pauentye abyden.

My beate synneth, my dayes are shortened. I am darde at deathes doze. Kroward men are wyth me and myne eye must contynue in þ bytternes of the. O deliuer me, & loke out one to be my surety: I shal sight, what is he þ knoweth who wil ymes for me?

B me: For thou hast withheld thy bow from understanding: therefore shall I not see (them) by my eyes. He promised by his friends parte of hys good, but hys owne chyldren spende it. He hath made me as it were a byword of the people: where as a foze I was there sope. Myne eye is by myne foze verpe heupnesse, and all my strength is become lyke a shadowe. Verruouse men therefore shall wel consyder this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynst the pprophete.

C The eyghtroule also wyl kepe hys waye, & he that hath cleane handes, wyl ever be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) seynge I can not fynde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past and my counsailes, and thoughtes of my parte are vanquished a waye, chaungynge the nyghte in to daye, and the lyghte into darkenesse. Though I tary neuer so much, yet the grane is my house and I haue made my bed in the darke. I callupton my father, & the women call I my mother and syster. What helpe they my longe tarepence? Who hath consydered the thyng, & I loke for? All that I haue shall go downe into the pyt, and lye wyth me in the dust.

The xviij. Chapter.

Wherby the xviij. chapter of the booke of Job is told and wycked.

3 When answered Elidab the Subite & sayde: when wyl ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke well, and then the wyl speake. Wherfore are ye counted as beastes, and reputed so vyle in your syghte? He destroyeth hym selfe wyth hys anger: What the earth be for laken, or any stone remoued oute of hys place, because of the Pea, the lyghte of hys godly qualbe put out: and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The lyghte shall be darke in hys dwellynge, & his can-dell shall be put out wyth hym. hys presumptuous goynge are hepte in, and his owne counsel shall cast hym downe. For hys fete are taken as it were in the net, and he is at hys wyttres ende. hys fete shall be holden in the snare, and it shall catche them that be thysly of blood: The snare is layde for hym in the grounde, and a pyttal in the waye.

D Fearfulnesse shall make hym a strayde on eue-ry syde, that he shall not know, where to get out hunger shall be hys strengthe: my fortune shall hange vpon hym. He shall eate the strengthe of hys owne skynne, euen the fyrt bozme of beache shall eate hys strength. hys hope shall be rooted out of hys dwellynge, verpe fearfulnessse shall byng hym to the hyng. Other men shall dwell in hys house (but shall be none of hys) and hym stone shall be scattered vpon his habitacyon. His rootes shall be dyed by dyrt, and aboue shall his byaunche be cut downe: his remembraunce shall perpe from the earth, and he shall haue no name in the strete: they shall byng hym fro the lyghte into darkenesse, and cast hym cleane out of the world. He shall neither haue chyldren nor hynsfolkes amonge hys people, no, nor any posterite in his dwellynge. The that come after hym, shall be astonied at hys daye, and they that go before, shall be a strayde. Suche are now the dwellynge of the wycked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

The xix. Chapter.

Wherby the xix. chapter of the booke of Job is told and wycked.

1 He answered, and sayd: howe long wyl I be bere my soule, and trouble me wyth wordes? Lo, ten times haue ye rejoyced me: and are not ashamed for to laughe me so to kozne: yf I go wryonge, I go wryonge to my self But yf ye wyl enbaunce your seines agaynst me, & accuse me to be a wycked person, by cause of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe thys then, that it is god that hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wyth his net. yf I complayne of the violence done vnto me, I can not be heard. And yf I cry, there is no sentence geuen with me. He hath dedged vpon my voyce, that I can not passe, and he hath set darkenesse in my pathes. * He hath spoyled me of myne honour, and taken the crowne awaye from my heade. He hath destroyed me on euery syde & I am vndone: my hope hath be taken awaye from me, as it were a tree plucked vpp by the roote. His wyath is kyndled agaynst me: he taketh me as though I were hys enemye.

2 hys men of warre came togyther, whyche made they waye ouer me, and besieged my wellynge rounde about. * He hath put my brethren farre awaye from me, and such as were of myne acquayntaunce, are become straungers vnto me * Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me, & my frendes haue put me oute of remembraunce The seruautes and maydens of myne owne house, toke me for a straiger: and I am become as an aleaunt in theyr syghte.

3 I called my seruaunt, and he gaue me no answer: no though I prayed him with my mouth Myne owne wyfe myght not abyde my breath I was fayne for to speake fayne for the chyldre of myne owne body. Pea, the chyldren despyled me. And when I was gone fro them, they spake euell vpon me. All suche as were my moste familyers, abhorred me: and they whome I loved best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my fleshe is a way, only ther is left me the skynne about my tethe. Haue pytie vpon me, haue pytie vpon me, (O p: my fren-des) for the hnde of God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God doth, and are not satisfied of my fleshe.

4 That my wordes were not we wyrtten: O that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were grauen wyth an yron penne in leade, or in stone to conpauue. For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne wyth thys skynne, and le God in my fleshe. Pea I my selfe shall beholde hym, not w other, but with thys same eyes. My reynes are consumed wyth me, yd not pe saye: why doeth he suffre persecution? Is there founde an occasiō in me But be ware of the sword, for the sword wyl be aucth

he auenged of wychednesse: & he sure, that there is a Judgemente.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Jobber sayeth, that the wycked shall, the conuyns, and the wycked shall haue a quite ende.

Job answered Sophar & Naama-thite, and sayd: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to an-swere. And why my mynde is rea-dye wpythin me. I haue sufficiently hearde thy checkyng and reppose, therfore am I purposed to make answer after mine vnderstandyng. Knowest thou not this, namelpe, that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creatyon of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of þe yngod lye hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of wyckednesse continued but the tynnyng of an eye.
Though he be magnified vnto the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he perissheth for euer, in so moche þe thyng which haue sene hym, shall saye: Where is he?
He shall vanysh as a dreame: so that he can no-moze be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vision in the nyght. So that þe eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no moze syght of hym, and his place shall knowe hym no moze. His chyldren shall be fayne to agree wpyth the pooze, and his handes shall restoze theyr goodes.

From his yowth his bones are full of pleasures, but now he shall lye downe wpythin hym in the earth. Why? Wyckednesse was swete in his mouth, he dyd it vnder his tonge. That he fauoured, that woulde he not forsake, but kepte it close in his throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the poyson of the serpent, within his body. The rycheesse that he deuoured, shall he parþake agayn, for God shall dawe them out of his belly, he shall sucke the gall of serpentes, and the adders tonge shall slawe hym: so that he shall nomoze se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter. The thyng that oþer men haue laboured for, shall be restoze agayne, and shall not eate it vp.

Great trouble shall he make for rycheesse, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poze, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buyded them. His belly coulde neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perissh in his conetousnesse. There shall none of his meat be lefte behynde, therfore shall no mā loke for his prosperitie. When he had plenteousnesse of euery thyng, yet was he pooze, though he was helped on euery syde.

For though the wycked haue neuer so moche to fylle his belly, yet God shall sende his wyath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to rapyne ouer hym: so that þe he shal the prynces weapons, he shall be shot wpyth the stele bowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of þe quyer, and a glysteryng swearde shalowe the gall of hym, teare shal come vpon him. There shall no darke-nesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkynndly fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remaineth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wychednesse, & the earth shall take parte agaynst hym. The substance that he hath in his house, shall be taken awaye and perissh, in the daye of the Lordes wyath. * This is the portion that the wycked man shall haue of God, & the heritage that he maye loke for of God: by cause of his wordes.

Job receyved the prosperitie of the wycked, and after destryed theyr sodayne ruyn and destruction.

Job answered and sayde: O beare my wordes, and that shall be my com-forte of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorn. (If it lyke you.) Is it for mannes sake that I make this dysputacyon?
Whiche if it were so, shoulde not my speche be then soze in trouble? Make me well, and be a baulshed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth for when I consider my selfe I am ashyde, & my helthe is smytten with feare. * Wherefore do wycked men lyue in helth and prosperitie, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches: Theyr chyliden lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Theyr houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. Theyr bullocke gendryeth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vntofull.

They sende forth theyr chyliden by flockes and theyr sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare wyth them tabzettes and harpes, and haue in-strumetes of musycke at theyr pleasure. They spende theyr dayes in welthyngnesse: but sodayn-ly they go downe to hel. They saye also vnto God, go from vs: we despyse not thy knowledge of thy wayes. * What is the Almyghtye, that we shulde feare hym? And what profyte shulde we haue to submyt our selues vnto hym? For there is vnto us no goodnesse in them, therfore I will not haue to do with the counsaile of the vngodly. How ofte shall the candle of the wyche be put out: howe oft cometh theyr destruccyon vnto them? O what sorow shall God gyue them for theyr part in his wyath? Yea they shall be cut as haye before the wynde, and as chaffe that the storme carryeth awaye.

And though God saue theyr chyliden from suche sorowe, yet wylle he so rewarde them sel-ues, that they shall knowe it. Theyr owne destruction and myserye shall they se wpyth theyr eyes, and dyspke of the fearful wyath of the Al-myghtye. For what careth he what becometh of his household after his death, when the number of his monethes is cut shorte? In as moche then as God hath the hyeste power of all, who can teach him any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtye, and at his best ryche, and in prosperitie, euen when his bowels are at the fastest, and his bones full of marpe. An oþer dyeth in sorowe and heynnesse, and neuer hadde good dayes. They shall slepe bothe alyke in the earth, & the wyemen shall couer them. Beholde, I know what pethynke, yea: and the subtylpe that ye pynnyng agaynst me. For ye say: where is the pynners palace? & where is the dwelling of the

of the vngodly: haue ye not ashen them that go by the way? Doubtlesse, ye can not denie the tokens, that * the wyched is kept vnto the day of destruction, and that the vngodlye shall be brought forth to the daye of wrath. Who darre repproue hym for his waye to his face? who wyl erreward hym, for the vngreacyousnesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to hys graue, and dwel amonge the heape of the deade. Then shall he be sayne to be buried amonge the stones of playne. All men also must folow hym, and there are innumerable gone before hym. how dayne then is the comforte that ye geue me? Doth not falshe remayne in all your answers?

The xxiij. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vngreacyousnesse.

Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answer, and sayd: May a man be profytable vnto God, as he is wyle maye be profytable to hym selfe? Is it any auauntage vnto the Almyghtye, that thou arte eygdenous? O shall it profyte hym, that thou makest thy wayes partyte? Is he afeayde to repproue the, and to strepe forth with the in to iudgement? Is not thy wychednesse great, & thyne vngreacyous dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for noughte, and robbed the naked of thei clothyng: To suche as were wery, hast thou gyue no water to drynke, and haste withdrawen breade from the hongrye. Shulde such one the as vseth violence wronge and oppresyon (dopnge all thynges of parcialite, and hauing respect of persons) dwel in the lande? Thou hast sent wydowes awape emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore arte thou compassed aboute wryth snares on euerye syde, and suddenlye vexed wryth feare: Shuldest thou the se no darknesse? Shulde not the waterflood runne ouer the? Now * because that God is hyer then the heauens, and because thou seest that the starres are so hye, wryth thou therfore saye: Tush, how shuld god knowe? Doth his dominion reach beyonde the cloude? Tush, the cloude couer hym that he maye not se, and he dwilleth aboue heauē. Doe st not thou kepe the olde waye that dayne men haue gone? Which were cut downe out of tyme, and whose foundacyon was as a runnyng water whiche sayd vnto God: go from vs, and what did? Almyghtye wryth them? he spyled thei houses w good thynges. But the counsaile of the vngodlye is farre frome. The ryghteous sawe it, and were glad, & the innocent laughed hym to scozne. Is our encrease hewen downe? As for the remnant of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

Therfore reconyle the vnto God, & he content. so shall all thynges prosper with thee. Keppue the lawe at hys mouth, and laye vpon hys wordes in thyne harte. For * yf thou wylt turne to the Almyghtye, thou shalt stande fast, and put al vngreacyousnes from thy dwel lyng: Thou shalt make golde as plentyfull as the duste, and the golde of Ophir as the syntes of the cyuers. Yea, Almyghtye God bys owne selfe shall be thy defenr, and thou shalt haue pltye of thy lare. Then shalt thou haue thy dwelte in the Almyghtie, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto hym, & he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promyses. Then loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prosper with the: and the lyght shall shyne in thy wayes. For * who so hablerh hym selfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so lokech mekely shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer the country, because of the vngyltynesse of thy handes.

Job affirmeth that he hath knowen & secretly the power and sentence of the Judge, and sayeth that he hath knowen in hys vngreacyousnesse.

In answered, and sayde: My sayinge is yett hye in hytternesse, and my hande heuy, because of my gromyng. O that I myght se him, and fynde hym. O that I myght come before his seate to plede my cause before him, and to syl my mouth with argumentes. That I myght knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: and that I myght vnderstand what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaynst me wryth hys greates power and strengthe? So, but he wyl make me the stronger. he that is iust, shall entre disputacion with hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for ever. Se holde, though I go before, I fynde hym. If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of hym. If I go on f left syde where he doth hys worke, I can not attayne vnto hym. Agayne If I goe on the ryght syde, he bydeth hym self, that I can not se hym. But as for my waye, he knoweth it and * trespeth me as the golde in fyre.

Wyfote doth kepe his pathe, hys hys waye haue I holden, and wyl not go out of it. I wyl not forsake the commaundement of hys lippes but loke what he charged me wryth hys mouth, that I haue shue vp in my harte. he is styple at one poynt, and who wyl turne hym backe? he doeth as hym lysteth, & byngeth to passe what he wyl. he perfourmeth the thynges that is appoynted for me, and many suche thynges doeth he. This is the cause that I wyne at hys ptesence, so that when I cōsider hym, I am afrayd of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my harte softer: and seying that he is Almyghtye he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darkenes, neyther hath he couered the cloude from my face.

Job descreyeth the wychednesse of men, & sheweth what sinne is belongeth to the wyched.

Onlydering the, & ther is no time byd frō the almyghtie, howe happyeth it, & they whyche knowe hym, do not regard his dayes? For some menber be, & remouer othe lande marked: & robbe them of they cattle and kepe same for they owne: that * daye a waye fall of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes ope for a pledge: that thrust & poore out of the doore and oppresse the symple of the world togyther. Beholde, curu as the wyde allen in the defects go they saye to they: waye: & eyle by tyme to spyle to spoyle: For, the very wyldzenesse ministereth foode for theyr chyldren. They reape the coine felde that is not theyr owne: & let the vncyphard of the vngodlye alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes to couer them, & to kepe them from cold So that when the howes in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, & they be al wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them amonge the rocks.

They spoyle the suckyng fatherlesse chyld, and take the pledge from the poore. In so moch that they let hym go naked without clothyng and haue taken awaye the sheafe of the donger.
The poore are sayne to labour in their oyle mylles: yea, and to treade in their wynepresses, and yet to suffer thyrse. The men of the City crye to the Lorde with syghyng, & the soules of the flayne also make theyr complaint. But God de-stroyeth them not for al this, where as they (not withstandyng) are conuersant amonge them, that abhorre the lyght: they knowe not his way nor conspyue in his pathes. & Tynely in f monyng do they aryse, to murder the symple and poore: and in the nyght they go a styalynge.

The eye of the aduoutreer wayteth for f dare henes, and sayth thus in hym selfe: Tyl, there shall no eye se me: and so he dysguyseth his face.

In the nyght season they search f houses and hyde them selues in the dape tyme, but wyl not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the dape breaketh, the shadow of death cometh vpon them and they go in horrible darknes. The vngodly is wyfter then the water: theyr poore shall be curst in the earth, and he shall not beholde the waye of the vyneyardes. O that they (for the wyckednes which they haue done) were dya-ble to the hell, sooner than knowe melteth at f dourth and heate. O that al compassion vpon them were forgotten: that theyr deynities were woymes, f they were cleane put out of remembraunce, and vngodlynesse betwixt heuen & one lyke as a tree. He hath oppresed the barren, that he can not beare, and vnto the wyddowe hath he done no good. He drew the myghtye after hym with his power, and when he was gotten vp, no ma-was without feare, as longe as he lyued. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyl not recuse it, for theyr eyes looke vpon theyr owne wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme poverty, and taken out of the waye: yea, and vtterly plucke of, as the eares of coine. Is it not so? who wyl then repproue me as a lyar, and say that my wodes are nothyng worth.

The xxv. Chapter.

Whylad ploveth that no man wyl cleane and without synne before God.

Then answered Whylad the Subite, and sayde: Is there power and feare with hym alone, that maketh peace spredynge in his wyldzenesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose lyght arseth ouer all? But howe may a man be pared vnto God? he is iustified: O how can he be cleane, that is borne of a woman? He holde the wycked wyth nothyng in company-son to hym, and the starres are vncleane in his syght. Howe muche moze then, man: that is but corruptyon: and the sonne of man, which is but a woyme.

The xxvi. Chapter.

Job sheweth that man can not helpe God, and ploveth it by his myracles.

Then answered, and sayd: whom hast thou helped? hym that is without strength? What cōfōrte givest thou vnto hym that hath no strength?
Where is the counsaile that f shuldest geue hym, whyche hath no wysdome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryghte lyuynge? To whome hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the breath to come out of thy mouth? Are not dead thynges shapen vnder the waters: and thynges by f waters spde? Is he naked before hym, and the very destructyon is selfe, can not be hyd out of his syght. He stretcheth out f north ouer the emptye, and hangeth f earth vpon nothyng. He byndeth the waters in his clowdes and the cloud is not broken vnder them. He holdeth backe his stole, that it cannot be sene: and spredeth his cloude before it.

He hath compassed the waters with certapne boundes, vntyll the dape and nyght come to an ende. The very pylers of heauen tremble and quake at his reprofe. He splitteth the sea, with his power, and sheweth his wysdome, smyteth he the strength therof. His sperte hath garnished the deuens, and his hande hath made the rebellyous serpent. Lo, this is now a shorte summe of his wayes. But who is able: suffycently to reherse his wayes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thundre of his power?

The xxvii. Chapter.

The countenchaunce and pertynace of Job, and the paterof the vntaynted with God.

At Job proceeded & went forth in his commun: cation, sayng.
As truly as god lyueth (which hath taken awaye my iudge-ment) and the almyghtye that hath vnted my mynde: My lippes shall talke of no vanptrye, & my tongue shall speake no dysceyte, whyle my bze the is in me, and as longe as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrilles.

God forbyd, that I shuld graunt your cause to be ryght. As for me, vntyll myne ende come wyl I neuer go fro myne innocency. My rygh-tuous dealynge kepe I fast, whyche I wyl not forsake: my parte shall not repproue me of my daps. Therefore myne enemye shall be found as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vntightuous. For what hope hath f pyocrite though he hath grete good, & though God geue hym rycheesse after his hartes desyre?
Doe God heare hym the sooner, when he cryeth vnto him in his necessitie? Hath he such pleasure and delecte in the Almyghtye, that he darre alwaye call vpon God? I wyl teach you in the name of God, and the thyng that I haue of the Almyghtye

Almyghtye, wyl I not hope from you. Behold ye stande in your owne conceyte, as though ye knewe all thynges. Wherfore then do ye go aboute to such vayne wordes, sayinge: * This is the power that I wyched shall haue of God and the heritage that I shall haue. Shall receyue of the Almyghtye. If he get many chyldren, they shall preyside with the sworde, and his posteritye shall haue scarcens of bread. Loke whom he leueth behynde hym, they shall dye & be buried: and no man shall haue pitye of his wyddowes. Though he had as muche moneye as the dust of the earth, and payment as ready as the clay, he maye well prepare it: but the godly shall put it vpon hym, and the innocent shall deale out the money. His house shall endure as the moeth, and as a boote that the watchman maketh.

* When the tyme ma dyeth, he carryeth nothing wyth hym: he is gone in the twinkelyng of an eye, and hath nothing. Destruction taketh hold vpon him as a water flood, & the tempest shall leaue hym awaye, in y night season. A vehement east wynde carryeth hym hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh hym out of his place. It rusheth in vpon him, and spareth him not, he may not escape from the power thereof. The clay me theyr handes at hym: pea and lest of hym: when they loke vpon his place.

Job sheweth that the wysdome of God is vnderstandable.

Deuter. 32. 33.

THERE is a place: where silver is brought out of, and where gold is tryed: where yron is digged out of the ground, and stones resolu'd to metalle. The darkenesse shall ones come to an ende: he can seke out the ground of all thynges, the stones, the darke, and the shadowe of death. With the spuer of water parteth he a sonder the straunge people, that know no good neyghbourhede: such as are rude, vnmannerly and boysterous. He dryngeth food out of the earth, and that wyche is vnder, consumeth he wyth fyre.

There is founde a place, whose stones are all cleane Sapphires, and where the clottes of the earth are all golde. There is a way also that the byrdes know not, that no vulture eye hath sene wherln the Lyon whelpes walke nor, & wher no Lyon cometh. There putter he his hande vpon the stonye rocks, and overthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe out of the rocks, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it.

Out of droppe dryngeth he greates fountes together, & the dryngeth that is hyd, dryngeth he to lycht. Howe cometh a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men finde vnderstandynge? Merely no man can tell howe woithp a thyng is, neyther is the founte in the lande of them that lyue. (at theyr owne pleasure)

The depe sayth he is not with me. * The se sayth he is not with me. He can not be gotten for: (the most pure) golde, neyther may ppyce of her be bought wth any siluer: no wedges of gold of Ophir no precious Onix stones, no Sapphires maye be compared vnto her. No, neyther golde nor chrystall, neyther stonye shoures, nor golden place. There is nothyng so woithp, as is excellent, as ones to be named vnto her, for perfyte wpledome goeth farre beyonde them all. The Copas that cometh out of Inde: maye in no wyse be likened vnto her: pea, no manner of apparell shal be pleasaunt and saye so euer it be.

From whence then cometh wysdome? and where is y place of vnderstandynge? He is hyd from the eyes of all men lycht: pea, and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and death saye, we haue heard tell of her wyth oure eares. But God keth her waye, & knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world, and lokeh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes & measured the waters: whe he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghtye fountes a lawe. Then byd he se her, the declared he her, prepared her and knewe her. And vnto man he sayde: Beholde: * to seare the Loyde is wpledom, & to forsake euell is vnderstandynge.

Job complayneth of the prosperite of the tyme past, & howe he was reuenged by his frendes of iniury, because they sayd that Job had receyved accorde to his deservynge.

SO Job proceeded and wente forth in his communication, saying: O that I were as I was in y monethes by past, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lycht shyned vpo my heade, when I wente after the same lycht and shynynge euen thowowe the darkenesse. As it stode wyth me when I was yonge: when God prospered my house: when the Almyghtye was yet wyth me: when my chyldren stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer wyth butter, and when y stonye rocks gaue me ryuers of oyle, when I wote thowowe the cite vnto the gate, and when they set me a chappre in the strete: when the yonge me (as sone as they sawe me) byd them selues, and when the aged arose, & stode vp vnto me, when the wynges leste of theyr talkynge, and layde theyr hande to theyr mouth: when the myghtye kept theyr voyce, and when theyr tonge cleaued to the rooffe of theyr mouth. When all they that heard me, called me happye: and when all they sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered y pooze when he cryed, and so byd I the fatherles, and hym that had none to helpe hym. He that shuld haue bene lost, gaue me a good word and the wyddowes hart praysed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghtuousnes, whych couered me as a garment: and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye to the blynde, and a foote to y lame: I was a father vnto the pooze: & when I knew not y cause, I sought it out diligently. I bryake the chaues of the vngyghtuous ma, & pluck the spole out of his teche.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shoulde haue bene as many as the sandes of the see. For my roote was spred out by the water syde: and the dewe laye vpon my coyne. My honoure increased moze and moze, and my dothe was euer the stronger in myne hand. Vnto me men gaue eate, me they regarded: and with silence they sa sped for my countenance. If I had spoken, they would have it none other waies, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They wayped for me, as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me as the grounde doth to receyue the latter shoure. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest. And the light of my countenance wolde they not put out. When I agreed vnto they: waie, I was the chiefe, and lat as a hyng wth his armye aboute hym. And when they were in heapes, I was they: comfortour.

The xxx. Chapter.

The great despayre of man, and curse of God that too is death.

IEt now they that are ponger then I haue me in desolation: yea, euen they whose fathers I wolde haue thoughte scozne to haue let wth the dogges of my cattell. The power & strength of they: handes myght do me no good, for y time is but losse amonge them. For very misery and hunger they fled into y wyldernes, a darke place horrible and wast, plucking vp nettels amonge the bushes and the iuniper rotes for they: meate. And when they were byruen forth, men cryed after the, as it had bene after a thefe. They: dwellinge was beynde foule byches: yea in the caues and denues of the earth. Amonge the bushes went they aboute crying: and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were the chyldren of foolles and vyllaynes whych are vered out of the world. Howe am I they: long and am become they: islyngge Locke: they abhorre me, and fye farre from me, and stayne my face wth spetle. For the Lorde hath loosed the strength of my bodye, and byought me lowe: The byble haue they cast out of my syght. Vp my ryght hande eyle the yong men agaynst me, they haue hurte my sete treadyng vpon me, as vpon the wapes that they wold destroy. My pathes haue they cleane macted. It was so calpe for them to do me harme, that they neded no ma to driue them. They fell vpon me as it had bene the breahynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. A cruellesse is toward agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanquished a waye moze softly then the wynde, and my prosperite departed hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde poured full of heynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are praced thowde in the nyght season, and my senewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorowe is my garment chaunged and accordyng to the dyuerste of heynnes, am I gydded wth my coote. He hath call me into the myre, and I am become lyke ashyes and duste. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me, and thoughte I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou arte become myne enemye, and wth thy violente hande thou takeste parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou byddest let me by on bye, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou gyven me a very soie fall. Sure I am that thou wilt deliuer me vnto death: turn to y loughng that is due vnto al men lyving. Howe ble not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed already, but where hurt is done, there ble they to helpe. Wd not I wepe wth hym y was in trouble: had not my soule compassion vpon the pooze? Yet neuertheless, where as I lohed for good, euil happened vnto me: and where as I waiped for lyght, there came darkenesse. My bowels seeth wth in me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Welkely and lowly came I in: yea, and wthout any displeasure, I stode vp in the congregacion and communed wth them: But nowe I am a companion of dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My shynne vpon me is turned to blacke, & my bones are byente wth heate: my harte is turned to sorowe and my ppe to wepyng.

The xxxi. Chapter.

God respecteth the innocencye of his prayere, and number of his doctores.

IWade a covenante wth myne eyes I that I wolde not loke vpon a dam- self. For howe great a porcion shall I haue of God? and what inheritance to the almyghty on bye: As for the vngodlye & he that loyneth him selfe to the company of wyched doers, shall not destruction & misery come vpo hym: Both not he se my wapes & tell all my goynges: If I haue walked in vanite, or if my sete haue runne to discrepne, let me be waiped in an euen balancer, that God may se myne innocencie. If so be y I haue wythdrewen my sete out of the ryght waye, & if my hart hath folowed myne eye syght: If I haue stained or defyled my handes, that shall I fowe, & an othe eat: yea, my generacio & posterite shall be cleane rooted out. If myne harte hath lusted after my neygbboures wyfe, or if I haue layed wayte at his doore. Or when let my wyfe gynde vnto an other man, and let other me lye wth her. For this is a wychednes and sune, that is wothe to be punished: yea, a fyre that vterlye shall consume & roote out all my substance. Wd I curse thynke scozne to do ryght vnto my seruantes & maydens, when they had anye matter agaynst me? But seing that God wyl lye in iudgement what shall I do? And for somoch as he wyl nedes bysyt me, what answer shall I geue hym? He that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym allor were we not both shapen alyke in our mothers bodys? When the pooze despyed any thyng at me, haue I denyed it them? haue I caused the widdowe to stande waityng for me in dayne? haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherles hath had no part wth me? for mercy grewe vp wth me fro my yowth, & compassion from my mothers wombe. haue I seen anye man percyth thow nakednesse, & want of clothinge? Or anye pooze man for lacke of rayment, whose lydes thanked me not, because he was warmed wth the wall of my shete?

Wd I curse lyfte vp myne hand to hurt y fa- therles: yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in aucthorite, then let myne arme fall fro my shulder, and myne arme holes be broken fro the the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeance and punishment of God, and therefore verily wel, that I was not able to beate hys burthen. haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confidence? haue I reioyced because my power was great, and because my hande gat so muche? * Dyd I euer regarde greatly the rylinge of the Sunne? Or had I the goynge downe of the Moone in greafe reputation: hath my hart medled pteu-lye with any decepter? Or dyd I euer hyfle myne owne hande: that were a wyckednesse worthe to be punished, for then shulde I haue denyed the God that is aboue.

and Job. 1
chap. xlii. 2

Job. xlii. 2

* Haue I euer reioysed at the hurte of myne enemy? Or was I euer glad, that anye harme happened vnto him? Or no: I neuer suffered my mouth to do such a synne, as to wythe hym cruel. Dyd not the men of myne owne household saye: who shal let vs to haue our bely ful of hys fleish? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye without, but I opened my doores vnto hym, that went by the waye. haue I kept secret my synne, and hyd myne iniquitie, as Adam dyd? haue I feared any great multitude of people? or yf I had bene dyspyssed of the simple, Or then shulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quietly spent my lyfe, and not gone out of the doore: Or that I had one whych wolde heare me. Lo this is my cause. In the whyche the almighty shall answer for me: though he that is my contrarie partye hath wyrtten a booke agaynst me. Yet wyl I take hym vpon my shulder, and as a garlande aboute my heade. I wyl tell hym the nombre of my goynge, and go vnto hym as to a pryncce. But yf I saye, that my lande crye agaynst me, or that the sowes therof make any complaynte: yf I haue eatte the frutes therof vnpayed for: yea, yf I haue greued any of the plowmen: the let the stiles growe in steade of my wheate, and cockle for my barlye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

Elihu after the other had sayed they communication appoynted them of theyr meete. For maketh not a man my selfe: but the spere of God

In these thre men wolde stryue nomoze with Job, because he heide hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Elihu & some of Barachel, the Buslyte of the kyn- red of Ram, was verie sore dyspleased at Job, because he called hym selfe iust before God. And to Jobs thre frendes he was angry also because they had found no resonable answer to ouercome Job. Nowe tarped Elihu, tyll they had ended theyr communication with Job, for why: they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Buslyte sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job answer: he was mis content. Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Buslyte answered hym selfe, and sayd, * Consyderynge that I am yonge, and ye be men of age: I was afrayed and durst not shewe forth my mynde. For I thought thus within my self. It becom- meth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache by some. Every man (no doubt) hath a mynde, but it is the inspiration of the almyghty that giveth understanding. Greafe men are not al- waye wyse, neyther doth every aged man under- stande the thyng that is laudful. Therefore wyl I speake also (heare me) and I wyl shewe you also myne understanding. For whē I had way- ted tyll ye made an ende of poure talkynge, and hearde poure wysedome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I founde not one of you ymade any good argument agaynst Job, that directely coulde make answer vnto hys wordes: lest ye shulde saye: We haue founde out wysedome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. he hath not spokē vnto me, and I wyl not answer hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one worde) but in so much as ye wyl not speake, standynge still ythe domme men, & makynge no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte, to shawe hym an answer, and to shew hym my meanynge: For I am full of wordes, & the spere that is within me compelleth me.

Beholde, my helpe is as the wyne, whiche hath no vent, and bursteth the newe vessels in sonder. Therefore wyl I speake, & I maye haue a vent: I wyl open my lippes, and make an- swere. I wyl regarde no maner of personne, no man wyl I spare. For yf I wolde go about to please men, I knowe not howe soone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Elihu shewed wherein Job offended: whych God maye we not see: nor cherfully searche out hys wordes.

Therefore, heare my wordes (O Job) and heare vnto me al that I wyl saye: Beholde I haue nowe opened my mouth, my tonge hath spoken in my throte. My harte dothe ordeyne my wordes a right, and my lippes talke of your pure wysedom. The spere of God hath made me, and the breath of the almyghty hath geuen me lyfe: yf thou canste, then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me, face to face. Beholde, before God I am euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same molde. Therefore, thou needest not to be afrayed of me, neyther needest thou to feare that my authoritie shalbe to heape for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faule, I am innocente, & there is no wyckednesse in me.

But lo, he hath pyched a quarel agaynst me, and taketh me for hys enemy: * he hath put my footes in the stocks, and loneth narrowlye vnto all my pathes: Beholde, in this haste thou not done ryght. I wyl make answer vnto the that God is moze then man. And why doest thou the stryue agaynst hym: for he shall not geue the ac- comptes of all hys wordes.

For when God doth once commaunde a thyng & shere shulde no man be curyous to searche whe- ther it be ryghte. * In dreames and visions of the

of the nyght (when slombynge cometh vpon men, that they sal asleepe in theyr beddes) he robbeth them in the eares, he insourmeth them, and sheweth them playnly that it is he, whych with dya weth man from euill, deliuereth hym from payde, he peth hym from the graue, and his lyfe from the werde.

He chasteneth hym with spekenesse, and byngeth hym to his bed: he layeth soze punishment vpon his boones, so that his lyfe maye awayne weth no byed, and his soule abhorreth to eate any dayntye meate: in so moche that his bodye is cleane consumed awayne, and his boones appeare nomoze. his life dya weth vnto the graue, and his lyfe to death. Now yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercifull vnto hym, & sayeth: He shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconyled.

Then shall his fleshe be as well lpynged as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in his yowth. For yf he submyttee hym selfe vnto God, he shal be gracious vnto hym, and shewe him his countenance tofullpe, and rewarde hym for his ryghteousnesse. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore, let a man confesse (and saye) I haue offended: I byd vncyghtously, and it hath done me no good. Yea, he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall se the lyght. Lo, thus worketh God at way with man that he keperth his soule from perispyng, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lpyng. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the still, and I will speake. But yf thou hast anyr thyngge to say: then answer me, and speake: for thy answer please me. Yf thou hast nothyngge, then heare me, and holde thy songe: so shall I teache the wisedome.

The xxxiii Chapter.

Job prayeth the iudges of God, which iudged the world and gouerned all

HLibu procedyng forth in his answer, sayde: heare my wordes, (O ye wyse men) hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandyng for the care proueth and discerneth the wordes, & the mouthe tasteth the meates. As for iudgement, lette vs seke it oute amonge oure selues, that we maye knowe what is good. And wyse Job hath sayd I am ryghteous, but God doeth me wronge, I must nedes be a lyer, though my cause be ryght, and byolentye I am plaged where as I made no fault, where is there suche a one as Job, that bynnerth vpscoznesfulnesse lyke water: whych goeth in the companye of wyched doers, and waltherth weth vngodlymen: for he hath sayd: though a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandyng.

Farre beist from God, that he shulde meddle weth wychednesse, and farre be it from the Almyghtye, that he shoulde meddle weth vncyghtous dealinge. & for he shal rewarde the wokes of man, and cause euery man to synde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is, that God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of the almyghtye is not vncyghteous. Who ruleth the earth in his seide? O whome hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde. To whome hath he gyuen his herte, for to dya weth his spyrite and breath vnto hym? All flesch shal come togyther vnto nought, and all men shall cource agayne vnto dust. Yf thou nowe haue vnderstandyng, heare what I saye, and hearken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be a ruler, that loneth no ryght? O maye he that is a very innocent man do vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye to the kyng: Thou arte wyched, or thou arte vngodlye, and that before the princes? He hath no respect vnto the personnes of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore.

For they be all the worke of his handes. In the tynphelpnge of an eye shall they dye: and at mydnyght when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perishe, and be taken awayne wythoute handes. And whys? & his eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth al his goynges. There is no darkenesse nor shadowe of death, that can hyde the wyched doers from him. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgement with God.

Maye one: yea, innumerable doeth he punishe, and setteth other in theyr steades. Therfore shall he declare theyr workes, he shal turne the nyghte, and they shalbe destroyed. They that were in the seide of shears deale lyke vngodlye men: and therfore he punyshed them, because they turned backe from hym, and wolde not consyde all his wayes. In so moche, that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and nowe he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in trouble.

Yf he graunt pardon, who wyl condemne? And yf he hyde awayne his countenance, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people, or to any man, thus wyl he do. For the vngodlinesse of the people, doth God make anppocrite to rapgne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyl not synne the. Yf I haue done amysse, enfourme thou me: Yf I haue done wronge, I wyl leaue of. Can he do nothyng wythoute the? For thou hast repponed his iudgement. Thou also hast thyne owne mynde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandyng tell me, and let a wyse man hearken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neyther spoken to the purpose, nor wyselye. O father, lette Job be well tryed, because he hath answered for wyched men: yea, about his synne he doeth wychedlye: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplyeth his wordes agaynst God.

The xxxv Chapter.

Job prayeth the iudges of God, which iudged the world and gouerned all

3 Lihu spake murther, and sayde: Thynekest thou it right, that thou sayest: I am righteous before God? For thou sayest: What advantage will it be unto thee, and what profit shall thou have of my spyn. Therefore wilt I give answer unto thee, and to thy companions with thee: loke unto the heauen, and beholde it: consider the cloudes, which are higher then thou.

B If thou hast synned, what hast thou done against hym? If thyne offences be manye, what hast thou done unto hym? If thou be ryghteous, what gnyest thou him? What wil he receyue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pceddest to be: ther is a great crye and chplaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea, every man complayneth vnto the crueltye of tyrannues.

C For suche a one neuer sayeth: Albeit is God that made me: and that gnyeth vs occasyon to praple hym in the myght: Whyche gnyeth vs more vnderstandyng then he doeth the bestes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then he doeth the foules of heauen.

D If any suche complayne, no man gnyeth answer, and that because of the wychednesse of proude tyrannues. But yf a man tal vpon God, doth not he heare hym? Worth not the Almyghty accept hym crye? When thou speakest then, shouldest not be pardoned the, yf thou open thy lyfe before hym, & put thy trust in hym: Then vyleth be no violer in his wyrd, neyther hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisitions. Therefore doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and folowly doth he make so many wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.
Cellu sheweth wherfore God punyssheth and correcteth.

3 Lihu proceeded forth in his talkyng, and sayd: holde the stylle a lytle, and I shall shewe the what I haue ytt to speake on Gods behalfe. I wil open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstandyng, and proue my matter ryghtous. And truly my wordes shal not be vayne, seinge he is with the that is persyte in knowledge, behold the great God caldeth awape no man, for he hym selfe is myghty in power and wysedome.

As for the vngodly, he shal not preserve hym but shal helpe the poore to they: ryght. he shal turne hys eyes awape from the ryghteous, but as kynge shal they be in they: trone: he shal stablysh them for euer, and they shal be exalted.

But yf they be layed in pylon and chapnes or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wil he shewe them their woche and the synnes wher with they haue vsed cruel violence.

B He with punysshynge and nuttrynge of them rosheth the in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from they: wychednesse, and to amende. * If they nowe will take hede and serue hym, they shal were out they: dayes in prosperitie, & they: peares in pleasure and ioye. But yf they will not hearken, they shal go thorow the swerde, and persyte or euer they be aware. As for su, he as be fained pporites, they shal heay by wyrd for the selues, for they cal not vnto hym, though they be his pylsoners. Thus shal they soule persyte in foolyshnesse, and they: lyfe shal be condemned amonge the fornicatours. The poore shal be deliuer out of his affliction, and rounde them in the eare when they be in trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (yf thou wilt be content) fro the bottomlesse pyt that is beneth: and yf thou wilt holde the quyet, he shal fyll thy table with plenteousnesse.

For then shal not thy cause be styllled with crueltye, nor pacified with many gystes. Thinkest thou, that he will regarde thy rychelesse: he shal not care for golde, nor for all them that excell in strength. How longe not thou the tyme, tyll there come a myghty for the to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aspyde to wychednesse and synne, whyche byther to thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty power: Where is there suche a guyde and lauer gyuer as he? Who will reproue hym of his waye? Who will saye vnto hym: thou hast done wronge.

D O consider howe great & excellent hys wordes be, whome almen loue and praple: yea wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greates is God, that he passeth oure knowlerge, neyther are we able to come to the experyence of hys peares. * He turneth the water to small dropes, he dyueth his cloudes to gyther for to rayne, so that they poure downe & droppe vpon men. he can spredde out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys Tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon: hym, and to couer the bottomes of the see. By the: shynynge: gouerneth he hys people, and gnyeth them aboundaunce of meate. With the cloudes he hydeth the lyght: & at hys commaundment it cometh agayne. Therfynge by the: of sheweth he to hys frendes, and to the cattell.

The xxxvii. Chapter.
Cellu sheweth that the trybulation of God is vngodly.

A This my heart is astonied, and moved out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, & the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. he gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, & hys lyght teacheth vnto the ende of the world. It to synge voyce foloweth hym: for hys gloriously maifeste gnyeth suche a thondre clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gnyeth an horrible sounde when God sendeth out his voyce: greates then anye doeth he whyche we can not comprehend. * When he commaundeth the snow, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he gnyeth the rayne a charge, immediatly the flowers haue they: strength, and fall downe.

he sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght know theyr owne woikens. The beasts creepe into theyr denies, and take theyr rest: out of the South cometh the tempest, and couleth out of the North.

At the breath of God the frosse cometh, and the waters are shedd abroad. he maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour, in geyng moystnesse, and agayne with his lyght he dryueth a waye the cloudes. he distributeth also on euery hyde, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale out his woikens: that they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them: thowgh the whole worlde whether it be to punyssh any land, or to do good vnto them that feare hym.

E hearken vnto this: O Job: stand still, and consydre the wonderous woikens of God. Arise thou of counsaile with god, when he doth these thynges: When he caueth the lyghte to come forth of his cloudes: Arise thou of his counsaile, when he spreadeth out the cloudes: Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wonders? And howe thy clothes are warme, when the land is fyll thowgh the South wynde: Hast thou helpe hym to spreade out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast out of cleare metall?

E teach vs what we shal saye vnto him, for we are vnnete because of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde hym what we saye. Shulde a man speake or shoulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seeth not the lyghte that he heapeth cleare in the cloudes, whych he cleneth when he maketh the wynde to blowe: Golde is brought out of the north, but the pryse and honour of Gods feare cometh from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equyte and ryghtousnesse: he is hyer then can be expressed. Let men therefore feare hym, for ther shal no man se him, that is wyle in his owne conceyte.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

3 When answered the Lorde vnto Job, out of the storme, & sayd: what is he? hideth his mynde with foolyshe wordes: * Spyd vnto thy loynes lyke a man, for I will questyon with the: see thou geue me a direct answer. Where wast thou when I layed the foundations of the earth? Tell playnly, if thou hast vnderstandynge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who hath spied the lynie vpon it? Where vppon stande the pylers of it? Or who layed the corner stone thereof? Where wast thou when the moonyng starres played me to gyther, and all the children of God reioysed triumphantly? * Who shut the sea with doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a covering for it, and swaddled it with the dark: When I gave it my commaundement, makynge doores and barres for it, sayng: hyt her to walke thou come, but no farther, and here shalt thou laye downe thy proude and hye waues. Hast thou gyven the moonyng his charge (a sone as thou wast borne) and shewed the dape spyngge his place, that it myght take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be shaken out? Theyr tokens and weapons are touned lyke clape, and set vpon agayne as the chaungynge of a garment. The vngodly shal be dysappoynted of theyr lyght: and the arme of proud shal be broken. Camest thou euer into the groud of the sea? Or walkedst in f lower corners of the depe? haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doores of the shadow of death? Hast thou also perceyued howe brode the earth is? If thou hast knowledge of all this: then shewe me where lyght dwelleth: and where darkenesse is: that thou mayest byngge vs vnto theyr quarters, if thou canst tel the way to their houses.

E knowest thou? (afore I wast borne) howe olde thou shouldest be? Wentest thou euer into the treasures of snowe? Or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, * whiche I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre? By what waye is the lyght parted, and into what lande breaketh the east wynde? Who deuidereth the aboundance of waters into ryuers? Or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenynge and thundre, that it watereth and moysteneth the dry and baren grounde to make the grasse growe, in places wher nobody dwelleth, and in the wyldernes wher no man remaineth? Who is the father of raynes? Or who hath begotten the dropes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yle? Who hath gendred the coulde of the aprie, that the waters are as harde as stenes: and lye congeled aboute the depe? Wylt thou drynde the swete influences of the seuen starres? Or art thou able to breake the cyrcle of heauen.

Canst thou bringe forth the moonyng starre, or the euenyng starre at convenient tyme, and conuey them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordinance thereof vpon the earth? Moreover, canst thou lyft vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they make power downe a grete rayne vpon the? Canst thou thynke also that they maye go their waye, and be obedyent vnto the, sayng: Lo, here are we? Who gyueth sure wysdome, or stedfast vnderstandynge? Who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? Who stylieth the vehement waters of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne? Wylt thou hunt the praye from the lyon, or fede his whelpes lyng in theyr denies, and lurkyng in theyr couthes? Who * prouderth meate for the rauen, when his yongones crye vnto God and lye about for lacke of meate?

The xxxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge hym by the examples of his woikens that his ryghteousnes is vnderstandable.

Chap. xlii. Job. the 42.
Scripture of Job. the 42.

Knowest thou the time when the wyde gootes, byngge leueth theyr younge amonge the stonye rocks?

O: larest thou wayte when the hyndes vnto to fawne: recheueth thou f mo nettes after they engender that thou knowest f tyme of theyr bearyng: O: wile they lye down when they call theyr yongones, and when they are deliuered of theyr traunple and paine: how theyr yongones growe vp, and waxe greater tho:owe goodfyring: When they go forth and returme not agayne vnto them: who letteth the wyde aske goe free, or who looseth the bondes of the mulle: Curn I which haue giuen the wyldre nest to be theyr house, and the vnyrlyd land to be theyr dwelling place. That they maye gyue no force for the multitude of people in the cities neither regard the cryenge of the dayer: but seke theyr pastur aboute the mountaynes, and fawne to the grene grasie. Wylst thou vnto fawne as to the lityper, or to abide: sal by the cypide: Canst thou bynde the yoke about the vnto in the fowme: to make hym plowe af ter the on the valleyes: Wylst thou trust hym, (because he is strange) or conuict the laboure vnto hym: Wylst thou trust hym, that he wyl bring home thy coone, or to carry any thing vnto thy barn: Cawst thou the fowr wynges vnto the peccoket, or wynges and fetters vnto the fowle: For he leueth his egges in the earth and lareth them in the dust. He remembereth not that they myght be troden with fete, or broken with some wyldre beaste. So hard is he vnto his yongones, as though they were not his, and la boureth in wayne without anye feare. And that because God hath taken wyle home from hym, and hath not giuen hym vnderstandyng. Wile his tyme is that he slepeth vp on hye, he careth neither for ho:se nor man.

Hast thou giuen the horse his strength, or le ned hym to bowe downe bys necke wylth feare, that he letteth hym selfe be dyuyn for the lyke a grethopper, wheras the fronte neyngie that he maketh, is full: he breaketh the grounde with the hoofes of his feete chearefullye in bys strength, and runneth to mete the darrest men.
He lareth asyde all feare, bys stomache is not a bated, neither starteth he a backe for any sword.
Though the quyuers rattle vpon hym, though the speare and wyldre glystereth, yet russeth he in fearcelye, and beateh vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tushie (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battayle a farre of the noyse of the captaynes, and the shoutyng.

Commeth it thowoe thy wyldome, that the gothauhe flyeth towarde the south: Doeth the egle mount vp and make his nest on hye at thy commandment: he abideth in the stonye rocks and vpon the hye toppes of the harde mountay nes, where no man can come. From thence se kerth he his pray, and looketh far about with his eyes. his yongones are fed with bloode: and wylt any dead body lere, there is he immediatly.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job 3 and sayde: Can he that stryuerh with the almyghtye, be at rest: Should not he which dysputeth with God, gyue him an answer: Job answered the Lord saying Beholde, I am to wile a person to answer the: therefore wyl I lape myne hand vnto my mouth. Ours as thyr lare I spoken, but I wyl lape nomore.

Then answered the Lord vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: "gyd by thy lynes now lyke a man, and talme the thynges that I wyl ask the. Wylt thou disauil my iudgement: O: wylt thou contempne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous: Is thy power then lyke the power of God: Wylt thou saye such a sonde as his doth: Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power: Wylt thou be in the wyde a raye, power out the indignation of thy wrath: le that thou call downe all the powere, loke wel that thou makeh such as be subduene to obey: tread downe all the vngodly in theyr place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer theyr faces with darknesse: Then wyl I confesse vnto the also, that thine owne right hande shal save the.

Beholde the beaste Behemoth (whome I made with the) which eateth haye as an oxe: Is howe stronge he is in his lynes, and what po wer he hath in the nauyll of his bodye. He sprea deth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, al bys vey nes are styffe. Hys thynges are lyke pyres of brasse, hys rydye bones are lyke stauces of yron.
Hys skyn, when God made hym, he ordayne the wyldernesse for hym: that the moontaynes shuld gyue hym grasie, where all the beastes of the felde take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the molles, the fennes hye hym wylth theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the brooke couer hym rounde about. Lo, withoute anye la boure myghte he drynke oute the whole floude, and sup of Jordan without anye traunple. Who darre lape hande vpon hym openly, and vnder take to cathe him: O: who darre put an hook thowoe his nose, and lape a snare for hym?

Warrest thou draw out: Leuath with an angle, or bynde his tonge with a snare: Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hym, or boze bys chaw the thowoe with an aule: Wylt thou make ma nye fowr wordes with the, (thyngest thou) or flatter the: Wylt thou make a couenaunt with the:
O: arte thou able to compell hym to do the con tinuall seruice: Wylt thou take thy pastyme with hym as a byrd, or gyue him vnto thy may dens, that thy companions may make relecty of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the marchant men: Canst thou fyl the basket wylth his thynges, or the fyshpawyer with his dead: Warrest thou lape hand vpon hym: It is better for the to consider what harme myghte happen ther.

there shewe, and not touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon hym, he shall begyle the.

¶ Of the same leue, than wherof he mentiooned in the Chapter afore.

Noman is so cruell that is able to sty hym vp. * Who is able to stande before me? Or who hath geuen me any thyng afoze hande, that I maye rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare hym not whyther he thuraten or speake saye. Who lyftech hym vp, or stryppeth hym out of his clothes, or who taketh hym by the bytte of his byble? Who openneth the doore of his face? For he hath horrible teeth rounde aboute. His bodye is covered with scales, as it were with shylles lockte in, hepte and well compacte together.

One is so ioynd to another, that no aye can come in: Pea, one hangeth so vpon another, and syneth so together, that they can not be sondred. His nerynges is lyke a glysteryng fyre, and his eyes lyke the moonyng fyre. Out of his mouth goeth torches, and out of his nostrilles there goeth a smoke, lyke as oute of an hote se- thyng pot. His breath maketh the coles burne, and the flammie goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remaineth strenght, and nothyng is to la- boze vpon for hym. The members of his bodye are ioynd so strypte one to another, & cleue so faste togyther, that he can not be moued.

His herte is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the styphre that the syneth smyteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghte ere asfayde, and feare troubleth them. If any man drawe oute a swerde at hym, it shall not hurt hym: there maye neyther speare, ianelyng no: breastplate abyde him. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by yd, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by byasse. He starteth not away for hym that benderth & bow and as for syngeft ones, he careth as moche for rubble as for them. He countereth the darters no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scozne that shaketh the speare: he treadeth the golde in the myre, lyke the herde pottherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styreth the see togyther lyke an opntment. He maketh a pathe to be sene after hym, the deepe is his walkyng place. Vpon earth is there no power lyke vnto his: for he is so made that he feareth not of a mā wyl consydre all hye thynges, thys is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pyde.

Then Job answered the Lorde, and sayde: * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thoughte wydde vnto the. For who can hepe his owne countayle so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstand not, the thynges that are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: and were vnto the thyng that I wyl aske the. I haue geuen dylygent care vnto the, and nowe I se the wyth myne eyes. Wherefore I geue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentance in duste and ashes.

Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these wo: des vnto Job, it fortuned, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased wyth the, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thyng that is ryght: lyke as my seruante Job hath done.

Therefore take you now seuen oren and seue rammes, and go to my seruante Job, and offer by for your selues a burnt offering: and my seruante Job shall praye for you. hym wyl I accept: and not deale with you after your foolyshe nesse: in that ye haue not spoken of thyng which is ryght: lyke as my seruante Job hath done.

So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Sophar the Naamathite wet theyre waye, and dyd accordyng as the Lorde commaunded them. * The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned the captiuitie of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Pra, the Lorde gaue Job: twofte as muche as he hadde afore.

And then came there vnto hym all his brethren, all his sisters, and all they that had bene of his acquaintaunce afore, and dyd eate bread wyth hym in his house, wondryng at hym, and comfortyng hym ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Every man also gaue hym a certayne summe of monye, and a iewel of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene. ¶ Shepe, fyre. ¶ camels, a. ¶ yoke of oren, and a. ¶ asses. he had seuen sonnes also, and thye daughters. The first daughter called he Zemina, the seconde Kezia, and the thyrde Kerenhabuch. In all the land were no women founde so fayre as the daughters of Job: and theyr father gaue them en- eyntaunce amonge theyre brethren. After this lyued Job an hundred and four- tye yeres, so that he sawe * his chyldren, and his chylders chyldre into the fourth generacyon. And so Job dyed: beyng olde, and of a perfect age.

The psalmes of David.

The first Psalme.

BEATVS VIR QVI NON HABIT.

Blessed is that manne þ hat not walked in the counsaill of the vngodly, nor stode in the waie of synners, and hath not sit in the seate of the scoznefull. But his delite is in þ lawe of the Lozde: and in his lawe wil he exercise hymself daie & night. And þe shal be like a tree planted by the water side that will bryng forth his frute in due season. his lea fal so þat not wither & loke whatsoeuer he dooeth, it shal prosper. As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but þei are like the chaffe whiche the wynde scattereth awaie (from the face of the earth.) Therfore the vngodly shal not be able to stande in the iudgement, nerher the synners in the congregacion of the righteous. But þe Lozde knoweth the waie of þe righteous, & the waie of the vngodly shal perishe.

The seconde psalme.

QVARE FRENVERVNT GENTES.

Why dooe the heathen so furlous rage together: and why dooe þ people ymagyne a vaine thyng?
The kynge of the earth stode vp and the rulers take counsaill together against þe Lozde, and against his anoynted.
Let vs breake their bondes a sunder, and cast a waie their cozdenes vs. He that dwelleth in heauen shal laugh them to scozne: the Lozde shal haue them in derisio. Then shal he speake vnto them in his wrath, and bere them in his foure displeasure. Yet haue I sette my hyng vp-on my holy hill of Sion. I will preache the lawe, wherof the Lozde hath laied vnto me.

* Thou art my sonne, this daie haue I begotten the. Desier of me, and I shal geue the the heathen for thyne enheritaunce, and the virmost partes of the earth for thy possession.

* Thou shalt bryte them with a rodde of yre and breake them in peeces like a potters vessell. See wise now therfore, O ye kynge, bee learned, ye þe are iudges of the earth. Serue the Lozde in feare, and reioyse. (with hym) with true reuerence. It shal be the sonne lest he bee angry and so ye perishe from the waie, if his wrath bee kindled (yea but a litle) blessed are all thei that put their trust in hym.

The thirde Psalme.

DOMINE QVID MULTIPLICATI.

A Psalme of David when he fled from the face of Absalon his sonne.

Lorde, how are thei increased, that troubled me: Many are thei, that rise against me. Many one there bee that saie of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in God. Selah.

But thou Lozde, art my defender: thou art my worshipp, and the lifter vp of my bedde. I did call vpon the Lozde with my voyce and he hearde me out of his holy hill. Sela. I laied me downe and slept, and rose vp again, for the Lozde sustained me. I will not bee afrayde for tenne thousandes of the people that haue sette them selues against me rounde aboute.

Upl Lozde and helpe me, O my God, for thou smitest all myne enemies vpon the cheke bone, thou hast broken the teeth of the vngodly saluacion belongeth vnto the Lozde, and thy blessyng is vpon the people. Selah.

The fourth Psalme.

CVM INVOCAREM.

To hym that excelleth in musike.
a psalme, of David.

Care me, when I call, O God of my righteousnes: thou hast sette me at liberty, when I was in trouble: haue mercy vpon me and her-ken vnto my prayer. O ye sonnes of menne howe long will ye blaspheme myne honoure: and haue such pleasure in vanitie and seke after leasynge? Sela. Knowe this also, that the Lozde hath chosen to hymself the mane that is godly: when I call vpon the Lozde, he will heare me. Stande in awe, and synne not: commen with your owne heartie, and in poure chambre, and be still. Sela. Offer the sacrifice of righteousnes, and putte your trust in þe Lozde.

There bee many that saie: who will shewe vs any good? Lozde lift thou vp þe light of thy countenaunce vpon vs. Thou hast putte glad-nes in my heart, lence the tyme that thei coine and wyne, (and oke) increased. I will laie me downe in peace, and take my rest: for it is thou Lozde onely, that makest me dwell in safetie.

Onder my woordes, O Lozde, consider my meditaciō. O hearken thou vnto the voyce of my calling, my hyng and God, for vnto the will I make prayer. My voyce shalt thou heare bypymes, O Lozde, early in the mornyng will I directe my prayer vnto the, and will loke vp. * For thou art þe God that hath no pleasure in wickednes neither shal any euill dwell with the. Suche as bee folowers of the righte waye.

Psalme. vi. vii. viii. ix.

shall not stande in thy sight. for thou hatest all them that worke vanitie. Thou shalt destroy them that speake leasynge: the Lorde will abhorre both the bloodthirsty, and disceitful manne. But as for me I will come into thy house euen vpon the multitude of thy mercie, and in thy feare will * I worshippe towarde thy holy temple. Leade me, O Lorde, in thy righteousness because of myne enemies: make thy waie plain before my face. For there is no faithfulness in his mouth: their inward partes are verie wickednes.

* Their throte is an open sepulchre: they flatter with their tog. Destroye thou them O God let them perishe thowoe their owne imaginations, cast them out in multitude of their vngodlynesse: for they haue rebelled against thee. And let all them that put their trust in thee, reioyce: they shall euer bee geuyng of thankes, because thou defendest them: they that loue thy name shall be ioyfull in thee. For thou Lorde wilt geue thy blessing vnto the righteous: and in thy fauourable kyndenes wilt thou defende hym, as with a shilde.

soule and take me: yea, let hym treade my life downe vpon the earth and laie myne honoure in the dust. Selā. Stande vp, O Lorde, in thy wrath: and lift vp thy self, because of the indignacions of myne enemies: arise vp for me, in thy iudgement that thou hast commaunded. And so shall the congregacion of the people come about thee, for their sakes: therefore lift vp thy self again.

The Lorde shall iudge the people, geue sentence with me O Lorde, accordyng to my righteousness, and accordyng to the innocencie that is in me. Oh let the wickednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but guyde thou the iust. For thy righteous God trieth the verie heartes and reins. My help cometh of God, which preserveth them that are true of heart. * God is a righteous iudge, (strong and patient) and God is prouoked euery daie. If a manne will not turne, he will whet his sword, he hath bent his bowe & made it ready. He hath prepared hym instruments of death: he ordeineth his arrows against the persecutours. Beholde, * he traualleth with myschefe, he hath conceiued sorowe, and brought forth vngodlynesse. * He hath grauen and dygged vp a pitte, and is fallen hymself in to the destruction that he made (for other.) DOMINE DOMINVS NOSTER.

To hym that excelleth in Citheth, a Psalme of Dauid.

O Lorde our gouernoure how excellent is thy name in all the world, thou that hast set thy glorye above the heuens: * Out of the mouth of verie babes and sucklinges hast thou ordeined strength because of thyne enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the auenger. For I will confide thy heuens, euen the woordes of thy syngers: the moone and the starres whiche thou hast ordeined. * What is manne, that thou art mynde full of hym: and the sonne of manne, that thou visitest hym? Thou madest hym lower then angels, to crowne hym with glory and worship. Thou madest hym to haue dominion of the woordes of thy handes: and * thou hast put all thynges in subiection vnder his fete. All these and oxen, yea, and the bestes of the felde. The foules of the aire, and fishes of the sea, & whatsoeuer walketh thowoe the pates of the seas O Lorde our gouernoure, how excellent is thy name in all the worlde.

The. ix. Psalme.

CONFITEBOR TIBI.

To hym that excelleth vpon Almus Labben, a Psalme of Dauid.

I will * geue thankes vnto the, O Lorde, with my whole heart, I will speake of all thy maruailous workes. I will bee glad, and reioyse in thee, yea, my synges wil I make of thy name, O thou most moste blest. While myne enemies are dyspenn hache, thei shall fall, & perishe at thy presence.

For thou hast maintained my right, and my cause thou hast set in the throne that iudgest right. Thou hast rebuked the heathen, & destroyed the vngod-ly. Thou hast put out their name for ever & euer. O thou enemy, destructions are come to a prepe-small ende: euen as the cities whiche thou hast destroyed, their memorie is perished with them.

But the Lorde shall endure for ever, he hath also prepared his seate for iudgement. For he shall iudge the world in righteousness, & minister true iudgement vnto the people. The Lorde also will be a defence for the oppressed: euen a refuge in due tyme of trouble. And thei that knowe thy name, will putte their trust in the Lorde: thou (Lorde) hast neuer failed them. Praise the Lorde.
Praise the Lorde, which dwelleth in Shiloh, we people of his dooings. For when he maketh inquisition for blood, he remembereth them: & forgetteth not the complaint of the poore. Hane mercy vpon me (Lorde) consider the trouble whiche I suffer of them that hate me, thou that liftest me vp fro the gates of death. That I maie shewe all thy praises within the portes of the daughter of Shiloh, I will reioice in thy saluatio.

Che heathen are sounke downe in the pitte that they made: in the same net whiche they byd preuely, is their owne soule taken. The Lorde is known to execute iudgement: the vngodly is trapped in the worke of his owne handes. A con-sideracio. Sela. The wicked shall be turned vnto hell, and all the people that forget God: For the poore shall not be alwaie forgotten, the pa-cients abiding of the meke shall not perishe for euer. Alas Lorde, and let no manne haue the upper hand, let the heathen be iudged in thy sight.
But thei in feare (Lorde) the heathen maie knowe their selues to be but menne. Sela.

The. x. Psalm.
VT QUID DOMINE.

Why standest thou so farre of (Lorde) thou hidest thy face in the needfull tyme of trouble. The vngodly for his owne lust, dooth persecute the poore: let them be taken in the crafty willnes that haue imagined. For the vngodly hath made boast of his owne heartes desire, and spe-kerth good of the conetrous, whom God abhorreth. The vngodly is so proude that he careth not for God, neither is God in all his thoughtes.

Bis waies are alwaie greuous, thy iudgementes are farre about out of his sight, and therfore desireth he all his enemies. For he hath said in his heart: tush I shall neuer be cast downe there shall no harme happen vnto me. His mouthe is full of cursing, and delectat in fraude vnder his tong is vngodlynes & vanitie. He spyeth lurking in the theuys corners of the stre-tes, & pryeth in his lurking denes doth he murder the innocent, his eyes are set against the poore.

For he lieth waityng secretly, euen as a Lidlurketh he in his denne that he maie catch the poore. He dooth rauish the poore, when he getteth hym into his net. He falleth downe & hum-bleth himself, that the congregation of the poore maie fall into the hande of his captaiues. He hath said in his heart: tush, God hath forgotten, he hideth a waie his face, and he wil neuer se it. Rise (Lorde) and lift vp thyne hande, forget not the poore. While he dooeth saie in his heart: tush, thou God carest not for it: Surely thou hast sene it. For thou beholdest vngod-lines and wrong. That thou maist take the matter into thy hande: the poore committeth hymself vnto the Lorde, thou art the helper of the feble.

Break thou the power of the vngodly and malicious, take awaie his vngodlines & thou shalt finde none. The Lorde is kyng for ever & euer, and the heathen are perished out of the lande. Lorde thou hast heard the desire of the poore: thou preparedst their heart and thine care perkeneth thereto. To helpe the fatherles and poore vnto their right: that the manne of the earth bee no more exalted against them.

As the Lord put my trust: how saie I perthen to my soule: the Lorde shall be as a birde vnto your hill: For lo, the vngodly bendeth their bowe, & make ready their arrowes wthin the quier that they maie pryncipally shote at them whiche are true of heart. For the foundations wil bee cast downe, & what hath the righteous dooed? The Lorde is in his holy temple: the Lordes seate is in heauen. His eyes consider the righteous, & his eie liddes trieth the childre of menne. The Lorde aloweth the righteous: but the vngodly, & hym that delieth in wickednes, dooth his soule abhorre.
Vpon the vngodly he shall rayne snarres, fire, and byrmstone: come and tempest: this shall be their porcion to drinke. For the righteous Lorde loueth righteousness: his countenance wil be-holde the thyng that is iust.

but flatter with their lippes & dissemble in their double heart. The Lorde shall rote out all disceatfull lippes, & the tong shall speaketh proud thin-ges. Whiche haue said: our tong wil we preuaile: we are thei that ought to speake, who is Lorde ouer vs: now for the childreles troubles take of the neby, & because of the depe sighing of the poore: I will by saith the Lorde, & will help euery one, fro hym that dwelleth against hym.
I will set them at rest. The wordes of the Lorde are pure woordes euen as the siluer, whiche fro

To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

How long wilt thou forget me? O Lord, forget not how long I shall hide thy face from me: how long shall I see counsaill in my soule: & bee so vexed in myne heart: how long shall myne enemy trispye ouer me: Consider & heare me: O Lord, my God, lighten myne eyes: I sleep not in death. Lest myne enemy saie: I haue preuailed against hym: for if I bee cast downe, thei that trouble me will reioyce at it. But my trust in thy mercy, and my heart is ioy full in thy saluacion. DIXIT INSIPIENT.

He saith in his heart: there is no God. Thei are corrupt, and be come abhominable in their dooyn- ges: there is not one of thei good, (no not one.) The Lord looked downe fro heauen vpon the children of men, to se if there were any that would vnderstand & seeke after God. But thei are all gone out of the way, thei are all together become abhominable: there is none of thei good, no not one. (Thei thote in an open sepulchre with their tongues: thei haue bitumeth, the poison of aspes in their teeth: thei lye. Thei mouth is full of cursing & bitterness: thei seeke after death & they desire it. Destruction & vngodnesse is in their wayes, and thei haue peace with thei not heauens, there is no feare of God before thei eyes.) Thei haue thei no knowlage that thei are all such wozyers of mischief, eatyng up my people as it were breade, and call not vpon the Lord: there were thei brought in greute feare. (Thei haue no feare of God: for God is in the generation of the righteous. As for you, ye haue made a moche at the counsaill of the poore, because he putteth his trust in the Lord. Who shall geue saluacion vnto Israel, out of Sion. When the Lord turneth the captiuite of his people, then shall Jacob reioyce, and Israel shall be glad.)

O Lord, who shall dwell in thy taberna- cle: who shall rest vpon thy holy hill? Such be they leaue an vncorrupt life: & dooeth the thyng whiche is right, & speareth the truth fro his heart. He hath vled no disceate in his tong, ner dooen euill to his neighbour, and hath not sleaundred his neighbour. He setteth not by himself: but is lowly in his owne eyes and maketh much of them that feare the Lord: he that sweareth vnto his neighbour and disapointeth hym not, though it wer his owne hynderaunce. EXAUDI DOMINE IVSTICIAM.

A prayer of David.

Heare I right, O Lord, & heare my crye: I haue put my trust in thee, O Lord, & thou shalt not out of fained lippes. Let my letter come forth fro thy presence, & let thyne eyes lode vpon the thyng that is equal. Thou hast proued & visited myne heart in the night season: thou hast tried me & thou shalt fynde no wickednesse in me: for I am verily purposed by my mouth: I shall not offende. Because of mine wozyers I am doorn against the wordes of thy lippes: I haue kept me from the waies of the destroyer. O hold I vpon my goynges in thy pathes, that my footstepes slip not. I haue called vpon the, O God, for thou shalt heare me: encline thyne eare to me, heare vnto my wordes. Shew thy maruelous louyng kyn- denesse, & that art a saviour of them which put their trust in the: fro such as resist thy right hande.

Repe me as a syle of an eie, hyde me vnder the shadow of thy wynges: from the vngodly & trouble me: myne enemies shall me rounde about, to take away my soule. Thei are enclosed in their owne lat: & their mouth speareth proude thynges. Thei ly waityng in our way on euery side, turnyng their eyes downe to the ground. Like as a Lion is greedy of his praye, & as it were a Lyons whelp lurking in secrite places.

O Lord, disapoint hym & cast hym downe: deliuer my soule from the vngodly, whiche is a sword of thine. Fro the men of thy hand, O Lord, fro the men, I say, & from thei which haue their porci- in this life, whose belies thou fillest with thy bid treasure. Thei haue chyldre at their desire: & leaue the rest of their substance for their babes. But as for me, I will beholde thy presence in righteounes: & when I awake vpon after thy likenes I shall be satisfied with it.

The. xlii. Psalme.
DELIGAN TE DOMINE.

To the chaunter of David the seruant of  $\gamma$  Lozde, whiche spake vnto  $\gamma$  Lozde the wordes of this song: (in the daie that  $\gamma$  Lozde deliuered hym from the bande of all his enemyes, and from the ende of Shaule) and he sayed.

I will loue  $\gamma$  O Lozde, my strength. The Lozde is my strong rocke,  $\gamma$  my defence, my sauoure, my God,  $\gamma$  my might, in whos I wil trust, my bucker  $\gamma$  hoine also of my saluacion,  $\gamma$  my refuge. \* I will call vpon the Lozde whiche is woorth to be praised, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes. \* The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouerflowynges of vngodlinesse made me afraied. The paines of hell came aboute me,  $\gamma$  snares of death ouertoke me. In my trouble will I call vpon the Lozde,  $\gamma$  complain vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his temple,  $\gamma$  my complaint shall come before hym, it shall entre eue into his eares. \* The earth trembled  $\gamma$  quaked, the very foundations also of the hillis shoke  $\gamma$  were remoued, because he was wroth.

There went a smoke out in his pyres:  $\gamma$  a consuming fier out of his mouth, so that coles were kyndled at it. He bowed the heauens also, and came downe,  $\gamma$  it was darke vnder his fete. He rode vpon the cherubyns,  $\gamma$  did lie, he came flyng vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darkness his secreete place: his pavilion rounde about hym wth dark water  $\gamma$  thicke cloudes to couer hym. At the brightnesse of his p<sup>r</sup>esence his cloudes remoued, hailestones,  $\gamma$  cooles of fire. The Lozde also th<sup>r</sup>idged out of heaue,  $\gamma$  the blast gaue his thunder, hailestones and cooles of fire.

He sent out his arrowes  $\gamma$  scattered them, he cast forth lightnynges,  $\gamma$  destroyed them. The spynges of waters wer sene,  $\gamma$  the foundations of the round world were discovered at thy chyng. O Lozde, at  $\gamma$  blessing of the b<sup>r</sup>eth of thy discipule. He shall send downe fro the height to fetch me,  $\gamma$  shall take me out of many waters. He shall deliuer me from my strongest enemy,  $\gamma$  fro them which hate me: for they are to myghty for me. They preyented me in  $\gamma$  daie of my trouble: but  $\gamma$  Lozde was my upholder. He brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euen because he had a sauour vnto me. The Lozde shall reward me after my righteous dealing: accordyng to the cleannes of my handes shall he recompence me. Because I haue kept  $\gamma$  waies of the Lozde: and haue not forsaken my God as  $\gamma$  wicked dooth. For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes:  $\gamma$  will not cast out his commaundementes from me. I was also vncorrupt before hym, and elcused myne owne wickednes.

Therfore shall  $\gamma$  Lozde reward me after my righteous dealing:  $\gamma$  accordyng vnto the cleannes of my handes in his eye sight: With the holy thou shalt bee holy,  $\gamma$  with a perfect man  $\gamma$  shalt bee perfect. With the cleane thou shalt bee cleane:  $\gamma$  with the freward thou shalt learne fro wardnes: for thou shalt saue the people  $\gamma$  are in aduersite,  $\gamma$  shall byng downe the sic lohes of the proude. Thou also shalt light my candell:  $\gamma$  Lozde my God shall make my darkness to bee light. For in the I shall disconfite an hoste of men:  $\gamma$  with the help of God I shall lepe ouer  $\gamma$  wall. The waie of God is an vndefiled waie: the word of  $\gamma$  Lozde also is tried in the fier: he is the defender of all them  $\gamma$  put their trust in hym. For: who is God but the Lozde, or who hath any strength except our God? It is God  $\gamma$  girdeth me with strength of warre  $\gamma$  maketh my waie perfect. \* He maketh my fete like deers fete: and setteth me vp on hie. \* He teacheth myne handes to fight,  $\gamma$  myne armes shall breake eu<sup>r</sup> a bowe of stele. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluacion: thy right hand also shall hold me vp,  $\gamma$  thy louyng correccion shall make me great. Thou shalt make route among vnder me for to go,  $\gamma$  my footstepes shall not slide. I will foloe vpon myne enemyes, and ouertake them, neither will I turne again, till I haue destroyed them. I will smite them, that they shall not bee able to stande: but fall vnder my fete. Thou hast girded me with strength vnto the battail, thou shalt throw downe myne enemyes vnder me. Thou hast made mine enemyes also to turne their backs vpon me, and I shall destroy them that hate me. \* They shall crie but there shall be none to help them: yea, euen vnto the Lozde shall they crie, but he shall not heare them. I will beate them as small as the dust before  $\gamma$  winde, I will cast them out, as  $\gamma$  clare in  $\gamma$  stretes. Thou shalt deliuer me from the spynges of the people: and  $\gamma$  shalt make me the heade of the heathen. I people who I haue not known shall serue me. As soon as they heare of me they shall obey me: but the strange children shall dissemble with me. The strange children shall faile, and be afraied out of their p<sup>r</sup>isones.

The Lozde liueth:  $\gamma$  blessed be my strong helper,  $\gamma$  praised bee the God of my saluacion. Eue the God whiche seeth  $\gamma$  I beaueged:  $\gamma$  subdueth the people vnto me. It is he that deliuereth me from my enemies, and setteth me vp above myne aduersaries: thou shalt rid me from the wicked manne. \* For this cause I wil geue thanks vnto the O Lozde, among the Gentiles and syng praises vnto thy name. \* Create p<sup>r</sup>o sperite geueth he vnto his kyng: and he werth louyng kyndenes vnto David his anointed, and vnto his seide for euermore.

mine iniquities. Keep thy seruauit also from pre sumptuous synnes, lest they get dominion ouer me so shall I be vndefiled, & innocent from great offence. Let the wordes of my mouth, and the meditaciō of my heart be acceptable in thy sight O Lozde, my strength & my redeemer.

The. xx. Psalme.

EXAUDIAT TE DOMINVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

The Lozde heare the in the daie of trou ble, the name of the Lozde of Jacob de fende the. Sende the helpe of the sanc tuary, & strength out of Sion. Re membze all thy offerynges, & accept thy burnt sacrifice. Sela. Graunt the thy heartes desire, & fulfill all thy mynde. We will reioyse in thy saluacion: and triumphe in the name of the Lozde our God, the Lozde persourme all thy petitiōs.
Now know I that the Lozde helpeth his a noynted, and will heare hym from his holy hea uen: euen with the wholsome strength of his righte hande. Some put their trust in charrettes and some in horses: but we will remembze the name of the Lozde our God. They are brought downe and fallen, but we are ryse, and stande vpright. Save Lozde, and heare vs, O hyng of heauen, when we call vpon the.

The. xxi. Psalme.

DOMINE IN VIRTYTE TVA.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

He hyng that reioyse in thy strength O Lozde: excredyng glad that he be of thy saluacion. Thou hast geuen him his heartes desire, and hast not denied hym the request of his lippes.
Sela. For thou shalt preuent hym with the bles synges of goodnes, and shalt sette a crowne of pure gold vpon his hed. He asked life of the and thou gauest hym a long life, euen for ever & euer.
His honour is greates in saluacion: glory and grate worship shalt thou laie vpon hym. For thou shalt geue hym euerylastyng felicity, and make hym glad with the hope of thy countenance.
And why? because the hyng putteth his trust in the Lozde, and in the mercy of the moste high est he shall not miscarry. All thyne enemies shall see the thy hande: thy right hande shall fynde oute them that hate the. Thou shalt make them like a floure ouer in tyme of the wrath: the Lozde shall destroie them in his displeasure, and the fire shall consume them. Their frute shalt thou rote out of the earth, and their sede from among the chylde of menne. For they intended mischief a gainst the, and imagined such a deuice, as they are not hable to performe. Therefore shalt thou putte them to flight, & the stronges of thy bow shalt thou make redy against the faces of them.

See thoue raised Lozde, in thyne owne strength so will we syng and praise thy power.

The. xxii. Psalme.

DEVS DEVS MEVS,

To the chaunter vpon the hynde of the daunpnyng, a Psalme of Dauid.

My God: my God: why hast thou forsaken me: & art so farre from my health, & from the wordes of my complainte? O my God, I crye in the daie tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also I take no rest. And thou continuest holp, O thou worship of Israell. Our fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the and thou diddest deliuer them. They called vpon the, and were helped: they put their trust in the, and were not confounded. But as for me I am a worme and no manne: a very scozne of menne and the out cast of the people. * All they that see me laugh me to scozne: they shote out their lippes and shake the hed sayyng: * He trusted in God & he would deliuer hym: let hym deliuer hym if he wil haue hym. * But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope when I hanged yet vpon my mothers breastes.

I haue been left vnto the euersens I was borne: thou art my God euen from my mothers wombe. O go not from me, for trouble is hard at hand, & there is none to help me. Many are come about me, as bulles of Basan close me in on every syde. They gape vpon me with their mouthes as it were a rannpnyng & roypng Lion.
* I am poured out like water, and al my bones are out of ioynt: my heart also in the myddest of my bodie is euen like melting waxe.

My strength is dried vp like a potsherd, and my tōg cleueth to my gummes: and thou shalt dryng me into the dust of death. For the dog ges are come aboute me and the counsaill of the wicked laie siege against me. They feared my handes and my feet, I made tell all my bones, they stande starryng & lohyng vpon me. * They part my garmentes among them, and cast lot tes vpon my vesture. But see not thou farre from me, O Lozde: thou art my succour, haste the to help me. Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my dearlyng from the power of the doggue.

Save me from the Lions mouth: thou hast heard me also from among the hornes of the vni cornes. I will declare thy name vnto my bre thren: in the myddest of the congregaciō will I praise the. O praise the Lozde ye that feare hym Magnifie hym all ye of the seed of Jacob, and feare hym all ye seed of Israell. * For he hath not despised nor abhorred the lowe estate of the poore: he hath not hid his face from hym, but when he called vnto hym, he heard hym.

My praise is of the in the great congregaciō, & my my bowes wpl I persourme in the sight of the that feare hym. The poore shall eate, & be satisfied: they shall seeke after the Lord, and shall prayse hym your heart shall lyue for ever. All the endes of the world shall remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lord, & all the kyngdomes of the nations shall worship before hym. For the kyngdom is the Lordes, and he is the gouernour among the people. All suche as be set vpon earth, haue eaten and worshipped. All they that go downe in to the dust, shall kneele before hym, & nomā hath quickenēd his owne soule: & the Lord shall serue him: they shall be comforted vnto the Lord for a generation. They shall come, & shall declare his righteousnesse, vnto a people that shall be bojne, whom the Lord hath made.

The. xlii. Psalme.
DOMINVS REGIT ME.

A Psalme of Dauid.

The Lord is my shepheard: therefore can I lacke nothing. He shall fede me in a grene pasture, & leade me forth by the waters of comforte. He shall conuert my soule, & bring me forth in the pathes of righteousness for his names sake.
Pea, though I walke thorow the valley of the shadow of death: I will feare no euill, for thou art with me: thy rod & thy staf comfort me. Thou shalt prepare a table before me against them that trouble me: thou hast anointed my head with oyle, & my cup shall be full. But thy loving kindnesse and mercy shall follow me all the daies of my lyfe and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

The. xliii. Psalme.

DOMINI EST TERRA.

A Psalme of Dauid. (in the fifti day of the faste.)

The earth is the Lordes, & all that therein is: the compass of the world, and they that dwell therein. For he hath founded it vpon the seas, & prepared it vpon the foudes.
Who shall ascende into the hill of the Lord? or who shall rylse vpon his holy place? Eue he that hath cleane hands, & a pure heart: and that hath not lyfte vp his mynde vnto vanitee, nor twoyne to dysceyue. He shall receyue a blessing from the Lord, & righteousness from the God of his saluacion. This is the ge-neracion of them that seeke hym, euen of them that like thy face, O Jacob. Sela. Lyfte vp your heedes O ye gates, & be ye lift vp, peruerlastig doores, & the kyng of glorie shall come in. Who is the kyng of glorie? It is the Lord strong & mighty, euen the Lord mightie in battaile.
Lyfte vppour heedes: O ye gates, & be ye lyfte vp ye peruerlastig doores, & the kyng of glorie shall come in. Who is this kyng of glorie? Eue the Lord of hostes, he is the kyng of glorie. Sela.

The. xlv. Psalme.

AD TE DOMINE LEVAVI.

Of Dauid.

Vnto the Lord I lyft up my soule. O Lord, I haue put my truste in the Lord: let me not be confounded: neyther let myne enemies triumphe ouer me. * For all they that hope in the Lord shall not be ashamed: but such as transgresse about a cause shall be put to confusion. Shewe me thy waies: O Lord, and teache me thy pathes. Leade me forth in thy truth, & learne me, for thou art the God of my saluacion: in thy hand bene my hope all the day longe. Call to remembrance (O Lord) thy tender mercies, and thy loving kindnesse, whiche haue bene euer of olde. O remember not the sinnes & offences of my youth, but according vnto thy mercy thouke thou vpon me (O Lord) for thy goodnesse. Gracious & ryghteous is the Lord, therefore wpl he teache sinners in the way. The Lord be meke: he shall be guide in iud-gement, & suche as be gentle, the Lord shall learne his waies. All the pathes of the Lord are mercy & truth, vnto suche as kepe his couenaunte and his testimonies. * For thy names sake, O Lord, be merciful vnto my sinne, for it is great.

What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teache in the waye that he shall chose.

His soule shall dwell at ease, and his seed shall enherit the lande. The secretes of the Lord is among them that feare hym: and he wpl shew them his couenaunt. Nine eyes are euer looking vnto the Lord, for he shall plucke my feete oute of the nette. Turne the vnto me, and haue mercy vpon me: for I am desolate, and in miserie.
The sorowes of my heart are enlarged. O bring thou me out of my troubles. Loke vpon myne aduersiter and miserie, and forgiue me all my synne. Consydre myne enemies howe manye they are, & they beare a tyrannous hate against me. O kepe my soule, & deliuer me: let me not be confounded, for I haue put my truste in the Lord.

Let perfectnes and righteous dealing waite vpon me, for my hope hath bene in the Lord.
Isracell O God, out of all his troubles.

The. xvi. Psalme.

IVDICA ME DOMINE.

A Psalme of Dauid. (after he was anointed.)

Be thou my iudge, O Lord, for I haue walked innocently: my truste hath bene also in the Lord, therefore shall I not fal. * Examine me, O Lord and proue me, trye out my reynes, & my hart.
For thy loving kindnesse is before myne eyes, & I wpl walke in thy truth. I haue not dwelt w vaine persones, neyther wpl I haue fellowship with the dysceyfull. I haue hated the congregacion of the wicked, and wpl not syt among the vngodly. * I wpl washe my handes in innocence, O Lord, and so wpl I go to thyne auter. That I maye shewe the voper of thankesgengyng, and tell of all thy wonderous workes.

O Lord, I haue loued the habitation of thy house and the place where thyne honoure dwelleth.
O shut not vp my soule wth the synners, nor my lyfe wth the bloudy person. In whose han-des is wychednesse, and theye ryght handes is full of grefte. But as for me, I wpl walke in innocency: O deliuer me, and be mercifull vnto me. My foote standeth ryght, I wpl prayse the Lord in the congregacions.

DOMINVS ILLVMINATIO.
Of David.

In the Lord is my strength and my saluacion.
Whom then shall I feare? the Lord is the strength of my life: of whom then shall I be afraide? When the wicked, each mine ene-myes and my foes) came vpon me, to eate vp my flesh, they stumbled & fell: Though an hoste of men were layde against me, yet shall not my hearte be afraide: & though there rose vp warre against me, yet will I put my truste in hym.

One thing haue I desired of the Lord, which I will requyre: euen that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the dayes of my lyfe: to beholde the sayre beautye of the Lord: and to visyte his temple. For in the tyme of trouble he shall be to me in his tabernacle: yea in secrete place of his dwelling shall he be to me, & lette me vp vpon a roche of stone. And now shall he lyfte vp my head aboue myne enemyes rourke aboute me. Therefore will I offer in his dwelling, an oblation with great gladnesse. I will syng and speake psalmes vnto the Lord.

When vnto my voyce, O Lord, whē I crye vnto the, haue mercye vpon me, and heare me.
My heart hath talked of the: & when I see thy face, O Lord, I shall be glad. Hide not thou thy face from me, nor cast thy seruant away in displeasure. Thou hast bene my succour, leaue me not, neither forsake me, O God of my saluacion.

When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord taketh me vp. Teache me thy waye, O Lord, and leade me the ryght way because of myne enemyes. Deliuere me not ouer into the hnde of myne aduersaries, for there are false witnesses risen vp against me, & such as speake vngodly. I should utterly haue faimted: but that I beleue verily to see the goodnesse of the Lord

The. xxi. Psalme.
IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

To the chaunter a Psalme of Dauid.

In the, O Lord, have I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion: deli-uer me in thy ryghteousnesse. Some downe thynne eare to me, make hast to deliuer me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and house of defence, & thou mayest saue me. For I am my stronge rocke, & my castell: Be thou also my guyde, and leade me: for thy names sake.
Drawe me out of the net & they haue layed pry-sely for me, for thou art my strengthe. * Into thy handes I commende my spirite: For thou hast redemed me, O Lord, & God of truthe. I haue hated the that holde of superstitious vanyties, and my trust hath bene in the Lord. I wyll be glad & reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast confused my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersities. Thou haste not shute me vp into the hand of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large roome. haue mercy vpon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble, & mine eye is consumed for very heunesse, euen my soule and my body. For my lyfe is waxen old wth heuynesse, and myne yeres wth mournynge. My strength fayleth me, because of myne iniquitie and my bones are consumed. I became a reproofe amonge all myne e-nemyes, but specially amonge my neighbours and they of myne acquaintaunce were afrayed of me, and they that vnderstande me without, conuered them selues from me. I am cleane forgotte, as a dead man out of mynde: I am become lyke a broken vessel. For I haue herde the blasphemie of & multitude: & feare is on euery syde whyle they conspyre together agaynst me, and take theyr counsayl to take away my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the, O Lord. I haue sayd: I am my God. My tyme is in thy hande, deliuer me from the hande of myne enemyes, and from them that persecute me. Seuerd thy seruaunte the lyght of thy countenance, & saue me for thy mercy sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon thee: let & vngodly be put to confusion & be put to silence in & grane. Let & lying lyppes be put to silence, which cruelly, disdain-fully & spytfully speake agaynst & righteous.
How plentyfull is thy goodnesse, whyle I hast layed vpon thee that feare thee: and & thou hast prepared for thee, that put their trust in the euen before the sonnes of men: Thou shalt hyde the pryncely by thyne owne presence fro the prouoking of all men, thou shalt hepe the secretly in thy tabernacle fro the styffe of torgues. Thankes be to the Lord: for he hath thewed me mar-uelous great kyndnesse in a stronge cytie. And whyle I made hast, I sayd: I am calte out of the lyght of thine eyes. Reuerthelisse, thou herdest the voyce of my prayer when I cryed vnto thee.
O loue the Lord, al ye his sayntes, for & Lord preserued the that are saythful, & plentyfull ye reuerdeth be the prynces doer. * Be strong, and be shall stablish the poure herte, all ye that putte your trust in the Lord.

BEATI QVORVM.

An instruction of Dauid.

Blessed is he, whose vnrightheousnesse is forgotte: & whose synne is couered.
* Blessed is the man, vnto whom the Lord imputeth no synne, & in whose synne there is no gyle. For whyle I delide my tonge, my bones consumed awaye thowd my dayly cōplaining. For thy hate is heuy vpon me daye and night, and my myghte is like the drouth in Sommer. Seia. I wyll knowlege my synne vnto thee, and myne vnrightheousnesse hane I not hyd. I sayd: * I wyll confesse my syn-nes vnto the Lord, & so thou forgavest the in-iquities of my synne. Seia. For this shall euery one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the in a tyme when thou mayest be founde, but in the greate waterfloodes they shall not come nye him. Thou art a place to hyde me in, thou shalt preserue me from trouble: & shalt compasse me about wth longes of deliuerance. Seia. I wyll enfourme thee, & teach thee in the way where in I shalt go: and I wyll guyde the wth myne eye.
Be ye not lyke horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandynge, whose mouthes must be hold with byt and bypde, lest they fall vpon the.

Great plagis remayne for the vngodly, but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord, mercy embraceh hym on euery syde. Be glad, O ye righteous, and reioyse in the Lord: and be ioyful all ye that are true of harte.

EXULTATE IVSTI IN DOMINO.

Reioyse in the Lord, O ye ryghteous, for it becommeth well the iuste to bee thankful. * Prayse & Lord wth harpe syngyng psalmes vnto hym wth the lute and instrument of ten stringes. Syng vnto the Lord a newe song, syng psalmes lulle ye with a good corage. For the word of the Lord is true, and all his workes are sayth-full. he loueth ryghteousnesse & iudgement, the earth is full of the goodnes of the Lord. * By the word of the Lord are the heauens made: and all the hostes of the by the byeth of his mouth. he gathereth the waters of the see together as it were vpon an hepe, and lapeth vnto the depe as in a treasure house. Let all & earth feare the Lord: stande in awe of hym, al ye that dwell in the worlde. * For he spake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it stode fast. The Lord byn-geth the counsayll of the heathen to nought, and maketh the deuyles of the people, to bee of none effect: he casteth out the counsayles of prynces. The counsayle of the Lord shall endure for euer: and the thoughtes of hym hart from generation to generation. Blessed are the people, whose God is the Lord Iehouah, and blessed are the folke & haue cholen hym to be theyr in herytance. The Lord looked downe from heauen, & behelde al the chyldren of men: from the habytacion of his dwellynge, he conspyrth al them that dwell in the earth. he fastyoneh al the hartes of them, and vnderstandeth all theyr woordes. There to fede them in the tyme of dearth. Oure soule

Let thy merciful hynnesse, O Lord be vnto

BENEDICAM DOMINUM.

Of Dauid, when he chaunged his spech before Abimelech, which dyd ouer hym awaye, and he departed.

I will alway geue thanks vnto the Lord, his praise shall euer be in my mouthe. My soule shall make her boast in the Lord, & humble shall beare therof, & be glad. O praise the Lord with me, and letre vs magnifye his name together. * I sought the Lord, and he heard me: yea, he deli-uered me out of all my feare. They had an eye vnto hym, and were lightened, and their faces were not ashamed. Lo, the poore cryeth, and the Lord heareth hym, yea, & saueh hym out of al his troubles. * The aungell of the Lord tar-yeth round about them & feare hym, & delivereh the. O rast & se, how gracious & Lord is, * blessed is the man that trusteth in hym. O feare the Lord, for that be his sayntes, for they that frare hym lacke nothing. The Lyons do lacke, & suffre hunger, * but they whiche feke the Lord shall want no maner of thyng & is good. Come ye chyldren and herchen vnto me, I will teache you the fraie of the Lord. * What man is he & lusteth to lyue and wolde sayne se good dayes?

Kepe thy tonge fro euyl, & thy lippes & they speake no gyle. Eschue euell and do good, seke peace and ensue it. The eyes of the Lord are ouer the ryghteous, and his eares are ope vnto their prayers. The countenance of the Lord is agaynst them & do euell, to rote out the remedyance of the from of & earth. The righteous crye, & the Lord heareth them, & delivereh the out of all they troubles. The Lord is nye vnto them & are of a contrite hart, & wyl saue such as be of an humble spirite. * Great are the troubles of the ryghteous, but & Lord delivereh hym out of all. He kepeth all his bones, so that not one of them is broken. But misfortune shal slaye the vngodly, & they that hate the ryghte-ous, shal be desolate. The Lord delivereh the soules of his seruantes: and all they & put their truste in hym shall not be defisute.

IVDICA DOMINI NOCENTES.

Of Dauid.

Lente thou my cause, O Lord, with them that strue with me, and ryghte thou agaynst them in that ryghte a-gaynst me. Laye hand vpon & shelde and buckler, and stande vp to helpe me. Wryng forth the speare, & stop the way agaynst them & persecute me: laye vnto my soule: I am thy saluacyd. Let them be confounded & put to shame & seke after my soule, let them be turned backe and brought to confusion. & ymagyne mischefe for me. * Let them be as the dust before & wind, and the aungell of the Lord scatteryng the. Let they way be darke & slippery, and let the aungel of the Lord persecute them. For they have pynely layed they net to destroy me without a cause, yea, euen without a cause haue they made a pyt for my soule. Let a sodayne destruccyon come vpon hym vnawares: and his net that he hath layd pynely, catch hym selfe: that he may fall into his owne mischefe. And my soule be ioyfull in the Lord: it shal reioyce in his saluaci-on. All my bones shall saye Lord, who is lyke vnto the: which delivereh the poore from hym that is to stronge for hym: yea, the poore & hym that is in misery from hym that spyleth hym.

Faile witnesseth dyd ryle vnto: they layd to my charge thynges that I knowe not. They re-warde me euell for good, to the greates dyscom-forte of my soule. Reuerthelisse, when they were sicke, I put on sacke clothe: and humbled my soule with fastyng, and my prayer shall tourne into myne owne bosome. I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my frend of my bzo-ther. I went heuyl, as one that mourneth for his mother. But in myne aduersyte they re-ioysed and gathered the together: yea, & verpe abiection came together agaynst me vnawares makynge mowes at me, and ceased not. With the flatterers were busy mockers, whiche gnashed vpon me with they teeth. Lord, howe longe wylte thou loke vpon this? O delivert my soule fro the calamities which they byng on me, and my dearyng from the Lyons. So wyl I geue the thankes in the great congrega-cyon I wyl praise the amonge muche people.

O let not them that are myne enemyes try-umphe ouer me vngodly, neyther let the winne with they eyes that hate me without a cause.

And why they chumnyng is not for peace but they ymagyne disceitfull wordes agaynst them that are quyet in the lande. They gaped vpon me with they mouthes, and sayd: spe on the, spe on the: we byd se it with oure eyes.

This thou hast seene, O Lord: holde not thy tonge then, go not farre from me, O Lord. Awake & stande vp to iudge my quarell, auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lord. Judge me, O Lord my God, accordyng to thy ryghte ousnesse, & let them not tryumphe ouer me.

Let the not say in their hertes, there, there, so wold we haue it: neyther let them say: we haue denoued hym. Let them be put to confusyon and shame together that reioyse at my trouble let them be clothed w. rebuke and dishonoure that boost them selues agaynst me. Let them be glad and reioyse that sauoure my ryghtous dealyng: yea, let the saye alwaye: I lesled be the Lord, whiche hath pleasure in the prosperite of his seruant. And as for my tonge, it shal be salyng talking of thy righteousness, & of thy prayer, all the daye longe.

The. xxxvi. Psalme.
DIXIT IN IVETVS.

To schaliter of David the seruaunt of  $\text{J}$  Lord.

Do not let me be vexed with the wickednes of the vngodly, for there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he flatereth hym self in his owne syght, till his abhominable synne be solid out. The wordes of his mouth are vngodly and full of dyscreit: he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wysely and to do good. He ymagyneth mischere vpon his bed, & hath set hym self in no good way, neither doth he abhorre any thyng that is euell. Thy mercy  $\text{O}$  Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy faythfulnes vnto the cloudes. Thy righteousness standeth lyke  $\text{J}$  strong mountaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the great depe. Thou Lord shalt saue both man & beast. How excellent is thy mercy  $\text{O}$  God: and the chyldren of men shall put their truste vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. Thy shall be satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them dynke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For wyth the is the well of life, and in thy lyght, shall we see lyght. Continue forth thy louyng kyndnes vnto them that knowe the, & thy righteousness vnto the that are true of hart. O let not  $\text{J}$  foote of pryde come agaynst me: & let not the hande of the vngodly cast me downe. There are they fallen: & what woke wychednesse: they are cast downe & shall not be able to stande.

The. xxxvii. Psalme:

NOLITE INVLARE.

A Psalme of David.

Ret not thy selfe because of the vngodly: neyther be  $\text{J}$  enuyous agaynst the euell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse, and be wythered out as the grene herbe. Put thou thy trust in the Lord, and do good: dwel in the land and verely thou shalt be fed. Delite thou in the Lord, and he shall geue the thy hartes desyre.
Commit thy way vnto the Lord, and put thy trust in hym, and he shall byng it to passe. He shall make thy righteousness as cleare as the lyght, and thy iust dealing as the none daye.

Holde the styll in the Lord, & abide patiently vpon hym: but greue not thy self at hym whose way doth prosper agaynst the man, & doth after euell counsailes. Leane off from wrath, and let go displeasure: fret not thy self, els shalt be moued to do euell. Wyched doers shall be rooted out: & they that patiently abyde the Lord, those shall inherite the land. Yet a lytle while, and the vngodly shall be cleue gone: thou shalt loke after his place: & he shall be away. But the meke spiered shall possesse the earth, & shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngod-ly scherechousyll agaynst the iust, & gnaweth vpon hym with his teeth. The Lord shall laugh hym to scorn, for he hath seene, that hys day is commynge. The vngodly haue byawen out the sweard, & haue bled their bowe, to cast downe the poore & neby, & to slaye suche as be of right conuersacion. They swerde shall go thorow their owne hart, and their bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng  $\text{J}$  the righteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and the Lord upholdeth the righteous. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly, and they enherptance shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perylous tyme, & in the dayes of deth they shall haue ynough. As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: and the enemies of the Lord shall consume, as the fat of liden, praren as the smoke shall they consume awaye.
The vngodly bozoweth, & payeth not againe, but the righteous is merciful & lyberall. Such as be blessed of God, shall possesse the land, and they that be cursed of hym, shall be rooted out.

The Lord ordaineth a good mans goyng, and maketh his waye acceptable to hym selfe.

Though he fall, he shall not be cast away, for the Lord upholdeth hym with his hande. I haue bene yong, & now am old: and yet sawe I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging they bread. The righteous is euer mercyfull, and lenderth, and his seed is blessed. Flye from euell, and do the thyng that is good: and dwell for euer. For the Lord loneth the thyng that is right, he forsaketh not his that be godly but they are preserued for euermore:  $\text{O}$  the vngodly, it shall be rooted out. The righteous shall enherpe the land, & dwell therein for euer. The mouth of the righteous is exercepled in wyssdome, and hys tonge wyll be talking of iudgemente.

The lawe of hys God is in hys harte, and his goynges shall not slyde. The vngodly seeth  $\text{J}$ righteous and seketh occasyon to slaye hym.

The Lord wyll not traue hym in hys hande, nor condempne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lord, and kepe his waye, and he shall promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande: wher the vngodly shall perishe, thou shalt se it. I my self haue seene the vngodly in great power, and flozzyng lyke a grene bay tree: I wente by, and lo, he was gone: I sought hym, but he could no where be founde. Kepe innocency, & take hede vnto the thyng  $\text{J}$  is right, for that shall byng a man peace at the last. As for the transgressours they shall perishe together, and the ende of the vngodly is, they shall be rooted out at the last. But the saluacion of  $\text{J}$ righteous cometh of the Lord, which is also their strengthe in the tyme of trouble. And the Lord shall stande by them, and saue the: he shall deliuer them from the vngodly, and shall saue them, because they put they trust in hym.

DIXI CUSTODIAM VIAS.

To the chaunter of Jeduthun, a Psalme of David.

I Sayd: I wyl take hede to my wayes, that I offend not in my tounge. I wyl kepe my mouth (as it were with a bydle) while the vngodly is in my lycht. I helde my tounge, and spake nothyng. I kept silence: yea, euen from good wordes, but it was payne and greffe to me. My hart was hote wrythin me, & while I was thus musyng, the fyre kyndled: & (at the laste) I spake wth my tounge: O Lord, let me knowe myne ende, & the number of my dayes: that I maye be certyfyed howe long I haue to lyue. Behold, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne longe, and myne age is euen as nothyng in respecte of the: and verily every man lyuyng is altogether vanytie. Selah. For man walketh in a vain shadowe, and disquieteth hym selfe in vayne, he heapeth up rychesse: & cannot tel who shall gather them. And nowe Lord, what is my hope? truly my hope is euen in the. Deluyne me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the foolish. I became domme, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doyng. Take thy plague awaye fro me: I am eue consumed by the instances of thy heuy hande. Wher thou rebukest, thou dost chastise man for synne: thou makest his beawtie to consume awaye, like as it were a moth frettyng a garment. Every man therefore is but vanytie. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lord, and wth thyne eares conseyde my calling: holde not thy peace at my teares. For I am a stranger with the, and a sojourner, as al my fathers were. Oh spare my a lytle, that I maye recouer my strength, before I go hence, and be nomore lene.

I waited pacietly for O Lord, & be inclined vnto me: & herd my calling. He brought me also out of horrible paye, out of the myre and clay, & let my fete vpon a rock & ordred my goynges. And he hath put a newe songe in my mouth, eue a thahelgeyng vnto our God. Many shall see it, & feare: and shall put their trust in O Lord. Blessed is the ma, that hath set his hope in O Lord, & turned not vnto the proude: & to such as go aboute wlyes. O Lord my God, great are thy wondrous workes, which thou hast done: like as bee also thy thoughtes which are to vward: & yet there is no man that ordreth them vnto the. If I would declare them, & speake of the, they should be mo then I am able to expresse. Sacrifice & meate offeryng I wouldest not haue, but myne eares hast thou opened: burnt offerynges & sacrifice for synne hast thou not required. The said I: Lo, I come. In the volume of the booke it is wyttten of me, & I should fulfyll thy wyl, O my God: I am content to do it: yea, thy law is writ in my hart. I haue declared thy righteounesse in the great congregatio: Lo, I wyl not restryne my lippes. O Lord, & that shonest. I haue not hdd thy righteounesse wrythin my hart, my talkyng hath bene of thy truth & of thy saluacion. I haue not kepte backe thy louyng mercy and truth from the great congregacion. Wryth drawe not thy mercy fro me, O Lord: let thy louyng kyndnes & thy truth alwaye prelerue me. For innumerable troubles are come about me, my synnes haue take such hold vpon me, & I am not hable to lohe vp: yea, they are mo in number then the beares of my head, & my hart hath fayled me. O Lord, let it be thy pleasure to deluyne me, make hast, O Lord: to helpe me. Let them be ashamed & confounded together that seke after my soule to destrope it: let the be dyspued backward & be put to rebuke that wythe me euell. Let them be desolate & rewarded with shame: & save vnto me: spe vpon the, spe vpon the. Let all those that se the, be ioyful & glad in the: & let such as loue thy saluacion, say alwaye: the Lord be prayesed. As for me, I am poore and needy, but the Lord careth for me. To the chaunter an instruction of the sonnes of Cozab.

We haue hard with our eares, O God, I oure fathers haue told vs, what thou hast done in their tyme of old. Howe thou hast dysput out the heathen w thy hade, & planted the in: howe thou hast destroyed the nacions, & cast them out. For thou the gat not the lande in possession thowowe their owne swerd, neither was it their owne arme that helpe them.
But thy right hade, & thine arme, & the light of thy countenance, because thou haddest a fauour vnto the. Thou art my kynge, O God, sende helpe vnto Jacob. Thowowe I, wyl we ouer-throw our enemies, & in thy name wil we tread theim vnder, & ryle vp agaynst vs. For I wyll not trust in my bowe: it is not my swerde that shall helpe me. But it is thou that shalt vs from our enemies, & putteth the to confusio that hate vs. We make our boast of God al the day long and wyl prayse thy name for ever. Selah. But now thou art farre off, & putteth vs to confusio and goest not forth with our armys. Thou maketh vs to turne our backs vpon our enemy-es, so that they which hate vs, spoyle our goodes.
Thou lettest vs be eaten vpon like shepe, & haste scattered vs among the heathen. Thou sellest thy people for naught, & takest no money for them.
Thou maketh vs to be rebuked of our neygh-bours, to be laughed to scoone, & had in derisio of them & are round about vs. Thou maketh vs to be a byword among the heathen, & that the people shake their heades at vs. O confusio is dayly before me, & the shame of my face hath couered me. For the voyce of the slanderer and blasphemer, for the enemy & auerger. And though all this be come vpon vs, yet do not we forget

EXAUDI DEVS,

ETo the chaunter in melodies an instruction of Dauid.

Hear my prayer (O God) and hide not thy self from my petition. Take heede vnto me, & heare me, how I mourne in my prayer, I am vexed. The enemy crieth so, & the vngodly cometh on so fast: for they are minded to dooe me some mischief, so maliciously are they set against me. My heart is disquieted within me, & I feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulness & trembling are come vpon me, & an horrible dyed hath ouerwhelmed me. And I said: O that I had wynges like a dove, for then would I flee a waie, and bee at rest. Lo, then would I get me a waie farre of, and remain in the wilderness.

Wela. I would make hast to scape, because of the stormy wynde and tempest. Destroye their tonges (O Lord) and deuide them, for I haue spied vngenerousnes and strife in the cite Daie and night go they aboute within the walles therof: mischief also, and sorowe are in the middelt of it. Wickednes is therein, diskeate, and guyle go out of their stretes. For it is not an open enemy that hath dooen me this dishonour: for then I could haue boone it: neither was it myne aduersary, that did magnifie hymself against me: for then I would haue had my self from hym.

* But it was euil thou my compaignion, my guyde, & myne owne familiar frende. We toke shorte couisall together, and walked in the house of God as frendes. Let death come hastily vpon them, and let them go downe quicke into hell, for wickednes is in their dwellinges, & among them. As for me, I will call vnto God, and the Lord shall saue me.

In penyng & maynyng, & at none daie wil I praise

I praye (that instantly) and he shall hear my voyce. It is he that deliuered my soule in peace fro the bataill that was against me: for there were many wme. Yea, euen God that endureth for euer, shall heare me, and byping them downe. Selah. For thei will not turne nor feare God.

bruide Sichem, and mete out þe valleie of Su-choth. Silead is myne, and Manasse is myne: Ephraim also is thy strenght of my bedde, Iuda is my lawe geuer. Moab is my washepot, ouer Edom will I cast out my shoo. Philistea bee þe glad of me. Who will leade me into the strong citee: Who will byng me into Edom: Hast þe not cast vs out O God wilt not thou O God go out with our hostes: O hee thou our helpe

NONNE DEO SVBIECTA.

To the chaunter: for Jedutha, a Psalme of Dauid

My soule truly waiteth still vnto God for of hym cometh my saluacion. He verely is my strenght & my saluacion he is my defence so that I shall not greatly fall. how long will ye imagine mischief against euery manne: ye shall be slain all þe forte of you: pre, as a totterynge wall shall ye be, & like a broken hedge. Their deuice is only how to putte hym out whom God will exalte. their desire is in lies: thei geue good wordes with their mouth, but curle with their hearte.
Sela. Neuer theles, my soule waite thou stil vpon God, for my hope is in hym. He truly is my strenght, & my saluacion: he is my defence so that I shall not fall. In God is my health and my glozy, the roche of my might, and in God is my trust. O put your trust in him alwaie, ye people, * powe out your hartes before hym, for God is our hope. Sela. As for the childre of menne, thei are but vaine, the children of menne are disceitfull vpon the waites, thei are alroge ther lighter then vanitie it self. O trust not in wyng and robbery, geue not your selues vnto vanite: if riches increase, let not your heart by-

EXAVDI DEVS ORACIONEM:

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

Eare my voice (O God) in my prayer, preserve my life fro feare of the enemy. Hide me fro the gathering together of the froward, and fro the insurrection of wicked doo-ers. Whiche haue whet their tog like a sword & shote out their arrowes, even bitter wooddes.
That they maie proudly shote at hym whiche is perfect: suddenly dooe they hit hym and feare not.
They courage them selues in mischief, and co-men emdg them selues, how they maie laie sna-

They imagine wickednes, & practise it: they hope secretly among them selues, euery mane in the depe of his heart. But God shall suddenly shote at them with a swift arrow, & they shall be wounded. Yea, their owne edges shall make them fall, in somuche that who so seeth them shall laugh them to scorn. And all menne that se it, shall saie: this hath God dooen, for they shall perceiue that it is his woork. The righteous shall reioyse in the Loyde, and putte his trust in hym: and al they that are true of heart shall be glad.

TE DECET HIMNVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalme & song of Dauid

Thou (O God) art praised in this &

(as the Jerusalem) Thou shallest praise vnto thy shall all flesh come. My misdoes preuaile against me: O be merciful vnto our sinnes. Blessed is the man whom thou choost & receivest vnto thee: he shall dwell in thy court: & shall be satisfied with the pleasures of thy house, even of thy holy temple. Thou shalt bewe vs wonderfull thynges in righteousness.

(O God) of our saluacion, that art hope of al endes of feare, & of them remain in thy hope: Whiche in his strenght setteth fast the moun-taines, & is girded about with power. Whiche stilleth the ragging of the sea, & the nople of his waues, & the madnes of the people. They also that dwell in the uttermost partes (of the earth) shall be afraid at thy tokens, that makest thou out go-ynges of the morning & evening to praise the.

Thou visitest the earth, & blestest it: thou makest it very plenteous. The river of God is full of water, & thou preparest their coyne: for so thou prouidest for feare. Thou waterest her fozowes, & sendest rain into the little valleys therof: thou makest it fozt with thy drowping of rain, & blestest thyncrease of it. Thou crownest thy prayer with thy goodness: & thy cloudes drop fatnes. They shall drop vpon the dwellinges of thy wilderness: & the little hills shall reioyse on euery side. The foldes shall be full of sheepe, the valleys also shall stande so thicke with coyne, that they shall laugh and syng.

name, make his praise to bee glorious. Saie vnto God: O how won-derfull art thou in thy workes: tho-rowe & greatnes of thy power shall thyn enemies be founde liers vnto thee. For all the world shall worship the, syng of thee, & praise thy name.
Sela. Come hitther & beholde the workes of God, how wonderfull he is in his doying toward the children of men. He turned sea into drye lande: so they went thow the water on fote there did we reioyse therof. He ruleth with his power for euer, his cies heholde the people: and suche as will not beleue, shall not bee able to exalt them selues. Sela. O praise our God (ye people) & make thy voice of his praise to be heard Whiche holdeth our soule in life, & suffereth not our fete to slip. For thou (O God) hast proued vs: thou also hast tried vs, like as silver is tried.

Thou broughtest vs into the snare, and laiest trouble vpon our lopnes. Thou sufferedst men to ride ouer our heedes, & we went thow the fire and water, & thou broughtest vs out into a welthp place. I will go into thy house with burnt-offerynges, and will paye the my vowes: & whiche I promised with my lippes, and spake with my mouth when I was in trouble. I will offere vnto thee, the fat best sacrifices & the incense of raiues I will offere bullockes & goates Sela. Come hitther & hearken all ye that feare God: & I will tel you what he hath dooen for my soule. I called vnto him with my mouth, & gaue hym pray-ses with my tog. If I incline vnto my wickednes with my heart, the Loyde will not heare me.
But God hath heard me, & confidered my voyce: & my prayer. Praise be God which hath not cast out my prayer: nor turned his mercy fro me.

EXURGAT DEVS.

CTo the chaunter, a psalm and song of David.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Let God arise, & let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him flee before hym. Like as smoke vanissheth, so shall thou destroy them away: & like as wax melteth at fire, so let the ungodly perish at the presence of God. But let the righteous be glad, and reioyse before God. Let them also be merry and ioyfull. Oh syng vnto God, and syng praises vnto his name: magnifie hym that rideth vpon the heauens, as it were vpon an horse: praise hym in his name: yea, & reioyse before hym. He is a father of the fatherlesse, & defendeth the cause of the widdowes: euen God in his habitation. He is the God that maketh menne to bee of one mynde in an house, & bynggeth the prisoners out of captiuitie: but letteth the renegates continue in scarcenes.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Psalm. lxxviii.

O God, when thou testest forth before the people, when thou testest theirow the wilderness. Selah. The earth shoke, & the heauens dropped at the presence of God: euen as Sinai also was moued at the presence of God: whiche is God of Israel. Thou O God sendest a gracious rain vpon thine inheritance, & refreshedest it when it was weery. Thy congregaciō shall dwell therein: for thou O God hast of thy goodness prepared for the poore. The Lord gaue the word: & greates was the compaignie of the preachers.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Hynges with their armies did flie, & were discomfited: and thei of the household buided the people. Though ye haue lien among portes, yet shall ye bee as the wynges of a dove that is couered with silver wynges, & her feathers like golde. When the almighty scattered hynges for their sake, then were thei as white as snowe in salomon. As the hill of Basan, so is Godes hill euen on his hill as the hill of Basan. Why hop ye so ye hee hills: This is Godes hill, in which he it pleaseth hym to dwell: Yea, the Lord will abide in it for euer. The charrettes of God are twety thousand, euen thousandes of angels: & the Lord is among them, as in his holy place of Sinai.

Psalm. lxxviii.

Thou art gone vpon an hee, thou hast led captiuitie captiue, & receiued giftes for menne: Yea euen for thyne enemies, & the Lord God might dwell among them. Praise be to the Lord daily euen to God whiche helpeth vs, and poureth his benedictes vpon vs. Selah. He is our God, euen the God of whom cometh saluacion: God is the Lord by whom we escape death. God shall wound the head of his enemies, & the heery scalp of such one as goeth on still in his wickednes. The Lord hath said: I will byng my people again as I did from Basan: myne owne will I byng again, as I did som tyme from the depe of the sea: That thy fote maye bee dipped in the bloodde of thyne enemies, and that the song of thy dogges maye bee red theirow the same.

It is well sene, O God how thou goest, how thou, my God and hyng goest in sanctuary.

The syngers go before, the mynstrels follow after: in the mides are the damels playng with tymbrels. Genge thanks O Israel vnto God the Lord in his congregacions, from the grose of the hearte. There is little Benjamin their ruler and the princes of Juda their counsaill, & princes of Zabulon, and the princes of Reuben. Thy God hath sente for the strength, & stablished the thyng O God, that thou hast wrought in vs. For thy temples sake at Jerusalem: so shall hynges byng present vnto the.

When the compaignie of the spearmen, and multitude of the mighty are scattered abroad among the beastes of the people: (so the humbly byng peeces of silver) and when he hath scattered the people the delite in warre: Then shall the princes come out of Egypte, the Hyzans lande shall soone stretch out her handes vnto God. Sing vnto God O ye hyngdomes of the earth: O syng praises vnto the Lord. Selah. Whiche steth in the heauens ouer all from the begynnyng: Lo he dooth sende out his voyce: yea, and that a mighty voyce. I scribe yet the power to God ouer Israel: his worship and strength in the cloudes. O God, wonderfull arte thou in thy holy places, euen the God of Israel: he will geue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed bee God.

SALVVM ME FAC DEVS.

CTo the chaunter vpon Hosaniam of David.

Save me, O God: for the waters are come in caue vnto my soule. I sticke faste in the depe myre, where no ground is: I am come into depe waters, so that I flounders ouer me. I am weery of crying, my throte is drye: my sight faileth me, for waiting so long vpon my God. Thei that hate me without a cause, are more then the heares of my bedde, thei that are myne enemies, and would destroye me gittles are mighty: I paid them the thynges that I neuer toke. O God thou knowest my synfullnesse, and my fautes are not hid from the. Lette not them that trust in the O Lord God of hostes, bee ashamed for my cause, let not those that seke the bee confounded theirow me, O Lord God of Israel.

And why for thy sake haue I suffered reproche: shame hath covered my face. I am become a stranger vnto my brethren: euen an alcaunt vnto my mothers children. For the zeale of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of them that rebuke the are fallen vpon me. I wept & chastened my self with fasting, and I was enured to my reproche. I put on a sackcloth also, and thei tested vpon me. Thei that sit in the gate, spake against me, and the dounhardes made songes vpon me. But Lord, I make my prayer vnto thee in an acceptable tyme. Heare me (O God) in the multitude of thy mercy, euen in the truth of thy saluacion.

Take me out of the myre, that I spake not. Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me and out of the depe waters. Let not the water flouds

And bid not thy face from thy seruante, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and heare me. D'awe nie vnto my soule, and saue it: O deliuer me, be- cause of myne enemies. Thou hast knowen my reprofe, my shame and my dishonour, myne ad- uersaries are full in thy sight.

E Thy rebuke hath broke my heart, I am full of heuenesse, I looked for some to haue pitie vps me, but there was no manne: neither founde I any to conforthe me. * Thei gaue me gall to eate and when I was thyrsty thei gaue me vyngre to drynke. * Let their table bee made a snare to take theim selues with all, and let the thynges (that should haue been for their wealth) bee vn to theim an occasion of falling. Let their eyes bee blinded, that thei se not: and euer bowe thou downe their backes.

F Pour out thine indignacion vpon theim, & let thy wrathful displeasure take hold of theim * Let their habitacion bee voide and no manne to dwel in their tentes. For thei persecute hym whom thou hast smitten, & thei talke how thei maie deere theim whom thou hast woudded. Let theim fall from one wickednes to another, and not come into thy righteousnes. * Let theim be wyshed out of the boke of þ liuyng, and not to be wyrtten among the righteous. As for me, whi I am pooze & in deuens, thyn help (O God) shall lift me vp. I will praise the name of God with a song: and magnifie it with thankesge- uying. This also shall please the Lorde better the a bullocke, that hath hoynes and hoofes.

G The hable shall conside this, & be glad: se he pe after God, & your soule shall liue. For þ Lorde beareth the pooze, & dispiseth not his prisoners. Let heauen and earth praise hym, the sea, & all that moueth therein. For God shall saue Sion, and buyde the citers of Iuda, that menne maie dwell there, and haue it in possession. The poste- rite also of his seruantes shall enderite it: and thei that loue his name shall dwell therein.

Ruly God is louyng vnto Israell euen vnto such as are of a cleane misfortune like other folke, neither are thei pla-ged like other me. And this is the cause y thei be so holden with yude, y ouerwhelmed w cruelte.

 Their eyes swell for fatnes: y thei dooe euen what thei lust. Thei corrupt order, and speake of wicked blasphemy: thei talke y against the moste highest. For thei stretche forth thei mouth vnto the heauen, and thei tong gooe thowoe y worlde. Therefore fall the people vnto thei, y therout luche thei no small aduanntage. * Tulse (saie thei) how should God preciue it? is there knowlage in y moste highest?
 Lo, thei are the vngodly: thei prosper in the worlde, y thei haue riches in possesid: (And so)

The haue I censed my heart in vain, y washed my handes in innocencie. All the daie long haue Pea, and I had almoste saied euen as thei: but lo, then should I haue condemned the generation of thy childe. Then thought I to vnderstande this, but it was to harde for me.

Untill I went into the Sanctuary of God then vnderstode I the ende of these memme. Na-make their image to vanishe out of the cite.

 Thus my heart was greued, and it wente euen thowoe my raines. So folishe was I y ignorant, euen as it were a beast before the. Neuer

 VT QVID DEVS REPVLISTI.

An instruction of Aaph.

God, wherefore art thou absente from I vs so log? why is thy wrath so hote against the wepe of thy pasture? O thynke vpo thy congregacion, whi thou hast purchased and redeemed of olde. Thinke vpo the tribe of thyne enheritaunce and mount Zion wherein thou hast dwelt. Lift vp thy seete, that thou maist vterly destroye euer enemy, whiche hath dooen euill in the Sanctuary. Thyne aduersaries rooze in the midde of thy congregacions: and set vpo their banners for tokens. He that bedded tymber afore out of the thicke trees, was knowne to bypnyng it to an excellent wooshe.

 11:12

But now thei bryake downe all the carued wooshe therof with axes and hammers. * Thei haue set fire vpon the holy places, and haue defiled the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the ground. Pea, thei saied in their heartes let vs make haouche of theim altogether: thus haue thei byent vp all the houses of God in the lande. We se not oure tokens: there is not one prophete more, no not one is there among vs that vnderstandeth any moze. O S O D how long shall the aduersary dooe this dishonoure? how long shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for euer? Why withdrowest thou thy hande? why pluckest thou not thy righte hande out of thy bosome, to consume the enemy? For God is my hyng of olde: the help that is dooen vpon earth, he dooeth it hymself. * Thou biddest deuide

upbe the sea thow be thy power: thou brakest the heades of the dragons in the waters. Thou smotest the heades of * Leviathan in peeces, and gauest hym to be meat for þe people in wyldernesse. Thou broughtest out fouraynes & waters out of the harde rockes: thou dyedest vp myghtye waters. The dape is thynne, and the nyght is thynne: thou hast prepared the lycht & the sunne. Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made sommer and wynter.

Remembre this O Lorde, how the enemye hath rebuked, and howe the foolish people hath blasphemed thy name. O deliuer not the soule of thy turtel doue vnto the multitude of þe ene-myes: & forget not the congregacion of the poore for euer. Loke vpon the couenaunte for all the earth is full of darkenesse, and cruell habitacyons. O let not the symple goe awaye ashamed: but let the poore & neaby geue praise vnto thy name. Arise, O God, mayntayne thynne owne cause: remembre howe the foolish man blasphemeth the daylye. Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the presumptiō of them that hate the encreaseth euer more and more.

Set not vp poure hoine on hye, and speake not with a tynnecke. For promociō cometh neyther fro the east, nor from the weste, nor yet fro the south. And why? * God is the iudge: he put-teth downe one, and setteth vp another. For in the hande of the Lorde is there * a cuppe, and þe wynne is red. It is full myrrer, & he poureth oute of the same. As for the dregges therof all þe vn-

He smote the children cattel also with haille stones, and the children flockes with hore thondre boltes. he cast vpon them the furyousnesse of his wrath angre, displeasure, and trouble, & sent euil an-

DEVS STETIT IN SINAGOGA.

A Psalme of Asaph.

God stablisheth in the congregaciō of synners: he is a iudge among *goddess. * Howe longe wyl ye gene wiong iudgement, & accept the persons of the vngodly? He la. Defende the pooze & fatherlesse, se that suche as be in nede & necessitie haue ryghte. Delyuer the outcast & pooze: saue them from the hande of the vngodly. They wyl not be learned nor vnderstande, but walke on styll in darknesse: all the foundations of the earth be oute of course. I haue sayde: ye are goddess, and ye all are chyldren of the mooste hyest. But ye shal dye lyke men, & fall lyke one of the princes. Tryfe O God, and iudge thou the earthe, for þ shalt take al hearken to thynne enheritaunce.

DEVS NE CONTINEAS TE

A songe and Psalme of Asaph.

Did not thy tong, O God, kepe not thy silence, & thyne enemies make a murmuring, & they that hate the haue lyfe vpon theyr head. They haue ymagined craftely against thy people, & taken counsaile against thy secrete ones. They haue said: come and let vs roote them out, that they be nomoze a people: and that the name of Israel maye be nomoze in remembraunce. For they haue caste their heades together with one consent and are confederate agaynst þ. The tabernacles of the Edomites and the Hmarliers, the Moabites and Hagarenes. Sebal and Amud & Amelch: the Philistines with them that dwell at Tyre. Assur also is ioynd vnto them, & haue helped the chyld of Loth. He la. But do þ to the * as vnto the Chanaanites, vnto Samera, and vnto * Iabyn at the wyche of Ryson. Which perished at Endor: and became as the dong of feyth. Make them and theyr princes lyke * Dred and yeb. Pea, make all theyr synners lyke as yeben and zaimana. Whiche saye: let vs take to oure seluers the houses of God in possession. O my God, make them lyke vnto a whyle, & as * the stubble before the wynde. Like as a fyre that burneth vpon the wood, and as the flame that cosumeth the mountaynes. Persecute them euen so with thy tempest, and make them as trayde vpon the Royme. Make theyr faces ashamed, O Lord that they maye seeke thy name. Let them be confounded and verred euer moze & moze: let them be put to shame & perished. And they shal know that thou (whose name is Jehouah) art onely the mooste hyest ouer all the earth.

QYAM DILECTA TABERNACULA,
To the chaunter vpon Githith, a Psalme of the sonnes of Cozab.

How ampyable are thy dwellyn. I linge, thou Lord of hostes: Whiche hath a desyre and lōgyng to entre into the courtes of the Lord, my hart & my fleshe is in the lōpyng God: yea, the sparrowe hath founde her an house, & the swalowe a nest, wher she may laye her yonger: euen thy alter, O Lord of hostes, my hyng and my God. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, they wyl be alway prayyng the. He la. Blessed is þ man, whose strength is in the, in whose hart are thy wayes. Whiche goyng thorow the vale of mysery vs it for a well, & the pooles are fylled with water. They wyl go from strength to strength: vnto the God of goddess appeareth euerpe one of them in syon. O Lord God of hostes, heare my prayer, hearken, O God of Jacob. He la. Behold, O God our defender: & loke vpon the face of thynne anoynted. For one day in thy courtes is better then a thousand. I had rather be a doze heper in þ house of my God, then to dwell in the tentes of vngodlynes. For the Lord God is a lyghte and defence, the Lord wyl geue grace and wozshipp, & no good thynge shal be wythholde from them that lyue a godly lyfe. O Lord God of hostes, blessed is the man that putteth his trust in the.

BENEDIXISTI DOMINE.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of the sonnes of Cozab.

Did thou art become gracious vnto thy land, thou hast turned awaye the captiuitie of Jacob. Thou haste forgiven the offence of the people, * and couered al the synnes. He la. Thou hast taken a wyse al thy displeasur, and turned thy self from thy wrathful indignacion. Turne vs then, O God our sauour, and let thynne anger cease from vs. Whiche thou be displeased at vs for euer: & wile thou stretche out thy wrath fro one generaciō to another? Wile thou not turne again and quychen vs: that thy people maye retople in the? And wher vnto thy mercy? O Lord and graunt vs thy saluacion. I wyl darke what the Lord God wyl saye, & he shall speake peace vnto vs people: and to vs sayntes, that they turne not agayne. For vs saluacion is nye them that feare hym, that glozpe maye dwell in oure lande. Wecpe and truste are met together, rightousnes and peace haue kyssed eche othr.

and ponder the voyces of my humble desyres.

In the tyme of my trouble I wyl call vpon the, for thou hearest me. * Amonge the goddesses there is none lyke vnto the, O Lozde, there is not one that can do as thou doest. All nacpons whom thou hast made, shall come and wozypp the, O Lozde, and shall glorifye thy name. For thou art great and doest wonderous thynges, thou art God alone. Teache me thy waye, O Lozde, and I wyl walke in thy truthe. Okuyt my hert vnto the, that it maye feare thy name.
I wyl thanke the, O Lozde my God, wyth all my herte, and wyl prayse thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercy toward me, and * thou hast deliuered my soule fro the nethermost hel.
O God the proude are rysen againste me, and congregacions of noughtie men haue sought af-

Lord God of my saluacion, I haue cryed daye and nyght before the: O let my prayer entre into thy presce encline thine eare vnto my calling.

For my soule is ful of trouble, and my life draweth nye vnto hel. I am counted as one of them that go downe into the pyt, and I haue bene euen as a man that hath no strength Ire amonge the dead, like vnto them & be woled and lye in the graue, whiche be out of remebrance, and are cut awaye from thy hande.

Thou hast layd me in the lowest pyt in a place of darkenes and in the depe. Thyne indignacio lyeth harde vpon me, and thou hast vexed me with all thy tormes. * Psa. Thou hast putte a wytnes in heauen. Helia. But thou hast abhorred and forsaken thyn anoynted, & art displeased at hym. Thou haste broken the couenaunt of thy seruante, & cast his crowne to the ground.

* Thou hast ouerthrowen al his hedges & bze-ken downe his stronge holdes. Al they that go by, spoye hym: and he is become a rebuke vnto his enemynges. Thou haste let up the ryght hande of his enemynges: and made al his aduersaries to reioyse. Thou hast taken awaye f edge of hys sword: & geuist hym no vyctorye in the battayle. Thou hast put out hys glorye, & cast his trone downe to the grounde. The dayes of his youth hast thou shortned: and covered him wryth byshonour. Helia. Lord, how log wylt thou hyde thy self: for ever: and shal thy wrath burne lyke fyre: O remember howe thoue my tyme is, wherefore haste thou made all men for-naught: * What man is he that lyueth & shall not le death: & shall be deliuer his owne soule from the hande of hell: Helia. Lord, where are thy olde louyng kyndnes, wryche thou swarest vnto Dauid in thy truthe: Remember (Lord) the rebuke that thy seruantes haue, & howe I do beare in my bolome f rebukes of many people. Where wryth thyn enemynges haue blasphe-

DOMINE REIVGIVM.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.
Lord, thou haste bene oure refuge fro one generation vnto another. Be-foze the mountaynes wer choughte forth, or cutt the earth and the world wer made, thou art God from euerlastyng and wouldest wrythoute ende. Thou turnest man to destruccyon. Agayne thou sayest: come agayn chyldren of men. * For a thousande yeares in thy syght are but as yesterdape, seynge that in past as a watche in the nyghte. A stone as thou scatest them, they are euen as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse. In the moynyng it is grene and groweth vp, but in the euenyng it is cutt downe: & withered. For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and are a fayde at thy wrathfull indignacion.

Thou hast let our misdeeds before the, & our secrete synnes in the light of thy countenaunce.
For when thou arte angrye, all oure dayes are gone: we bypnyng oure yeares to an ende, as it wer a tale f is tolde. The dayes of oure age are the scoze yeares & ten: and though men be so strong that they come to four scoze yeares: yet is their strength the but labour & sorowe: so sone passeth it awaye, & we are gone. But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, for euen therafter as a man fareth, so is thy displeasure. * O teach vs to nombze our dayes, that we maye applye our hartes vnto wisdom. Turne the agayne, (O Lord) at the last, and be gracions vnto thy seruantes. O satisfie vs wryth thy mercy and that soone, so shal we reioyse and be glad al the dayes of our lyfe. Comforte vs agayne, nowe after the tyme that thou haste plagyd vs, & for the yeares wherein we haue suffred aduersite.
Shewe thy seruantes thy wothe, and they chyliden thy glorye. And the glorious maiestie of the Lord our God be vpon vs: prosper thou the wothe of our handes vpon vs: O prosper thou oure handy wothe.

QVI HABITAT.

Who so dwelleth under the defence of the moste hysse that abyde under the shadowe of the almyghtye. I wyl saye vnto the Lozde: thou arte my hope, and strong holde: my God, in hym wyl I truste. For he shall deliuer the from the snare of the hunter and fro synsome perillence. He shall defende the vnder his wynges, and thou shalt be safe vnder his fetters: his saye shal be true: he shall be thy helpe and buckler. Thou shalt not be afrayd for any terror by night, nor for the arrowe that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darkenesse, nor for the synkenesse that destroyeth in the none day. A thousand shall fall besyde the: and ten thousande at thy ryght hande, but it shall not come nye the. Pea, wyth thine eyes shalt thou behold and se the reward of the vngodly. For thou Lozde art my hope, thou hast set thine house of defence vnder thy feet. There shall no euill happen vnto the, neyther shall any plage come nye the dwelling. For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes. They shall beare the in theyr handes, that thou hurte not thy foot agaynst a stone. Thou shalt go vpon the lyon and adder, the yong lyb and the dyagb shalt thou treade vnder thy feet. Because he hath set his ioue vpon me, therefore shall I deliuer hym. I shall see hym vp, because he hath knowen my name. He shall cal vpon me and I wyl heare hym, pea, I am wyth hym in trouble, I wyl deliuer hym, and byng hym to honoure. Wylth long lyfe wyl I sacryfe hym, and geue hym my saluacion.

To tel of thy louyng kyndnesse earlye in the mornyng, and of thy trouth in the nyght season vpon an instrument of ten stringes, and vpon the lute: vpon a loude instrumēt, and vpon the harpe. For thou Lozde hast made me glad thow the thy wothes, and I wyl reioyse in geuyng praye for thy operations of thy handes. O Lozde, howe glorious are thy wothes: thy thoughtes are very depe. In vnyse man doeth wel consyde this, and a foole doth not vnderstande it. When the vngodly are grene as the grasse, and when al the wothes of wychednes do floure: then shall they be destroyed for ener. But thou Lozde art the moste hysse for enermore. For lo, thyne enemyes, O Lozde, lo thyne enemyes shall perishe, and al the wothes of wychednes shall be destroyed. But my hope shall be exalted, like the borne of an vnycoyne, for I am anoynted wyth frethe oyle. Myne eye also shall se his lust of myne enemyes, & myne eare shall heare his deysse of the wyched that ryle vp agaynst me. They murder the wydowe: and the straunger, and put the fatherles to death. And yet they saye: tuler the Lozde shall not se, neyther shall the God of Jacob regarde it. Take heed, ye vnyse among the people. O ye fooles when wyl ye vnderstande: he that planted the eare, shall he not heare: O he that made the eye shall he not se: O he that murdereth the heathen, it is he that teacheth man knowledge, shall he not be punyshed: The Lozde knoweth synge of man, that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man, whoe thou chastenest (O Lozde) and teachest hym in thy lawe. That thou mayst geue hym payce in tyme of aduersyte vntyl the ppe be dygged vp for the vngodlye. CANTATE DOMINO.

Syng vnto the Lord a newe songe syng vnto the Lord: all the whole earthe. Syng vnto the Lord, and prayse his name, be tellig of his saluacion from daye to day. Declare his honoure vnto the heathen, & his wonders vnto all people. For the Lord is great & cannot worthely be prayled: he is more to be feared then all goddes. As for all the goddes of the heathen, they be but Idols, but it is the Lord that made the heauens. Glozy and worshyppe are before hym, powre & honoure are in his sanctuary. Ascribe vnto the Lord (O ye hyndes of the people) ascribe vnto the Lord: worshyppe and powre. Ascribe vnto the Lord, the honoure due vnto his name, byngge presentes, and come into his courttes. O worshyppe the Lord in the bewtye of holines, let the whole earth stande in awe of hym. Tell it out among the heathen, that the Lord is hyng: and that it is he whiche hath made the rounde worlde so faste, that it can not be moued, and how that he shall iudge the people righteously. Let the heauens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, and all that therein is. Lette the feilde be ioyfull and all that is in it: then shal all the trees of the woode reioyse before the Lord: for he cometh: for he cometh to iudge the earth: and with righteousnesse to iudge the worlde, & the people with his trouth.

DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is hyng: the earth may be glad thereof: yee the multitudine of fyles may be glad therof. Clouedes and barchenelle are round about him, righteousnesse & iudgement are the habitation of his seate. There shall go a fyre before hym, & burne his enemies on every syde. His lightenynges gaue shine vnto the worlde, the earthe sawe it: and was afrayed.

The hylls melted lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the Lord, of the whole earth. The beaues haue declared his righteousnesse, and all the people haue sene his glozpe.

Confounde he all they that worshyppe ymagines, & that helpe in vaine goddes: worshyppe hym all ye goddes. Upon hearde of it, and reioysed: and the daughters of Iuda were glad, because of thy iudgements O Lord. For thou Lord art hyer then all that are in the earth: thou art exalted far aboue all goddes. O ye loue the Lord, so that ye hate the thing whiche is euell, the Lord preferreth the soules of his apytes, he shall deliuer the from the hande of the vngodlye. There is synginge vpon a lyght for the righteous, and ioyfull gladnesse for suche as bee true hearted. Reioyse in the Lord, ye righteous, & geue thanks for a remembrance of his holynes.

A Psalme. (for David.)

Syng vnto the Lord a newe songe, for he hath done mercifulous thynges. With his owne righte hande and with his holy arme hath he gotten hym selfe the victorye. The Lord declared his saluacion, his righteousnesse hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heathen.

He hath remembred his mercye and trouth towards the house of Israel: and all the endes of the worlde haue sene the saluacion of our God.

Showe your selues ioyfull vnto the Lord al ye landes, syng, reioyse, and geue thanks.

Prayse the Lord vpon the harpe, syng to the harpe with a Psalme of thanksgyving.

With trompettes also and shawmes: O ye we poure selues ioyfull before the Lord the hyng. Lette the sea make a noyse and all that therein is, the round worlde, and they that dwel therein. Let the shoudes clappe they: handes, and lette the hylls be ioyfull together, before the Lord, for he is come to iudge the earth.

With righteousnesse shal he iudge the worlde and the people with equitye.

M* Longe shall be of mercy and iudge-ment, vnto the (O Lord) wyl I song O let me haue vnderstandynge in way of godlynes. When wylte thou come vnto me: I wyl walke in my house wth a perfect hert. I wyl take no thyng in hande: I hate synnes of vnspytfulnes, ther shall no such cleaue vnto me. A froward herte shall departe from me, I wyl not knowe a wyched persone. Whoso pryncely slaundereth his neighbour, hym wyl I destroe. Whoso hath also a proude loke & hye stomache, I wyl not suffer him. Myne eyes loke vnto such as be fayth-full in the lande, that they maye dwell wth me Whoso leadeth a godly lyfe, he shall be my seruante. There shall no dysceitfull persone dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes, shall not tary in my syght. I shall sone destroy al the vngodly that are in the lande, that I maye roote out all wyched doers from the ctyte of the Lorde.

DOMINE EXAUDI ORATIO

¶ A prayer of the afflycte, when he hath an heue hert, & powreth out his complaynt before the Lorde.

C* Care my prayer, O Lord, and let my cryng come in vnto the. Hyde not thy face from me in the tyme of my trouble: encline thine eares vnto me when I call: O heare me, and syghte soone. For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, & my bones are brente vp, as it were a fyre brand. My hert is smytten downe & wythered lyke grasse, so that I forget to eate my breade. For the voyce of my growng, my bones wyl scarce cleaue to my fleshe. I am become lyke a wellycane of the wyldernes, and lyke an owle that is in the desert. I haue wotched, & am euen as it were a sparowe, that syt-teth alone vpon the house toppe, Myne ene-myne reuyle me all daye longe, & they that are madde vpon me are sworne together agaynst me. For I haue eaten ashen as it were breade & mynled my dysynche wth wepyng. And that because of thine indygnacion & wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, & cast me downe. My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe, & I am wythered lyke grasse. But thou O Lorde: walte endure for euer, and thy remembraunce thowout all ge-neracions. Thou shalt aryle and haue mercye vpon Syon, for it is tyme that thou haue mercye vpon her, yee, the tyme is come. And why: thy seruauntes thynke vpon her tomes, and it syt-teth them to se her in the duste. The heathen shall feare thy name O Lorde, and al the kynges of the earth thy maiestye. When the Lorde shall builde vp Syon, and whyle his gloze shall ap-peare. When he turneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore desprute, & dyspyseth not theyr desyre.

Thys shall be wyrtten for those that come after & the people which shall be borne, that prayse the Lorde, For he hath looked downe from his Sanctuary, oute of heauen vnto the Lorde be-holde the earth. That he myght heare the mou-nynges of such as be in captiuyte: and deliuer his chyldren appointed vnto deatch. That they may declare the name of the Lorde in Syon, and his worshyp at Jerusalem, When the people are gathered together, & the kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde he brought downe my strength in my iourney & shortened my dayes. But I sayde, O my God: take not me away in the myddell of my ne age, as for thy yeres, they endure thowout al generacions. & Thou Lorde, in thy begynnyng hast layde the foundacyon of the erth, & the trauens are the worke of thy handes. They shall peryshe, but thou shalt endure: they shall all ware old as doth a garment, & as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, & they shall be chaunged. But thou art the same and thy yeres shall not fayle. The chyldren of thy seruauntes shall contynue, and theyr seedes shall stande fast in thy syghte.

my God, thou art become excedyng glorious, thou arte clothed wth ma-iesty and honoure. Thou deckest thy selfe wth lychte, as it were wth a garmente, and spreadest out the heauens lyke a curtayne.
Whiche laperth the beames of hys chambers in the waters, and maketh the cloudes hys charete and walketh vpon the wynges of the wynde.

He maketh hys Angels spyes, and hys my-sters a flaminge fyre. He layde the founda-cyon of the earth, that it neuer shulde moue at a nye tyme. Thou couerdeste it wth the depe lyke as wth a garment: the waters stande in f hylls. * At thy rebuke they flye, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayed. They go vp as hye as the hylls, and downe to the valleyes benedy: euen vnto the place, whych thou hast appointed for them. * Thou haste let them they boundes, whych they shall not passe, neyther turne agayne to couer the earthe. He sendeth the sprynges into the ryuers, whych runne amonge the hylls. All beastes of the felde drynche there of, and the wyde fildes quenche theyr thyrste.
Besyde them shall the foules of the ayre haue habytacyon, and flyng amonge the bryanches he watereth the hylls from aboue, the earth is fylled wth the fructe of thy woorkes. He bringeth forth grasle for the catel, and grene herbe for the serpente of men: that he maye * brynge fode out of the earth: and wyne that maketh glad the herte of man, and oyle to make hym a chearfull countenaunce, and bread to strength mans hert. The trees of the Loyde also are full of sappe, euen the ceders of Libanus whych he hath planted.

Wherem the byrdes make theyr nestes, and the fyre trees are a dwellynge for the stoiche.
The hye hylls are a refuge for the wyde goates, and so are the stonye rockes for the Cenyed.
He appointed the mon: for certayne seasons and the sunne knoweth hys goinge downe. Thou makest darkenes that it maye be nyght, where in all the beastes of the forreste do moue. The Lions roarynge after they praye to seke they get them a waye together, and lay them downe in theyr denues. * Wan goeth forth to his work and to hys labour vntill the euynginge. * O Loyde howe manyfolde are thy woorkes: in wyldome hast thou made them all, the earth is ful of thy ryches. So is the greute and wyde see also, wherem are thynges crepyng innumerable both small and great beastes. There go the hyppres, and there is that: * Leuyathan, whome thou hast made, to take hys pastyme therein.

* They wayte all vpon the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season. When thou ge-uest it them, they gather it: and when thou openest thyne hande, they are fylled wth good.
When thou hyddest thy face they are troubled when thou takest awaye theyr breath, they dye, and are turned agayne to theyr duste. When thou lettest thy breath go forth, they shalbe made: and thou shalt renewe the face of the earth.
The glorious maiesty of the Loyde shal endure for euer, the Loyde shal reioyse in hys workes. The earth shall tremble at the loke of hym yf he do but touch the hylls: they shall smoke. I will synge vnto the Loyde as long as I lyue.
I will prayse my God whyle I haue my being And so shall my woordes please him, my ioy shal be in the Loyd. As for synners, they shalbe co-sumed out of the earthe and the vngodlye shall come to an ende: prayse thou the Loyde. O my chosen. And these shewed his tokens emong them and wonders in the lande of Ham. * He sent dar-kenes, and it was darke, and thei were not obedient vnto his woorde. * He turned their waters into bloode, and slew their fishe. * Their lade brought forth frogges, pea cul in their hynges chambers. * He spake & woorde, and there came all maner of flies, and lice in all their quarters.

* He gaue the haile stones for rain, and flames of fire in their lande. He smote their vines also and figge trees, and destroyed the trees that were in their costes. * He spake the woorde, and the grethoppers came and caterpillers innumerable. And did eate vp all the grasse in the lande and deuoured the frute of their ground. * He smote all the first borne in their lande, euen the chief of all their strengthe. He broughte them forth also with siluer and golde, there was not one feble persone emong their tribes. Egypte was glad at their departing: for * thei were a frende of them. * He spred out a cloude to bee a couerpyng, & fire to geue light in the night seas * At their desire, he brought quailles: and he filled them with the bryde of heauen. * He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed out:

Gene: thankes vnto the Lozde for forth all his praise? Blessed are thei that alwaie kepe iudgement and dooe righteous Remem bre me: O Lozde: accordyng to the sauoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: O vi-ser me with thy saluation. That I make the felicitie of thy chosen, and reioyse in the gladnes of thy people, and geue thanks with thyne enheritance. We haue sinned with our fathers we haue dooen amisse, and dealt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, neither kepe thei thy greates goodnes in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the sea euen at f redde sea. Nevertheless, he helped them for his names sake, that he might make his power to bee knowne. * He rebuked the redde sea also, & it was dryed vp: so he led them thowre the drepe, as thowre a wilderness. And he saued them from the aduersaries hnde, and deliuered them fro the hnde of the enemye. * As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them left. * The be-lieued thei his woordes, and sag praise vnto hym

But within a while thei forgot his woordes: & would not abide his counsaill. But last came vpon them in the wilderness, and thei tempted God in the desert. And he gaue them their desire & sent leanes withall into their soule. Thei angred Moses also in the tetes, and Aaron the saincte of the Lozde. * So the earth opened and swallowed vp Dathan, and couered the congregation of Abiram. And the fire was kindled in their copaignie, the flame brent vp the vngod-ly. * They made a calfe in Hozeh, & worshipped molten image. * Thus thei turned their glory into & similitude of a calfe, that eateth haye.
And thei forgot God their sauourer, whiche had dooen so greates thynges in Egypt. Wonderous woordes in the lande of Ham and fearfull thynges by the redde sea.

So he saied: he would haue destroyed them, had not Moses his chosen stand before hym in that gap: to turne a waie his wrathfull indygnation, lest he should destroye them. * Pea, thei thought some of the pleasaunt lande: and gaue no credence vnto his woorde. But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto the voyce of the Lozde. Then lift he vp his hand against them to ouerthrowe them in & wilderness. To cast out their seede emong the nations, and to scattere them in the landes.

* Thei iopned them selues vnto Baall Be-oz: and ate the offerynges of the dedde. Thus thei prouoked him vnto angre with their owne inuencions, and the plage was greates emong them. * Then stode vp Phineches and praped: and so the plage ceased. And that was counted vnto hym for ryghteousnes, emonge al posterities for euermore. * Thei angred him also at the waters of strife, so that he punished Moses for their sake. Because thei prouoked his spirite, so that he spake vnadvisedly with his lippes. Neither destroyed thei the heathen * as the Lozde commaunded them. But were mingled emong the heathen, and learned their woordes,

In so muche that thei worshipped their idols

And gathered them out of the landes, from the east, and from the west, from the north and from the southe. They went astray in the wilderness out of the waie, and founde no cite to dwell in. Hungry and thirsty: their soules fainted in them. So they cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, & he deliuered them from their distress.

He led them forth by a right waie, that they might goe to the cite, where they dwelt. Suche as sit in darkenes & in the shadowe of death, heying fast bound in misery and iron. Because they rebelled against the wordes of the Lorde, and lightly regarded the counsaile of his moste highest: he also brought downe their hearte thowgh heuyness: they fell downe, and there was none to help them. So when they cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, he deliuered them out of their distress. For he brought them out of darkenes, and out of the shadowe of death, and brake their bondes in sondre.

O that menne would therefore praise the Lorde for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he dooeth for the children of menne. For he hath broken the gates of brasle, & smitten the barres of iron in sondre. For the menne are plagued for their offence, and because of their wickednes.

They soule abhorred all maner of meate: and they were euen harde at deathes doore. So when they cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble, he deliuered them out of their distress. * He sent his word, & healed them, & they were saued fro their destruction. O menne would therefore praise the Lorde for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he dooeth for the children of menne.

O that they would offer vnto hym a sacrifice of thanksgyng: & tell out his workes with gladnes. They shal goe downe to the sea in shippes, & occupy their busines in greates waters: These men se the workes of the Lorde, & his wonders in the depe. * For at his word, & stormy winde ariseth, which lifteth up the waves therof. They are caried vp to the heauen, & downe againe to the depe, their soules melteth awaye because of the trouble. They reioyce to see, & rather like a dyonicien manne: & are at their wittes ende. So when they cry vnto the Lorde in their trouble, he deliuereth them out of their distress. For he maketh a storme to cease, so that the waves thereof are still. Then are they glad, because they bee at rest: and so he byngeth them vnto the haue where they would bee. O that men would therefore praise the Lorde for his goodness: & declare the wonders that he dooeth for the children of men.

O that they would exalte hym also in the congregation of the people: a loue hym in the seate of elders. * Which turneth the floudes into a wilderness: and drieth up the water springes. A fruitful lande maketh he barren: for his wickednes of them shal dwell therein. Again, he maketh the wilderness a standyng water: and water springes of a drye ground. And there he setteth the hungry, that he maie builde them a cite to dwell in. That they maie sowe their lande, and plant vineyardes, to yelde them frutes of increase. He blessed them, so that they multiply exceedingly: and suffereth not their cattell to decrease. And again, when they are minished & brought lowe thowgh oppression, thowgh any plague or trouble: Though he suffer them to be euill increased thowgh tyrantes and let them vnder out of the waie in the wilderness: Yet heipeth he the poore out of misery, and maketh him bounde as like a flocke of shepe. The righteous will confesse this, & reioyce: & the mouth of al wickednes shal be stopped. Who so is wise will ponder these thynges: and they shal vnderstande the louyng hyndenes of the Lorde.

PARATVM COR MEVM.

A song and Psalm of David.

God my hearte is reioyced: I will syng: and geue thanks, with the best membre that I haue. I wake flute and harp. I will geue thanks vnto the Lorde among people, I will syng praises vnto the Lorde among nations. For thy mercy is greater then the heuens: & thy truth reacheth vnto the cloudes. * Let vs thy self, O God, about the CChe. C. ix. Psalme of Dauid.

Vnde not thy thyg (O God) of my praise. For the mouthe of the vn godly: yea, the mouth of the disce itfull is opened vpon me: and thei haue spokt against me with false tonges. Thei compassed me aboute also with woydes of hatred, and fought against me with out a cause. For the loue that I had vnto them lo, thei take now my contrary parte: but I geue my self vnto praiser. Thus haue thei rewarded me euill for good: and hated for my good will * Set thou an vngodly mane to bee ruler ouer hym, * and let sathan stande at his right hande.
When sentence is geuen vpon hym, let hym be condempned: and let his praiser bee turned into synne. * Let his daies bee fewe, and let an other take his office. Let his children bee fatherles, & his wife a widdowe. Let his children bee vaga bondes, and begge their byerde: let them seke it also out of desolate places.

Let the extortioner consume all that he hath and let the straungers spoyle his labour. Let there bee no manne to pitie hym, nor to haue co passion vpon his fatherles children. Let his po let his name bee cleane put out. Let the wicked euill against my soule. But deale thou with me (O Lozde God) accordyng vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy. O deliuer me, for I am helpeles and poore, and my heart is wounded w in me. I go hence like y shadow that departeth & am as a waie as the grethopper. My knees are weake thozow fastyng, my fleshe is dried vp for want of fatnes. I became also a rebuke vnto them: * thei that looked vpon me, shaked their heedes. Helpe me (O Lozde my God) O saue me accordyng to thy mercy.

BEATVS VII.

Praise the Lord.

Blessed is the manne that feareth the Lord, he hath great delight in his commandmentes. His seede shall be mighty vpon earth: the generation of his faithful shall be blessed. Riches and plenty shall be in his house: and his righteousness endureth for ever. Vnto Godly there ariseth vpon light in the darkenes: he is merciful, louyng and righteous. A good manne is mercifull, & lenderth: & will guyde his wordes with discrecion. For he shall neuer be moued: and the righteous shall be had in euersyng remembrance. He will not be afrayed of any euill tidynge, for his heart standeth fast: & beleueth in the Lord. His heart is established and will not shrink, vntill he see his desire vpon his enemies. He hath sparred abroad, and giue to the poore: and his righteousness remaineth for ever: his home shall be crated with honour. The vngodly shall see it, and it shall grieve hym, he shall gnawe with his teethe, and consume away: the desire of the vngodly shall perishe.

LAUDATE PERI.

Praise the Lord.

Blessed is the name of the Lord, fro this tyme forth for euer more. The Lordes name is praised, from the rising vpon of the sunne, vnto going downe of the same. The Lord is high aboue all heathen, & his glorye aboute heauen. Who is like vnto the Lord our God, & hath his dwelling so high, and yet humbleth hymself, to beholde the thynges that are in heau and earth: he taketh vpon hym the synne out of the dust, and lifteth the poore out of the mire. IN EXITU ISRAEL.

Praise the Lord.

When Israel came out of Egypt, & the house of Jacob from among strange people. Juda was his sanctuary, & Israel his dominion. The sea saw that, & fled: Jordan was druen backe. The mountaignes skipped like rammes: & the litle hilles like young shepe. What aileth thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest: and thou Jordan that thou wast druen backe? Ye mountaignes, that ye skipped like rammes and ye litle hilles, like young shepe: Tremble thou earth at the presence of the Lord: at the presence of the God of Jacob. Which turned the harde roche into a springyng well, and the flint stone into a springyng well.

NON NOBIS DOMINE.

O vnto vs (O Lord) not vnto vs but vnto thy name geue the praise for thy louyng mercye, and for thy truthes sake. Wherefore shall the heathen saie: where is nowe their God? As for our God he is in heauen: he hath dooen what soeuer pleased hym. Their idoles are siluer and golde, euen the worke of mennes handes. They haue mouth, and speake not, eyes haue they and se not. They haue eares, and heare not: noses haue they, and smell not. They haue handes, and handle not: feete haue they, & walke not: neither speake they thowowe their throte. They that make them are like vnto them, and so are all they that put their trust in them. But thou house of Israel trust thou in the Lord: he is their succour and defence. Ye house of Aaron put your trust in the Lord: he is their helper & defender. Ye that feare the Lord, trust ye in the Lord: he is their helper & defender. The Lord hath been mindfull of vs, and he shall blesse vs euen he shall blesse the house of Aaron. He shall blesse them that feare the Lord, bothe small and greete. The Lord shall encrease you more and more: you and your children. Ye are blessed of the Lord, whiche made heauen and earth. All the whole heauens are the Lordes: & earth hath begnen vnto the children of mene. The dedde praise not the (O Lord) neither all they that go downe into the silence. But we will praise the Lord, from this tyme forth for euer more.

DELEXI QVONIAM.

I am well pleased & the Lord hath heard the voyce of my prayer. That he hath enclined his care vnto me: therefore will I call vpon hym as long as I liue. The snares of death compassed me rounde aboute, & the paines of hell gat holde vpon me: I shall fynde trouble & heuines: and I shall call vpon the name of the Lord (O Lord) I beseeche thee to deliuer my soule. Gracious is the Lord, and righteous: yea, our God is mercifull. The Lord preserveth the simple: I was in misery, & he helped me. Turne again then vnto thy rest, O my soule: for the Lord hath rewarded thee.

And why? thou hast deliuered my soule fro death, myne eyes from teares, and my feete from falling. I will walke before the Lord in the lande of the liuyng. I beleue, and therefore will I speake, but I was soze troubled: I staid in my fast. All menne are liars. What reward shall I geue vnto the Lord, for all the benefites that he hath dooen vnto me? I will receiue the cuppe of saluacion, and call vpon the name of the Lord. I will paye my vowes now in the presence of all his people, right here in the sight of the Lord, is the death of his saintes.

Behold O Lord how I am thy seruant. I am thy seruant, & the sonne of thy handmaid, I hast broght my bodie in bondage. I will offere to sacrifice the sacrifice of thankesguyng, & will call vpon the name of the Lorde. * I will praise my vobres enemies. It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in manne. It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in prynces. All nacions compassed me rounde about but in the name of the Lorde will I destroye them. They kepe me in on every side. they kepe me in (I saie) on every syde: but in the name of the Lorde, I will destroye them. They came about me like bees: and are extyncte, as the

The right hande of the Lorde hath the preeminence, the right hande of the Lorde bynggeth the mightie thynges to passe. I wil not die: but liue and declare the workes of the Lorde. The Lorde hath chastened and correcte me, but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death. Open me the gates of righteousness, that I maie goo into theim and geue thankes vnto the Lorde. This is the gate of the Lorde, the righteous shall entre into it. I will thanke the, for thou hast hearde me: & art become my saluacion. * The same stone whiche the builders refused, is become the hed stone in the corner. This is the Lordes dooing: and it is maruailous in our eyes. This is the waie whiche the Lorde hath made: we will reioyse and be glad in it. helpe. now now, O Lorde, sende vs

BEATI IMMACULATI,

Blessed are those that be undefiled in the waie: and walke in the lawe of the Lorde: Blessed are they that keepe his testimonies, and seke hym with their whole hearte. For they which doo no wickednesse, walke in his wayes.
Thou hast charged that we shall diligently keepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were made so directe, that I might kepe thy statutes. So shall I not bee confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundementes.

I will thanke the, with an vnfained hearte, B when I shall haue learned the iudgements of thy righteousness. I will kepe thy ceremonies: O forsake me not utterly. Where withall shall a young manne cleanse his waie: Euen by cu-slyng hymself after thy worde. With my whole heart haue I sought the: O let me not go wydg out of thy commaundementes. * Thy wordes haue I hid within myne hearte, that I shoulde not synne against the. Blessed art thou O Lorde O teach me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I bene tellyng of all thy iudgements of thy mouth.

I haue had great desire in the waie of thy restimonies, as in all maner of riches. I wil talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respect vnto thy wayes. My desire shall be in thy statutes: and I will not forget thy worde. O dooe well vnto thy seruante, that I maie liue and kepe thy worde. Open thou myne eyes, that I maie see the wonderous thynges of thy lawe. * I am a stranger vpon earth. O hide not thy commaundementes fro me. My soule breakech out for the very feruente desire that it hath a waie vnto thy iudgements. Thou hast rebuked the proude, and cursed are they that dooe erre from thy commaundementes.

O turne fro me shame & rebuke: for I haue kept thy testimonies. Prynces also did sit and speake against me, but thy seruante is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my de-lite and my counsaillers. * My soule cleueth to the dust: O quicken thou me accordyng to thy worde. I haue knowlaged my wayes and thou herdest me: O teach me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waie of thy commaundem-tes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous wokes. My soule melteth a waie for very heuyness confort thou me accordyng vnto thy worde.

Take fro me the waie of lyng, and cause thou me to make muche of thy lawe. I haue chosen the waie of truth: and thy iudgements haue I laied before me. I haue sicken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not. I will rine the waie of thy commaundementes, when thou hast sette my hearte at liberty. Teach me, O Lorde

Psalm. cxix.

Lozde, I waite of thy statutes: and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Geue me vnderstandyng, and I shall kepe it with my whole heart. Make me to goo in the pathe of thy commandementes: for therein is my desire. Encline my hearte vnto thy testimonies, and not to conuetousnes. O turne awaie myne enemies, lest they behold vanitie: and quicken thou me in thy waite.

Establishe thy worde in thy seruante, that I maie feare the. Take awaie the rebuke that I am afraid of, for thy iudgementes are good. Beholde, my desire is in thy commandementes. O quicken me in thy righteousness. Let thy louyng mercy come also vnto me. O Lozde: cuse thy saluacion accordyng vnto thy worde. So shall I make aunte woe vnto my blasphemers: for my truste is in thy worde. O take not the worde of truthe vnto the out of my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall I alwaie kepe thy lawe: yea, for euer and euer. And I will walke at libertie, for I seke thy commandementes. I will speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges, and will not be ashamed. And my desire shall be in thy commandementes whiche I haue loued.

O hands also will I lift vp vnto thy commandementes whiche I haue loued: and my study shall be in thy statutes. O thynke vpon thy seruante, as concernyng thy worde, wherein thou haste caused me to put my truste. The same is my comfort in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me ready in derision: yet haue I not synched from thy lawe. For I remembred thyne euerlastyng iudgementes, O Lozde: and receiued comfort. I am horribly afraid for I vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue been my songes, in the house of my pilgrimage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lozde, in the night season: and haue kepte thy lawe.

This I had, because I kepte thy commandementes: * Thou art my porcion, O Lozde: I haue promised to kepe thy lawe. I made myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole hearte, O be mercifull vnto me accordyng vnto thy worde. I call myne owne daies to remembrance, and turne my fete vnto thy testimonies. I made haste, and prolonged not to kepe thy commandementes. The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotte thy lawe. At midnight will I rise, to geue thanks vnto the: because of thy righteous iudgementes. I am a companion of all them, that feare the: & kepe thy commandementes. * The earth, O Lozde, is full of thy mercy: O teache me thy statutes. O Lozde, thou hast deale graciously with thy seruante accordyng vnto thy worde. O learne me true vnderstandyng, & knowlage, for I haue beleued thy commandementes.

Before I was troubled I went wrong: but now haue I kepte thy worde. * Thou art good and gracious: O teache me thy statutes. The proude haue ymagined a lie againste me, but I will kepe thy commandementes with my whole hearte. Their hearte is as fat as ypaune, but my desire hath been in thy lawe. It is good for me that I haue been in trouble, that I maie learne thy statutes. The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me the thousandes of golde and siluer. * Thy handes haue made me and fashioned me: O geue me vnderstandyng, that I maie learne thy commandementes. * They that feare the will be glad wth thei se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde.

I know, O Lozde, that thy iudgementes are righte, and that thou of very faithfulness haste caused me to be troubled. O let thy mercifullkindnes be my comfort, accordyng to thy worde vnto thy seruante. O let thy louyng mercies come vnto me, that I maie liue: for thy lawe is my desire. Let the proude be confounded, for thei go wickedly about to destroy me: but I will be occupied in thy commandementes. Let such as feare the, & haue knowe thy testimonies be turned vnto me. O let myne heart be sounde in thy statutes, & I be not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacion: & I haue a good hope because of thy worde. Myne eyes long sooke for thy worde, sayyng: O when wilt thou comforte me? For I am become like a bottle in the smoke: yet dooe I not forget thy statutes.

How many are the daies of thy seruante: when wilt thou be auenged of them that persecute me? The proude haue digged pitres for me, whiche are not after thy lawe. Al thy commandementes are true, they persecute me falsly: O be thou my help. They had almost made an ende of me vpon earth: but I forsooke not thy commandementes. O quicke me after thy louyng kindness, and so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth. O Lozde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truthe also remaineth from one generation to another: thou haste laied the foundation of the earth: and it abideth. They continue this daie, accordyng to thyne ordinaunces: for all thynges serue the. If my desire had not been in thy lawe, I should haue perished in my trouble. I will neuer forget thy commandementes, for with them thou haste quickened me. I am thyne, O haue me: for I haue sought thy commandementes. The vngodly laied waite for me to destroye me: but I will confide in thy testimonies. I set that all thynges come to an ende: but thy commandementes are readyng brode.

What lone haue I vnto thy lawe, all the daie long is my study in it. Thou, thou, O Lozde, thy commandementes haue made me wiser the myne enemies, for they are euer wth me. I haue more vnderstandyng then my teachers: for thy testimonies are my studie. I am wiser then the aged: because I kepte thy commandementes. I haue restrained my fete from euery euill waie: that I maie kepe thy worde.

I haue not synched from thy iudgementes: O for I teachest me. O how sweete are thy wordes vnto my throte: Pea, sweeter the honey vnto my mouth. Thou, O Lozde, thy commandementes I get vnderstandyng, therefore I hate all wicked waies. Thy worde is a lichte vnto my fete, & a light vnto unto my pathes. I haue sworn, and am stedfastly purposed to kepe thy ryghteous iudgements. I am troubled aboute measure: quicken me O Lord accordyng vnto thy worde. Let the free wyl offrynges of my mouth please the O Lord, and teache me thy iudgements.

* My soule is alwaye in my hand, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodly haue layde a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy commandementes. Thy testimonies haue I clapped as myne heretage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of myne hert. I haue appoynted myne herte to fulfill thy statutes alwaye euen vnto the ende. I hate them that ymagine euell thynges, but thy lawe doo I loue. Thou art my defence and hyde, & my truste is in thy worde. I swaue fro me ye wyched, I will kepe the commandementes of my God. O stablish me accordyng vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disapoynted of my hope. Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea, my deliuerer shall euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagyne but disceyte.

Thou puttest a waye all the vngodly of the earth lyke dross: therefore I loue thy testimonies. My fleshe trembleth for feare of the: and I am affrayed of thy iudgements. I deale with the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours. Make þ thy seruante to deliuer in that whiche is good: that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are wasted awaye with loking for thy healt he and for the worde of thy ryghteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruante accordyng vnto thy louyng mercy: and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruant, O graunt me vnderstandyng, that I maye knowe thy testimonies. It is tyme for the Lord to lape to thyne hande for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commandementes aboue gold and precious stone. Therefore hold I streight all thy commandementes and al false waies I utterly abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull: therefore doth my soule kepe them. When thy word goeth forth, it geueth lyght and vnderstanding, euen vnto þ simple. I opened my mouth and dyue in my breath, for my deliuer was in thy commandementes. O loke thou vpon me, and be mercifull vnto me as thou vnest to doo vnto those that loue thy name. O dyde my steppes in thy worde: and shooill no wychednes haue dominion ouer me. O deliuer me from þ wronge full dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commandementes. Shewe the light of thy countenance vpon thy seruant, and teache me thy statutes. Myne eyes giue oute with water, because minne kepe not thy lawe. Ryghteous art thou, O Lord: and true is thy iudgment.

The testimonies that thou haste commanded, are exceedyng ryghteous and true. * My zeale hath enl consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes. Thy word is tryed to the vetermooste: and thy seruante loueth it. I am smal, and of no reputacyon, yet do not I forget thy commandementes. Thy ryghteousnesse is an euerlastyng ryghteousnesse: and thy lawe is the truth. Trouble and heynesse haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my deliuer in thy commandementes. The ryghteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastyng. O graunt me vnderstandyng, and I shall lyue. I call with my whole hert, heare me. O Lord, I will kepe thy statutes. Yea, euen vpon the do I call, helpe me: and I shall kepe thy testimonies. Carely in the moynyng do I crye vnto the: for in thy worde is my truste. Myne eyes preuent the nyght watches, that I myght be occupped in thy wordes. Heare my voyce, O Lord, accordyng vnto thy louyng kyndnesse quicken me accordyng as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me: and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lord: for all thy commandementes are true.

As concernyng thy testimonies, I haue knowne longe syng, & thou haste grounded the for euer. O consyde myne aduersyte, and deliuer me: for I do not forget thy lawe. Turnge thou my cause, and deliuer me: quychen me accordyng vnto thy worde. Healt he is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Great is thy mercy, O Lord: quychen me as thou art wont. Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me: yet doo I not swarne from thy testimonies. It greueth me, when I se the transgressours: because they kepe not thy lawe. Consyde, O Lord, how I loue thy commandementes. O quychen me accordyng to thy louyng kyndnesse. Thy worde is true fro euerlastyng: all the iudgements of thy ryghteousnesse endure for evermoze.

Mynees haue persecuted me without cause: but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

* I am as glad of thy worde, as one that findeth greute spoyle. As for lyss, I hate and abhorre them: but thy lawe doo I loue. Seuen tymes a daye, doo I praye the, because of thy ryghteous iudgements. Great is the peace þ they haue whiche loue thy lawe, & they are not offended at it. Lord I haue looked for thy sayyng healt he and done after thy commandementes. My soule hath kepte thy testimonies, and loued them exceedyngly. I haue kepte thy commandementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are before the. Let my complaynt come before the, O Lord, geue me vnderstandyng, accordyng vnto thy worde. O let my supplicacyon come before the, deliuer me accordyng to thy worde. My lippes shall speake of thy praye, when thou halt taught me thy statutes. Yea, my tong shall syng of thy word: for al thy commandementes are ryghteous.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commandementes. I haue longed for thy sayyng healt he, O Lord, and in thy law is my deliuer. O let my soule lyue, and it shall praye the, and thy iudgements shall helpe me.

I haue gone astraye lyke a shepe that is lost. O seke thy seruante, for I doo not forget thy commandementes.

For they speake vnyghterously agaynst the, and thine enemies take thy name in vayne. Do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate the: & am not I greued with those prynces agaynst the? Psea, I hate them thyghte for,

enem as though they were myne enemies.

* Crye me, O God, and seke the groundes of myne bett: proue me, & examyn my thoughtes. Loke well if there be any waye of wychednesse in me, & leade me in the waye euerlasting.

TRIPE ME.

Crye me, O Lord, from the cruel I man, and preserve me from the wicked manne. Whiche ymagine mischief in their dettes: & styte vpon strite all the daye longe. They haue sharpened their tonges lyke a serpent: & adders pop son is vnder theyr lippes. Scla. Crye me, O Lord, from the handes of vngodly: preserve me from the wicked men, whiche are purposed to ouerthrowe my goynges. The proude haue layde a snare for me: and lpyed a net abroade to coardes: psea, and set trappes in my way. Scla. I sayde vnto the Lord: thou arte my God, & heare the voyce of my prayers, O Lord. O Lord God, thou strength of my dealth, thou hast couered my head in the day of battayle. Let not the vngodly haue thys desyre, O Lord, let not his mucheuous ymaginacio prosper: least they be to proude. Scla. * Let the mischief of theyr owne lippes fall vpon the head of them: & compass me about. Let hote burning cooles fall vpon them: let them be cast into the fyre and into the pyt: that they neuer rysse vpayne. I man full of wordes shall not prosper vpon the earth: euell shall hunte the wicked person, to ouerthrowe hym. Sure I am, that the Lord wil auenge the pooze: and maynteyne the cause of the helplees. The righteous also shall geue thanks vnto thy name, and the iust shall continue in thy sight.

DOMINE CLAMAVI.

Lord, I call vpon the: hast thou vnto me, and consyde my voyce, when I crye vnto the. Let my prayer be set forth in thy sight, & as the incense, & let the lityng vp of my handes be aneuepyng sacrifice. * Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth and kepe the dooze of my lippes. O let not myne herte be inclined to any euell thyng, let me not be occupied in vngodly workes, with men & wyche wychednes, least I eat of such thynges as please them. Let the righteous rather synne me frendly & reprove me. But let not theyr precious balmes, breake in my head: psea, I will praye yet agaynst theyr wychednes. Let theyr iudges be ouerthrowen in strong places, that they maye hear my wordes: for they are swete. Oure bones lyke scattered before the pyt, lyke as when one breaketh & beweth wood vpon the earth. But myne eyes loke vnto the, O Lord God: in thy is my trust. Oh cast not oute my soule. Repe me from the snare whiche they haue layde for me, and from the trappes of the wicked doozes. Let the vngodlye fall into theyr owne nettes together: and and lette me euer escape thim.

The Proverbes of Salomon.

The first Chapter.

The prynciple of wysdome. We may not harden into the bo: improue prouocation and intelligens of spyners. Wythout complaynt her to be despyred of all men, and pprophesied destruccyon unto her despyers.

The Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel: to learne wysdome, & to percerue the instructiō and to percerue the wordes of vnderstandyng: & thereby to receaue prudence, ryghteousnes iudgement and equitye. That the very simple myght haue wytte, and that the ydge me myght haue knowledge and true vnderstandyng. By hearyng, the wyle man shal come by more wysdome, and he that is endued wth vnderstandyng, shal obtayne wytte to percerue a parable, and p interpretation therof, the wordes of the wyle, and the darke speches of the same. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome. But folow despyre wysdome and instructiō. Wy sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne: and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal byynge grace vnto thy deade, and shalbe as a chayne aboute thy necke. Wy sonne, consent not vnto synners yf they eneyle the, and saye: come wth vs, we will laye wayte for bloude, and luche pynelpe for the innocent without a cause: we shal swallowe them vp lyke the hell, and deuoure them quiche and hole, as those that go downe into the pye. So shal we finde al maner of costly riches, and fyll our houses wth spoyles. Cast in thy lot amonge vs: and let vs all haue one purse.

Wy sonne, walke not thou wth the: refrayne thy fete from theyr waye. For: thei fete runne to euil: & are hasty to shed bloude. But in wayne is the net layd forth befoze the bydden eyes, yea they them selues laye wayte one for anothers bloude & one of them wolde slep another. These are the wayes of all such as be couetous, the one wolde rauyn anothers lyfe. * Wysdome cryeth without, & putterh forth her voyce in p stretes. She calleth befoze the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes chozowe the cytic, sayenge: O ye chyldren, howe longe wyll ye loue chyldyshnes? howe lōge wyll ye shewer despyte in schoynge, and the vniuers be enemyes vnto knowledg: O turne you vnto my correccion: lo I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, & make you vnderstande my wordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande: and no man regarded it: but all my counseils haue ye despyled: and set my correccion at naught. Therfore shal I also laugh in your destruccion, & moche you, when that thyng that ye feare cometh vpon you: euen when the thyng that ye be afrayd of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, and youre myserye lyke a tempeste: yea, when trouble and heynenes cometh vpon you.

Then shal they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shal seeke me early, but they shal not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledge: and receaied not the feare of the Lorde: but abhored my counsell, and despyled all my correccion. Therfore shal they eat the frutes of theyr owne waye, & be fylled wth theyr owne inuencions, for the turnynge awaye of the vniuers shal slepe them, & the prosperitee of foolis shalbe theyr owne destruccio. * But who so bareneth vnto me shal dwell safe, and be sure from any feare of euill.

The .ii. Chapter.

Wysdome is to be sought and set by. An aduise: curren woman to be charysh.

Mysonne, yf thou wilt receaue my wordes and kepe my commaundmentes by the, that thou wilt encline thyne eares vnto wysdome, apply thyne heere the to vnderstandyng. For yf thou cryest after wysdome, and callest for knowledge: yf thou sekest after her as after money, & dyggest for her as for treasure, then shalt thou vnderstande p feare of the Lorde, & fynde the knowledge of God. * For it is the Lorde that genneth wysdome, out of hys mouth cometh knowledge and vnderstandyng: he bydeth vp helth for p ryghteous. He pferueth the wellfare of the ryghteous and defendeth them that walke synnerly: he kepeth them in the ryght path, and pferueth the waye of such as serue him wth godlynes. The shal thou vnderstande ryghteousnes, iudgement, & equitye: yea & every good path. When wysdome entered in to thyne heere & thy soule desireth knowledge: she shal counsell pferue the, & vnderstandyng shal kepe the. That thou mayest be deliuered fro the euill waye, and from the man that speakech frowarde thynges, from suche as leane the the high strete, and walke in the waies of darkness: whiche reioyce in dooing euill, and belite in wicked thinges: whose waies are crooked and thei frowarde in thei pathes.

Chat thou maist bee deliuered also * from y strange woman, & from her y is not thine owne whiche geureth swete wordes, forsaketh y husbande of her yowth, & forgetteth the covenannt of her God. For her house is enclined vnto death, & her pathes vnto hell. All thei that goo in vnto her come not again, neither take thei hold of the waie of life. Therefore, walke thou in the waie of luche as bee verteous, and kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iust shal dwell in the lande, and thei that bee perfect shal remain in it: but the vngodly shalbe rote out of y land and the wicked dooers shalbe rote out of it.

My sonne, forget not thou my lawe but se y thine heart kepe my commandementes. For thei shal prolong the daies and yeares of thy life and bying y peace. Let mercy & faithfulness neuer go fro the: bynde theim aboute thy necke & write theim in the tables of thine heart.

So shalt thou finde sauour & good vnderstanding in the sight of God & menne. Put thy trust in God with all thine hearte: & leane not vnto thine owne wit. In all thy waies haue respect vnto hym: & he shal order thy goynges. * Bee not wise in thine owne conceits: but feare the Lord, & departe fro euill: so shal thy nauell be whole, & thy bones strong. * Honour the Lord thy substaunce: & with the firstynges of all thyne increase, & geue vnto the poore, so shal thy barnes bee filled with plenteousnes: and thy presses shal flowe ouer wth swete wine. My sonne, despise not y chastenynge of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom y Lord loueth, hym he chasteneth, & yet deliuereth in him, euen as a father in his owne sonne. Wel is hym that fyndeth wisdom, and obtaineth vnderstandynge: for y gettyng of it is better the any marchaundise of siluer, & the profite of it is better then golde. * Wisdom is moze worth the pccious stones: & all the thynges that thou canst desire are not to bee compared vnto her.

Upon her right hand is long life, and vpon her left hande is riches and honoure. Her waies are pleasant waies, and al her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of life to theim that laie hold vpon her, and blessed is he that kepeth her faste.

With wisdom hath the Lord laied the foundation of the earth: and thei that vnderstandynge hath he stablished the heauens. Thei that his wisdom thei deapen bryake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe y dewe. My sonne, let not these thynges departe from thine eyes: but kepe my lawe and my counsaill, that thou maist haue y pleasure of long life and vnderstandynge: for thei shalbee life vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouth.

Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waie: and thy fote shal not stumbe. * If thou stepest, y shalt not bee afraied: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe sweetely. Thou needest not to bee afraid of any sodein feare, neither for the violence rathynge in of the vngodly, when it cometh. For the Lord shal stande by thy syde, & kepe thy fote, y thou bee not taken. Withdraw no good thyng from theim y haue nede, so long as thine hand is able to dooe it. Make not vnto thy neighbour: go thy waie, and come again, to morowe will I geue y: where as thou hast now to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neighbour, seynge he dooeth dwell in rest by y. Strive not lightly with any manne without a cause, where as he hath dooen the no harme. * For loe not a wicked manne, & chose none of his waies: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde: but his counsaill is among the righteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellinges of the righteous. As for y scozefull dooth not he laugh theim to scozne: but he geureth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shal haue honoure in possession: but shame is the promotion that fooles shal haue.

Care, O ye children, the fatherly exhortacion, and take good heed, that ye maie learne wisdom. For I haue geuen yon a good doctryne forsake not ye my lawe. For when I my self was my fathers deere sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and saied vnto me. * Let thine heart receiue my wordes, kepe my commandementes, and thou shalt live. Get the wisdom: and get the vnderstandynge: forget not the wordes of my mouth, and thinke not from theim. Forsake her not & she shal preserve the: loue her & she shal kepe y.

The chiefe pointe of wisdom is, that thou be willyng to obtaine wisdom: and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstandynge. * Make much of her and she shal promote the: Pea, if thou embrace her, she shal bying the vnto honoure. She shal make the a gracious hede, and garnishe the with a crowne of glozy. Heare my sonne, and receiue my wordes: and the yeris of thy life shalbe many. I haue shewed the, y waie of wisdom, and led the into the right pathes. So that if thou gooeste there in, there shal no straitnes hynder the, and when thou runnest thou shalt not fall.

Take faste holde of doctryne, and let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy life. * Come not in y pathes of the vngodly, and walke not in y waie of the wicked. Abhoire it, and go not therein: departe aside, and passe ouer by it. For thei cannot slepe, except thei haue first dooen some mischief: neither take thei any rest, except thei haue first dooen some harme. For thei eate the hyde of wickednes, and drynke the wyne of robbery.

The path of the righteous shyneth as the light that is cure brighte and brighte vnto the perfecte daie. But the waie of the vngodly is as y darkenes, thei knowe not where thei fall.

* My sonne, marke my wordes, and incline thyne ear, O ye children, the fatherly exhortacion, and take good heed, that ye maie learne wisdom. For I haue geuen yon a good doctryne forsake not ye my lawe. For when I my self was my fathers deere sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and saied vnto me. * Let thine heart receiue my wordes, kepe my commandementes, and thou shalt live. thyne care vnto my saynges. For thou shalt be parte from thyne eyes, but kepe them even in the myddelle of thyne hearte. For they are life vnto all those that fynde them, and healeth vnto all their bodies. Kepe thyne heart with all diligence for therupon hangeth life. Put a bridle from the a frowarde mouth, and let the lippes of selau- die bee farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde þe thyng that is right, and let thyne eyeliddes loke straight before. For the left hande the waye that is on the right hande. The husbande to chuse with the wife: he should chuse a wife that is wise and fearefull of the Lord, and she should be a wife that is a virgin, and she should be a wife that is a virgin.

I soonne, geue hie vnto my wife-dome, and bowe thyne care vnto my prudencer: that thou maiest regarde good counsaill, and that thy lippes maie speake knowlage. For the lippes of an harlot are a dropping honny combe, & her throat is more glistering then oyle. But at the laste she is as bitter as worme wood, & as her tongue is as sharpe as a two edged swerde. Her fete go downe vnto death, and her stappes pearle tho-row vnto hell. Wherefore, thou dwelling with her, wilt pondre the pathe of lyfe so vnto the laste are her wayes that thou canst not know them.
Hearre me now therfore (O my soonne) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth.

thy strength vnto other, and thy cares to the cruell. That other mene bee not filled with thy goodes, and that thy labourers come not in a straunge house. Yea, that thou mourne not at þe last (when þe hast spet thy body and lusty grene youth) & then saie: Alas, why hated I nourtour: why did my heart despise correccion? Wherefore was not I obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, and breked not vnto them that enfore med me? I am come almost into all misfortune in an harlot, and embrace þe bosome of another woman? For euery mannes wayes are ope in

The vi. Chapter.

The husbande and the wife: the husbande should be a man that is wise and fearefull of the Lord, and the wife should be a woman that is a virgin, and she should be a woman that is a virgin.

I soonne, if thou bee surety for thy neighbour, and hast fastened thine hand for another manne, thou art bounde with thyne owne wordes and take with thyne owne speche.
Therefore my soonne dooe this, and thou shalt bee discharged: When þe art come into thy neighbours daunger, go thy wayes then sone, humble thy self, & wch thy fete treade threth thy creditour let not thyne eyes sleepe, nor thyne eyeliddes slombe. Make thy self as a doore fro the hande of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler. So to the emmer (thou slouggard) conside her wayes, & learne to bee wise. She hath no gnyde, nor ouerscar, nor ruler: yet in the sommer she poureth her meate, and gathereth her fode together in the heruest. How long wilt thou sleepe thou slouggardman? When wilt thou arise out of thy sleepe. Prea sleepe on still a litle, & be a litle, folde thyne handes together yet a litle that thou maiest sleepe: so shall pouerty come vnto the as one that traualleth by the waie and necessite like a weaponed manne. For thou art not slouggard, thy husbande shall come as a springing well, and thyne husbande shall come as a springing well, and thyne husbande shall come as a springing well.

And vngodly persone, a wicked mane goeth with a frowarde mouthe, he winketh with his eyes, he tokneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fingers, he is euer imaginynge mischief and frowardnes in his heart, and causeth discorde.
Therefore shall his destruction come hastely vpon hym, & sodeynly shall he bee all to broken, & not bee healed. These sixe thynges dooeth the Lord hate, & the seuenth he utterly abhorreth: A proude loke, a lying tong, handes that shed innocente bloodde, an heart that goeth about with wicked imaginacions, & feete þe bee swift in runnyng to dooe mischief, a falsse witness þe byngeth vpon lies, and suche as soweth discorde among brethren.

O my soonne, kepe thy fathers commaundement & forsake not þe lawe of thy mother. Put them vp together in thyne heart, & binde them about thy necke. That they maie lede the when þe goest pyslerue the when þe art a shepe, & that when thou awakest, þe maiest talke of them. For þe commaundement is a lanterne, and þe lawe a light: yea chastenynge & nourtour is the waie of life, & they maie kepe the from the euill woman, and from the flatterynge tongue of the harlot, that thou lust not after her betwey in thyne heart, & lest þe bee taken with her faire lokes. An harlot will make a man to begge his brede, & a woman will hunter for þe precious life. Waise a man take fire in his bosome, & his clothes not bee burnt: Or can one go vpon hote cooles, and his fete not bee hurt? Euen so, whosoever goeth into his neighbours wife & toucheth her, can not be vngyted. For the wife of a man is as his owne flesh, & as his own bone.

O my soonne, dooe vnto thy neighbour as thou wouldest be dooe vnto thyself. For if thou hast hated thine enemy, thou shalt be troubled by him, & thou shalt be troubled by him. But if thou lovest him that hateth thee, he shall be thyne enemy no more. For if thou lovest him that hateth thee, he shall be thyne enemy no more. For if thou lovest him that hateth thee, he shall be thyne enemy no more. For if thou lovest him that hateth thee, he shall be thyne enemy no more. For if thou lovest him that hateth thee, he shall be thyne enemy no more.

that stealeth, to satisfie his soule when he is hūgrie: but if he maie begotten, he restoreth again seuen tymes as muche, as he maiketh recompence to all the good of his house. But who so ch mitteth aduouty with a woman, he is a foole, and byngeth his life to destruction. he getteth himself also shame and dishonour, such as shal neuer bee put out. For the groudly and wrathe of the manne will not bee intreated: no, though thou wouldest offre hym greates gifts to make amendes, he will not receiue them.

Eccl. vii. Chapter.

God ought to be feared and honoured. His commandements ought to be kept: without apperay and delites ought to be shunned.

Kepe my wordes: and late up my commaundementes by the.
Kepe my commaundementes & my lawe, euen as the apple of thyne eye & thou shalt liue. Bynde theim vp on thy fyngers, and wyte them in the table of thyne harte. Saie vnto wisdom thou art my sister: and call vnderstandyng thy kinswoman that thei maie kepe the from the harlot whiche getteth swete wordes.

For out of the window of my house I looked thorow the lattes, and behelde the symple people: and among other simple folkes: I spied one younge foole, goynge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waite toward the harlottes house in the twilighte of the euernyng, when it began now to bee night and darke. And beholde, there met hym a womā with open toliens of an harlot, onely her heart was hidde. She was full of loude wordes, and rebye to dallais: whose fete could not abide in þ house, now is she without, now in the stretes, and laiethe a bayte in euery corner. She caught the young man, kissed hym & was not ashamed sayng: I had a vow of peace offerings to paie, & this dale I perfourme it.

Therefoze came I forth to mete the, that I might seeke thy face, and so haue I founde the. I haue deckte my bed w couerynges & clothes of Egypt. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrr Alors, & Cinamō. Come let vs lie together, and take our pleasure till it bee dale light: & we wil enioye the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of monie with hym: and will returne at the apointed solempne feaste. Thus with many swete wordes she outraue hym, & with her flatterynge lippes she entised hym so deinly to folow her: as it were an ore led to the slaughter, and like as it wer a foole & laugherd when he goeth to the stockes to bee punished so long till she had wounded his liuer w her harte like as if a birde passed to the snare, not knowyng that the perill of his life lieth there vpon.

Hear me now therfoze, O my childen, and marke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine heart wandze in her waies, and bee not thou de-ceined in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, and call doone: yea, many a strong mane hath been slain by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waie vnto hell: and byng mene doone into the chambers of death.

The viii. Chapter.

The path of the righteous is straight.

Do: th not * wisdome crieth dooeth I not vnderstandyng put forth her voice: Standethe she not in þ high places in the stretes & waies: dooeth she not crie before the whole cite & in the gates where menne goo out and in: It is you, O ye menne (saith she) whom I call. An-to (the childen of men) dooe I lift up my voice Take hede vnto knowlage O ye ignorant: be ye wile in heart O ye fooles. Geue eare, for I will speake of greates matters, and ope my lippes to tell thynges þ bee righte. For my chote shal be talkyng of þ trouth, & my lippes abhorre vngodlynes. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous there is no fro wardenes no; falsed therin.

Thei are all plain to suche as will vnderstand and right to theim þ finde knowlage. Receiue my doctryne, and not siluer: and my knowlage more then fyne golde. * For wisdome is more worth then pzeious stones: yea, all thynges þ thou canst desire, maie not bee compared vnto it. I wisdome haue my dwellyng with know-lage, and prudent counsaill is myne owne. The feare of the Lord abhorreth wickednes, pride, disdain, and the cruill waite: and a mouthe that speakerth wicked thynges, I vterly abhorre. I can geue counsaill, & I conferre thynges: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strenght. * Thozow me, hynges raigne: thozow me, counsaillers make iust lawes. Thozow me, dooe pyners bare rule and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement.

I am longyng vnto those that loue me: & thei that seke me early shal finde me. Richesse and honoure are with me: yea, excellent goodes and righteousnes. My frute is better then gold and pzeious stone, and myne increase more worth then fine siluer. I will guyde the in the waie of righteousnes, and in the strete of iudgemente.
That I may sende prosperite to those that loue me, and to increase their treasure.

The Lord hym selfe had me in possession in the beginning of his waies, or euer he beganne his woorkes afore tyme. * I haue bene ordained from euerylastyng, and from the beginning or euer the erth was made. When I was bozne there were neither dephtes no; springes of water. Before the foundations of the mountaynes were layed: yea, before all bylles was I bozne.
The erth and all that is vpon the erth was not yet made, no, nor the ground it selfe. * For when he made the heauens, I was pzeasente, when he set vp the dephtes in ordze, when he hangde the cloudes aboue, when he fastened the springes of the depe.

When he shut the sea within * certaine boundes, that the waters would not goo ouer their markes that he commaunded.

When he laied the foundations of the earth I was with him, ordzynyng all thynges: deliuitng dayly, and enioyng al way before hym.

From 1. 1.
From 1. 1.

Wise & lone maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete soune is an heu-nelle vnto his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, profyte nought: but theye that are lawfully gotten, theye shall be a defence from death. The Lorde will not let the soule of the righteous suffer hunger, but he taketh awaye the ryche of the vngodly. An idle hand maketh poore, but a quicke labou-ryng hande maketh ryche.

Whoso is vngodly, let hym be as a dogge, for he hath eaten of his filth.

Whoso gathereth in thowowe, is wise: but he that is sluggish in haruest, byngeth him self to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the head of the righteous, and the mouth of the vngodly hepeth myschefe in secrete. The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good repute: but the name of the vngodly shal synke. A wise man will receyue warnyng, but a pratyng foole shalbe punished. He that leaerth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but whoso goth a wryng way: shalbe knowne. He that winketh with his eye will do some harme: but he that hath a foolys mouth, shalbe eaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouth of the vngodly hepeth myschefe in secrete.

Enyll will synne vnto synne: but loue con-reth the multiplynde of synnes. In the lippes of hym that hath vnderstandyng a manne shall fynd wysdom, but the rod belongeth to the backe of the foolys. Wise men laye vp knowlage, but the mouth of the foolys is nye destrucyon.
The ryche mans goodes are bys stronge holde, but their owne pouertie feareth the poore. The righteous labourerh to do good, but the vngod-ly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourture, is the waie of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed, dis-ceyueh hym selfe. Whyslemyng lippes hepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh anpe-sclaundre, is a foole. Where muche bablyng is, there must nedes be offence: and he that refrag-neth his lippes, is wise. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodly is nothyng wyse. The lippes of the righteous fede a whole multiplynde, but foolys shall dye in theyr owne folys. The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull transyle it doth nothyng therto. A foole doeth wychedly, and maketh but a spoite of it: but wysdome releth the man that hath vnderstandyng. The thynges that the vngodly are afraid of, shall come vpon them, but the righteous shall haue theyr desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempeste cometh: but the righteous remaine.
Wher sure for euer. As wynege is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, eue so is a sloug-hy person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the peares of the vngodly shalbe wostened.
The patient abyng of the righteous shal be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shal perishe. The waie of the Lorde geueth courage vnto godly, but it is a feare for wyched doers. The righteous shal neuer be ouerthydden, but the vngodly shal not remaine in the lande. The mouth of the iuste will be talking of wysdom, but the tongue of the froward shal perishe. The lippes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the doore.

A false balauce is an abhominacion vnto  $\phi$  Lord: but a true weight pleaseh him. Where pride is, there is shame also and confusyon: but wher as is lowlinesse, there is wysdome. The innocente dealinge of the iuste shall leade them, but the wyckednes of such as dyssemble, shalbe theyr owne destruccio. Richesse helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death. The righteousnesse of the innocent ordyeth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wyckednesse.

The righteousnesse of the iust shall deliuer the, but the wycked shalbe taken in theyr owne vngodlynesse. When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confidence of rycheesse shal perishe. The ryghteous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shal come in his steade.

Therfore the mouth of the dissembler is his neyghbour destroyed: but therfore knowlage shall the iust be deliuered. When it goeth well with the righteous, the cite is merry: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iuste are in wealth, the cite prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth. A foole bringeth vp a schaunder of his neyghbour: but a wysse man wyll kepe it secrete. A dyssembling persone wyll discouer pryncy thynges but he that is of a fapthfull herte wyll kepe couysayle.

Where no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but wher as many are that can geue counsaile, there is wealethe. He that is iustic for a sleaunger hurteth hym self, and he that medleth not with suretyshyppe is sure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honestye, as for the wycked, they maytayne rycheesse. He that is merciful, doth hym self a benefyte: but whoso hurteth his neyghboure, is a trayaunte. The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he  $\phi$  so weryth ryghteousnesse, shall receyue a sure rewarde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euil byngeth death. The Lord abhorreth them that be of a fained herte, but he hath pleasure in them  $\phi$  are of an vnde-fyled conuersacion. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the sede of the ryghteous shalbe pserued. A fayne woman with out dyscrete maners is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes moute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is indignacon. Some manne getteth oute bys goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygards (hauyng pryncy) wyll departe from nothyng, & yet is euer in pouerthe. He that is lyberall in geuyng, shall haue plenty: & he that watereth shalbe watered also hym self. Who so doozerth vp his cozne, shalbe cursed among the people: but blessing shall lyght vpon his heed that getteth foode. He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth his desyre: but whoso seeketh after myschance, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his rycheesse, shal haue a fall: but  $\phi$  ryghteous shall flourish, as the grene leafe. Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his herpage, and the foole shal be a name to the wyse. The frute of the righteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endenoureth hym selfe to winne mens soules, is wyse. The ryghteous be recompensed vpon earth, howe muche moze then the vngodly and the spongers.

The. xii. Chapter.

Aho so loueth wysdome wyll be content to bee reformed: but he  $\phi$  hateth to be reformed is a foole. A good ma is acceptable vnto  $\phi$  Lord but the wycked ymaginer wyll be condempned. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shal not be moued. A housewylly woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vn honestly, is a corrupcyon in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are ryghte: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly are dyscreyful. The talkyng of the vngodly is howe they may lay wayer for bloud, but the mouth of the righteous wyll deliuer them. God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked, and they stande not: but the house of the ryghteous shall stande sted faste. A man shalbe commended for his wysdome, but a foole shalbe despyed. A symple manne whiche laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgeous and lacketh bread. A righteous ma regardeth the lyfe of his cattel, but  $\phi$  vngodlye haue cruel hertes. He that tytleth his lande, shal haue plentyousnesse of barde: but he that foloweth ydelnesse, is a verpe foole.

The desyre of the vngodly hunterth after myschance: but the roote of the ryghteous byngeth forth frute. The wycked falleth into the snare, therfore the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shall escape oute of all peryll. Euerie man shall enioye good, accordyng to the frute of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shal he be rewarded. Looker what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyll be counsaied. A foole uttereth bys wrath in all the haste: but a dyscrete man couereth wronge. A iust man wyll tell the truthe, and shewe the thyng that is ryghte: but a false wytnesse dyscreyeth. A sleaundersous persone pycketh lyke a sword, but a wysse mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouthe is euer constant: but a dissembling tonge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagyn euil in their mynd, wyll dyscreue: but the counsaillers of peace shal haue soye folowynge them. There shall no mysfortune happel vnto the iust, but the vngodly shal be fylled with mysery. The Lord abhorreth lying lypes: but they  $\phi$  labour for truthe please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doeth bys wysdome: but an vndiscrete hert tellethe oute bys foolysnesse. A dysgent hande shal beare rule: but the ydle shalbe vnder trybute. Heuynesse discourageth  $\phi$  hert of ma: but a good woide maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth bys neyghboure: but the waye of the vngodlye wyll dyscreue theim selues. The dyscreyfull man shal not tolke, that he looke in duntyng, but the children of menne. Therefore haue vnto me O ye children, blessed are they that heare my wordes.

O geue care vnto nourture, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the manne that heareth me: wat-chyng daily at my gates, & geuing attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For whoso findeth me, findeth life: and shall obtaine fauoure of the Lorde. But whoso offendeth against me, hur-terh his owne soule. And they that hate me are the louers of death.

Eccl. ix. Chapter.

Whoso moueth all manner to make his part. The prophecy of an iudger.

Whoso hath buylded her self an house, and betwen our seven pillars he hath builded her vitayles, pouerd out her wyne, and prepared her table. She hath sente forth her maidens to crye vpon the highest place of the citie.

Whoso is ignorant, let hym come hether. And to the vndeuyse she saied: O come on pour wale, cate my bzede, and drynke my wyne whiche I haue pouerd out for you. For sake ignorance, and ye shall liue: and se that ye goo in the wale of vnderstandyng.

Whoso reproveth a scozefull persone, getteth hymself dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodly straineth hymself. Reproue not a scozner, lest he owe the euill will: but rebuke a wise manne, and he will loue y. Geue a discrete manne but an occasiō and he will bee the wiser: teache a righteous manne, and he will encrease in knowlage.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wisdom, and the knowlage of holy thynges, is vnderstandyng. For thowoe me thy daies shalbe prolonged, & the yeres of thy lyfe shalbe many. If thou be wise thy wisdom shal do thy selfe good: but if thou thinkest scozner ther-of, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A foolysh reth lesse woman full of wordes, and suche a one as hath no knowlage, spyteth at the doore of her house, & in the hye places of the cytie, to cal such as go by, and that walke straight in theyr way-es. Whoso is ignorant, saith she, let him come hyther, & to the vndeuyse she saith: stolen waters are swete: & the bread that is weneily catte, hath a good taste. And he doeth not consyde, & they are but deade whiche be there, and that her gestes are in the depe of hell.

For he that will be saynt vnto her, shall go helow in hell, but he that awayeth from her, shalbe saued.

Eccl. x. Chapter.

In this chapter are all that folowe vnto the thyrtye, the last man excepted by dyuers sentences, whiche he collecteth parabolles, to folowe hys way, & the wiser. And thowoe also hath profite chuallity of wisdom, & hath by the same proceded to the thyrtye.

The Proverbes of Salomon.

Wise sonne maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is an heu-nelle vnto his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, prouoke nothyng: but righteousnesse deliuereth from deathe. The Lorde will not let the soule of the righteous suffer hungre, but he taketh away the ryche of the vngodly. An idle hand maketh poore, but a quicke labou-ryng hand maketh ryche.

Whoso is vngodly, he shal be as a dogge, which he buyeth and selleth, but he shal be as a dogge, which he buyeth and selleth, but he shal be as a dogge, which he buyeth and selleth, but he

Whoso gathereth in summer, is wise: but he that is sluggish in harvest, bringeth him self to confusiō. Blessynges are vpon the head of the righteous, and the mouth of the vngodly heryth myschefe in secrete. The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good report: but y name of the vngodly shal synke. A wise man will receyue warnyng, but a watyng fool shalbe punished. He that leaerh an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but whoso goth a wong way: shalbe knowen. He that winketh with his eye will do some harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouth, shalbe eaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouth of the vngodly heryth myschefe in secrete.

Euill will synneth by styfe: but loue coue-reth the multitude of synnes. In the lypyes of hym that hath vnderstandyng a manne shal fynd wysdom, but the rod belongeth to y backe of the foolyshe. Wylse men laye vp knowlage, but the mouth of the foolyshe is nye destrucciō.
The ryche mans goodes are hym stronge holde, but thei owne pouertie feareth the poore. The righteous laboureth to do good, but the vngod-ly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourture, is the wape of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed, dis-cepueth hym selfe. Wylse blynges lyp-es heryth secrete: and he that speaketh anpe-sclandye, is a fool. Where muche babylng is, there must nedes be offence: and he that restayneth his lypyes, is wise. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodly is nothyng woth. The lypyes of the righteous fede a whole multytud, but foolles shal dye in theyr owne folse. The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull transyle it dord nothyng therto. A fool doeth wychedly, and maketh but a spoite of it: but wysdome ruleth the man that hath vnderstandyng. The thynges that the vngodly are afrayde of, shal come vpon them, but the righteous shal haue theyr desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempeste commeth: but the righteous remayneth sure for euer. As wynege is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euil so is a sloug-gish person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the peaces of the vngodly shalbe shortned.
The patient abyng of the righteous shal be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shal perishe. The wape of the Lorde geueth courage vnto y godly, but it is a feare for wyched doers. The righteous shal neuer be ouertrowen, but the vngodly shal not remain in the lande. The mouth of the iust will be talking of wysdom, but y tonge of the froward shal perishe. The lypyes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the dooste.

Eccl. xi. Chapter.

A felle

A false balancer is an abhominacion vnto þe Lord: but a true weighte pleaseþ him. Where pride is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlinesse, there is wysdom. The innocent dealing of the iuste shall leade them, but the wyckednes of such as dyssemble, shall be theyr owne destrucciõ. Richesse helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth from death. The righteousnesse of the innocent ordyeth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wyckednesse.

The righteousnesse of the iust shall deliuer the, but the wycked shall be taken in theyr owne vngodlynesse. When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of rycheesse shall perishe. The ryghteous shall be deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shall come in his steade.

Thowoe the mouth of the dissembler is his neyghbour destroyed: but thowoe knowlage shall the iust be deliuered. When it goth well with the righteous, the cite is mery: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iuste are in wealthe, the cite prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth. A foole bringeth vp a sciaunder of his neyghbour: but a wyse man will kepe it secrete. A dyssembling persone wyl discourtey thynges but he that is of a fapfull herte wyl kepe counsaile. Where no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsaile, there is wealthe. He that is mercie for a straunger hurteth hym self, and he that meyleth not with suretyþppe is sure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honestye, as for the wycked, they maytayne rycheesse. He that is merciful, doth hym self a benefyte: but who so hurteth his neyghbour, is a tyrant.

The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he þe foweth ryghteousnesse, shall receyue a sure reward. Lyke as ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euil byngeth death. The Lord abhorreth them that be of a fained herte, but he hath pleasure in them þe are of an vndeilyed conuersacion. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the sede of the ryghteous shall be preserued. A fayne woman with out discrete maners is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is indignacon. Some manne geueth oute hys goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygard (paynyng proude) wyl departe from nathing, & yet is euer in pouertye. He that is lybrell in geuyng, shall haue plentye: he that watereth shall be watered also hym self. Who so boozeth vp his coize, shall be cursed among the people: but blessing shall lyght vpon his heed that geueth foode. He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth his desyre: but who so seeketh after myschance, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his rycheesse, shall haue a fall: but the righteous shall floppye, as the grene leafe. Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his prytag, and the foole shall be shewen to the wyse. The frute of the righteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endoureth hym selfe to winne mens soules, is wyse. The ryghteous be recompened vpon earth, howe muche moze then the vngodly and the synners.

The. xii. Chapter.

Who so loneth wysdome wyl be content to bee reformed: but he þe hateth to be reformed is a foole. A good ma is acceptable vnto þe Lord but the wycked pyngner wyl be condempned. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shall not be moued. A howsewely woman is a crowne vnto her husbnde: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corrupcyon in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are ryghte: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly are dysceyful. The talkyng of the vngodly is how they may lay waite for bloud, but the mouth of the righteous wyl deliuer them. God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked, and they stande not: but the house of the ryghteous shall stande faste. A man shall be commended for his wysdome, but a foole shall be despyed. A symple manne whiche laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgeous and lacketh bread. A righteous ma regardeth the lyfe of his cattel, but the vngodlye haue cruell hertes. He that tyllith his lande, shall haue plentyousnesse of byerd: but he that foloweth ydelnesse, is a verrey foole.

Who so hath pleasure to conuene at the wyne, shall be dysceyful in his owne dwellynge.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after myschance: but the roote of the ryghteous byngeth forth frute. The wycked falleth into the snare, thowoe the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shall escape oute of all peryll. Every man shall enioye good, accordyng to the frute of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded. Looke what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyl be counsailed. A foole vttereth hys wrath in all the haste: but a discrete man conuerteth wronge. A iust man wyl tell the true the, and shewe the thyng that is ryght: but a false wytnesse dysceyueþ. A sciaunderous persone pycketh lyke a sword, but a wyse mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouth is euer constauit: but a dissembling tonge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagyn euil in their mynd, wyl disceyue: but the counsaillers of peace shall haue ioye folowynge them. There shall no mysfortune happẽ vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be fylled with mysery. The Lord abhorreth lying lypes: but they þe labour for truth please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doeth hyde wysdome: but an vndiscrete hert telleth out his foolysnesse. A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the ydle shall be vnder trybure. He that discouereth þe hert of ma: but a good woide maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth hys neyghbour: but the waye of the vngodlye wyl dysceyue theim selues. The dysceyfull man shall not roste, that he tooke in huntynge, haue a frowarde mynde, ſhal be ſcoyled. He that keepeth his mowthe keepeth his lyfe: but who ſo openeth his lippes to euell, deſtroyeth him ſelfe. The ſlogarde would ſayne haue, and can not gette his deſyre: but the ſoule of the dilygent ſhall haue plenty. A ryghteous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodly ſhameth both innocent in the waye: but vngodlyneſſe doeth ouerthrowe the ſpyner. * Some men ate ryche

The xiiii. Chapter.

Wile women vpholde theyr houſe: but a foolyſhe wyfe plucketh it downe.
He that walketh in the ryght path of the Lozde, ſeareth him: but he that turneth hym ſelfe from his wayes, deſpyſeth hym. In the mowthe of the foolyſhe is the rodde of wyde: but the lippes of the wyle wyll pre-ſerue them. Where no oxen are, there the crye is emptye: but where the oxen laboure, there is much fruite. A faythfull wytnesſe wyll not diſſemble, but a falſe reſcorde wyll make a lye.
A ſcoznefull bodye ſeketh wyldeſome, and ſyn-derth it not: but a knowlage is eaſe to come by vnto hym that wyll vnderſtande.

He that thou meble not with a fool in who thou perceyueſt to be no knowlage. The wyldome of hym that hath vnderſtandynge, is to take heed vnto his waye: but the foolyſheſſe of the vnwyle diſceyueſt. Foolen make but a ſpoyle of ſpyne, but there is a fauourable loue amonge the ryghteous. The herte ſeletteth his owne iynes by eternelle, neyther ſhal the ſtraunger be partaker of his ioye. The houſe of the vngodly ſhal be ouerthrowen: but the tabernacle of the ryghteous ſhall ſtoyde. * There is a waye whiche ſome men thynke to be right: but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. The herte is ſorrowful euen in laughter, & the ende of myrth is heynneſſe. A backſlidyng herte ſhal be fylled with his owne wayes, but a good manne ſhall lyue of his frutes. An ignozant bodye bele-ueth all thynges: but who ſo hath vnderſtanding lokeſt well to his goynges.

(A diſcrepfull ſonne ſhall haue no good: but a deſerue ſeruant ſhall do well, and his waye ſhall proſper.)

A wyle man feareth, & departeth from euell but a ſurpous foole goeth on preſumptuouſlye

An vnparcyent man dealeth fooliſhly: but he that is well aduylled, is hated of the foole. The ignozant haue fooliſhneſſe in poſſeſſyon but ſ wyle are crownded with knowlage. The euell ſhall bowe them ſelues befoze the good: and the vngodly ſhall wayte at the doores of the righteous: The poore is hated eue of his owne neighbours, but the ryche hath many frendes. Whoſo deſpyſeth his neyghboure doeth amysſe, but * bleſſed is he that hath pytie of the poore.

(He that pittyeth his craft in the Lozde looth to be mercifull.)

Withoute doubt they erre that ymagyne wyckedneſſe, but they that muſe vpon good thynges, vnto ſuch ſhall happen merce and faythfulneſſe. In euery labour there is ſome proſpitye. But onely wayne woordes, byynge for the penurye. Rycheſſe are as a crowne vnto the wyle, but the ignozance of foolen is very foolyſheſſe. A faythfull wytnesſe deliuereth ſoules, but a diſcrepfull wytnesſe byyn-neth for the lyes. The feare of the Lozde is a ſtrong hold, & his children are vnder a ſure defence. The feare of ſ Lozde is a well of lyfe, to a woyde ſnare of death. The encreaſe & proſperitye of the comens in the thynges honour, but ſ decaye of the people, is the confuſyon of the wyner. He that is parcyente, hath muche vnder-ſtandynge, but he that is ſoone diſpleaſed, proue-

prouoketh foolys chynesse. A mery hert is the lyfe of the body: but rancoure consumeth a waye the bones. * He that doth a poore man wrong blasphemeth his maker: but whoso hath pitie off poore doeth honoure vnto God. The vngodly is cast a waye for his iniquytie, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in deathe. Wylsome resteth in þe hert of hym that hath vnderstandynge, and it shalbe knowen emonge them that are vblearned. * Ryghteousnesse setteth by the people, but the sacrifice of þe hearthen is vnfull. A discrete seruante is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

The. xv. Chapter.

A soft answer putteth downe displeasure: but froward wordes prouoke vnto anger. The tung of such as be wise, vserth knowlage a right as for a foolys mouth it bablieth oute not hynge but foolys chynesse. The eyes of the Lozde looke on every place, beholding both the good and bad. A wholsom tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mind. A foole despiseth his fathers correccion, but he that taketh hede wher he is repproued, shal haue the moze vnderstandynge.

The house of þe ryghteous is ful of riches, but the encrease of þe vngodly are nye destruccions. A wise mouth powreth out knowlage, but þe hert of þe foolys doeth not so. * The Lozde abhorreth the sacrifice of þe vngodly, but þe prayer of þe righteous is acceptable vnto hym. The way of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto þe Lozde: but whoso foloweth rightousnesse, hym he loueth.

He þe forsaketh the right way, shalbe soze punished: & whoso hateth correccion shal dye.

The hell wher payne is knowen vnto þe Lozde shalbe muche moze then the hertes of men: * A scoynfull body loueth not one þe rebuketh him: neither wyll he come vnto the wylse. * A mery hert maketh a cherefull countenance: but an heuy hert compelleth a man to syge.

The herte of hym that hath vnderstanding doth sche after knowlage: but þe mouth of fool is fed wylse foolys chynesse. All þe dayes of the poore are miserable: but a quiet herte is a continual feast. * Better is a lytle with þe feare of the Lozde, then greate treasoure with sorowe.

Better is a messe of pottage wylsome, then a fat oxe withenell wyl. * An angry man styreth vp styfe, but he that is paciente styllth disorde.

The way of a thoughtfull man is as it were hedged with thornes: but the strete of þe righteous is well clenched. * A wylse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameth his mother. A foole reioyseth in foolys the thynges, but a wise man loketh wel vnto his owne goynges. Vnclayped thoughtes shal come to naught: but where as men are that can geue good counsaile, there is steadfastnesse. A ioyfull thyng is it to a man, when his counsaile is folowed: and very pleasaunt is a word spoken in due season.

The way of life leadeth vnto heauen & a man shulde be ware of hell beneath. The Lozde wyll breake downe the house of þe proude, but he shal make faste the borders of the wyddowe. The Lozde abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wyched, but pure wordes of innocentes are pleasaunt vnto hi. The courteous mā roseth by his owne house, but whoso hateth rewarde shal lyue.

The hert of þe righteous studieth his answer afore, but þe wyched mannes mouth spureth out myschefe. The Lozde is farr from þe vngodly, But he heareth the prayer of þe righteous. Like as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the herte so doeth a good name fede the bones. The eare thatarkeneth to the reformatyon of lyfe, shal dwell amonge the wylse. He that refuseth to be reformat, despyseth his owne soule: but he þe submitte hym selfe to correccion is wylse. The feare of the Lozde is þe ryght seyntce of wylsome: and lowlynesse goeth before honoure.

The. xvi. Chapter.

A man maye wel purpose a thyng in his herte, but the answer of þe tonge cometh of the Lozde. * A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lozde þe geth the myndes. * Comyt thy wayes vnto the Lozde, and loke what þe deuyseth, it shal prosper. The Lozde doth all thynges for his owne sake: yea, and when he heperth the vngodly for the daye of wrath. The Lozde abhorreth all suche as be of a proude herte, his hande is against thei hande, and they shal not escape as innocentes.

(The beginning of a good lyfe is to be ryghteousnesse: for that is more accept vnto God then to offre up sacrifices.)

With louyng mery & saythfulnesse, synnes be forgenen, and whoso feareth þe Lozde eschuerth euill. When a mans wayes please þe Lozde he maketh his very enemies to be his frendes.

Better it is to haue a lytle thyng with ryghteousnesse, then greate rentes wrongfully gotten. * A man deuyseth a waye in his herte, but it is the Lozde þe ordynerth his goynges. When the prophete is in the lypes of the kynge, his mouth shal not go wronge in iudgement. * A true measure & a true balace ar þe Lozdes iudgements, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a great abhominacion, wher kinges are wyched, for a kinges seate shulde be holden by ryghteousnes.

Righteous lypes are pleasaunt vnto kynge: and he þe speaketh the trueth, shalbe beloued. The kynge dyspleasure is a messenger of death, but a wise man wil pacifie him. The chereful countenance of þe kynge is life: and his louyng fauoure, is as þe euening dewe. * To haue wylsome in possession, is better then to haue gold: & to get vnderstandynge, is rather to be cholen then to haue syluer. The path of the ryghteous is to eschue euill, & whoso loketh wel to his wayes heperth his owne soule. Presumptuousnesse goeth before destruccyon, and after a proude shal make there foloweth a fall. Better it is to be of humble mynd with þe lowly, then to deuyde the spoiles with the proude. He that handleth a matter wysely, outspareth good: & blessed is he that putteth his trust in the Loyde. Who so hath a wise vnderstanding, shal be called to counsaile: and he that can speake saye shall haue more learninge. Vnderstandinge is a well of lyfe vnto hym that hath it: as for the chattering of fooles, it is but foolysheenesse. A wyse herte ordereth his mouth wylfully, & amendeth the doctrine in his lippes. Raye wordes are an hony combe, a refreshing of the mynde, and health of bones. * There is a way that men thinke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadech vnto death. A troublous soule disquieteth herself, for her owne mouth hath brought her thereto. In vngodly persone they crye vpon euell, and in hys lippes he is an hony burninge fyre. A froward body causeth strife: and he that is a blabbe of his tonge, maketh deuysion amonge pynces. A wyched man begyleth hys neyghbour, & leadech hym into the waye that is not good. The vngodly that looketh hastily with his eyes, ymagineth mischefe: and when he moueth his lippes, he wyll doo some harme. Age is a crowne of wylshyp, if it be soude in a way of ryghteousnesse. A patient man is better theore than a stronge: & he that can rule hym self is more worth then he that wynerth a cite. The lottes are cast into the lappe, but orderinge therof standeth all in the Loyde.

Chapter.

Better is a depe morsel with quyetnes then a house full of fat offering with strife. * A discrete seruante shal haue more rule then sonnes: & haue no wylde, & shal haue lyke heritage with the brethren. * Lyke as spluer is tryed in the fyre, and golde in the fornaice, euen so doth the Loyde proue the hertes. A wyched bodye geueth audience to false lippes, & a froward person geueth eare to a dysceyfull tonge. * Who so langberth & pooze to scoone, blasphemeth his maker: and he is glad of anothers mans hurte shall not be unpunished. Chyldren chyliden are a wylshyppe vnto the elders: & the fathers are the honoure of the chyliden. Speache of an ctoztie becometh not a foole, muche lesse a lying mouth then belongeth a pynce. A rewarde is a precious stone vnto hym that hath it: but vnto whome foruer it turneth, it maketh hym vntoyle. Who so couereth another mans offence scheth loue: but he that discloseth the faulte, setteth the pynce agaynst hym self. One reproueth onely doth more good to hym that hath vnderstanding, then a C. cryes vnto a foole. * A sedicious person scheth myschefe, and therefore is a cruell messenger sente agaynst hym. It were better they came agaynst a shebear: robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a sole in his foolysheenesse. * Who so rewardeth euell for good, the plague shal not departe from his house. The beginning of stryfe is, as whelpe a man maketh an issue for water: therefore of a meetinge be leaue of contencio. The Loyd hateth as wel him that iustifyeth the vngodly, as hym that con-dempneth the innocent. What helpeth it to geue a foole treasure in his hande, where as he hath no mynde to hye wysdome.

He is a frende that alway loueth: and in aduersyte a man shal knowe who is his brother. * Who so promyseth by the hande, and is sure: the for hys neyghbour, he is a foole. He that believeth in synne, loueth stryfe: & who so setteth his doze to hye, scheth after a fall. Who so hath a froward herte obteyneth no good: & he that hath an ourthward tonge, shal fall into myschefe. He that begetteth a foole, begetteth his sorrowe, and the father of a foole can haue no sope. * A mety herte make a lusty age, but a sozowfull mynde dyspeth vpon the bones. The vngodly taketh gyfte out of a bosome, to wylch the wayes of iudgemente. * Wysdome shyneth in the face of hym that hath vnderstandinge, but the eyes of fooles wander thowowe out all landes. * An vndiscrete sone is a grete vnto his father, and an heupnesse vnto his mother. To punishe the innocent, and to smite the princes that geue true iudgemente are both euell. * A wise man vnderstandeth a fewe wordes, and he is a man of vnderstanding, that maketh muche of his lippes. * Pea a very foole (whelpe he holdeth his tonge) is counted wyse: and to haue vnderstanding whelpe he shutteth his lippes.

Chapter.

Heccepanyeth hym self with allsted fast & wholesome doctrine, that hath a seruent desyre to it, & is sequestrate from company. A foole hath no delyte in vnderstandinge, but onely in those thynges wherein his herte reioysseth. When a vngodly cometh, then cometh also dysdayne, and with a dishonest person cometh shame & dishonoure.

The wordes of a wise mans mouth are like depe waters, and a well of wysdome is lyke a full streame. * It is not good to regarde a person of the vngodly, or to put backe the ryghteous in iudgement. A foolis lippes are cur bawling, and his mouth prouoketh vnto batayle. A foolis mouth is his owne destruction, and his lippes are a snare for hys owne soule. * The wordes of a flatterer are very wylde, & go thowowe vnto a innermost partes of a body.

Who so is slouthful and slacke in his labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. The name of the Loyde is a stronge castill, the ryghteous flyeth vnto it, & is in safegarde. But the ryche mans goodes are hys stronge holde: pea, he taketh them for an hye wall rounde aboute hym. * After pyde cometh destruction: & honour after lowlynes. * He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole: and wote hye to be confounded. A good stomach dysueth away a mans dyscase: but when the spryte is veyed, who maye hyde it? A wyse herte labourerth for knowlage, and a prudente eare scheth vnderstandinge. Liberalyte hyngeth a man to honours.

houte and woishyppe, and setteth hym among great men. The righteous declarerh his owne cause by hym selfe, yf hys neighbour come, he shall fynde hym. The lothe pacifyerh the varyaunce, and parteth the myghty a sonde. A brother though he be greued with offence, yet is he more worth then a very strong castel: and they that holde together are lyke the barre of a palace. A mans hely shal be satysfied with the frute of his owne mouthe and with the increase of his lyppes shall be fylled. Deare and lyfe are in the instrumente of the tonge, and they that loue it shall enioye the frute thereof. * Who so synderh a good wyfe, synderh a good thyng, & receyuerh a wholl some benefyte of the Lozde.

(He that putteth away a good woman, putteth away a good thyng but he that heareth an heere, is a foole and vniuersal.) The pooze maketh supplicacyon: and prayeth me hely, but the riche geueth a rough answer.
A man that loueth his frendes wyll be compr-nabile with them: and some frende spyketh safer to a man then his brother.

The. xix. Chapter.

Better * is the pooze that lyueth godlye: then the blasphemour that is but foole.
Where no dyscrecyon is, there the soule is enclined vnto the thyng that is not good, and is swyfte on fote, & offenderh. Foolishnes maketh a man to goo out of his waye, & then is his hert vnpacient agaynst the Lozde. Riches maketh many frendes: but the pooze is forsaken of his neyghboure. * A false wytnesse shall not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh ly-es shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greute men: and euery man fauoureth hym that geueth rewardes. As for the pooze, he is hated amonge all his bretheren: pea, hys owne frendes with draw fro hym and yf he aske them the cause, they dysdaine to answer hym. He is wylle, loneth his owne soule & kepeth vnder-standunge, that he maye prosper. A false wy-nesse shall not remayne unpunished: & he that speaketh lyes shall perishe. Pleasure becommeth not a foole, muche more vnsemyly is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of prynces. A wyse man can put off dyspleasure: & it is hys honoure to let some fautes passe

* The kynges dysfauoure is lyke the roaring of a Lyon, * but his frendshipp is lyke the dewe vpon the grashe. * An vndiscrete sonne is the shame of his father. * A bawling wyfe is lyke the top of an houle, where thow it is curer of pyng. House and rychesse make a man haue by the heretage of hys elders: but * a discrete woman is the gyft of the Lozde. Slouthfulnes bryn-geth slepe, and a soule accustomed wyth crasse shall suffer hunger. Who so kepeth the commaundemēt, kepeth his owne soule: but he that regardeth not this waye, shall dye. He that hath pytie vpon the pooze, lendeth vnto the Lozde: & loke what he layeth out, it shalbe payd hym agayne.
Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope: but let not thy soule be moued to slape hym.

* A man of great wrath beareth a payne: and though he once deliuer hym, thou must agayne be agayne the for hym. O geue eare vnto good counsel, & be content to be reformed, that thou mayest be wyse in the latter dayes. * There are many deuyces in a mans hert: neuertheless, the counsel of the Lozde shall stande. * It is a mans woishyp to do good: & better it is to be a pooze man then a dissembler. The feare of the Lozde bryn-geth a man to lyfe: & he shal rest & hole myght in plenteousnes, without visitacyon of any plage.

* A slouthful man putteth his handes into his bosome, as into the pot: & wyll not take payne to put it to his mouth. * If thou synnest a scoonefull persone, the ignoraunte shall take better hede: & yf thou reprove one that hath vnder-standunge: he wyll be the wyser. He that butteth his father or putteth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnwoorthy sonne. My sonne heare no more the doctrine that leadeth the vnto errours from the wordes of vnderstandunge A false wytnesse laugheth iudgement to scorn: and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wychednes. Punishments are ordeyned for the scoonefull: and stryppes for foolcs backes.

The. xx. Chapter.

One maketh a man to be scooneful and strong drinke causeth a mā to be vniuersal: who so deliuereth therein shall neuer be wyse. * The kyng ought to be feared as the roaring of a Lyon, who so prouoketh hym vnto anger offenderh agaynst his owne soule. It is a mans honour to kepe hym self from stryfe: but they haue pleasure in bawling are foolcs euery one.
A slouthfull body wyll not go to plowe for cold of the wynter: therfore shal he go a begging in summer, & haue nothing. Wyle counsell in the bert of man is lyke a water in the depe of the erth and a man that hath vnderstandunge bryngeth it to the. Many there be that wolde be called good doers: but wher shal one fynd a true faith-full man. * Who so leadech a godly and an innocent lyfe: is ryghteous, & happy shal his children be whom he leueth behynde hym. A kyng that setteth in the throne of iudgement, & lokech well about hym dyueth a way all euil. * Who can sape, my hert is cleane, I am innocent from synne: To vse two maner of waightes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhomy-nabile vnto the Lozde. A chyld is knowen by his conuersacion, whether his woikes be pure and ryght. The eare to heare the eye to se: the Lozde hath made them both, deliuer thou not in sleape lest thou come vnto pouertye, but open thyne eyes, that thou mayst haue breade ynough. It is naughte it is naughte (sayeth he that byeth a nye thyng) but when he cometh to his owne houle, then he boasteth of his peny worth.

A man that hath a mouth of vnderstandunge hath many precyous stones & collyre Jewelles.
* Take hys garmentes & is surety for a straunger: and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake. Euery man lyeth the breade he is gotten wyth dyscreete: but at the laste hys mouthe shalbe fylled wyth grauell. Thow the counsel, the thynges that men deuyse good for:

warde: and with discrecyon augher warres to be taken in hande. The craftye dyscreyfull be-waireth secrete counceyl: and so hym that trusteth meth flatterynge lippes toyne not thy selfe.

Prov. 27. 1. * Whoso curseth his father and mother: his light shalbe put out in the myddest of darcknes.
Prov. 27. 2. * The derystage that cometh hastily at the sprynge, shal not be passed at the ende. * Say not thou: I wyl recompence euell: but put thy trust in the Lorde, & he shal defende the. * The Lorde abhorrerth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balaunce is an euell thyng. * The Lorde orde-reth euery mans goynges: how may a man the vnderstande his owne waye. It is a snare for a man to deuoure that which is holy: and after þowhe to tuene to thyne owne vse, þe thing thou hast vowed. * A wise kyng destroyeth þe vngod-ly, and bringerth the whole ouer them. The lanterne of the Lorde is þe lyght of man, and goeth thorow all the inward partes of the bodye.

Prov. 27. 3. * Wercye and saythfulnes preferre the kyng:
and with lounge kyndnes þys seate is holden
vp. The strength of pong me is their worship, and a grape heade is an honoure vnto þe aged.
Woundes dyscuse a waye euell, and so do stripes
the inward partes of the bodye.

Prov. 27. 4. * Wercye and saythfulnes preferre the kyng:
and with lounge kyndnes þys seate is holden
vp. The strength of pong me is their worship, and a grape heade is an honoure vnto þe aged.
Woundes dyscuse a waye euell, and so do stripes
the inward partes of the bodye.

The .xxi. Chapter.

Prov. 21. 1. The kynges herte is in the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whither soeuer he wyl. Euery man thynketh his owne waye to be ryght: but the Prov. 21. 2. Lord iudgeth the hertes. * To do righteounes and iudgemente is moze acceptable to þe Lorde then sacrifice. A presumptuous loke, a proude stomache: & the plowynge of the vngodlye, is sinne. The deuices of one that is diligent bring plenteuousnesse: but he that is vnadvised commeth vnto pouertie. Whoso hoordeth vp ryches with the dyscreyfullnes of þys tonge, he is wayne and a foole, and lyke vnto them þe seke theyr owne death. The robberies of the vngod-lye shalbe theyr owne destruccyon: for they wyl not do the thyng that is ryght. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge: but * the woikes of þym that is cleane are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppre, then in a brawlyng woman in a wyde house.

Prov. 21. 3. The soule of the vngodly wytheth euell: and hath no pryncyple vpon his neyghboure. * When þe scornefull is punyshed, þe ignoraunt take þe better hede: & when he seith the wise men pryncyple, he wyl receyue the moze vnderstandynge.

Prov. 21. 4. The ryghteous man wylsele confydereth the house of the wicked: & for their wickednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. * Whoso stoppeth his eares at the cryng of the poore: he shal crye him selfe & not be hard. A pryncyple rewarde paci-fyeth dyspleasure & a gift in þe bolome, killeth fy-ryousnes. The Just deluyeth in doyng þe thyng that is ryght: but ouer the woikes of wychednes hangeth destruccyon. The man that wan-dereth out of þe waye of wylsom, shal remaine in the congregacion of the dead. * He that hath pleasure in banquettes, shalbe a poore man.

Whoso deluyeth in wyne & delicates, shal not berych. The vngodly shalbe geuen for þe righteous and the wyched for the iuste.

Prov. 21. 5. * It is better to dwell in the wyldernes then with a chydynge and an angrie woman. In a wyse mannes house, there is a grete treasur & oyle: but a foolysch body spendeth vp all. Whoso followeth ryghteousnes and mercy, synneth both lyfe, ryghteousnes, and honoure. A wyse man wynneth the cytie of the mightie: & as for þe strength þe they trust in, he bringerth it downe.
* Whoso keperth his mouth and þys tonge, the same keperth his soule from troubles. He that is proude & presumptuous, is called a scozeful man which, in wyth dare wyl he maliciously.

The voluptuousnes of the slouthfull is þys owne death: for his handes wyl not labour.
He couereth and desirerth all the daye long, but the ryghteous is alwaye geuyng, and keperth nothyng backe.

Prov. 21. 6. The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominable.
Deyon, howe much moze when they offre þe thyng that is gotten with wickednes. * A false wynes shal perishe: but he that is a true man boldly spraketh that he hath heard. An vngodlye man goeth forth rashly: but the iuste reformeth his owne waye. * There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandynge, there is no counceyl agaynst the Lorde. * The horse is prepared agaynst þe day of battayle: but the Lorde geueth victoie.

The .xxii. Chapter.

Prov. 22. 1. * Good name is moze worth then greate rychesse, and lounge fa-uoure, is better then syluer and golde. The ryche and poore are together, the Lorde is the maker of them all. A wyse manne seeth the plage: and hyderth hym selfe, but the foolysch gooe on styl, and are punyshed. The ende of lowlynnes: and the feare of God is rychesse, honoure, prof-peritie and healt.

Prov. 22. 2. Thornes and snares are in the waye of þe frowwarde: but he that dorch kepe his soule, wyl fle from suche. Teache a chyld in his yowth what waye he shulde go: for he shal not leaue it, whē he is olde. The ryche rulerth the poore: & the bo-rower is seruaunt to þe lender. He that soweth wyche dennes shal reape sorowe: & the rodde of his cruelte shal perishe. * He that hath a louynge eye shalbe blessed: for he geueth of þys bready vnto the poore.

(Who so geueth vnto the poore, shall open his eyes, and he shall not be ashamed.)

Prov. 22. 3. Caste out the scozeful man, & so shal stryfe go out with hym: yea, varpaunce & sclaunder shal cease. Whoso deluyeth to be of a cleane hert and of gracious lippes, the kyng shalbe his frende.
The eyes of the Lorde be seer knowlage, but as for the wordes of þe dyscreyfull, he bringerth them to naught. The slouthfull bodye sayeth there is a Lyon without, I myght be slayne in the strete. * The mouthe of an hartlos is a depe pytte, wherin he fallerth that þe Lorde is angrie wythall. Foolyschennesse synneth in þe herte of the ladde, and the rodde of correccion shal dyscuse it alwaye.

It is a way. Who so doth a poore manne wronge to increase his owne ryche, and geueth vnto ryche to please hym, at the last cometh to pouer-tye hym selfe. Why sonne, howe downe thyne care, & herken vnto the wordes of wysdome, ap-plye thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for thou shalt be excellent yf thou kepe it in thyne hert, & practyse it in thy mouth, that thou mayste put thy trust in the Lord. I haue shewed the this daye: the thyng that thou knowest. haue not I warned the very o't with counsell & learning: that I might shewe the þe truth, and that thou with the verrey myghtest and w'ter est that sende vnto the: Se that thou robbe not þe poore, because he is weak, and oppresse not the simple in iud-gement: for þe Lord hym selfe wyll defende their cause, and do violence vnto them that haue vsed violence. Make no frendshipp with an angry wylfull man, & kepe no company with the surpous: lest thou learne his wayes, & receaue hurt in thy soule. * Be not thou one of them þe bynde the? hande vpon promysse, & are suretye for waighty causes: for if thou hast nothyng to paye, they shall take a way thy bed from vnder the. * Thou shalt not remoue the lande marke whiche thy fooze elders haue sette. Seest thou not, that they whiche be diligent in their business, stande before hynges, and not amonge the simple people?

The. xxxii. Chapter.

When thou syttest at the table to eat of a Lord, order thy selfe manerly with the thynges that are set before the.
Measure thine appetite: & yf thou wylt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer greedy of his meate, for meate begyleth and deceiweth.
* Take not ouer great trauaile & labour to be riche beware of suche a purpose. * Why wyte thou set thyne eye vpon the thyng, whiche so-denly vanyscheth awaye? For riches make the scines wynges, and take they: flyghte lyke an Aegle into the ayre. Eate thou not with the enuyous, and desyre not his meate. For he doeth as a man that p'ecrybeth a measure to the in his herte. He sayeth vnto the: eate and d'ynne where as his hert is not with the. Yea, the mo-rels that thou hast eaten shalt thou perbake & lese those swete wordes. Tell nothing into the eares of a foole, for he wyl despyse the wysdome of thy wordes. * Remoue not þe old land marke and come not within the felde of the fatherles.
For he that deliuered them, is mighty, euen he shall defende their cause against the.

Applye thine herte vnto correccyon, & thyne care to the wordes of knowlage.

* Withholde not correccyon from the chyld, for if thou beatest hym with the rod, he shal not d'etherof. Yf thou smyte hym with the rodde, thou shalt deliuer his soule from del. Why sonne yf thy hert receaue wysdome, my hert also shal reioyse: for, my reynes shalbe very glad: yf thy lippes speake the thyng that is ryghte. * Lette not thyne hert be gelous to folow lynnars, but keepe the selfe in the feare of the Lord all the day long: for the ende is not yet come, & thy pacient abide: that shall not be in vayne. Why sonne, geue care, and be wyle: and let strapte thyne herte in the waye of the Lord.

* Kepe not company with wyne bybbers & riotous eaters of fleshye: for suche as be dyonhardes and riotours shall come to pouerty: and he that is geuen to muche sleape, shall go wyth a ragged coate. Geue care vnto thy father that begate the, and despyse not thy mother when she is olde. Labour for to get the truth: sell it not a waye and so do by wysdome, nourter, and vnderstandinge: for a righteous father is mar-uelous glad of a wyle sonne, and he that begetteth a wile chyld shall haue greate pleasure of hym. Dooe so that thy father and mother maye be glad of the, and that she that bare the may re-ioyse. Why sonne geue me thine herte, and lette thyne eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. * For an whoze is a depe graue, and an harlot is a na-rowe pyt. She luraeth lyke a cheefe, and byn-geth vnto her suche men as be full of wyce.

Who hath wor who hath sorrowe who hath stryfe who hath brawlyng: & who hath woundis without cause? Who hath red eye?
Euen they that bee euer at the wyne, & seke excesse. Looke not thou vpon the wyne, howe red it is, and what a coloure it geueth in the glasse.
It goth downe softly, but at the laste it biteth lyke a serpent, and styngeth lyke an adder. So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, & thyne herte shall muse vpon forward thynges: yea, þe shalt be as though thou layest in þe middest of the see, or slepest vpon the top of þe mast of a shipp. They wounded me (saith thou saye) but it hath not hurtte me: they haue all to b'roght me, but I felt it not. When I am well wake-ned, I wyll go to the d'ynke againe.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

Be not þe gelouse ouer wyched men and desyre not to be amonge them.
For their hert imagineth to do hurt and their lippes talke of myschefe.
Thozow wysdome is an house builded and with vnderstanding is it set vp. Thozow discrecion shall the chambers be fylled with all costly & pleasaunt riches. A wile man is euer strong: yea, a man of vnderstanding encreaseth of strength. For with discrecion mult warres be taken in hand, and where as many that can geue counsell, there is the victory. Wisdome is to b'ie a thing for a foole, for he dare not ope his mouth in the gate. He that ymagineth mischefe may well be called an vngacious person.

The thoughte of þe foolish is synne, and þe sconefull is an abhominacyon vnto men. Yf thou be ouersene & negligent in tyme of neede, then is thy strength but small, deliuer them that gooe vnto death, & are led away to be slaine, & be not negligent therein: if thou be able to do them good Yf thou wylt saye: I knewe not of it. Thyne hert thou that he whiche made the hertes doeth not conspore it: And that he whiche regardeth thy soule, seeth it not: Shall not he recompence euerp man accordyng to his workes? Why sonne cause it is good and sweet in thy mouth. So shall thy knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul as thou hast gotten it. And thou shalt have longe dayes: yea, thy hope shall not be in vayne. Lape no piewe mayte (o wretched man) upon the house of the ryghteous and dysquyes not his resting place. * For a iust man shall be seuen tymes, & riseth vp againe: but the vngodlye fall into wretchednes. * Reioyse not thou at the fall of thine enemye, & let not thine heart be glad when he stumblith. Lest the Lord when he seeth it be angry, and turne his wrath from hym vnto the.

* Let not thy wrath and gelousye moue the to folowe the wyched and vngodly. And wpp the wyched shall haue no posterite, & the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. * My sonne, feare thou the Lord, and the kyng, and kepe no company with them that slyde backe from hym: feare: for they destruccyon shall come sodenly, and who knoweth the aduersyte & maye come from the north. These are also falsynges of the wyle. * It is not good, to haue respecte of anye personne in iudgement. He that sayth to the vngodly: thou art ryghteous, hym shall the people curse: yea, the comynalte shall abhorre hym.

But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doeth God deliuer, & a ryche blessing shall come vpon them. Euerie man shall kysse his lippes that giveth a good answer.

Do not make by thy wyke that is withoute and loke well vnto that whiche thou hast in the felde & then builde thine house. Be not a falsse wytnesse against thy neighbour and speake no falschode wpp thy lippes. Saye not: I will handle hym: euen as he hath dealt w me, & will rewarde euery man accordyng to his dedes. I went by the felde of the sloughful, and by the vineyard of the foolyhe man. And lo, it was al couered with nettles, and stoudeful of thistles and the stone wall was broken downe. * This I sawe & consydered it well: I loked vpon it, & toke it for a warnyng. Yee, slepe on thyll a lytle, slomber a lytle, solde thy handes toge ther yet a lytle: so shall pouertie come vnto the as one that traualleth by a waye, and needlyte lyke a wepned man.

The xxv. Chapter.
These are also parables of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezechiah kyng of Iuda copped oute.

It is the honoure of God to kepe a thyng secrete, but the kynges honoure is to searche oute a thyng. The heauen is hye, the earth is depe and the kynges deit is vnsearchable. Take the drosse from the spluer, & ther shall be a cleane vessel therof. Take away vngodlynesse: frome the kyng, and his seate shall be stablished wpp ryghteousnes. But not forth thy selfe in the pcesence of the kyng, and pcesse not into the place of great men. * Better is it, that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hither, then thou to be put lower in the pcesence of the pryncce whō thou seest wpp thine eyes. * Be not hasty to goe to the lawe, lest happily thou do some offence after the styfe be ended, wherby thy neighbour put the to shame. Handle thy matter wth thy neighbour hym selfe, and discover not another mans secret, lest wylde men heare thereof, it turne to thy dyshonoure, & leaste thine euell name do not cease.

A word spoken in due season, is lyke appels of golde in a graued wyke of syluer. The correccyon of the wyle is to an obedyent eare, a golde cherye & a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the wynter colde in the haruest, so is a faithfull messaunger to them that sende hym: for he refresseth hym inasters mynde. Who so maketh great boasts and giveth nothing, is lyke cloudes and winde withoute rayne. With patience is a pryncce pacified, and with a softer tonge is ryghteousnes broken. If thou syndest homy, care so muche as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouerfull, & perbake it out agayne. Whiche dawe thy foote fro thy neighbours house: lest he be wery of the, & so abhorre the. Who so beareth falsse wytnesse agaynst his neighbour, he is a verpe clubbe a sworde, and a sharpe arrowe. The hope that is put in a falsse man in tyme of neede, is lyke a rotten toth and a slipperry sofe. Who so taketh away a mans garment in the colde wether, is lyke vnyner upon chalker, or lyke hym that singeth songes to an heuy hart. Lyke as the mouth that uttereth a curse: & a woman that covereth the brydes of a man with the bryde. * If thine enemye hunger, fede hym wth the byrste, geue hym drynke: for so shalt thou breake cooles of fyre vpon his heade, and the Lord shall rewarde the. The Rothe wynde dryueth away the rayne, euen so doeth an earnest sober countenance a backbitters tongue. * It is better to styre in a corner vnder the rose then with a bawlyng woman in a wide house. A good reposte oute of a farre countrey is lyke colde water to a drye soule. A ryghteous manne falslyng downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well, and a springe that is destroyed. Lyke as it is not good to eate to much homy, & euen so he that wyl search out hys thynges, it shall be to heuy for hym. He that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a crite whiche is broken downe, and hath no walles.

The xxvi. Chapter.
The snow is not met in sommer, nor rayne in haruest, euen so is wyse. * Whyp vnsenely for a foole. Lyke as the byrde the swalowe take theyr synghie and he here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyght vpon a man. * Vnto the horse belongeth a whip to rde. Ase a bydle, and a rodde to the foolis backe. Geue not the foole an answer after his foolysnes, leaste thou become lyke vnto hym, but make the foole an answer to his foliynes least he be wyle in his owne conceite.

He is lame of his fete, yea bronchen is he in vanyte, that comyteth any message to a foole. Like as in a lame man his legges are not equal euen so is a parable in a foolis mouth. He that seareth a foole in hys bygnite, that is euen as if a man a manne put a stone in a spyng. A parable in a fooles mouthe is lyke a thorne that prynceth a broken man in the hande. (Wherof he that hath sayd all thyng, he remembreth the foole and recompenseth the reward prynceth.) A man of experyence discerneth al thyng ges well: but he that putteth the foole to separance endeth the styfe. * Lyke as the dogge turneth agayn to his owne vomite, euen so a foole begynneth his foolyshnes againe afresh.

If thou seest a man that is wise in his owne conceite, ther is moze hope in a foole the in him

* The slouthfull sayth: there is a Lyon in y waie, and a Lyon in the myddest of the streets.
Lyke as the doxe turneth aboute vpon the dengers, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hym self in his bed. * The slouthfull body thrusteth hym hande into his bosome, & it greuet hym to put it agayne to hym mouthe. The slougarde thyn-keth hym selfe wiser then seven men that yet & trache. Who so goeth by and medleth w other mens styfe: he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares. Lyke as a mad man that casteth fyre brandes, & woteth dredelely of owes and darters, euen so doth a dissembler with his neighbour.

And then sayeth he: (Wherof he is taken.) I byd it but in spoyle. Where no woode is, there the fire goeth out: Euen so where the tale betraper is taken awaye, there the styfe ceaseth. * Coles kyndle heate, and wood the fyre: euen so doth a bysolping felowe steepe vpon vanyance.

A talebearer's wordes are lyke men y styfhe with hammers, but they pearse the inward par-tes of the body. Vnmercous lippes and a wy-ked herte, are lyke a potsharde couered with spliuer dyasse. An enemy shal be knownen by his tal-kyng, & in the meane season he ymagineth myschefe, but when he speaketh saye, beleue hym not: for there are seven abhominacyons in hym herte. Who so hepeth euell wyll secretly to doo harm, his malice shal be the wed befoze y whole congregation. * Who so dyggeth vpon a pyt, shal fall therein: and he that weltereth a stone, shal stumble vpon it hym selfe. A dissembling tong hateth one that rebuketh hym, & a flatterynge mouth worketh myschefe.

The xxvi. Chapter.

Not thy boaste of to morowe, * for thou knowest not what may happen to daye. Let another man praise y, & not thynne owne mouth praise, other folkes lippes & not thine The stone is heuy, and the sand weighty: but a fooles wrath is heuyer then them both.

Wrath is a cruell thyng, and furyousnesse is a very trespasse: but who is able to abide enuy?
An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.

Faythfull are the woundes of a lover, but y bysses of an enemye are cruell. He that is full abhoret an hony combe, but vnto him that is hungry, euery lowe thyng is swete.

He that oftymes aperteth, is lyke a byrde y foresaketh her nest. Salme & swete inckle make thei hert mery: so is the swete counsell of a mas freind that agreeth to his purpose. Thine owne frende & thy fathers frende se thou forsake not:

but gadnest into the brothers house in tyme of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of. Wy sonne, be wyle: and thou shalt make me a glad herte, so that I shal make an answer vnto my rebukers. A wyle man spyng the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for foolcs they go on styll, and suffre harme.

* Take his garment that is suerty for a straun ger, and take a pledge of hym for the unknowen mannes sake. He that is to hasty to praise his neighbour about measure, shal be takn as one that geueth hym an euell reposte.

* A bysolving woman and the roote of the house bysolving in a rapyne daye: maye wel be compared together. He that retrayneth her, re-trayneth the wynd, and holdeth the oyle fast in his hande. Like as one pyon whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another. Who so he-peth his fygge tree, shal enioye the frutes ther-of: euen so, he that wayteth vpon his mayster, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there appere dyuerse faces, euen so dyuers men haue dyuerse hartes. Lyke as hell and destruccyon are neuer full, euen so the eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed. Syluer is tryed in y moule & golde in the fornaice, & so is a man, when he is openly praised to his face. (The best of a man's man go feth after mischefe, but a true best feth for knowlege.)

Though thou shuldest byrde a foole wth a pestel in a mortar lyke spymenty coze, yet wyll not his foolyshnes go from hym. He that thou knowe the nombze of thy catel thy selfe, & looke wel to thy flockes. For ryches abyderth not al-waye and the crowne endureth not for euer.

The depe groweth, the grasse cometh vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shal clothe the and for the goates thou shalt haue moneye to thy husbandrye. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough to fede the, to upholde thy household, & to susteyne thy maidens

The xxvii. Chapter.

He vngodly styeth wth no man cha-steth hym: but the ryghteous stan-deth styf as a Lyon. * Because of synne the lande dothe ofte chaunge her pryncer: but the ryghte men of vnderstandyng and wysdome, a realme endureth longe. One pooze manne oppresynge another by vpolence, is lyke a contynual raine that de-stroyeth the frute. Thep that forsake the lawe, praise the vngodly: but suche as kepe the lawe abhore them. * Wyched men dyscerne not the thyng that is ryghte, but they that seke after the Lorde discusse all thynges. * A pooze man leadynge a godlye lyfe, is better then the ryche that goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so hepeth the lawe, is a child of vnder standyng: but he that is a compaignon of rytous menne, harmeth his father. He that by v-surpe and vnlike gapnes gathereth ryches, he shal lape them in toze for a man that wyll pytie the pooze. * He that tourneth awaye hym eare from hearyng the lawe, his prater shal be abhominable. Who so leadeh the ryghteous into an euell waye, shal fall into his owne pyt,

The ryche man thynketh hym selfe to be wise but the poore that hath understanding can perceiue hym well ynough. * When ryghteous men are in prosperitie, then doeth honoure flourish, but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. Where the prince is without understanding, there is great oppres- sion and wrong: but yf he be suche a one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe ragyne. * He that by violence sheddeth any mannes bloude: shall be a renegate vnto his graue, & no man shall be able to socoure hym. * Who so leade- th a godly and an innocent lyfe shall be saued, but he yf goeth forward wapes shall once haue a fall.

E is stiffe necked, and wyl not be reformed: shall suddenly be destruyed without any helpe. * When the ryghteous haue the oute hande the people are in prosperite, but when y vngodly beareth rule, there y people mourne.

Who so loueth wysdome maketh his father a glad man: * But he that kepeth company with harlots, spendeth awaye that he hath. With true iudgement the kynge setteth vp the lande, but yf he be a man that oppresseth the people w gatheringes he turneth it vpsyde downe.

Who so flattereth his neighbour, layeth a net for his feete. The synne of the wyched is hyss owne snare, but the ryghteous doeth syng and reioyse. The ryghteous consydereth the cause of the poore: but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge. Wyched people byynge a cytie in decaye, but wise men sette it vp agayne. Yf a wise man go to lathe wth a foole, whether he deale with hym frendly or roughly, he getteth no rest. The bloudy wyche hate the ryghteous, but the iuste seke his soule. A foole putteth out his spere altogether, but a wise man kepeth it in, tyll afterwarde. Yf a prince delite in ly- es, all his seruauntes are vngodly. The poore and the lender mete together, and the lord lygh- teneth both the; eyes. * The state of the kynge that saythfully iudgeth the poore, shall con- tinue sure for euermore. The robbe y correctyon minister wylldome, but yf a chyld be not lohed vnto, he byngeth his mother to shame.

When y vngodly come vp, wiche dynes increa- seth: but the ryghteous shall see the; fall. Fur- ous the; soune wth correctyon, and thou shalt be at rest: yea, he shall do the good at thine hert.

When the woorde of God is not preached, the people perishe: but well is hym that heareth the lawe. A seruaunte wyl not bee the better for woordes, for though he vnderstande: yet wyl he not regarde them. Yf thou seest a man that is hasty to speake vnadvised, thou maist trust a foole more then hym. He that delicately byn- geth by his seruaunt from a chyld, shall make hym his master at length.

An angry man styeth by strife, and he that beareth euell wyl in his mynde, doeth muche euell. After yfde commeth a falle, * but a low- ely spere byngeth greater woorth. Who so kepeth company with a chere, hateth his owne soule: he beareth blasphemies, and telleth hit not forth. He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his truste in the Lord is with- out daunger. Many there be y seke the princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement cometh fro y Lord. The righteous abhorreth y vngodly, but as for those that be in the ryghte waye the wy- ched hate them. * (A chyld that heareth the woordes, shall be wth- out destruction.)

The xxx. Chapter.

The purpore of the woordes of Agur, and what he ought to saye of God, wth certayne wonderfull saynges that are in this woorde.

I he woordes of Agur: the sonne of Ia- 3 hep, and the prophete that the same man speake vnto Jehiel, euen vnto Jehiel, and Achall. I am moze foo- lyche then any man, & haue no man- nes vnderstandynge. I neuer learned wysdome nor had knowledgement of booke thynges. Who hath clymed vp into heauen: Who hath come downe frome thence? Who hath holden the wynde faste in his hande? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garmente? Who hath sette all the endes of the worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell? * al the woordes of God are pure and cleane, for he is a God vnto all them, that put the; trust in hym. * Putte thou nothyng vnto his wo- des, leaste he reprove the, and thou be founde a lyar. Two thynges haue I requyred of the, that thou wylte not denye me before I dye.

lawe, and paruerce the iudgement of all poore mens chylde. Goe stronge drynke vnto such as are conuyned to death, & wine vnto those that mourne, that they may drynke it, and forget their misery & aduersitie. For thou an aducate for the dowe and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be focurleile in this transitory worlde. Open thy mouth, defende the thyng that is iustfull and ryght, and the cause of the poore and helpeles.

Whoso findeth an honest faithfull woman, she is muche more worthy then peaciers. The heart of her husband may safelye trust in her, so he shal faile in no pouertie. She wil do him good and not euell al the dayes of her lyfe. She occu-pyeth well and floure, & labourerth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchauntes wyfe, that byngeth her vnto a farre. She is vp in the hygh season: to pryncesse in her household, and foode for her maidens. She considereth lande, and byeth it, & with the frute of her handes she planteth a vineyarde.
She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, & couragerth her armes. And yf she perceaue that her wyfe doeth good, her carde goeth not ouer by nyght. She layeth her fyngers to the syndle and her hande taketh holde of the distaffe. She openeth her hand to the poore yea, she stretcheth forth her handes to such as haue neede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shal hurt her house, for all her household folkes are clothed w sharlet. She maketh her selfe fayre ornamen-tes, her clothyng is whiter sylke and purple. Her husband is muche set by in the gates, when he syt-teth amonge the rulers of the lande. She ma-keth clothe of sylke: and selleth it, & deliuereth gyrdels vnto the marchants. Strengthen and ho-noure is her clothyng, and in the latter day she shall reioyse. She openeth her mouth w wyfdom and in her tongue is the lawe of grace. She lo-ueth well to the waies of her household: reaterd not her brade w ydelnes. Her chylde shal arise, & call her blessed & her husband shal make much of her. Many daughters there be, yet they fynde no good: but thou goest aboue the all. As for fauoure, it is discearful, and beawtie is a vayne thyng: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she is worthy to be prayed. Goe her of the fruite of her handes, and let her owne women praye her in the gates.

The booke of the Prea cher or other wyle called Ecclesiastes.

Chapter.

¶ All that is in this booke is to be taken.

Eccl. i. 1.

These are the wordes of the preacher the sonne of Dauid, king of Ierusalem. All is but mooch vayne vanitie (sayeth the preacher) and all is moche vayne (I saye) and but playn vanitie. For what els hath a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder the sonne. One generation passeth awaye, another cometh: but the earth abydeth fyll. The sunne ariseth, the sunne goth downe, and returneth to his place, & he maye there ryl up agayne. The wynde goth towarde the south and turneth vnto the north, fetcheth his course, whirlith about, & goth forth, and his circuit returneth agayne to hym selfe. All floudes runne into the sea, & yet is the sea it selfe not fyl led: for loke vnto what place the waters runne thence they come to flowe agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen that no man caner passe them. The eye is not satisfied wth syght the eare is not filled wth hearing. The thing that hath bene, cometh to passe agayne, and the thing that hath bene done, shal be done agayne.

There is no newe thyng vnder the sunne. Is there any thyng wherof it may be sayd: lo this is newe: For it was longe ago in tymes that haue bene before vs. The thinge that is past is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shal nomoze be thought vpon among them that come after. I my selfe & prea cher was kynge of Irael at Ierusalem, and dyd apply my mynde to seke out & search for know lage of all thynges that are done vnder heauen.
Such trauayl & labour hath God geuen vnto the chylzen of men, to exercise the selues therein.
Thus haue I considered al these thinges & come to passe vnder the sunne: and lo, they are al but vanitie and veracion of mynde. The crooked can not be made streyght, nor the thing that is im perfect, cannot be accepted wth thynges that are perfect. I communed wth myne owne herte, sayng: lo, I am come to a grea<sup>r</sup> estate, & haue gotten moze wysdome, then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. Yea, my herte had great experience of wysdome & knowlege, for therunto I applied my mynde, that I myght know what were wysdom and vnderstanding what were error & foolyshe<sup>n</sup>esse: and I percei ued, that this was also but a veracti<sup>n</sup> of mynde: for wher much wysdome is, there is also great trauayl and dyssquietnesse and the moze know lage a man hath, the moze is his care.

Job. xiii. 1.

Pro. xiii. 1.
Eccl. xiii. 1.
Job. xiii. 1.

¶ Then turned I me to consider wysdom, er ror & foolyshe<sup>n</sup>esse (for what is he among me, & I might be compared to me the kynge in suche wo rdes): & I sawe that wysdome excelleth foolyshe nesse, as farre as lyght doeth darkenesse. For a wyle man hath his eyes in his hed, but the foole goeth in the darkenesse: I perceiued also that they both had one end. The thought I in my mind, If it happen vnto a foole as it doeth vnto me, what needeth me then to labour any moze for wysdom: So I confessed wth hym my herte, that this also was but vanitie. For a wyle man is euer as lytle in remembraunce as a foolyshe, for the dayes shall come when all shal be forgotten: yea, the wyle man dyeth as well as the foole.
Thus beganne I to be wepe of my lyfe, in so muche that I coulde away wth nothing that is done vnder the sunne, for all was but vani tie and veracion of mynde: yea I was wep of my labour, which I had takē vnder the sunne because I shoulde be sayne to leane them vnto another mā that cometh after me: And who knoweth whether he shall be a wyle man or a foole: And yet that he be lord of al my labours which I wth suche wysdome haue taken vnder the sunne. This is also a vayne thyng.

Chapter.

¶ All that is in this booke is to be taken.

Iden saye I thus in my herte: Notwe stho, I will take myne ease, & haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanitie also: in so muche, that I shal be vnto the manne geuen to laughter: thou arte man, and to mētē: what doest thou? So I thought in my herte, to geue my leide vnto wyne, and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysdom, and to comprehendē so lythensse vntill the tyme that (amonge al the thynges which are vnder the sunne) I myght se what were best for men to do, so long as they lyue vnder heauen.

¶ I made gorgeous faire wothes. I builded my houses, & plantēd vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardenes of pleasure & plantēd trees in them of all maner frutes. I made pooles of water, to water the grene & fruitful trees: all I boughte seruauntes and maydens: and had a great houtholde. As for catell and shepe, I had moze substance of them, the all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together euen a treasurie of kyndes & la des. I p<sup>r</sup>ouided me syngers and women, which could playe on instrumētē, to make me mirth & pastyme. I gat me psalteries & songes of mu sycke. And I was greater, & in moze wothes then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wil dome remained wth me: and loke what soeuer myne eyes desired, I let them haue it: & wherin so euer my herte deliyted or had anye pleasure, I with held it not fro it. Thus my herte reioysed in all that I did: & this was my p<sup>r</sup>ouise of al my trauayle. But when I considered all the wo thes that my handes had wrought, and al the la boure that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanitie and veracion of mynde, & nothing of anye valewe vnder the sunne.

¶ Then turned I me to consider wysdom, er ror & foolyshe<sup>n</sup>esse (for what is he among me, & I might be compared to me the kynge in suche wo
rdes): & I sawe that wysdome excelleth foolyshe nesse, as farre as lyght doeth darkenesse. For a
goeth in the darkenesse: I perceiued also that they both had one end. The thought I in my mind,
If it happen vnto a foole as it doeth vnto me,
what needeth me then to labour any moze for wysdom: So I confessed wth hym my herte, that
this also was but vanitie. For a wyle man is euer as lytle in remembraunce as a foolyshe, for the
dayes shall come when all shal be forgotten: yea,
the wyle man dyeth as well as the foole.
Thus beganne I to be wepe of my lyfe, in so muche that I coulde away wth nothing that
is done vnder the sunne, for all was but vani
tie and veracion of mynde: yea I was wep of
my labour, which I had takē vnder the sunne
because I shoulde be sayne to leane them vnto
another mā that cometh after me: And who knoweth whether he shall be a wyle man or a foole: And yet that he be lord of al my labours
which I wth suche wysdome haue taken vnder
the sunne. This is also a vayne thyng.

¶ So I turned me to refraine my mynde from all suche trauayl, as I toke vnder the sunne: for so muche as a man shoulde wep hym selfe wth wysdom, wth vnderstanding and oportunitie and yet be faine to leane his labours vnto ano ther, that neuer stode for them. This is also a vayne

a dayne thyng & great misery. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, & he taketh vnder the sunne, but heynesse, sorrowe, and disquietnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? Insomuche, that his hert can not reste in the nyghte: this is also a dayne thyng. * Is it not better the for a man to eate & drynke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? Yea, I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God.

For who wyl eate or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God geueth to a man that is good before hym, wysdome, vnderstandyng and gladnesse: but vnto the synner he geueth werynesse. (and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thynges that afterwarde shal be geuen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is now a dayne thyng: yea a very disquietnesse and a veracion of mynde.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

¶ All thynges come in theyr tyme, and passe awaye in theyr tyme.

Every thing hath a tyme: yea, all that is vnder the heauen hath his conuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, & a tyme to die. There is a tyme to plant, and a tyme to plucke vp the thyng that is planted. A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrain from embracing. A tyme to wep, & a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cut in peeces, & a tyme to sow together. * A tyme to kepe silence, and a tyme to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els (that doth any thyng) but werynesse and labour? For as touchyng the trauayle and carefullnesse, which God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be excused in it. All this hath he ordeyned maruelous goodlye, to euery thyng his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of men, that they shoulde not comprehend the grounde of his workes which he doth from the begynnyng to the ende. So I perceyued, that in those thynges there is nothyng better for a man, then to be merry and to do wel as long as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drynke: yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all his labour, & same is a gyfte of God. I considered also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth for euer. And that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the entent, & men shoulde feare hym. * The thyng that hath bene, is nowe: and the thyng that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme. For God restoreth agayne the thing that was passe. Wherefore, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlinesse in the stede of iudgement, & iniquitye in stede of rightousnesse. Then thoughte I in my mynde: God will separte the ryghteous fro the vngodly, & then shal be the tyme and iudgement of all counsailes and workes. I communed with myne owne herte also, concernyng the chyldren of me: how God hath chosen them, and yet letteth the appareare, as though they wer beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doeth vnto beastes: & as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of byeth: so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beaste but all are subdued vnto vanytie.

They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust agayne. * Who knoweth the spyte of man that goth vnto the earth, & the breath of a beaste? goth downe to the earth. Wherefore I perceyue that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be tofull in his labour, for that is his porcion. But who wyl byng hym to se the thing that shal come after hym?

¶ The miseryes of the innocent. The superfluous labours of man. The chyche that is poure and wylle. &c.

I turned me, and considered all the violent wronge that is doone vnder the sunne: and beholde, & feared of such as were oppressed, and there was no man to comfort them, or that wolde deliuer and defende the from the violence of theyr oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are dead, to be more happy then those that be alue: yea, hym & is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they bothe, because he seeth not the myserable workes that are done vnder the sunne. Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of labour that euery man taketh in hande, was done of enuy agaynst his neyghboure. This is also a dayne thyng, an a veracion of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne fleshe.

One handeful sayeth he is better with rest then both the handes full with labour and trauayle of mynde. Wherefore, I turned me, & beholde yet another vanitie vnder the sunne.

There is one manne, no mo but hym selfe alone, haupnge neyther chyld nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle: his eyes can not be satisfied woth ryche, & he doth not comprehend hym selfe, and superfluous. For whome dooe I take such trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a dayne and myserable thyng. Therefore two are better then one: for they maye well enioye the profyt of theyr labour. For yf one of them fall, his companyon helpeth hym vp agayne: But woe is hym that is alone: for yf he fall, he hat not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a bodye be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resystance.

A threhold gable is not lyghthe bychen. A poure chyld beynge wyse, is better then an olde kynge that doeth, and can not beware in tyme to come.

* Some one cometh oute of prysyn, and is made a kynge: & another whiche is borne in the ee kynngdom

hynzome cometh vnto pouerty. And I perceyued that all men liuing vnder the sunne go with the seconde chyldre, that shall stande vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that haue ben before him, and come after him they are innumerable. And they that come after him shall not reioyse of hym. This is also a wayne thyng and verayson of mynde. When thou comest into the house of God, kepe thy foote and drawe nye, that God whiche is at hande maye heare: that thou geue not the offeringes of foolys: for they knowe nought but to do euill.

The v. Chapter.

¶ An admonition to beware of the churche. We ought not to maxime at the oppression of the poore. The counsaile is not satisfied with his speech.

BE not hasty with thy mouthe, & let not thyne herte speake any thyng rashely before God. For God is in heauen, & thou vpon earth, therefore let thy wordes be fewe. For where much carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: & where many wordes are, there men may beare folcs. ¶ If thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to performe it. As for foolish vowes be hath no pleasure in them: If thou promise any thyng, paye it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promise, and not paye. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy helthe for to synne, neyther say thou before the angel: that it is thy ignorance. For then God wyll be angry at thy voyce, & destroy all the wordes of thine lippes. And why? wher as many dreames & many wordes, there are also diuers vanities: but looke & thou feare God. ¶ If thou see the poore to be oppressed, and wrongfully delt withall, so that equyte and ryghte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruaile not thou at suche a thyng, for one great man heperth couth with another, and the myghtye men are in an croyste ouer the poore. The increase of feareth vpholdeth all thyng: pea the kyng him selfe is maynteyned by his bandye. He that longeth money wyll neuer be satisfied with money: and whoso helpeth in ryche shal haue no profit therof. This is also a wayne thyng. Where as much richesse is, there are many also that speke the awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possideth them, sayng that he may loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouryng man slepeth sweetly, whether it be lytle or much he eateth but the aboundance of the rich, wyll not suffer hym to slepe. Per is there a soze plage, which I haue seene vnder the sunne, (namely) ryche kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For at tyme they preyth with his great mytche & trouble: and if he haue a child, it getteth nothyng. ¶ Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne: & carryeth nothyng a waye with hym of all his labour. This is a miserable plage that he shall go a waye rue as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also he vydrate in the darke, & great carefulnesse, sicknesse, & sorowe. ¶ Ther fore me thynke it a better and a sapper thing, a man to eate and drynke & to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe which God geueth hym, for this is his porciō. For vnto whomsoeuer God geueth ryche, goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porciō, & to be refreshed of his labour: this is the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not muche howe long he shal lyue, for as much as God fylleth his bert with gladnesse.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ The myserye of the ryche and countaile. The difference of a foole and a wise man.

There is yet a plage vnder the sunne, and it is a general thing among men wher God geueth a man richesse, goodes & honoure, so he wanteth nothyng of all that his herte can desire, and yet God geueth hym not leane to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a wayne thyng & a miserable plage. ¶ If a man beget a hundred chyldren, & lue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in number, & yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buried, as for hym I saye: that vntimelye byrth is better then he. For he cometh to naught, & spendeth his tyme in daeknesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreover, he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hath he more rest then the other. Pea, though he lured two thousand yeres yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour that a man taketh is for hym self, and yet his desire is neuer filled after his mynde. For what hath the wyle more then the foole. What helpeth it the poore, & he knoweth to walke with foolcs before the lyfynge? The clere syght of the eyes is better then the soule shoulde walke after desires of lust. howbeit, this is also a wayne thing, & a disquietnes of mind. The thing that hath ben is named already, and knowen & it is euen man hym self, neither may he go to lawe w hym that is mightier then he. Many thynges there be & encrease vnto vanytie: and what hath a man elles? For who knoweth what is good for man lyfynge, in the dayes of his wayne lyfe, which is but a shadow? Who wyll tell a man what shall happen after hym vnder the sunne.

The vii. Chapter.

Good name is more worth, then precious oymment, & the daye of death is better then the day of birth. It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a banquetting house. For there is the end of all men: and he that is lyfynge, taketh it to better: grauntie is better then to laughe: for when the countenance is deuy, the herte is reformed. The best of a wile is in a mourning house, but the best of the foolys is in the house of mytch. ¶ It is better to geue eare to a challyng of a wyle man then to heare the song of foolcs. For the laughyng of foolcs is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a wayne thyng.

The foyle man hateth wrong dealing: & abhorreth the herte that couereth rewarde. Better is it to colidze pende of a thyng then the begynnyng. The patient of spiryte is better then the hye mynde. Be not hastily angrie in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of foolles. Saye not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of y olde tyme were better then they that be nowe: for that were no wyle questyon. Wisdom with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it with them that without care maye behold the Sunne. For wisdom defendeth as well as mony and the excellent knowlage & wisdom geueth lyfe vnto hym þat hath it in possession. Consydre the worke of God, howe y no man can make þe thyng streight whiche he maketh croked.

All well þe tyme of prosperitie, & remembre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh þe one by the other. So þa man can fynde nothing els. All thynges haue I consydyed in þe tyme of my vanytie: that the iuste man perissheth for his righteousnes sake, & the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therfore, be thou nether to righteous nor ouerwyle þe thou perissh not. Be nyther to vnyghteous also nor to foolissh, lest þe dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, and not to let y go out of thy hand. For he þe feareth God, cometh forth w threm al.

Wisdom geueth moze courage vnto the wyle, then ten myghty men of the cytie: & for there is not one iust vpon earth þe doeth good & synneth not. Take no hede vnto euery worde þis spoken, lest thou heare thy seruauunt curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft times spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued in wisdom: for I thoughte to be wyle: but she wente farther frome then she was before: yea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mind also vnto knowlage, & to seke & search out science, wisdom & vnderstanding: to know þe foolisshnesse of the vngodly, & the error of doting foolles. And I founde, that a woman is bitterer then death, for she hath caste abrode her hert as a net that men fynde wylde: & her handes are cherynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shal escape fro her, but the synner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde, sayeth the preacher, this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thyng must be consydyed with an other, þa man may come by knowlage: wyche as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amonge a thousandemen I haue founde one, but not one woman among all. Lo this only haue I found, þe God made man iust and ryght, but they sought many inuencions.

¶ The viij. Chapter.

Who is wyle, who hath knowlage to make an answer: A manys wisdom maketh his face to shyne: but vnhamesfastnes putteth it out of fauour. I must kepe the thynges comendement, & the othe that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of his sight, and se thou shalt liue in no small thyng, for whatsoeuer thou doest, thou shalt be. Like as when a man geueth a charge, his comendement is myghty: Euen so, & who maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? Whoso kepeth the comendement, shall fele no harme, but a wyle mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thyng wyll haue oportunitie & iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulnesse, and sorrow. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyll tell hym? Neether is there any man that hath power ouer the spyte, to kepe syl the spyte nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the bat-tayle: neether maye vngodlynesse deliuer the that medle wythall.

All these thynges haue I consydyed, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke þe is vnder the sunne: how one man hath lordship vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue seene of ten the vngodly brought to they graues: & yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, which in þe cytie were growen out of memozy, as were those also þe lyued well. This is also a vayne thyng because now that euell workes are not hastily punished, the hert of man geueth hym self ouer vnto wickednesse. But though an euill personne offende an hundred tymes, & God defer, geuyng hym longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go well with them þe feare God, because they haue hym before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be wel with hym, neether shall he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a shadow: so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanytie vpon earth: There be iustmen, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly.

Agayne, there be vngodlye, with whome it goeth as though they had þe workes of þe righteous. This haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therfore I commende gladnes, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applyed my minde to learne wisdom, and to knowe the trauayle þe is in the worlde (and that of suche a fastyon, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, neether daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it not possible for a man to attayne vnto the workes þe are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them oute, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wyle man wolde vnder take to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

¶ A man knoweth not by the sight whiche is of hym owne thynge, neether he be iust nor wicked. A man ought to lyue iustlye, but he knoweth not by the sight.

Of all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke oute. The righteous and wyle: yea, & they seruauunts also are in þe hande of God: and there is no man man that knoweth neither love nor hate, but all thinges are before the. It happeneth unto one as unto another: it goeth with the righteous as with the vngodly: * with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with hym that offrech, as with hym that offrech not, lyke as it goeth with the vertrous, so goeth it also with the synner. As it happeneth unto the periured, so happeneth it also, to hym that is astraped to be forsworne. Among all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto al alyke. This is the cause also that the vertes of men are full of wychednesse, and madde fooly: wherfore is in theyr vertes, as long as they lyue, vntill they dye.

B And why: as long as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (say they) is better then a deed Lyon: for they þe lyuynge, knowe that they shal dye: but they that be deed, know nothyng: neyther deserue they any more. For theyr memoypall is forgotten, so þe they be neyther loued, hated nor enuyed: neyther haue they any more parte in the world in all that is done vnder the sunne. So thou thy waye then, eate thy bread with ioye, & drynke thy wyne with a glad hert, for thy woordes please God. Let thy garmentes be alway whyte, * and let thy heed lacke no oymment.

Prover. x.

* Ale thy selfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe whom thou louest, all þe daies of thy lyfe which is but wayne, that God geueth the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanpryde: for that is thy porcyon in this lyfe, of all thy labour & traualle that thou takest vnder þe sunne. What forner thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that thou goest vnto, there is neyther wothe, counsayle, knowledge, nor wysdome.

C So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder þe sunne, & I saw, þe running it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayle it helpeth not to be strong to fyndyng, it helpeth not to be wyle: to ryche she is helpeth not to be subryl: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be connyng: but that all lyeth in tyme & fortune. For a mā knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysh are taken with the angle, & as the byrdes are caught with þe snare: Euen so are men taken in the peryllous tyme, when it cometh sodaynly vpon them.

D This wysdome haue I seene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thyng. There was a lytle citty, and a fewe men wyth in it: so there came a greate kyng & besyged it, & made greate bulwoykes agaynst it. And in the citty there was found a poore mā (but he was wyle) whiche with his wysdome deluyered the citty: yet was there no body that had any respecte to such a simple man. Then sayd I: wysdome is better then strength. Reuerchelesse, a simple mans wysdome is despyed, and his woordes are not hearde. A wyle mans counsayle that is folowed in seclence, is farre aboue the crynge of a captayne amonge foolys. * For wysdome is better then harnesse: but one vntyffre alone destroyeth muche good.

1. & 2. & 3.

A Weed syle doth corrupte swete oymment, & maketh it to synke. Euen so ofte tymes be that in made for wisdom and honour, is abhorred because of a litle foolys wherelle. A wyle mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a foolys hert vpon the left. A foole wyl thewe hym self when he goeth by the waye: yet thynketh he that euery man doth as foolishly as hym selfe. If a pryncypall spyrite be geuen the to beare rule, * he not neylygent then in thine offyce: for he that can take cure of hym self, auoydeth great offences.

In other place is there, whiche I haue seene vnder the sunne: namely, the ignoraunce that is commonly among prynces: in that a foole spyteth in great dignyte, & the ryche are set downe beneath: I haue seene seruantes ride vpon horses and prynces goyng vpon their fete as it wer seruantes. * But he that dyggeth vpon a pyte shal fall therein hym selfe: & who so breakech downe the hedge, a serpent shal bite hym. Who so remoueth the stones, shal haue traualle withal: and he þe heweth wood, shal be hurte therewith.

When an yron is blunt, & the poppe not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, & that whymight Euen so doth wisdom folow diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpente þe syngeth wythoute byssynge. The wordes out of a wyle mans mouth, are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyl destroy hym selfe. The beginning of his talking is foolishnes, & the last worde of his mouth is like madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, & a man can not tel what shal come to passe, who wyl then warne hym of it that shal folowe after hym. The labour of þe foolyshe is greuous vnto them, while they know not how to go into þe citty. Woe be vnto þe (O þe land) whose kyng is but a chyld, & whose prynces are early at theyr banckettes. But well is þe (O þe land) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose prynces eate in due seale, for necessitie & not for lute. Thowowe thoughtfulness the bathes falle downe, & thowowe ydle handes it raineth in at þe house. Great maketh men to laugh, & wine maketh them mery: but vnto money are all thynges obedyent. Wylthe the kyng no euell in thy thought, & speake no hurt of þe rich in thy pryey chambze: for a byrde of the ayre shal betray thy voyce, and wyth her fetters shal she be wyaye thy wordes.

The .xi. Chapter.

By the waye ought to be byssynge vnto the wyle.

If thy breed vpon wete faces, and so shal thou fynde after many dayes. True parte seuen dayes, and also vpon þe. Wyl, for þe knowest not what misery shal come vpon earth. When the cloudes are ful, they poure out raine vpon earth. And wyl þe tree fall (whether it be toward the south or north) in what place soeuer it fall, there is lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, wynde, shall not sow and be y<sup>e</sup> hath no respecte vnto the cloudes, that not reape. Now lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the spyrite howe it entreteth into y<sup>e</sup> lytle body, beyng yet in y<sup>e</sup> mothers wombe: Euen so y<sup>e</sup> knowest not the woorkes of God, which is the woorkemaster of all.

Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to sow thy seede, whether it be in the moynynge or in the euenynge: for thou knowest not whether thys or that shall prosper, & yf they both take it is y<sup>e</sup> better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaunt thing is it for the eyes to looke vpon the Sunne. If a man lyue many yeres, and be glad in them all, let hym remembre the dayes of darkenesse, whiche shal be many, and that foloweth: al thynges shal be but vanytie. Be glad then O thou yong man in thy youth, & let thy heart be merry in thy yonge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne herte, and the luste of thyne eyes but be y<sup>e</sup> sure, that God shall bypnyng the into iudgemente for all these thynges.

From our youth ought we to consider, and regard the good-will of God.

In all a waye of pleasure oute of thyne herte, and remoue euil from thy body: for childhodes & youth is but vanytie. Remembre the maker the sooner in thy youth, or euer y<sup>e</sup> dayes of aduersitie come, & or the yeres shal wyne, when y<sup>e</sup> shal saye: I haue not pleasure in the, before the sunne, y<sup>e</sup> light, the mone & starres be darkened, and or the cloudes turne agayne after the rayne whiche the keepers of the house shall tremble, & when the strong men shall bowe them selues, when y<sup>e</sup> milners stande still, because they be so fewe, and when y<sup>e</sup> sight of the windowes shal waxe dymme, when the doores in the stretes shal be shut, & when y<sup>e</sup> voyce of y<sup>e</sup> pipner shal be layd downe: when men shal crye vp at the voyce of the byrde, & when all the daughters of musike shal be brought lowe: when men shall feare in hye places, and be afrayed in the stretes, when the Almond tree shal flourish, and be laden with the greshopper, and when al luste shal passe: because man goth to his longe home, and the mourners go about the stretes: O: euer the syluer lace be taken away, & or the golden wel be broken: O: the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the chetterne. Then shall the duste be turned agayne vnto earth, from whence it came: & the spyrite shal retourne vnto God, whiche gaue it. * All is but vanytie (sayth the preacher) al is but plaine vanytie.

The preacher was yet moze wyse, & taught y<sup>e</sup> people knowlage: he gaue good hede, soughte out the grounde, and set forth many parables: his diligence was to fynd out acceptable woordes, yf the scripture, and the woordes of tructh for y<sup>e</sup> woordes of the wyse are lyke pyckes and nayles, that go thorow, where wyth the stuffe gathered is holden by: for they are geuyn of one shepheard onely. Therfore be ware (my sonne) of that doctryne that is besyde thys: for to make many booke, it is an endelesse woike: and to loude cryngye werpeth the bodye.

Let vs heare the conclusyon of all thynges: O fear God, and kepe his commaundementes: for that toucheth all men. For God shal iudge all woorkes and secret thynges, whether they be good or euill.

A mystical songe of the spiritual and godly loue betwene Christ the spouse, and the church or congregation his spouse.

That he wold kysse me wyth y<sup>e</sup> kysles of his mouth: for thy loue is moze pleasaunte then wine: & that because of y<sup>e</sup> good and pleasaunt sauoure of thy moste pccypous balmes. Thy name is: a swete smellynge oyntment when it is shed forth, therfore do the maidens loue the, drawe thou me vnto the: we wyll runne after the. The kyng hath brought me into his pryue chambres. We wyll be glad & reioyse in the: we thinke moze of thy loue then of wyne. They that be ryghteous loue the. I am blacke: O ye daughters of Ierusalem lyke as the tentes of the Cedarenes, & as the ginges of Salomon, but yet am I fayre & wel fauoured withal: Wauer not at me that I am so blacke: for why the sunne hath shyned vpon me. My mothers chyldren haue euil wyl at me they made me the keeper of the vineyardes, but myne owne vineyard haue I not kepte.

Tell me of hym whom my soule loueth: when thou sedest the shepe, where thou makest them rest at y<sup>e</sup> none daye: for why shall I be lyke hym that goeth wylonge about the flockes of thy companions: If thou knowe not thy selfe, O say rest amonge women: then go thy way forth: after the footstepes of the shepe, & fede thy goates besyde the shepherdes tentes. Vnto y<sup>e</sup> house of Pharaos charettes haue I compared the, O my loue. Thy chekes & thy necke is beautifull as the turtles, and hanged wyth spanges and goodly welles, a neckebande of golde wyll we make the wyth syluer buttons. When y<sup>e</sup> shynge lytteth at the table, he shal smel my flardus: a bundel of myrrer is my loue vnto me: he wil lye betwixt my breastes: a clustre of Camphire in y<sup>e</sup> vineyardes of Engaddi is my loue vnto me. * O howe fayre art y<sup>e</sup> (my loue) O howe fayre art y<sup>e</sup> (my beloved), both wel fauoured art y<sup>e</sup>. hilles. My beloved is like a roo, or a pong hart Behold, he standeth behind our wall, he looketh in at the wyndow, & peepeth thowhe the grate.
My beloved answered, and saied vnto me.

O stand vpon my loue, my bewtiful, and go to thyne owne, for lo, the wynter is now past & rayn is away & gone. The flowers are come vp in the felde, the tyme of the byrdes syngynge is come, and the voyce of the turtle dove is heard in our lande. The fygge tree byngeth forth her fygges, & the vynes beare blossomes, and haue a good smel. O stande vpon then & come my loue my bewtiful, & come I say (O my loue) out of the canes of f rocks out of the holes of f wal: O let me se thy countenance, & heare thy voice, for swete is thy voyce, & sayre is thy face. Get tye in Israel. They holde swerdes every one, & are expert in warre. Every man also hath his sweorde vpon his thygh, because of feare in the wynde: Byngne Salomon had made hym selfe a palace of the wood of Libanus, f pillars are of syluer the courtynge of golde, the seate of purple, the grounde is pleasauntlye paved wth loue, for the daughters of Ierusalem. So forth, (O ye daughters of Syd) and beholde: Myng Sa-

Chapter.

O how sayre art thou my loue, howe I sayre art thou: thou haste doun eyes, besyde that whiche lyeth byd wth dyu.
* Thy berpe lockes are lyke the woll where every one beareth two twinnes, and not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy lippes are lyke a rose coloured ryband, thy wordes are louely, thy chokes are lyke a peece of a pomegranat wth in thine heeres. Thy necke is lyke f tower on the spires w<sup>ch</sup> upon there hange a. 4. shyldes: yea, al the weapons of the giantes. * Thy two brestes are lyke two twinnes of younge Roos, whiche fede amonge roses. O what I myght go to the mountayne of myrr, & to the hill of frankincense: till the daye brake, & tyll f shadowes be past awaye. Thou arte all sayre (O my loue) & no spot is there in the. Come to me fro Libanus (O my spouse) come to me fro Libanus, loke fro the top of Amanah, from the top of Banir, and Hermo, from f syons dñes, and fro the mountaines of the leopordes. Thou hast wth loue bewitched my hert, O my syster my spouse: f hast bewitched my hert wth one of thyne eyes & wth one cheyne of thy necke.

O how sayre are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse: Thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, & the smel of thyne oynmentes passeth all spyes. Thy lippes, O my spouse, as the hony combe: yea mylke and honye is vnder thy tynge; and f smel of thy garmentes, is lyke the smel of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse: a garde well locked, and a sealed well. The frutes that are planted in the are lyke a very paradys of pograntes, wth swete frutes: as Camphire, Cardus, and Walfron, Calamus, Spynard, wth all swete smellyng trees: Myrr, Aloes, and all the best spy-ces: a well of gardens, a well of luyng waters whiche ranne downe from Libanus. Al thou nozt wynde, come thou south wynde, and blow vpon my garden, that the smel thereof maye be carped on every syde: yea, that my beloved may come into his garden, and eate of the swete fru-tes that growe therein.

Chapter.

Im come into my garde. O my sy-

O ye frendes, bynke & be mery, O ye beloved As I am a slepe, and my hert is washyng I heare f voyce of my beloved, wher he knocketh Open

Oppe to me, O my syster, my loue, my dowe, my desyring, for my heade is full of dewe, & the loc-kes of my heare are full of the nyght drowpes.
I haue put of my coote, howe can I doo it on a gaine? I haue washed my fete, howe shal I file them agayne? My loue put in his hande at the hole, & my herte was moued within me. I stode vp to open vnto my beloued, & my handes drowped with myre, & the myre came downe my fingers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my be-loued, but he was departed and gone his way.
Howe when he spake, my herte was gone: I sought hym, but I coude not fynde hym. I cry-ed vnto hym, neuertheles, he gaue me no answer.
So the watchmen y went about the cite: foud me syde me, & wounded me: Pea, they y kepre the wailles, toke away my hearecheafe fro me.

I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, yf ye fynde my beloued, yf ye tell hym howe that I am sycke for loue. What maner of man is thy loue about other louers? Of fairest among women? What can thy loue do more the other louers that y chargest vs so straitly?
As for my loue, he is whype & redde coloured, a goodly person among ten thousand, his heed is as the mooste fyne golde, y lockes of his heare are bushed, and blacke as a crow. His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brookes, as though they were washed with mylke, & are set lyke perles in golde. His cheekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Spote-carpes plant all maner of sweete thynges.

His lippes are lyke roses that drowpe sweete smellynge myre. Hys handes are lyke golde-rynges, haupng inclosed the puerpous stone of Charlis. Hys bodye is as the pure puerp, dect ouer with Sappires: his legges are as y pillers of Marbell, sette vpon lockettes of golde.
His face is as Libanus: and as the beche of y cedre trees. The woordes of his mouthe are sweete yee, he is al together louelye. Suche one is my loue. O ye daughters of Jerusalem, such a one is my loue.

Whether is thy loue gone then? O thou sayest among women: why ther is thy loue departed? We wil seke him with y. My loue is gone downe into hys garden, vnto the white smellynge beddes that he make refreche hym self in the garden, & gather roses. My loue is myne and I am hys, whiche fedeth amonge the roses. Thou arte bewepfull, o my loue: as is the place Thirza, thou arte saye as Jerusalem fearfull as an armye of menne, with the y banners. Turne away thine eyes fro me, for they haue let me on fyre. * Thy beary lockes are like a floche of goates, thorne vpon the mounte of Silead. Thy fethers are lyke a floche of thorne shepe, which go out of the waluyng place: wher eury one beareth thyng, & not one vnfruteful amonge them. Thy cheekes are lyke a peece of a pomgranate. Whypin thy volupers. There are x. Quenes, xxx. wyues, and damelles without numbje. One is my dowe, one is my desyring. She is the onelye beloued of her mother: and here vnto her that bare her.

When the daughters sawe her, they sayd the was blessed. Pea: the Quenes and wyues praysed her. What is the this that lokech forth as the mornynge? saye as the moone, cleere as the sunne, and fearfull as an armye of men w the y banners. I went downe into the nut garden to see what grew by the brookes, and to loke yf y vyneparde shoulde, or yf the pomgranates were not loyde. I knewe not that my soule had made me the charpot of y people that be vnder tribute. Turne agayne turne agayne. O thou perfect one turne agayne, turne agayne & we wil loke vpon y. What wyl ye se in y Sulampye?
She is lyke men of warre singin in a copany.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

Howe pleasaunt ar thy tredynges with thy shoes, thou Dyrnces daughter. Thy thynges are lyke a fatter well, whiche is wroughte by a connyng wo:lcmaister. Thy navel is lyke a round goblet, whiche is neuer without drynke. Thy wombe is lyke a heape of wheate that is set about with roses.

* Thy two brestes are lyke two rhynges of yonge roes. Thy necke is as it were a Towre of puerp: thine eyes also are lyke the water poles that are in Helebon beside the porte of Lithabbin, thy nose is lyke the towre of Liba-nus, whiche lokech towarde Damascus.

That brade that standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmell: and the heare of thy heade is lyke purple, and lyke a king going forth with his gard about hym. O howe saye and lonely art thou my desyring in pleasures. Thy stature is lyke a palme tree, and thy brestes lyke y grapes. I sayde I wyl clyme vp into the palme tree, and take holde of his hye bzaunches.

Thy brestes also shalbe as y wyne clusters the smel of thy nostrilles lyke as the smel of ap-pels, & thy lattes lyke the best wyne.

Which goth straight vnto my beloued, & by steth forth by the lippes of the auncient elders.
There wyl I turne me vnto my loue, & he shal turne him vnto me. O come on my loue, we wil go forth into the felde, and take oure lodgyng in the vllages. In the mornynge wyl we go se the vneyard: we wyl se yf y vine be sprong forth, yf the grapes be growne, and yf the pomgranates be hot oute. There wyl I geue the my brestes: the Wandjagoas geue their sweete smel, and beside our dozes are all maner of pleasaunt frutes, both new and olde: whiche I haue kept for the, o my beloued.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

That I myght fynde the wythoute, I kylle the, whom I loue as my brother whiche suet my mothers brestes: that y shal not be despyed. I wyl leade y a byng y into my mothers house: that y mightest teache me, & y I myght geue y drynke of spiced wyne, & of the sweete sappe of my pomgranates. * Hys lefte hande shalbe vnder my heade, and his ryght hande shal embrace me.

¶ The ix. Chapter.

The Propheeye.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye waite not vpon my loue, nor touch her, till she be content her selfe. What is the thing that commeth vpon from the wilderness: and leaueth vpon her loue? I waite the vpon among pappell trees, where thy mother conceived thee, where thy mother (Isay) brought thee into the world. O let me as a scale vpon thine harte, and as a scale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghtie as the death, and gelously as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so many waters are not able to quenche lone, neither maye the flames drowne it.

Per, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde count it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes, what shal we do for our syster, when she shal be spoken for? If she be a wal, we shal builde a siluer bulwark ther vpon: yf she be an open doore, we shal fasten her with boordes of Cedre tre. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauour in his syght. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal hamon, & this vineyard he deliuered he vnto the keepers: & euery one for the frute ther of shulde geue him a thousand peces of siluer.

Our vineyard is in my syght: thou O Salomon must haue a thousande, and the keepers two hundred with the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardenys. O let me heare thy voyce that my companions may hearken to the same. O get thee awaye, my loue, and be as a Rose: o a ponge herte vpon the swete smelling mountaynes.

The ende of the Ballet of Ballettes of Salomon called in latyn Canticum Canticoꝝ.

The booke of the Prophet Esaye.

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Esay prophesied that the anger of God shal come vpon Jerusalem, because of theyr synnes.

In the visyon of Esay & sonne of Amos, which he sawe vpon Iuda and Jerusalem: in & dayes of Azia, & Ioathan, Ahaz & Iehoziah kynges of Iuda. Heare: O heauen, and hearken o earth. For the Lorde hath spoken. I haue noyshed & brought vpon chylde, but they haue done wyckedly agaynst me. The ore hath knowen his owner, and the asse his mayster: cryb: but Israell hath receyued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this synfull nacib, a people of great iniquite: a freward generacyon vnmaturall chylde. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the helpe one of Israell vnto anger, & are gone backwarde. Wherby shulde ye be plagued anye more? For ye are euery daye sayyng a waye. The whole head is synne and the herte is peny. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is a whole parte in all your bodye, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stripes which can neether be helped, bounde vpon, molified, nor called vpon for ioyntmente.

Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are bzent vpon, your enemies deuoure your land, & ye must be laine to stand, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate as it were with enemyes in a battayle. Mozeouer, the daughter of Sion is left alone lyke a cotage in a vineyard, lyke a lodge in a garde of cucumbers, lyke a beleged cite. And except the Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe alpye: we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, & lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare the woide of the Lorde: ye Lordes of Sodoma: and hearken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of & bzent offrynges of wetters, and of the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloud of bullockes, lambes: & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyryth you to treade wythin my porches? Offer me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thyng vnto me. I maye not awaye with your newe woones, your Saboths and solempne dayes. Your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate your newe holpe dayes and fastynges, euen from my very herte. They make me wery, I can not abyde them. When you hold out your handes, I wyl turne myue eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wyl I heare nothing at all, seing your handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye your euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell. Learne to do ryght, applie poure selues to equite, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryght: let the wydowes complaine come before you. Nowe go to, saith the Lorde: let vs talke together. Though your synnes be as red as scarlette, they shalbe as white as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as white as wol. Yf ye be lowyng & obedient ye shal enioye the best chyng & groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate & rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured wth the sword: for thus the Lorde hath promysed to his owne month.

Howe happeneth it then & the ryghteous cytie (whiche was full of equyte) is become vn- safe full as an whozer. Ryghteousnesse dwelleth in it, but nowe murderers. Thy siluer is turned to dross, and thy wyne mixt with water. Thy pynaces are wycked and companions of cheues. They loue gyftes altogetther, and gape for rewarde. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe hym not to his right, neyther wyl they let the widowes causes come before them. Therefore saith the Lorde God of hostes, & myghtie one of Israell: Ah, I must eate me of mine enemies, and auenge me of mine aduersaries. I shall lay my hand vpon the, & burne out thy dross from the finest and purest, & put out all thy synne, and set thy iudges agayne as they were sometime & thy denatoures as they were from the beginning. Then shalte thou be called the righteous cite, the faithfull cite. Sion shalbe redemed with

With equite, and they shall turne agayne vnto her in righteousnes. For the transgressours vngodly, and such as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lorde must al together be utterly destroyed. And excepte ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherein ye haue so delited, & of the gardes that ye haue chosen, ye shall be as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye: & as a garden & harbe no moystnes. And as for the glory of these thinges it shall be turned to dysestrawe & he shall make it to a sparke. And they shall both turne together, so þat no man shall be able to quench them.

¶ Of the commynge and death of Chyrlie, and of the kyllynge of the heathen.

In this is the worde þat was opened vnto Elyse the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It shalbe also in the laste daye, that the hyl wher the house of the Lorde is buylded, shall be the cheefe amonge hilles, and exalted aboue all litle hilles. And all nacions shall preache vnto hym, and the multitude of people shall go, speaking thus one to another: vp, & let vs go to the hyl of the Lorde and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and that we may walke in his pathes. For þat lawe shall come out of Syon, & the worde of þat Lorde from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence among the heathen, & shall refoirme the multitude of people: they shall breake their swearthes also in to mattoches, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lyfte vp a weapon agaynst another, neyther shall they learne to fyght from thence forth.

Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the light of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde thepy fathers in doozeres (wher they haue as the Whyskines had) & in straunge children they thinke the selues to haue ynough. They lande is full of syluer and golde, neither is there any ende of thepy treasure: Their land is also full of hoxes, and no ende is ther of their charettes. Their land also is ful of vayne goddes, & before the worke of thepy owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen before þat thing that thepy owne fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there fallet the man downe before them, so þat thou canst not bypunge hym awaye from thence.

And therfore get the into some rocke, & hyde the in the ground for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his maiesty: Which casteth downe the hyghelokes of presumptuous personnes, & bypnyeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde only shall be exalted in that day. For the day of the Lorde of hostes shall go ouer all pryde & presumption vpon all them þat exalte them selues, and shall bying them all downe: vpon all hygh and stout Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon al the okes of Basan: vpon all hygh hilles, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon al the pyes of the sea, and vpon euery thinge that is glorious and pleasant to looke vpon. And it shall bypunge downe the pryde of man & shall laye mans presumptionnes full lowe, & the Lorde shall onely haue the victorie in that daye. But the pydes shall utterly be rote out. Men shall crepe into holes of stone, & into caues of the earth, for feare of þat Lorde, & for the glory of his maiesty: what tyme as he shall wake him vp to condempne þat earth. Then shall man cast awaye his goddes of syluer, and his goddes of golde (whiche he neuer thelesse had made to honoure them) vnto Hoies & Watters. And they shall crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his maiesty, when he ysseth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then anye man whose byethe is in his nostrilles. For what is he of reputacion?

¶ The iii. Chapter.

¶ Of the prophesyng that at the commynge of Chyrlie all strength and power shall be put forth of Iury.

In lo, þat Lorde God of hostes doth take away from Ierusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meat and drynke, the captayne & the soudar, the iudge & the Prophete, the wyfe and the aged man, the prynce of fifty yere olde, and the honozable: the Senatours & men of vnderstandyng, the maysters of craftes and oratours. And I shall geue them children to be their prynces, & babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shall be pyllid & polled, and one shall euer be doinge violence & wronge to another. The hope shall presume agaynst the elder and the vyle personne agaynst the honozable. Yea, one shall take a frende of his owne kynred by the bolome, & say: thou hast clothinge: thou shalt be our heade, for thou mayst kepe vs fro this fall and perell.

Then shall he sweare & saye: I can not helpe you. Moreover, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda muste decaye because that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his maiesty vnto anger. The chaunging of thepy countenance bewyareth the, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hide them not. Woe be vnto thepy soules, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them selues. Wyd the ryghteous do well, for they shall enioye the frutes of thepy studies. But woe be to the vngodly & vnryghteous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are excoynours of my people: and women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceaue the, and depraue the waye of thy fote stappes. The Lorde is here to comen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement of þat people: The Lorde shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and prynces of his people. It is ye þat haue burnt vpon my vynyarde, the poore is in your houses. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, & marre þat faces of the poore, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde: Seing the daughters of Sion as become so proude, & come in with stretched out neckes, & with vaine wanton eyes: saying they come in tripping so merrily with they: lette: Therfore shall the Lord haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shall discover they: shame. In that day shall the Lord take away the gorgynousnesse of they: apparel and spanges cheynes, partelets, & colars, brace letters, & boones, the goodly floured, wyde and broyded rayment, byooches, and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holly daye clothes & vales, hercheles and pyrmes, glasses & cypresses, bonets, and taches.

The Prophecie.

And in stead of good smel, there shall be stinke amonge them. And for they: girdles there shall be loose bandes. And for: wel let beare they: shall be baldnesse. In steade of a stomacher, a sake clothe, and for they: bewrye wyth chednesse, and sunne burning. Your husbandes and myghtie men shall perishe with the swearde in battayle.

At that tyme shall they: gates mourne and complayne, and they: shall crye as desolate folke vpon the earth.

¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

When shall seven wyues take holde of one man: and saye, We wyll laye all oure meate and clothynge together in commen: only that we may be called thy wyues. and that they: shamefull rejoyse maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the bryauche of the Lord be bewryful and myghty, & the frute of the earth shall be faire and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall spyunge therof. Then shall the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: Namely al suche as are wyteten among the liuing at Jerusalem: what time as the Lord shall waite a way the fylthynesse of the daughters of Sion, & purge the bloud out from Jerusalem with the wynde of his iudge-ment, and with fyre. Wo: coner, vpon all the dwellynges of the hille of Syon & vpon they: whole congregacyon, shall the Lord prouide a clode & smoke by daye, & the shynynge of a flam-myng fyre by nyghte for all they: glory shall be perserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place & refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wetter and rayne.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Of they: and his bypnynde, whiche, an operation of conscience, and knowledge.

Owe wyll I sing my beloued frend a songe of my frendes, because of his vineyarde. My beloued frende both a vineyarde in a verpe frute-full plentious grounde.

Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde a-boute, and plantid it with goodlye grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he looked that it shoulde byynge hym grapes: it broughte forth thornes. Nowe therfore (O ye Citizens of Jerusalem & whole Iuda:) Iudge

I praye you betwixt me, and my vineyarde.
What moze could haue ben done, for if I haue not done: Wherfore then hath it geuen thorn-es: where I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I shall do with my vineyarde. I wyll take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and bryake doونه & wal that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be dygged nor cut but beare thornes and byares. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes that they: shall not raine vpon it. As for the vineyarde of the Lord of hostes: it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda is saye plantynge. Of these he looked for equy-tye, but se there is wyronge: for ryghteousnesse, lo it is but myscrepe.

Woe vnto them that saye one house to another, and byynge one lande so nyghte vnto another, that the poore can get no moze grounde & that ye maye dwel vpon the earth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lord of hostes shall not many greater & moze gorgynous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwel in them:
And ten acres of vyues shall geue but a quart, & thirty bushels of fede shall geue but an Ephra.

Woe be vnto them, that crye vncarly to so-lowe byonkennes, and to them that continue so vntyll nyghte, and tyll they be sette on fyre to byne. In those companyes are harpes & lutes, tabrettes and pyres, and wyne. But they regard not the woike of the Lord & conside not the operation of his handes. Therfore cometh my folke also into captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glozpe is famished with honger, and their pyde is marred for thirst.
Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that their pyde, doostynge, and weiche, with suche as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath a man a fal, and is brought lowe and the high lough of proud shall be laid downe.
But the Lord of hostes shall be exalted in iud-gemente, and God that is holpe, is praysed in ryghteousnesse. Then shall the shepe cate, in order, & the ryche mens landes shall be laied wast, shall straungers deuoure. Woe be vnto them, & dyaue wyckednes vnto the with cordes of va-nitie & synne, as it wer with a carter rope.

Which vse to speake on this maner: let hym make haste now, and go forth with his woike, that we maye se it. Let the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, & dyaue nye, that we maye knowe it. Woe be vnto them that call euell good: and good euell, whiche make darkenesse lyght, & lyght darkenesse, & make sothe swete, & swete sowe. Woe be vnto them that are wyle in they: owne lyghte, and thynke they: selues to haue vnderstanding. Woe be vnto them that are strange to suppe out wyne, & expert men to set vpon hermes. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewarde, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghteous. Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vpon the strawe and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so they: rote shall be as corrupeish and they: blossome shall wither as a wyne lyke vnto

dust: for they haue caste awaye the lawe of the Loide of hostes, and blasphemed the worde of the holie maker of Israel.

I Therefore is the wrath of the Loide kindled also agaynst his people, & he shaketh his hande at them: yea, he hath impten, so that the hills byd tremble. And their carcasses byd lye in the open stretes, lyke mier. And in all this f wrath of God hath not ceased, but his hande is stretched ouer thyll. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and cal vnto them in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastily to speede. There shall not be one faynte no: feble amonge them, no not a sluggish no: sleerye personne. There shall not one of them put of f gyrdle from his loppes, no: loose the latchet of his shoo. His arrowes are sparre, and all his bowes bent. His hoyle hooves are lyke flint, & his cart wheles lyke a storme wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, & he roareth lyke Lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche vnto the pray and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them. In that daye they shall be so scarce vpon them, as the sea. And if we loke vnto f lande, behold it shall be all darknesse & so: or so. If we looke toward heauen, beholde, it shall be darke.

The vi. Chapter.

Elaye sawe the glory of the Loide, and was sent to prophesie the desolacion of Ierusa.

In the same yere that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Loide speake vpon an hygge and glozious seate, & his traine fyllyng the temple: And about hym stode Seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe winges. With twaine eache couered his face, with twaine his fete, & with twaine he did flye. They cried also echone to another on this maner: holy, holy, holy is f Loide of hostes. The whole world is full of his glozpe. Psea, the graues and doze chekes moued at his crying and the house was full of smoke. Then I said, O woe is me: for I am lost: in as much as I am a man of vncleane lippes, and dwell amonge people that hath vncleane lippes also: for mine eyes haue sene f king & Loide of hostes. Then stode one of the Seraphims vnto me hauping a hott cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the auter with the tonges and touched my mouth: and saide, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, and thyne vnryghteousnesse is taken away, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I heard whom shall I sende, and who wyl be our messenger: Then I sayde: here am I: sende me. And he sayde: go, and tell this people: ye shall breake in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: yee shall plainly see and not perceyue. Harden the heart of this people, stoppe they: eares, and shut they: eyes: f they se not with they: eyes, heare not with they: eares, and vnderstand not with they: hertes, and conuerste: and be healed.

Then spake I: Loide, howe longe: he answered: vntyll f cities be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, til the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Loide shall take the men sacre awaye, so f the lande shall lye wast a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, and the lande shall retourne and be layde waste. And as f Cerebint tree and oke in wynter caste they: leaues, & yet haue they: lappe in them: so shall the holy seide continue in they: substance.

The vii. Chapter.

The Syrians moue battayle agaynst Ierusalem, & saygeyne shall haue a chylde.

Happened in the tyme of Ahaz: f sonne of Iotam, which was f sone of Oziah kynge of Iuda: that a Rasin the kynge of Siria, and Berchab the sone of Romeliah, kynge of Israel, went vp toward Ierusalem to beslege it, but Rasin was not able to winne it. Now when f house of dauid (that is Ahaz) heard wo: be therof, that Siria & Ephraim were confederate to gether his hert quaked (ye & the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the feides is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Elay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Iasub) at f head of the ouerpole, in f fote parych by f fullers ground and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy self: and be thyll, but feare not, neyther be faynte harted, for these two sayles: that is for these two smoking f pychandes the wrath and furpousnes of Rasin the Sirian, and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim, & Romelies sonne haue wychedly conspyred agaynst the saynge: We wyll go vp agaynst Iuda, bere them, and bying them vnder vs, and set a kyng there, euen the sonne of Tabeel.

For thus saith the Loide God therto: It shall not so go forth: neither so come to passe, for the head cytie of the Sirians is Damascus, but f heade of Damascus is Rasin. And after tyme and thre score yere, shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And the cyrie of Ephraim is Samaria but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne. If ye beleue not, it cometh of this: that ye are vnfaithful to God. Wo: couer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz sayng, requyre a token of the Loide thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneath: or towarde the height above. The sayde Ahaz: I wyll requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Loide.

The Loide answered: Then here to, ye of the house of Dauid: is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also: And therefore the Loide shall geue you a token: Beholde a vyrgyne shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and (thou his mother) walte call his name Emanuel. Suffer and borye shall beate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For or euer the chylde come to knowlage: to eschue the euell, & chose the good, the lande (that thou so abhorrest) shall be desolate of bothe her kynges. The Loide also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vnto thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda) thowtwe the kyng of the Assyrians. For at f same tyme

The Prophecye.

synt shall the Loyde saye to the kinges that are about the water of Egypte, & saye to them in the Assyrians lande. These shall come & shall lyght all in the desolate vales, in the holes of stones: vpon all thorny and bushy places.

D And the same tyme: shall the Loyde haue the beare of the head & the fete and the beards cleane of, with the rasure that he shall haue beyond the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cow, and two shepe. Then because of the abundance of mylke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that every one whiche remaineth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vnyngardes (though there be a thousand vnynges in one and were solde for a thousand syluer lynes) shall be turned to beares and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arrows and bowes, so shall all the lande become beares and thornes. And as for all bylles that are betwene doone, there shall not come vpon the any feare of beares & thornes. But the cattel shall be dynten therether, & the shepe shall fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the destructione of the land by Sennacherib. The stone of offence at which many shall stumble.

A Doreouer, the Loyde sayde vnto me Take the a great leafe, & wyte in it, as men doo with a penne, make hastie spede to robbe, & haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me sayth full wytnesse to recorde. Uria the prest, & zacharia the sonne of Berachiah. After that I went vnto the prophetesse, that had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Loyde to me: geue hym this name: a spedy robber: an hastie spoiler. For why, as euer the childe shall haue knowlage to crye father, and mother: shall the cryes of Damascus and the substance of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoiler, before the kynge of the Assyrians.

B The Loyde spake also vnto me, saynge: for so much as this people refuseth the sil reuning water of Silo, and put their desyre in Rayn & Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Loyde shall byng mighty and great floudes of water vpon them namely, the kynge of the Assyrians with all his power: which shall clyme vpon all his floudes, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vpon Juda, flowing and encreasynge in power, tyll he get hym by the necke. He shall tyl also the widnesse of thy land with his wyde wynges. O Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye people of Iherusalem) & ye shall be broken downe, heken to all ye offscare countreys.

C Quier you, & ye shall be broken downe, ye parte you to battell & you shall be tozme in prey: take your counsel together, yet must your counsel come to naught, go in hand withal: yet shall it not prosper: for Gods with vs. For the Loyde spake thus to me in the power of his hande and warned me, sayng vnto me: that I shoulde not walke in the waye of this people.

He sayde moreover, found with none of the whoso euer saye, yonder people are bounde together: feare the not, neyther be afrased of them but sanctify the Loyde of hostes, let hym be your feare and dread. For he shall be a holy place to flye to, and stone to stumblen at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stumblen, fall: and be broken vpon hym yet: they shall be snared and taken.

Now laye the wytnesse together and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus wyll I waite vpon the Loyde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I wyll loke for hym. But lo, as for me: and the chyldren whiche the Loyde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Loyde of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And if they saye vnto you: aske counsel at the soothsayers, Wytches, charmers, and conuicers, then make them this answeere. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God? Shulde men runne vnto the deade for the lyuynge? If any man wante lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testymonye, whether they speake he not after this meanynge. If he doo not this, he shall stumblen & suffer hunger. And if he suffer hunger, he is oute of patience, and blasphemeth his kynge and his God. Then loke he vwarde, and downwarde to the earth, & beholde, there is trouble & darknes & rayson is rounde about hym, and the cloude of erreure. And out of such a aduersyte shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past he hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabalon and the lande of Neptali (where thow the see way goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the tyme in lytle trouble: but afterwarde soe viced.

The ix. Chapter.

The people that walke in darkenesse haue sene a great lyghte. As for the that dwell in the lande of shadow of death, vpon them hath the lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplied the people and not increased theyr loye. Theyre loye before the, euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victorie, when they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthen: & staffe of his shoulder and the rodde of his opprellour, as in the dayes of Oadian.

And truly every battayle & the warriorre accomplisheth, is doone with confusid noyse, and despyng theyr garmentes with bloodde. But this battayle shall be with burnynge & consuming of fyre. For vnto vs a childe is borne and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. vpon his shoulder both the kyngdom is, and he is called with his owne name wonderful. The geuer of counsell, the myghtie God, the euerslastynge father, the prince of peace, he shall make no end to encrease the kyngdom and peace, and shall lye vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdom, to set vp the same, and to stablysh it with equyte and righteousness, from henceforth for euermore. O ye shall shall the grelousy of the Lorde of Hostes byryn to passe. The Lorde sente a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And al the people of Ephraim shall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, that saye woth pryde and bye flo maches on this maner: The tyle worthe is fal len downe, but we wyll builde it woth squared stones. The molbery tymbre is broken, but we shal set it vp agayne woth Cedre. Neuertheles the Lorde shal prepare Razyns enemy agaynst them, and so ordze they aduersaryers, that the Syrians shall laye holde vpon them befoze, & the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israel woth open mouthe.

After all this is not the wrath of the Lord ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out against the people turneth not unto hym that chastiseth them, neyther do they seeke the Lord of hostes. Therefore hath the Lord rored out of Israel both head and tayle, byaunch and twyp in one day. By the head is vnderstande the Senatour & honourable man, and by the tayle the prophet that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people: that they bee in a right case, suche be discepuers. Such as men thinke al so to be perfect among these, are but calke waics

Therefore shal the Lorde haue no pleasure in they sponge men, neyther fauour they fatherlesse and wyddowes. For they are all together pyccyres and wycked, and all they mouthes spake foliye. After all this, is not the Lordes wraath ceased: but yet his hand is stretched out till. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood: so ascendeth the smoke of they pride. For because of the wraath of the Lorde of hostes, is the land full of darch-nesse, & the people be consumed, as it were with fyre no man doeth spare his brother, but he rob-berth on the ryght hand: and doeth sampter, he eateth on & left hand, & he shal not haue enough

Euery man shall eate the flesh of his owne arme. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, & Ephra im Manasses, and they both shall eate Iuda.
After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still.

Chapter.

¶ He threatneth the oppressions of the poore, and mercurieth against Achanazib.

Come vnto them & make vnygteous lawes, and deuple thynges: whiche be to hard for to kepe wher tho: othe the poore are oppresed on euery syde, & the innocences of my people robbed of iudgemente: that wyddowes maye be they: priue, and that they maye robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visytacion, & when destruccyon shall come fro farre: To whom wil ye runne for helpe: and to whom wyll ye geue youre honoure, that he may kepe it: that when I withdraue my hande, ye come not amonge the pylsoners, o: ye among the dead: After al this doth not the wrath of y Lord cease. but yet is he stretched out his 75 Woe be also unto Alur, which is a Staff of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punishment. I shall sende hym amonge those hypocritical people, amonge the people that haue defiled my dwelling: shall I sende hym, that he may venterly robbe the, spoyle them, & tread them downe, lyke the myse in the strete. Howebeit his meaneinge is not so, neyther thynketh his heart on this fallow. But he ymagineth on lyfe, howe he maye rote out and destroye muche people, for he sayth: are not my princes all kinges: Is not Calno as easie to wynde as Charhamis: Is it harder to conquer Hamath then Arphad: Or is it lyghter to overcome Damascus, then Samaria: As who say: I were able to wynde the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes: but not Ierusalem, and Samaria. Shall I not doe vnto Ierusalem and their ymages, as I did vnto Samaria & their ydols

Wherfore the Lorde saith: Alas as I haue performed my hole worke vpon þe ppl of Sy-on & Ierusalem, then wll I vsset the noble & stout part of þe king of Assyria with his proude lokes. For he standeth thus in his owne conceit Thys doo I thow the power of myne owne hande, and thow me my wysdome. For I am wylle: I am de yremoueth the landes of þe people, I robbe the; treasures: and (lyke one of þe worthies) I drine them from the; bye seates.
My hande hath founde out the strengthe of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges that were layed here & there, are gathered together So doo I gather all countreys. And there is no man that dare be so bolde, as to touche a fether that dare open his mouth, or ones whisper.

Shal the are boost it selfe agaynst him that he werth therewith: or doth the lawe make anye blyagginge agaynst hym that ruleth it: That weren euen lyke, as if the roddid exalte it selfe a-gaynst hym that beareth it: or as though the staffe shuld magnifie it selfe, as who say: it wer no wood. Therfore shall þe Lord of hostes send hym amonge his satyrpuges, leaneesse, and burne vp his glozp, as it werd a fyre. But the lycht of Israell shall be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shall be the flame, and it shall kindle and burne vp bys choznes and bycers in one daye: yea, all the glozp of hys woodes and felde shalbe co-sumed with body and soule. And they shal be as an hoste of men whose standerd beare sayltes The trees also of the felde which remaine, shal be of such a nombre, þa chyld may tell them.

After that daye that the remnaunt of Israel and such as are escaped out of the house of Jacob seeke no more comforte at hym that smote them but with saythfulnesse & truthe shall they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remaunt, euen if posteritie of Jacob shall conuer-te vnto God & myghte one. For though the people (O Israel) be as the sande of the sea, yet shall the remnaunt of them conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that sheweth in righte-ousnesse, and therefore the Lorde of hostes shall perfectly fulfill the thyng that he hath deter-mynd in it, in yddell of the hole worlde. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Thou

the Prophecie.

If my people, that dwelleth in Syon, be not afraid, for the kynge of the Assyrians: he shall smite the wyth a rod, and shall wagge his staffe at þe as the Egyptians dyd some tyme: But soone after shall my wyth and myne indignacion be fulfilled in the destruction of them.

Howeuer, the Lord of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Hadian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lyfte vp his rod ouer the sea, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulers, & his yoke from thy necke: yea, the same yoke shall be corrupt for verie fatnesse. He shall come to Iah, and goo thowre towarde Hygron: at Wichmas shall he lay vp his harnesse, and go ouer the foorde.

Sibea shall be their resting place: Ramath shall be afayed: Sibea Hauke shall flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallin) shall be heard vnto Laps and to Anothoth, which also shall be in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but petyres of Gabin are many, yet shall he remayne at Rob þe daye. After that shall he lyfte vp his hande agaynst the mount of the daughter syon, the hyll of Ierusalem. But se, the Lord God of hostes shall take a waie the proude from thence with feare: he shall betwe downe the proude, and fell þe hye mynded. The bushes also of the wode shall be roote oute wyth yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

The. xi. Chapter.

The prophesie of the natyryte of Chryste, and of his people of the remanent of Israel, and of the sayng of the weathen at Gentyes.

Ad there shall come a rod forth of þe kyned of Iah, and a blossom shall flourish out of his rote. The spiryte of the Lord shall lyght vpon hym: the spiryte of wysdom and vnderstandyng, the spiryte of counsaile and strenght, the spiryte of knowlage, and of the feare of the Lord, & shall make him seruent in þe feare of god. For he shall not geue sentence, after þe thyng that shall be brought befoze his eyes, neither reþeue a matter at the fyrst hearing, but w right trouthe shall be iudge the poore, and with holynesse shall he reforme the simple of þe worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the rodde of his mouth, and wyth the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Rygheousnesse shall be the gyde of his loynes: truth and saythfulness, the gyding vp of his rapnes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe: and the Leopard shall ly downe by the goate. Bullocks, Lyons and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them.

The howe & the beare shall fede together, & their yong ones shall lie together. The Lid shall eate strawe lyke the oxe, & þe howe. The chyld whyle he sucketh shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the cockatrice denne. No man shall do euil vnto another, no man shall destroy another, in all the daye of my holynesse. For the earth shall be full of the knowlage of the Lord even as the sea floweth ouer with water.

And in that day shall the Gentyes enquire after the roote of Jesse whiche shall be set vp for a token vnto the people, and his dwelling shall be glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lord take in hande agayne, to conquere þe remanent of his people (whiche shall be sette aliv) from the Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Moabans, Elampres, Caldees, Antiochyans: and from the Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token among the Gentyes, and gather together the disperid of Israel: yea, and the outcastes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde.

The hatred of Ephraim also & enemyes of Iuda shall be cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare none euell wyll to Iuda, & Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lyve vpon the shoulers of the Philistines toward þe west, and spoye them together that dwell toward þe East. The Dymyres and the Moabites shall be obedient vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleane the tonges of þe Egyptians sea, and with a mighty wynd shall he lyfte vp his hande ouer Filus, & shall smite his leuen streames, and make men go ouer drye God. And thus shall there be a way for his people that remaneth from the Assyrians, lyke as it happed to the Israelites what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypte.

The. xii. Chapter.

The songe of the church for the obeying of the victorie and ouercomynge of the worlde.

So that then þe shall saye: O Lord I shall thank the, for thou wast displeased at me: but restayne thou from thy wyth, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacion in whiche I wyl truste, & not be afayed. For þe Lord God is my strenght and my songe, he also is become my saluacion.

Therefore with ioye shall ye draue water out of the welles of the sauoure, and then shall ye saye: geue thanks vnto þe Lord, cal vpon his name, declare his counsailes amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng praises vnto the Lord, for he hath done great thynges, as it is known in all the worlde. Crye out, and syng thou þe dwellest in Syon: for great is the holy one of Israel in the myddest of the.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Babylon is the dray burthen of Baby- lon, whiche Elap þe sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyfte vp the baner vpon the hye hyll, call vnto theim, holde vp your hande, that the prynces maye go in at the doze. I haue sent for my deputies & my gyauntes (sayth the Lord) whiche shall execute wyth: I wyl call for suche as triumphe in my gloire. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, a rushing as though the kyngdomes of the nacionys came together. (And the Lord of hostes mustered musteth bys armye to battayle. ) They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Curn the Lorde byn selfe wth the mynystrs of bys wjath, to destroye shole lande. Wourne ye, for the day of the Lorde is at hande and shal come as a destroyer from the almighty. Therfore shal all handes be letten downe & all mens hertes shal melt away. they shal stand in feare carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them and they shal haue payne, as a woman travaileth with chyld. One shal be abashed of an other, & theys faces shal burne lyke the flame of fyre. Beholde, the daye of the Lorde shal come terribly, and full of indignacion, furoure, and wjath to make the lande waste, & to roote oute the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heuen shal not geue theys lycht, & sunne shal be darkened in the tpyngye, and the moone shal not shyne wth his lycht. And I wyl punyssh the wyckednesse of the woylde, and synners of the vngodly, sayth the Lorde.

C The bye stomaches of the proude wyl I take away, and wyl laye downe the boastyng of tyn rauntes. I wyl make a man deareer then syne golde, and a man to be moze worth then a golden wedde of Ophyr. Therefore I wyl make the heauen, and the earth shal remoue out of her place: in the wjath of the Lorde of hostes, and in the day of his fearful indignacion. And Babylon shal be as an hunted or chased doo, and as a shepe that no man taketh vp. Every man shal turne to his owne people, and theye eche one into bys owne lande. Whoso is found alone, shal be shot shorowe. And whoso gather together shal be destroyed with the swerde.

The Arabians shal ppyche no tentes there neyther shal the shepherdes make theys foldes there any moze: but fearfull wylde bestes shal lye ther, & the houses shal be full of great owles. Estreches shal dwel there, & apes shal daunce there, wylde catteres shal crye in the palaces, and dragons shal be in sh pleasaunte houses. And as for Babylons time it is hande, & her dayes shal not be prolonged.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The manner of the people from captiuitie. The prophesye of the people of God, and affliction of theys enemyes. The wycked of Babylon.

B At the Lorde wyl be mercifull vnto Jacob, and wyl yet chose Israell agayne, and set them in theys owne lande. Strangers shal cleane vnto them, & get them to sh house of Jacob. The people shal take the & carry the dome to their owne lande. And make them to inherite the house of Israell in the lande of sh Lorde, that they myght be seruauntes & handmaydens of the Lorde. They shal take those ppysoners whose captiues they had ben afore and rule those that had opprelled them. When the Lorde now shal byynge the to rest fro the trauaile, scare, & hard bondage, that sh wyl laden wth shal, then shal thou vye theys mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: how happeneth it that sh opprel- four leaueth of? Is the golden tpybute come to an ende? The Lorde hath broken the sceptre of sh vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which whil he is wroth smyteth the people wth conynual strokes, & tyjanously raggeth ouer sh hea- then whom he persecuted without compassyon. And therefore the whole woylde is now at rest and quyetnesse: and men syng for ioye.

Pea, euen the Kyre trees & Cedres of Lybanus, reioyle at the fall, sayng: Now that thou art layde downe, there come no moe vnto he we do tyme vs. Hell also bendeth trembleth to mete the at thy conyng, and for thy sake hath ray sed his deed, & all myghtye men and pynces of the earth. All kynges of the earth stand vp fro their seates, & they may al answer, and speake vnto the Arte thou become weakke also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pyde is layd downe into the pyt, and so is sh melody of thy instrumentes. Woymes be layd vnder the, & woymes be thy courtynge.

Howe art thou fallen from heauen? Lucifer thou saye mozyngge chyld: howe hast sh gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & art become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thine hert: I wyl clyme vp into heauen, & exalt my thorne aboue, besyde the starres of God. I wyl lyt also vpon the holly mount toward sh North. I wyl clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wyl be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seke the shal narrowly loke vpon the & thinke in the selues, sayng: Is this the man sh broughte all landes in feare, and made sh kyngdomes a feap? Is this he sh made the woylde in a maner waste, and layd the cyties to the grounde, whiche let not his ppysoners go out?

The kynges of the nacjons lye euery one in bys owne house wth wozyngge, and thou art caste out of the graue lyke a fylthy abhominable braynche: lyke as deade mens raymente that are shot shorowe with the swerde and go downe to the stoness of the depe: as a deed corse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried wth sh. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande, & destroyed thy people. The generation of the wycked shal be without honour for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroye theys chyldren, that be in theys fathers wyckednesse that they come not vp agayne to possesse the land, & fyll the woylde full of enemyes.

I wyl stande vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) & root out the name and remnaunte, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon, (sayeth

The Propheeye.

(sayth the Lorde) and wyl geue it to the Oeters, & wyl make water puddles of it. And I wyl swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oth saying: Je shal come to passe as I haue determyned, & shal be fulfyl-led as I haue dreuyed. So that Assyria shal I destroie in my lande, & vpon my mountaynes wyl I treade hym vnder foot. Wherfore we hys folk shal come from them and his burthen shalbe take fro their shulders. This deuple hath God taken thowoe the whole world, & this is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determyne a thyng: who is hable to dysanull it: And yf he stretch forth hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

E The same yere that kynge Ihas dyed, God threatened on thys maner: Retorse not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of hym that beatech the is broken: for oute of the serpentis roote there shal come an adder, & the frute shal-be a fyre styng woyme. But the fyrst boyme of the pooze shal be fed, & the symple shal dwell in safety. Thy roote also wyl I destroy wth hynge, and it shal slay thy remnaunt. Mourne & wepe, wepe thou cyrie, for: O whole lande of Palesti-na) thou arte layed waste, for there shal come from the north a smoke & not one alone maye abide in hys place. Who shal then answer the messenger of the Gentyles? For yf Lorde hath stablished Syon, and the pooze of his people yf be therein, do put theyr truste in hym.

A prophete agaynst Moab.

This is yf heuy burthen vpon Moab voyce shalbe herde vnto Jahaz. The worthies also of Moab shal bleate oute, and crye for very sozow of theyr myndes: Alas shal my bert be for Moabs sake. They shal lye vnto the cy-tie of Zoar which is lyke a faire yonge bulloche of thys yere olde, for they shal al go vnto Luth wepyng. Euen so by the waye towardes Hozon-aim they shal make lamentacion for their vt-ter destruccyon. For yf waters of Rimmon shal be dried vp, by reason wherof the grasse is wi-thied, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the resydue that he hath done, they are sozow. As for theyr substance, the enemyes haue caried them to the brooke of the wyllo-wes. For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Ber Elvay was there nothing but mourning, because yf waters of Dimon wer ful of blood for yf Lord shal send more blood vnto Dimon, & Liba vnto yf remnaunt of yf land, & on them yf are escaped from Moab.

The xvi Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Moab.

Ende the Lorde of the world a lambe from the roche that lyeth towardes the deserte, vnto the byll of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a tremblng byde that is put out of harurst. For they shal carpe them vnto Arnon: Gather your counsaill, come together in iudgement, couer vs with your shadow in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde yf cha-ced, and betwaxe not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwel amonge you. Moab be thou theyr refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to naught, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the lande And in merce shal the seate be prepared, & he shal lye vpon it in the crutch in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgyng and sekynge iudgemente, and makynge haste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of yf pride of Moab, he is very proude presumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignacy on and vayne are his lyes. Therfore shal Moab make lamentacion because of yf Moabites, (that shalbe slayne) yea, they shal wepe all together. Because of the foundations of yf cytye yf is made of bycke, shal ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde.

For the vines of Helbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of yf heathen haue broken downe her pyncepal bryanches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, the yf wente on wandrynge vnto the wylbernesse. Her goodlye bryanches were thowen downe as they went ouer the sea. Therfore wyl I moune for Jazer and for yf vyne of Sibna. I wyl pouer my teares vpon the, O Helbon and Eleale, for yf crye of thyn enemyes is fallen vpon thy somer fru-tes, and vpon thy harurst. The myrd and chere is taken a waye out of yf plente full felde, and in the vyneyardes, there shalbe no soye nor glad-nesse. The treader shal treade oute no wyne in the presses, the longe of theyr merce chere haue I laid downe. Wherfore, my bowels shal com-ble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and mine inwarde partes, for the cyties sake that is made of bycke. And it shal come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shalbe made verrey of his byl chapels, he shal come to his temple to pray but he shal not be hable. So then, thys is the sayng that the Lorde hath spoken concernyng Moab, syng that tyme. But now the Lorde hath spoken, sayng: In thys yere, whiche shal be as the yeres of an hyed seruaunte, shal the glozy of Moab be turned into confusyon, tho-rowe oute all hys myltitude, whiche is verrey great. And that whiche remayneth, shalbe very small and feeble.

The xvii Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Damascus.

This is the dry burthe vpon Damascus: beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be nomoz a cytye, but shalbe a heape of broken stones. The waste cytyes

copies of Arore shall be sold for cattell, which shall be there, and there shall be none to fraie the awaye. Ephraim also shall no more be strong, and Damascus shall no more be a hyngdome, and the remnant of Siria shall be as the glory of the chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lord of hostes. And in that daye it shall come to passe, that Jacob shall be made very poore, and the fatnesse of his fleshe shall waie leane. And he shall be as one that gathereth up coine in harvest, even lyke hym whose name is a peth the eares of coine. He shall be also lyke him that gathereth eares of coine in the valley of Rephaim. Some gathering in dede shall there be left in it, such as in the halpyng of an Oleue tree, there remaine two or thre berpes in the top of the vitermost bowe, and foure or fyue in the brode fruteful braches thereof: sayeth the Lord God of Israel.

Then shall man turne agayne to his maker and his eyes shall haue respect to the holy one of Israel. As for the altiers which are his owne hande worke, he shall not regard them, and the thynge that his fingers haue made (as groves and ymagines) those shall he not cast his eye vnto. In that daye shall they strong cyties be as the forsaken shrubbes & bryanches, whiche they left: because of the chyldren of Israel: and the land shall be desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, & hast not ben mindful of thy strong rock: therefore shalt thou set pleasant planties, and shalt graffe the bryanche of another mannes vine. In that daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe & early in the morning shalt thou make thy seede to sprout. The harvest shall be gone in the day of enheritaunce and there shall be sorow without hope of comfort.

Woe shall be to the multitude of much people, whiche shall make a sounde lyke the noyse of the sea. And the violence of the nations, whiche shall rage lyke the rushing in of many waters: Eue lyke many waters shall the people rage. God shall rebuke hym, and he shall flye farre of. He shall be chased awaye lyke as drie strawe vpon the mountaynes befoze the wynde: and lyke a thynge that turneth befoze the bozme. It euen be hold, there is trouble: & of euer it be morning lo he is gone. This is the porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that proboe vs.

The xviii. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Egypt.

That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of winges, & lande whiche is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: sendynge messengers by the sea, euen in vessels of rebes ouer the water. Sette you hence (ye speyde messengers) to a nacyon that is scatred abrood, and robbed of that they had, a fearfull people frome they begynnynge hether to: a nacyon troden downe by litle & litle, whose land & floudes haue spoyled. All ye inhabitours of the woide and in dwellers of the earth, looke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and herken when he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lord sayde vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest, & loke upon the matter in my habitacon, lyke a faire man that sitteth the rayne: and lyke a cloude of dede in the heate of harveste.

For afore the harvest when the bryanche is growen, there shall come rype frute oute of the floure: and he shall cut downe the increase with spydes, and the bryanches shall be take awaye with hookes: Thus shall they be left together vnto the foules of the mountaynes & to the bestes of the earth: for in summer the byrdes shall remaine vpon it, and euery beast of the land shall be vpon it in the winter. In that tyme shall there a present be brought vnto the Lord of hostes euen a people that is scatred abrood, and robbed of that they had, that same people whiche haue bene fearfull frome they begynnynge hether to, a nacyon troden downe by litle and litle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: to the place of the name of the Lord of hostes, euen to the mounte Syon.

The ix. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Egypt.

He heuy burthe of Egypt: Beholde the Lord rideth vpon a swift cloud & shall come into Egypt, & the ydols of Egypt shall treble at the presence of hym, and the best of Egypt shall quake in the midst of her. And I will set the Egyptians one agaynst another, so that one brother shall fyght against another, and one neighbour agaynst another, cite agaynst cite: and realme agaynst realme. The mynde also of Egypt shall be cleane wout counsaill within it self, and the deuyce that they take will I destroy, so that they shall seeke counsaill at ydols, & at soothsayers at workers with spyrites and at soothsayers. And the Egyptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a maruailous cruel lord, & a mighty hyng, shall haue dominion ouer the, sayeth the Lord God of hostes, the waters of the sea shall fayle, and the ryuer shall decrease, and be dryed vp. The waters shall be drawen out: the ryuers of Egypt shall be emptyed and dryed vp, the reedes and flagges shall be cut downe.

The graffe in the riuer & by the riuers banke and all that groweth by the riuer shall whither awaye, and be brought to nought. The fyshers also shall mourne, & all they that cast angle in to the water, shall make lamentacion, & they shall laye forth they net beside the waters shall be rooted out. The reuer, they that worke in flax and make fyne wothes, shall be confounded: and so shall they that weue open wothes. For they open wothes shall be euen destroyed, and all they that make yondes and stues for fysh shall come to nought.

But ye foolyshe princes of ioan, ye wise counsailers of Pharao, whose wit is turned to foolyshe, how say ye vnto Pharao, I am come of wyse men, and of auncient hynges: Where are now the wyse men? Let the sel the (if they can) what the Lord of hostes hath deuyced vpon Egypt.

The princes of ioan are become foolyshe, & princes of Aioh are disceyued, they haue disceyued

As Egypt

The Prophecye.

Egypt, even they that were taken for the chyldren thereof. In the myddes of it hath the Lord poured the spirit of wickednesse: and they have despised Egypt in every worke thereof, cut as a drunken man stachereth in his vomite. Neither shall the heere of taylor, the bracelet of rebe be bable to do any worke in Egypt. In that day shall Egypt be lyke unto women: It shall be afrayde and stande in feare at the motion of the hand of the Lord of hostes, whiche he shal herby ouer it.
And Egypt shall be afrayed of the land of Iuda so that cury one which maketh mencyon of it, shall be afrayed therat because of the counsaile of the Lord of hostes whiche he deuyled for it.

In that daye shall syue cities in the lande of Egypt speake the language of Canaan, & sweare by the Lord of hostes: the cite of desolacion shall be called one of them. In the daye shall the tate of the Lord be in the myddes of the lande of Egypt, and this tyle besyde it: VNTO THE LORD And it shall be a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto the Lord, because of such as trouble them, and he shall sende them a sauoure, and a great man to deliuer them.

And the Lord shall be knowne in Egypt, & the Egyptians shall knowe the Lord in the daye, and doo sacrifice and oblation: yea, they shall bowe a bowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The Lord also shall smite Egypt soze, & heale them againe, and they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shall be increased of them, & shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye out of Egypt into Assyria, & Assyria shall come into Egypt: and Egypt into Assyria: so the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serue the Lord together. In that daye shall the nacyon of Israel be the thynde with Egypt and Assyria and they shall be blessed in the myddes of the land whiche lande the Lord of hostes hath blessed, sayng: blessed is my people of Egypt: Assur al so is the worke of myne handes: and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

The xx. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypt and Ethiopia.

In the yere that Tharthan came vnto Aldob (when Sargon the kyng of Assyria had sente hym) and had fought agaynst Aldob, and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hande of Elape the sonne of Amos, say-ng: So, and take of the sacke clothe from thy loynes, and put of thy shooes thy fote. And he doo so, walkyng naked and barefote.

And the Lord sayd: like as my seruant E-lape hath walked naked & barefote for a signe and wonder the yeres vpon Egypte: and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kyng of Assyria take away out of Egypt & out of Ethiopia, chyldren and olde men, naked and barefote, in their loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypt.

They shall be broughte in feare also, and a-named one of another: Ethioppe of Egypte & Egypt of Ethiopia, consydering what glorie they were in afoze. And they that dwell in the same shal, shall saye in that day: Behold, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we fle for helpe that we maye be deliuered from the kyng of Assyria? And howe shall we escape.

The xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babylon, Thumme, and Arabia.

The burthen of the waste sea: Euen I as the storme wetter that passeth thorow at the none daye, to come from the wilderness, from that horrible lande. A greuous vylis was shewed vnto me: Let one discreffull offender come agaynst another, & one destroyer against another. Up Elam, laye siege to Media, all they: grompyng haue I layde downe. Therfore are my loynes fylled w sorrow: heynesse hath taken holde vpon me as the panges of a womā that is trauaplyng: It made me stoupe when I herde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My heart panted, fearfulness came vpon me. The nyght of the voluptuousnesse hath be turned a-gaynst me into feare. While they garnished the table, the watchman looked: And while he was eatyng and drinkyng: it was sayde vpon ye captaynes take you to your shylde. For thus hath the Lord sayd vnto me: Go, & set a watchman, to tel what he seeth. And he sawe a charret which ii. horsemen sat vpon, w the carpage of an asse and the carpage of a camel. So he looked, & toke verydiligent hede. And the lyon cried, & the stande wayting all the hole day, & am appoynted to kepe my watch euery nyght. And behold here cometh a charret of men, with two horsemen And he answered, and sayd, Babylon is fallen it is fallen: & all the ymages of her goddes hath be smitten downe vnto the ground. Thou art be whom I must thye, and thou belondest to my coyne dooze. Thus that I hearde of the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Desir: Watchman what hast thou espied by nyght? Watchman what hast thou espied by nyght? The watchman sayde: The moyn-nyng cometh, and so doeth the nyght. If ye will aske anye questyon, then aske it: retorne, and come agayne.

The burthen concerning Arabia: In the pleasaunt ground of Arabia shall ye tary all nyght euen in the stretes of Dedan. The inhabytours of the lande of Tema broughte forth the water to him that was thirsty, they presented hym with theyr breade that was fled a waye.
For because of swarthes are they become fugi-tyue, euen for the drawen swerde, & for the bent bowe, and because of the greuousnesse of warre For thus hath the Lord sayde vnto me.
There is yet a yere accordyng to the yeres of an hyed seruant and all the glorie of Cedar shall faile. And the nombre of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be minyshed by the mighty chyldren of Cedar: for so the Lord God of Israel hath spoken.

The xxii. Chapter.

Agaynst the kyng of Ierusalem.

The

The burthen of the valley of visyon.
What haste thou to doo here, & thou climest vnto y<sup>e</sup> house toppes: Thou art full of occupynge, thou seducyous and proude cytie: thy slayne meyne are neyther put to deathe wth swerde: nor deade in battayle. All thy captaynes are fugityue together, the archers haue taken theim prysonniers.
All they that are founde in the, are in captiui-tie together, because they fledde farre of. Ther-foze sayde I: let me alone, and I wyl make la-mentacion. Ye shal not be hable to comfort me because of the destruccion of y<sup>e</sup> daughter of my people. For this is a daye of trouble, of ruine, & of destruccion that the Lord wyl bring to passe in the valley of visyon, breakyng downe y<sup>e</sup> cy-tie, and cryng vnto the mountaynes.

Belam beate y<sup>e</sup> quiner with a charret of foteme and of horsemen, the cite of Egipt: shewed y<sup>e</sup> child open. Thy chiefe valley also was full of charre-tes, & the horsemen set theyr faces dyrectlye to-warde the gate. And in that daye dyde the enemy take awaye the bewte of Iuda: and then dyd-dest thou loke toward the armour of the house of the forest. Ye haue sene also y<sup>e</sup> broken places of the cytie of Dauid, howe that they are many & ye gathered together the waters of y<sup>e</sup> lower pooles. As for y<sup>e</sup> houses of Ierusalem, ye haue no-bied theim, & the houses haue ye broken downe to make the wall stronge. A pytte also haue ye made betwene y<sup>e</sup> two walles, for y<sup>e</sup> waters of y<sup>e</sup> olde pooles & haue not regarded y<sup>e</sup> maker therof neither had respect vnto hym y<sup>e</sup> toke it in hande.

C And in that daye dyd the Lord God of hostes call men vnto weeping and mournyng, to baldnesse and gyrdyng about with sackcloth. And beholde, they haue ioye and gladnesse, slaynge oren & kylling theyr, eatynge fleshe, and drynkyng wyne. * Let vs cate & drynke, for to mo-rowe we shal dye. And it came to the eares of y<sup>e</sup> Lord of hostes: This iniquitye shal not be pour-ged from you tyll ye dye, sayeth the Lord God of hostes. Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: So get the into poudre treasurer, euen vnto y<sup>e</sup> Seba, whiche is y<sup>e</sup> ruler of y<sup>e</sup> house. What hast thou to do here, and whom hast thou here? that thou shuldest here be we y<sup>e</sup> out a sepulchre as it wer one that beweth hym out a sepulchre on hye, or that graueth an habitacyon for hym selve in an hard roche.

D Beholde, O thou man, the Lord shal cary the awaye into captiuietye, and shal surely co-ure the wth confusyon. The Lord shal turne the ouer lyke a bal to his handes. (and shal sende the) into a farre countrie. There shalt thou die, and there (in steade of the charrettes of thy pompe) shal y<sup>e</sup> house of thy Lord haue confusyon: I wil drysse the from thy place, & out of thy dwelling shal be ouerthrowe the. And in that daye shal I call my seruante Eliakim the sonne of Ichi-hia. And with thy garmentes wyl I cloth him and with thy gyrdle wyl I strengthe hym: thy power also wyl I comyt into his hande, and he shal be a father of such as dwel in Ierusalem, & in the house of Iuda.

In the keye of the house of Dauid wyl I late vpon his shoulder, so that he shal open and no man shal shut: he shal shut, and no man shal open. And I wyl faste hym as a napele in a sure place, and he shal be the gloriouse seate of his fathers house. Moreover, all generacions and posterities shal hange vpon hym all the glorie of theyr fathers house, all vessels both grete & small, & all instrumentes of measure & masure.
In that daye (sayeth the Lord of hostes) shal the napele that is fastened in the sure place, departe, be broken, and fall: and the burthen that was vpon it, shal be pluckt awaye, for so y<sup>e</sup> Lord hathe spoken.

The xliij Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Tyre, and a psonyph that is shewed agayns.

The burthen of Tyre: Mourn ye whippes of Charlis, for ther cometh such destruccion, y<sup>e</sup> pe shal not haue an house to stre into: Out of y<sup>e</sup> land of Citi haue they knowlage of this plage. Be still ye y<sup>e</sup> dwell in the yle, y<sup>e</sup> marchantes of zidon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made y<sup>e</sup> plenteous. The cozne y<sup>e</sup> groweth by the great waters of Eilus, and the frutes of the ri-uer were her vitayles, so that it became a commen mart of the nations, Be ashamed thou zidon, for the see (euen y<sup>e</sup> strengthe of the see) hath spoken, sayinge: I haue not trauayled nor brought forth chyldren, nor nourished vp yonge men or brought vp virgyns.

When tidynge cometh to the Egyptians they shal be soze for the rumoure that goeth of Tyre. Set you to Charlis, mourn ye y<sup>e</sup> dwell in the yle. Is not this that gloriouse Cite of yours, whiche hath bene of old antiquyte: her owne fete shal carpe her forth to be a sojourner into a farre country. Who hath deuised this agayns the Tyre (y<sup>e</sup> geneth garlandes vnto other citties) whose marchantes are princes: & whose captaynes are honourable in the world. Euen the Lord of hostes hathe deuyled this, to put downe the pride of all such as be gloriouse, and to minishe all them y<sup>e</sup> be proude vpon earthe.
Get the oute of the lande vnto the daughter of Charlis: sayng thou hast nomoze strengthe.

He that smote the kingdomes together, holdeth out his hand ouer the see: euen y<sup>e</sup> Lord hym self hath geuen a commaundment agayns the same comen place of marchaundise, that they shal utterly destrope the myghte therof. And he sayde: Make nomoze thy bolle (O virgyn y<sup>e</sup> daughter zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: Up, get the ouer vnto Citi, where neuer the-lesse, thou shalt haue no rest. Beholde, this people come not of y<sup>e</sup> Caldees: but Assur made the strong to great whippes. They set up y<sup>e</sup> stronge holdes therof, and destroyed his places: and he broughte it in decaye. Mourn, ye whippes of Charlis for your strengthis brought downe.

And in that daye shal Tyre be soz gotten seuenty yeres (according to y<sup>e</sup> yeres of one kyng) and after y<sup>e</sup> ende of the seventy yeres shal Tyre synge as doeth an harlot. Take an harpe, and sing.

The Prophecie.

go about the citie: thou shalt see that thou shalt see gotten make sweete melodye, synge mo songes that thou mayst be had in remembrance. And after the ende of the seventy yeres that the Lord visite Tyre and she shall conuerse vnto her re-warde, and shall comyt fornicacyon with all the kingdomes of the earth that are in the world.

Their occupying also and their reward shall be holy vnto the Lord. Their gaires shall not be layed vp nor kepte in stoope, but it shall be theirs that dwell before the Lord, that they may eate ynough, and haue clothynge sufficient.

¶ The .xxiii. Chapter.

All prophesies of tribulation to come vpon the world because of synne.

BEholde, the Lord maketh the earth vast and empty: he turneth it vpsyde downe, & scattereth abroad the inhabitours thereof: And the people shall be as the people: and the master as the seruant: the maistresse like the mayde: the seller like the bier: he that lenderth vnto vsurye, like him that borroweth vnto vsurye: the creditor as the better. The world shall be cleane wasted & veterly spoiled, for so the Lord hath spoken. The earth is soyle, & consumeth away: the world is fe-ble & perissheth, the proud people of the earth are come to naught. The earth also is become unprofitable vnder the inhabitours thereof, which haue transgressed the lawes, chaunged the ordinances, broken the everlastynge covenante.

Therfore hath the curse consumed the earth, & they that dwell therein, are fallē into trespasse.
Wherfore the inhabitours of the earth are perished with drought, & few men are left behynde.
The wine faileth: the vine hath no myght, al they that haue bene merie of heretofore are come to mour-nyng. The mirth of tabrettes is layed downe, the noise of such as haue made merie, is ceased: the ioye at the harpe is at an ende. They shall dryncke no more wine w mirth, stronge dryncke shall be bitter to them that dryncke it. The citie of vanitie is broken downe, every house is shut vp, that no man may come in. In the stretes is there a cryng because of wyne, all chere is vanished away, the mirth of the world is gone: in the citie is left desolacion, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

For in the middes of the world, euen among the people, it shall come to passe, as at the washynge of Olives: and as the grappes are when the vineharuest is done. They shall lyft vp their voice, & make a merie noise: and in magnifyng of the Lord, shall they crye out of the well. Wherfore praise ye the Lord in the vailles, euen the name of the Lord God of Israel, in the Isles of the see. For the uttermost parte of the earth haue we herde praises & mirth, because of the righteous. And I saide: I knowe a thyng in secret: woe is me, the transgressours haue offended: the transgressours haue greuously offended. Neare fulne the pit, and the snare are vpon the, O thou that dwellest on the crathe. It will come to passe, & whosoener escapeth the fearful noise, shall fall into the pit. And he that cometh by out of the pit, shall be taken with the snare.

For the windowes from on hyght are open, & the foundations of the earth are moued.

The earth is utterly broken downe, the earth hath a soze entne, the earth quaketh excedyngly. The earth shall reile to and fro, like a dron-kerde: & shall be remoued lyke a tent (of our synnes) and the iniquite thereof shall be deuyd vpon it. It shall fall, and not ryse vp againe. And in that dape shall the Lord visite the booke aboue that is on hye, & the hynges of the world are vpon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, & they that be in prison: and they shall be shut vp in ward, & after many dayes shall they be visited. * The moone shall be abashed, & the sunne shamed when the Lord of hostes shall ragne in mount Sion in Ierusalem w wynde, and in the syght of such as shall be of his counsell.

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

A thanksgyng to God for his workes.

Thou art the Lord my God, I will magnifie the, I will geue thanks vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wonderfull thynges to passe, accor-dyng to thine olde counsels truelye & faithfully. * Thou hast made of a cite a drap of stoncs and brought a strong towne into de-scape. The habitacion of strangers hast thou made to be no cite, neither shall it be builded any more.
Therfore shall the mightie people geue gloze vnto the, the citie of the valeunt heath shall fear the. For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore, & a succour for the nedy in his trouble. A refuge against euill wether, a shadowe against the heate. For the blaste of ragynge men is lyke a flood that casteth downe the wall.

Like as thou bringest heat downe out of a hye place: so shalt thou suppress the noise of aliares.
The heat is in the shadowe of the cloude: the bray-che of the mightie shall be brought lowe. And in this mountaine shall the Lord of hostes make vnto al people a feast of plenteous & delicate thynges, eue of moost pleasur & deint dishes. And in this mountaine shall the Lord destroye the cou-ring, & all people are wrapped in, & the bagyn-g that is spread vnto al nations. * As for death he hath destroyed it for euer. * And the Lord God shall wipe away teares from all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away out of all the earth. For so the Lord hath sayde.

And in the day it shall be said: Lo this is our God, we haue wayted for him, & he shall saue vs.
This is the Lord in whome we haue hoped, we will be merie & reioyse in the saluacion that cometh of him. For in this mountaine shall the Lord have of the stronge & shall be treshed vnder him, eue as strawe is treshed vnto the ground. And he shall stretch out his hand in the myddes of the (as he swymmeth, casteth out his handes to swimme) & w the strength of his handes shall he byng downe their pynde. The strong holde also & defence of thy walles shall be ouerthrowe & cast downe & brought them to the grounde, euen vnto dust.

A songe

that violently beareth downe all thynges. The crowne of the pride of the dyonchen <sup>chap. 11</sup> shall be troden under foote: * so p the floure of his sapience and be wyte, whyche is in the deade of the vallete of forties, shall seade a way, as doth an vntymelye rype syg asofoe harueste. Which whā a man speeth, he lokeh vpon it, & while it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In that daye shall the Lozde of hostes be the crowne of glasse, & dyamonde of bewtie vnto p residue of his people. He wyll be also a spiryte of perfect knowledge to him p syteth in iudgement, & strenght vnto the that turne a way the battel to the gate of the enemies. But they are out of the way by reason of wyne: pee, farre out of the waye are they thozow strong dyonche.

C For they that be luche muste haue after one lesson, another lesson: * after one commaundment, another commaundment, after one rule another rule, after one instruction, another instruction: there a litle & there a lytle. For he that spaketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rude nesse of spech, and a straunge language. If any man saie vnto them: lo, this is the reste where with ye maye ease him that is werpe, this is p refecthyng, they wyll not herken. * Therfoze, the woarde of the Lozde (lesson vpon lesson, commaundment vpon commaundment, rule vpon rule, instruction vpon instruction, there a lytle and there a lytle) shall be vnto them an occasion of stromblyng that they may go on, & fall backward, be bysied, tangled and snared.

D Therfoze, heare the woarde of the Lozde ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people, which is at Jerusale. Because ye haue sayde, we haue made a couenaunt with deathe, and with hell are we at agrement. And though there go forth a soze plage, it shall not come vnto vs: For we haue made saluode our refuge, & vnder vanite are we byd: Therfoze sayeth the Lozde God: Behold, I lay in Sion for a foundacio a stone eue a tryed stone, a picious corner stone, a sure foundation. Whoso beleueth, let him not be to basse. Iudgement also wyll I laye to the rule and rpydroufnes to the balaunce: so that the boyle shall take awaye your wayne confidence as a byrome, & the pzeup place of poure refuge shall the waters renne ouer.

E And thus the couenaunt that ye made with deathe, shall be dysanulled: and poure agremente that ye made with hell, shall not stande. Pee, whē the soze plage goth forth, ye shall be troden downe vnder it. From the time p it goth forth, it shall take you awaye. For earlye in the morninge curtye daye: pee, bothe daye and nyght shall it go thozowe: & when the noyse thereof is perceaued, it shall genzre veracion. For the bed is narrowe, and not large: and the couerpyng so small that a man cannot wynde him selfe vnder it. * For the Lozde shall stande as in mounte <sup>chap. 13</sup> Paralim, and shall be towarthlyke as in the valley * Sibeon, that he maye do his wothe, his straunge wothe, and bypnye to passe his acte, his straunge acte.

Nowe therfoze se that ye be no mockers, lesse p your punyshmet increase: for I haue heard of p Lozde of hostes, that there shall come a thozende vpo the whole earth. Heare ye then, & herken vnto my voyce, consyde and pondze my speche. Doeth not the husbandman plowe all the daye, & openeth and bykerth the clottes of his grounde, p he may sower when he hath made it playne, wyl be not spzedde abode the fytches, and sowe comin, and cast in whete by measure, and the appointed barley and rye in their place? God wyll instruct him to haue discrecion, euen his God wyll teach him. For fytches shall not be theshed with an harowe, nethe shall a cart whele be byoughte thozowe the compyn: but the fytches are beaten out with a staffe, and comin with a rod. But the se de that beead is made of, is theshed, though it be not alway a thesling. And the cart whele must be byoughte ouer it, lest he grinde it w his teth. This also cometh of the lozde of hostes, which wozyeth w wonderfull wylsom, & byingeth excellent wozyes to passe.

Chapter.

Unto the, O Ariel thou Citie p David dwelt in. So on frome year ungas to peare, & lette the lābes be flaine. I wyll lay sege vnto Ariel, so that there shall be deuynge & sozow in it, and it shall be vnto me euen an altier of slaughter. I wyll beslege the round about, & fygte agaynst the thozowe a bulwarcke, & wyll reate vpo dyches agaynst the. Thou shalt be brought downe, & shalt speake out of the grounde, & thy speach shall go lowe out of the dust. Thy voyce also shall come out of the grounde like p voyce of a witch: and thy talhyng shall whysper out of the dust. Moreover, the noyse of the strange enemies shall be like thynne dust, & the multitude of straunges shall be as byle strawe p cannot ta pte: euen sodenly & in hast shall their blasse go.

Thou shalt be visited of p Lozde of hostes w thozowe earthquake, & w a great noyse w sozome & tempest & with the flābe of a consuming fyre. And the multitude of al nacyon that fygte agaynst Ariel, shall be as a dreame sene by nyght: * eue so shall al they be, p make warre agaynst it, & stryde holden to ouercome it, & that lape anye sege vnto it, In conclusio, it shall be eue as wyl an hongry man dreameth that he is eatyng, & when he awaketh, his soule is emptye. Or as when a thyslyp man dreameth that he is dynhyng: and when he awaketh, he is yet saynt: & his soule hath apetyte. Euen so shall the multitude of al nacyon that fygte agaynst Sion pondze

Condemne these thynges once in poure myndes, and wondre. * Blynded are they them selues, & the blynde gupdes of oðer. They are blynded: but not w' wyne, they are vnkylable but not thowwe stronge bynke. For the Lozde hath couered pou w' a slomberynge spere, and hath closed poure eyes. Poure prophetes also & rulers & quid se, them hath be couered. * And the visio of all the prophetes is become vnto pou, as the woordes of a boke that is sealed vp, whiche men deliuer to one that is learned, sayng: Reade þ in it. And he sayeth: I ca not, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto hym that is not learned, sayng: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therfore thus hath the Lozde sayde: * For so muche as thys people, when they be in trouble, do honour me with theyr mouth and w' theyr lippes: but theyr herte is far fro me, & the feare whiche they haue vnto me, proceedeth of a commandeement þ is taught of men. Therfore wyl I do maruayls amonge thys people, euen maruolous thynges: I saye, and a wonder. * For the wylsome of theyr wylsome shal perishe, & the vnderstandyng of theyr wittie me shal hide it selfe.

W' vnto them þ heperth secret theyr thoughtes, to hyde theyr counsell from the Lozde and do theyr wothes in darknesse, sayng: * who seyth vs: & who knoweth vs: Doubtles, poure destruction is (in my handes) in reputacion as the potter's claye. And doth the wothe say of hym that made it, he made not me: And doth an earthe vessel saye of hym that fashioned it, he had no vnderstandyng: Is it not harde at hande, that Lybanus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shalbe taken as the wood: And in that daye shal deasse men beare the woordes of þ boke, and the eyes of the blynde shal se euen out of the cloude & out of darknes.

E The meke spere also shalbe mety in þ Lozde, and the poore amonge them that be lowly, shal reioyse in þ holpe one of Israel. For he that byd vpolence, is brought to naught, and þ scozefull man is consumed: and they rored oute that were hasty so sone to vnrightheousnes, makynge a mā to synne in the word, & that toke hym in a snare whiche reproued them in the ope place: and they that haue turned the cause of the rightheous to naught. Therfore thus sayth the Lozde vnto þ house of Jacob, eue thus sayth he that redeemed Abraham: * Jacob shal not now be confounded no: his face pale. But when he seeth þs chyldre the wothe of my handes in the myddes of hym, they shal sanctify my name, and prayse the holy Lozde of Jacob, & feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronous spere shal come to vnderstandyng, & they that haue bene scozefull, shal learne doctrine.

¶ The xxx. Chapter.

¶ Agayne the Lord that in the counsel of God & cleue to the counsel of men. The prophete also threatneth the remnant of the people, that after the destruction of Jerusalem write into Egypt.

Las, for those dysoberdient chyldren, (sayth the Lozde) * that they wil take couell w' thowte me. Alas, & they wyl take a secreete aduysor, and not oute of my spere, and therfore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go dowe into Egypte, and haue asked no questid at my mouth but seke strenght in the myght of Pharaon, & truste in the shadowe of Egypte. Therfore shal the strenght of Pharaon be poure confusion, & the truste in the shadowe of Egypte poure shame. For þis captaynes were at Ioan, & his ambassadours came vnto hanes. * They were all ashamed of the people & coulde do them no good, and that myght not helpe the, no: Gawe them any prospe, but were theyr confusion and rebuke.

The heuy burthen of the beastes of the south B in a lande of trouble and anguythe, from whiche shal come the yonge and olde Lyon, the vpper & hye serpent that speth agaynst them that vpo colles beare theyr ryches, & vpon Camels theyr treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For vayne & nothyng wozth shal the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Jerusalem. They shal haue strenght ynough, if they wyl lette theyr myndes in quietnes. * Now therfore, go thy waye, & wyte this befoze them in a table, & note it in a boke that it may synally remayne and be kepte styll for euer.

For thys is an obstynat people: * and dyssembling chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lozde.

For they sape vnto the seers: Se not, and to them þ be cleare of iudgement: loke not out right thynges for vs: but speake saye woordes vnto vs: loke out errours, get you out of thys waye, departe oute of thys path, & turne the holpe one of Israel from vs. Therfore thus sayth the holpe one of Israel: Because poure hertes rse agaynst thys woide, & because þe truste in wozng dealynge & peruerse iudgement, & put poure confydence therein. Therfore shal þe haue thys myschefe for poure destruction and fall, lyke as an hye wall þ falleth, because of some rse or blaste whose breakynge cometh sodenly. * And þur the therois lyke an earthen vessel, whiche breaketh w' thowre helpe: so that in the burstynge of it, ther is not founde one quene to fette the rse in, or to take water w' thal out of the ppe.

For thus sayth the Lozde God, euen thy holy one of Israel: In repentaunce & in * rest shal þe be safe: in quietnes and sure confydence shalbe poure strenght. But þe haue had no lust thereto, for þe haue sayde: No, but we wyl escape thowwe hoyses. (Therfore shal þe sipe) and we wyl get vs vp vpon swyfte beastes. And therfore shal poure persecutours be swyfter. * A thousande shal sipe at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of fyue shal þe all sipe, tyll þe be leste as a chymney mast vpon the top of a mountayne, and as a braken vpon an hylle. * Therfore doth the Lozde cause pou to wayte that he maye haue mercy vpon pou: to thyntent, that he maye haue the preminence, when he is gracious vnto pou. For the Lozde is the God of iudgemente. Blesed are all they that hope in hym.

¶ The people remayne in Sion, and at Jerusalem, thou shalte not be in heynes: but at the voyce of thy coplaynt shal he haue mercy vpo þ

The Prophecie

And when he heareth it he shall gree the an-swere. And though the Lord geue you the bread of trouble, & the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shall be nomore so faine but thyne eyes shall se thy rayne. Per. & thyne eare shall heare the tallynge of hym that doth speake behynde the.

¶ This is the waye, walke ye in it. Turne not asyde, neyther to the ryght hande nor to the left.
Ye shall destroye also the conerynge of your syluer ymages, and the deckynge of youre golden ydols. Euen as thyne eyes shall see the waye.
And thou shalt saye vnto it. Get the hence. The shall God geue rayne vnto thy seed, that shall sowe the grounde wythal. and bryde of the increase of the earth, whych shall be fat & very plenteous. In that daye also, shall thy cattell be fed in large pastures. The ornyshewse and the ydgasses, that eate the grounde shall eate cleane prouendur, wyche is pouged wyth the wynde and the fayne.

¶ Finally, vpon euery hye mountayne & hyll shall there be ryuers & streames of waters. * In the daye of the great slaughter, wher the towerns fall. Whereouer, the lyght of the moone shall be as the lyght of the sunne, and the sunne lyght shall be seuen folde, and haue as muche wyne as in seuen dayes besyde, when the Lord byndeth up foze of his people, and healeth the stroke of theyr wounde. Beholde, the same of the Lord cometh from farre, & his pyeience is to hote, that no man is able to abyde. His pyppes are full of indignacyon, and his tonge is as a consuminge fyre.
His byerth is as a vehement flood of water that reachech up to the necke. That he may syt a way the hearte in the syue of vanity. And his byerth is as a bydle of erroure in the charytes of people.

¶ And ye shall synge, lyke as in the nyght, wher the hoyle solemnitye begynneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of herte, lyke as when one cometh wyth a pyppes vnto the hyll of the Lord, and to the moost myghty one of Israel. And the Lord shall cause his gloriouslye voyce to be herde, and shall declare his stretched out arme wyth a terrible countenance & wyth the flame of a consumynge fyre, with manye lpyghtenynge, with a shower, & with halye stones. For thowhe the voice of the Lord, shall * I thus be destroyed, whych smote other men wyth the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whycher soeuer he goeth the rodde shall cleaue vnto hym, whych the Lord shall laye vpon hym wyth tabyettes and harpes & wyth great warre shall he fyght agaynst his hoost. * For the fyre of payne is ordeyned from the begynnyng: yee, euen for kynge is it prepared. This hath the Lord set in the depe: and made it wyde: the burnynge wherof is fyre and much wood. The byerth of the Lord, whych is a ryuer of byrmstone doth hynble it.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The swerth that shall take God, and take for the helpe of man.

¶ And vnto the that go downe into Egypt for helpe, & trust in horses, and put their confydence in charrettes, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lusty and stronge. But they regarde not the holp one of Israel, and they aske no questyon at the Lord.

Where as he neuertheless (being wytest of all) plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from his wynde, when he steppeth forth, and taketh the vyctoary agaynst the householde of the scowarde, & agaynst the helpe of euill doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, & not God, & they holpen helpe and not synet. And allone as the Lord stretcheth out his hand, then shall the helper fall, & he that shulde haue bene helped, and they shall all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: * Lyke as the Lyon of Lyons whelpeth roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayde though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon hym neyther abashed for all the heape of them. So shall the Lord of hostes come downe to fyght for mounte Syon and defend his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flote about theyr nestes, so shall the Lord of hostes kepe, saue, defende, and deliuer Jerusalem.

¶ Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne a-gayne, from that infidelitie, wherin you dyd nege your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out his ydols of syluer & his ydols of golde, whych he haue made with your owne hades vnto your synne. * Assur also shall flayne wyth the swearde, not wyth a mans sweard, nether shall the swearde of any man deuoure hym: And he shall sle the slaughter, & his seruants shall be dyscomfyted in theyr bettes. He shall go for feare to his stronge holdes, & his pyppes shall flee from his badge. Thys hath the Lord spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and bys fyre in Jerusalem.

The xxxii. Chapter.

The conpylons of good rulers and officers.

¶ Beholde, a kynge shall gouerne after the rule of ryghteousnes, and the princes shall rule, accordynge to the balace of equityte. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempeste: lyke as a ryuer of water in a thyrstie place, and the shadowe of a greute roche in a drye lande. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dym, and the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede.

¶ The bett of the vntowle shall attayne to knowledge, & the vnprofyte edge shall speake playnly and dyspynctly. Then shall the foolyshe nygarde be nomore called gentile, nor the churle lyberall.
But the nygarde wyll be nygardly mynded, and his herte wyll worke euell, and plase the vycrite, and ymagyne abhomyacions agaynst God, to make the holye leane, and to dyscholyde hysne from the thyrst. These are the perous weapons of the churlysh, these by his shamefull counseils: that he may begyle the poore wyth dyscantful wordes: yee, euen there as he shuld geue sentence wyth the poore. * But the lyberall personne ymagyneth honeste thynges, and cometh vp for lyberalltye vnto promocyon.

¶ Up (ye ryche and ydeil women) hearken vnto my voyce. Ye carles cytyes, make my wodes,

des. After peared a dayes that ye be brought in fear. O ye careless cytyes. For harnest shall be out, and the grape gathering shall not come.
O ye cytyes that are no parel. Be abashed, you that live in aboundance, tremble you that live carelesse: take of your rayment make your selues bare, put sackcloth aboute you. For as the infant wepe when they mothers teates are dried: so shall you wepe for your fayre felde and fruytful vyneyardes. My people selde shall byng thornes & thystles: and so shall it be euen in euery house of voluptuousnes and in euery cytye that reioyseth. The places al so shall be broken, and the greatly occupied cytyes desolate. The towres and bulwarckes shall become denues for euermoze, the pleasure of mules shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spere be powred vpon vs frome aboue. Then shall the wilderness be a fruytfull felde, and the plentous felde shall be chened for a wood. Then shall equyte dwell in the deserte and ryghteousnes in a fruytfull lande.

And the rewarde of ryghteousnes shall be peace, and her fruyte rest and quyetnes for euer.
And my people shall dwell in the innes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of con-forte. And when the bayle falleth, it shall fall in the wood, and the citie shall be set low in the valley. O howe happye shall ye be, when ye shall safely sowe your seede besyde al waters, & dyne thether the feete of your oxen and asses.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Threatning agaynst the Assyrians, & discoueryng of them that shall be the Lozde.

Unto the that destroyest, whi thou wast not destroyed, thou breakest the legges, where as none hath broken it wyth þe, for when thou shalt leane destroyinge, & thou thy selfe shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceasest from breahyng the legges, then shall they breake it to the. O Lozde, haue mercy vpon vs, we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to such earlye and our health in tyme of trouble. At that confust noyle, the people fled, & at thyn exaltinge the heathen were scattered. And the spoyles shall be gathered wythch shall be yours as are the ga-theringe of Wyches. And the multitude going to it shall be as locustes rummyng to and fro.

The Lozde is exalted, for it is he that dwelleth an hye: he hath fylled Syon wyth iudge-ment & ryghteousnes. And a sure stablyshinge of thy tyme shall be strength, health, wisdom and knowlege, and the very feare of the Lozde shall be the treasure of it. Beholde, the messengers shall crye wythout: & the ambassadours of peace shall wepe bitterly. The stretes are wast there walkeyth no man therein. God hath broke the appoyntment, the cyties are caste awaye, & men are nothing regarded, the desolate earth is in denues. Libanus is thamed: & bewen downe Saron is lyke a wilderness: Basan and Char-mell are spoyled of thyr fruytes, and therefore saith the Lozde, I wyl vpon now, now wyl I be auanced, now wyl I be exalted as a myghty

God. & shall conceaue trouble, & beate strake and your spere shall be the spere, that it may co-sume you and the people shall be burnt lyke lyme and as the thornes burne that are beuen of, and cast in the fyre. Nowe berke to ye that are fatte of, howe I haue done, and consyder my power, ye that be at hande.

The sinners at Sion are afrayed, a soden fe-stulnes is come vpon the hypocrites, what is he amonge vs, sape they, that shall dwell by the cosumyng fyre: wyche of vs maye abyde that cruell synge beate? he that leadeth a godlye lyfe sape I, and speake the truth he that ab-horreth gaynes wonne by violence and discreat he that kepeth hys hande that he touche no re-warde: whiche stoppeth his eares, that he heare no counsell agaynst the innocent bloude: which holdeth downe hys eyes that he se none euil. he it is that shall dwell on hye: whose sauegard shall be in a bulwarke of rockes, to hym shall be geue meate, and hys waters shall not faile. Thyn eyes shall se the hyng in hys glorie: euen the hyng of the same countreyes shall they se: thyn bert studied for feare thynching thus. What shall then become of the Scrybes of the receauers of our monye: what of hym that tared our say-rest houses: There waite thou not se people of a straunge tonge to haue so dyffused a languag þit maye not be vnderstande, nether so straung a spech, but it shall be perceaued. There shall on be lene þ head cytye of oure solempne feastes There shall thyn eyes se Ierusalem that glorious habitation: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue: whose nayles shall neuer be taken oute woulde without ende: whose cordes euerychone shall neuer corrupte, for the glorious maiesty of the Lozde shall there be ptesente amonge vs: as a place, where saye byode riuers and streames are, thow we the wyche shall nether galpe nor no great wypp saye. For þ Lozde is our iudge the Lozde is our lawe geuer. The Lozde is our hyng, and he hym selfe shall be oure Saufoure There are the cordes so layde abrod, that they cannot be better. And therefore they haue not fired they: masse, nor sprede abrode they: saye.
Then there is dealed great spoyles: per, lame mē runne after the praye. There lyeth no man that layeth: I am lyche: but all euil is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The xxxiiii. Chapter.

The last destruction of the Synagoge: in which the kingdome and prynces of that people was translated to the church and congregation of Christ.

Come ye heathen & beate, take hede ye people. Heke þ earth and al þ is therin, þ round compas and all that grow eth thereup, for þ lozde is angry with all people, & hys displeasure is kindled agaynst al the multitude of the: he hath destroyed them and deliuered them to the slaughter. So þ their flayne shall be cast out, & they: bodys & synche þ eul þ very byls shall be wet w the bloude of them.
Al the starrs of heauen shall wast, & the heathen shall folde together lyke a rol: and al the starrs therof shall fall lyke as the leaues fall, from the hyng and fygges. For my swerde shall be ha-shall in heaven, and shall immediately come downe in iudgement vpon Iouma, and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

And the Lordes sword shall be full of blood, & be rusty with the fatnes & blood of lambs and goates, with the fatnes with the kidnes of weathers. For the Lord shall kill a great offering in Bouza, & a great slaughter in the land of Iouma. There shall the Unicorne be with them & the bulles with the giants, & their lande shall be thowowly soled with bloude, & they shall growe corrupte with fatnes. Unto the also, O Zion shall come the daye of my vengeance of God and the yeare when thyne owne iudgements shall be recompensed. And thy shoudes shall be turned to pyth, & thy earth to hyssop: & they with shall the lande be hyndled, so that it shall not be cutted daye nor upgrowe: but smoke enermore, and so forth to lye wast. And no man shall go thowow it for euer. But pellicanes, & owles, great oules & rauenys shall haue it in posselsion, & dwel therein.

For God shall spiede out the lyne of desolacion vpon it, and wepe it with the stones of emptines. When hynges are called vpon, there shall be none & all princes shall be away. Thornes shall growe in their places, nettles & thistles in their stronge holdes & the Dragons may haue their pleasure therein, & that they may be a court for clypters. There shall straunge vsures & monstrous beasts mete one another, and the wyld be hepe com panie together. There shall the Lamia lye, and haue her lodgyng. There shall the oule make her nest, buyde: be there at home and byngne & the bys pongons. There shall the kytes come together, & the one to bys lye.

Seeke thowowe the scripture of the Lord and tradit. There shall none of these thynges be left out, there shall not one nor such lyke, sapie. For what bys mouth commaundeth, that same doth his spyt gather together, & fulfilleth. He hath cast the lot for them, and to those beastes hath he his handes deuised the lyne: therefore those shall possesse the empytaunce frome generacion to generacion, and dwel therein for euer.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Of the tyme and byngth of Chyng.

In the deserte & wyldernes shall reioyce, the wast ground shall be glad and flopply as the lylly. She shall flopplye pleasaunt ly and be sofull, and euer be geuyng chanches more and more. For the glory of Lybanus, the betwyt of Charmell, & Sharon shall be greuen her. These shall knowe the honour of the Lord, and my mayesty of oure God. And therefore strength the weathe handes, and comfort the feeble knees.

Hope vnto them that are of a fearful herte, be of good chere, and fear not. Beholde, power God cometh to take vengeance: and you shall see the reward that God geueth. God commaundeth bys owne selfe, and wyl deliuer you. The eyes of the bynde be lychened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shall the lame man leape as an hart and the dumb mans tong shall geue thanks. In the wilderness also there shall weig lyming, and fountes of water in the deserts

The drye ground shall turne to riuers, and the thystle to sprynges of water: Where as dragons dwelt afore: there shall growe swete flowers and grene rushes. There shall be fote pathes & comen stretes, this shall be called the holy way. No vncleane personne shall go thowowe it, for the Lord him selfe shall go with them, that way and the wayfarer, nor ignorant shall not erre. There shall be no lye, and no rauishing beastes shall come therein, nor be there, but men redeemed shall go there free and safe. And I redeemed of the Lord, I shall conuerter and come to Syon with thanksgyng. Currlastyng I shall thep haue, pleasure and gladnes shall be among them. And as for all sojowre and heuyng, it shall vanyshe away.

The xxxvi. Chapter

Jerusalem is besieged by Sennacherib in the tyme of kynge Hezekiah.

In the xlii. yeare of kynge Hezekias came Sennacherib king of the Assyrians and downe, to laye sege vnto all the stronge cities of Iuda, to conquer the And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabshakeh from Lachis towards Jerusalem against king Hezekias, with an exceeding hoste whiche set hym by the condyte of the ouerpole in the waie that goeth thowow the fallers land. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim helkias sonne of president Sennacherib the scribe, & Iohas Asaphs sonne, the secretorye.

And Rabshakeh sayde vnto them: Tel Hezekias, that the great kynge of Assyria sayth thus vnto him: what presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto: I sayd: Surely thou trustest in dayne wordes, when counsell and strengthe are necessary to the battel, or is wherto trustest that thou callest thy selfe offred? loo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reede (I meane Egypt) whiche be that leaneth vpon, it goeth into bys hande and shattereth hym thowowe.

Cur so is Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, vnto all them that trust in hym. But yf thou woldest saye to me: We trust in the Lord oure God. A goodly God in dede: whose bye places and altiers Hezekias toke downe and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem to worshipp onely before the altier. Howe therefore deliuer hostages that thou rebel nomore agaynst my Lord the kynge of Assyrians. And I wyl geue the ii. C. horses: yf thou be able to set men vpon them. Howe darrest thou resist the power of the smallest pynce that my Lord hath: howe darrest thou truste in the charittes and hostesmen of Egypt? Wo: eo uer thyne selfe thou that I am come by byrther to destroye thy lande withowt the Lordes wyl. The Lord sayde vnto me: go vnto the lande that thou mayest destroye it. Then sayde Eliakim, Sennacherib & Iohas vnto Rabshakeh: speake to us thy seruantes in the syre language, for we vnderstande it well.

And I spake not to vs in the Iewes tonge, lest the folke heare whiche I sayd vpon the wal. The answered Rabshakeh: thus saye I the kynge sent me to speake this only vnto the Lord and the hath he not sent me vnto them also & lye vpon the wall & they may be compelled to eate the owne donge, & drinke the ownes stale vpon And Rabsakech stode fust, and cried w a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and saide: now take hede, howe the greate hyng of the Assyrians C greueth you warnynge. Thus sayeth the hyng: Let not hezekias dysceyne you: for he shal not be able to deliuer you. Moreover, let not heze kias comforte you in the Lorde, when he sayth the Lorde wthoute doubte. Shall defende vs, & shal not geue ouer this cytie into the handes of the hyng of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth the hyng of Assyria: optaine my fa uour, enclyne to me, so maye euery man enioy hys vyneyardes and fygtrees, and drynke the water of his cistern, vnto the tyme I come my selfe and byng you into a lande & is lyke your owne, wherein is wheat & vyne, which is both sowen with sede, & planted wth vyneyardes.

Let not hezekias dysceyne you when he sayth vnto you: the Lord shal deliuer vs. * Wighte the gods of & Gentyles kepe euery mans lande from the power of the hyng of the Assyrians.
Where is & God of hemath? Irphad: Where is & God of Sepharaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the goddes of these landes hath deliuered the: counterpe oute of my power: is the Lorde in dede able to deliuer Ierusalem from my ha nd? Vnto this hezekias messengers helde they tonges, & answered not one word, for & hyng had charged the: & they shuld geue hym no answer.
So came Eliakim hezekias sonne the president Sobna the scribe, and Ioab Asphas sonne & secretoyre, vnto hezekias wth rent clothes, & tolde hym the wordes of Rabsakech.

¶ The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ Hezekias humbled hym selfe before the Lorde. The armye of Sennacherib is slaine of the Angell of the Lorde: and he hymselfe is helled of his owne sonnes.

When hezekias heard that, he rente hys clothes, & put on a sackclothe and went into & temple of & Lorde but he sent heliahim the president Sobna the scribe, wth the el dest prestes clothed in sackcloth vnto the pro phet Elay the sonne of Amos, & they sayd vnto hym: Thus sayeth hezekias: this is the day of trouble, of plage and blasphemy: for the chyl dren are come to the place of byeth: but there is no power to bynge them forth. The Lorde thy God (no doubte) hath well considered the wo rdes of Rabsakech, whom hys Lorde & hyng of the Assyrians hath sente to desyre and blasphe me the luyng God, with suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde ryghte well. And therefore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that are left. So the seruantes of & hyng he zekias came to Elaye.

And Elaye gaue them thus answer. Say thus vnto your Lorde: thus sayeth the Lorde Benot afrayed of the wordes that thou haste hearde wherewith the hyng of & Assyrians ser uantes haue blasphemed me. Behold, I wyl cause a winde to go ouer hym as he bea reth the mounre, he shal go again into his cou trie, there wyl I destruy him wth & sword in his owne land. * Now when Rabsakech retur ned, he tolde & hyng of Assyria layng segeto Lib nas, for he had vnderstande & he was departed ted from Lachis. For there came a rumoure & Charles king of Ethiopia was come forth to warre against hym. And when the king of As siria heard &, he sent other messengers to hyng hezekias wth this comaundement: Say thus to hezekias king of Iuda. Let not thy God dis ceine the, in whom & hopest, and sayest: Ierusa lem shal not be geuen into the handes of & king of Assyria. For loo, thou knowest wel how the kinges of Assyria haue handled al the landes & they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape?

Where the people of & Gentiles (whom my pro genytours conquered) deliuered at any tyme thozow their Gods: & I namely, Sozan, Ha ran, Acseph, and the chyldren of Eden, which were at Chalassar. Where is & king of hemath and the hyng of Irphad, & the hyng of the cyp Sepharaim, Eua and Inar? Now when he zekia had receyued the letter of & messengers and read it: he went vp into the house of & Lorde and opened the letter before the Lorde: and he zekia prayed before the Lorde on this maner.
O Lorde of hostes thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubin. Thou art the God, that only is God of all kyngdomes of & world for thou only hast created heauen and earth, Enclyne thine eare Lorde and consider, open thine eyes, O Lorde, and se, and ponder all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, whiche hath sent his embassage to blaspheme the luyng God, It is true O Lorde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered al kyngdomes and landes, and caste the: goddes in the fyre. Not wthstan dynge those were no gods, but the workes of mens handes, of wood, or stone, therefore haue they destroyed the. Deliuer vs then, O Lorde oure God, from & handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earthe maye knowe, that thou only arte the Lorde. Then Elay & sonne of Amos sent vnto hezekia, sayng: Thus say eth the Lorde God of Israel. Where as & hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchyng Senna cherib the hyng of Assyria, this is the answer that the Lorde hath geuen, concernynge hym.
Dispyled art thou, & mocked (O daughter Sy on) he hath shaken his head at the, O daughter Ierusalem. But thou Sennacherib: & whome hast thou despyed & blasphemed? Agaynst who hast thou lyfted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proud lokes: euen against the bold one of Isra el. Thou wth thy seruantes hast blasphemed the Lorde, and thus holdest & of thy selfe. I wyl couer the hye mountaynes and fydes of Lyba nus wth my horsemen. And there wyl I cut downe the hye Cedze trees & the sayest fyre trees, I wyl vp into the hyght of it, & into the cheffeste of hys cymber woodes. If there bene water, I wyl graue and drynche. And as for waters of defence, I shall drye them vp, wth &

¶ I thankes geuyng, whiche hezekia kynge of Iuda wrote when he had bene ſyche and was recovered.

I thought I ſhoulde haue gone to the gates of hell, when myne age was thortened, and haue wanted the reſpydue of myne peres. I ſpake within my ſelfe: I ſhall neuer vp-ſet the Lozde (the Lozde I ſape) in thys lyfe.
I ſhall neuer ſe manne amonge dwellers of the wozde. Myne age is ſolden vp together, and taken away from me. Lyke a ſhepherds cottage I haue betwen of my lyfe by my ſynnes: lyke as a weauer cutteth of his webbe. He wyll with bypnyng ſyche make an ende of me: pee, he wyll make an ende of me in one daye. I thought, I wolde haue lyued vnto the moztow, but he hui-ſed my bones lyke a Lyon, and in our day thou wyll make an ende of me.

Then chattered I lyke a ſhalowe, and lyke a Crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyft vp mine eyes into the heighe: O Lozde (ſaid) I my ſychnes kepeſt me down: aſe thou me: What ſhal I ſape? The Lozde hath made a promyle to me. Pee, the hym ſelf hath perſou-

And it was thy pleaſure to deſpue my lyfe fro the ſylythe pye, for thou it is (O Lozde) & haſt caſt all my ſynnes behynde thy backe.

* For heil prayſeth not the, deaſe doeth not magnifye the they & go downe into the graue, praple not & truth: but the liuyng: pee, & liuyng knowlage the, lyke as I do this daye.

The father teileth his chyld of thy faithfulnes. To heale me is the Lozdes woize, and he wyll ſyng my ſonges in thy houſe, al & daies of our lyfe. And Eſay ſaid: take a plaſter of figges & lay it vpon the ſoye, ſo ſhal it be whole. Then ſayd hezekia: What a great myracle is this, & I ſhall go vp into the houſe of the Lozde.

¶ The xxxix. Chapter.

¶ Hezekia in ſyche vnto Dauid, because he ſtrough his trowthe vnto the end of the daye of Babylon.

In the ſame tyme, Nerodach Baſadani, ſent letters & preſented to hezekia. For he vnderſtood how that he had bene ſyche, & was reco-uered

And he wold them the comodities of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spices and rootes of precious oyles, all that was in his cubburdes & treasure houses. There was not one thyng in hezekias house, and so thowout all his kingdome but he let them see it.

Then came Elayc the prophete to kyng hezekia, and sayde vnto hym: What haue the men sayde & from whence came they vnto the? hezekia answered, they came oute of a farre countre vnto me oute of Babylon: Elayc sayd what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? hezekia answered: All that is in mine house haue they sene: and there is nothyng in my treasure but I shewed it them.

Then said Elayc vnto hezekia: Understand the woide of the Lorde of hostes. * Beholde, the tyme wyl come that euery thyng whiche is in thine house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in stowe vntill this daye shalbe carped to Babylon, and nothyng left behynd.
Thus sayeth the Lorde: pea & parte of thy son-nes, that come of the, and whom thou shalt get shalbe carped hence, and become gelded cham-berlaines in the kyng of Babylons court.

Then sayde hezekia to Elayc. Now God prophesie his owne counsaile whebe thou hast tolde me. he sayd mozeouer. So yf there be peace and safethulnesse in my tyme.

¶ The xl. Chapter.

The coming of saynt John Baptiste. The preparacion of the apostles. The calling of the Gentyles.

Comforte my people (O ye proph-

God, comfort Ierusalem at the porte and tell her: that her trauaile is at an end that her offence is pardoned that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correccion for all her synnes. * A voyce cryeth in wilderness: Prepare the waye of the Lorde in the wilderness, make streygthe the path for our God in the desert. Let all valleys be exalted, and euery mountayne & hyl be layd lowe: what so is crooked, let it be made streygthe and let the rough, be made playne felde. * For the glory of the Lorde shal appere, and all flesch shal at once se it, for why? yf mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake. Nowe crye. And the prophete answered: what shall I crye? that al flesch is grasse, and that all the goodynesse ther-of is as the floure of the felde: The grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye: Euen so is the people as grasse, when the blythe of the Lorde bloweth vpon them. Reuertheles whether the grasse wyther, or the floure fade awaye: * Yet the word of our God endureth for euer. So vp vnto the hye hyl (O Zion) thou that byngest good tidynge, lyste vp thy voyce with power.
O thou preacher Ierusalem. Lyste it vp with oute feare, and sape vnto the cyties of Iuda: Beholde your God, beholde: the Lorde God shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he byngeth the his treasure with hym, and his wythes goode before hym. he shal fede his flocke lyke an heardman. he shal gather the lambs together with hym, and carpe them in hym bosome, and shal kyndly entreate those that beate yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in bys fyfte?
Who hath measured heauen with his spanne and hath comprehended all the earth of the world in theyr measures? Who hath weped the mostaynes and hylles in a balauce? Who hath reformed the mynde of the Lord? or to whom hath he shewed his counceill? * Or who is of his counceill to teach hym? or who hath greuen hym vnderstandyng and hath taught hym the path of iudgement? Who taught hym connyng and opened vnto hym the wape of vnderstanding?
Behold al people are in comparyson of hym as a droppe to a bucketful, & are counted as the lest thyng that the balauce weyeth. Pee and the yless he taketh vp as a very litle thyng. Lyba-nus is not sufficient to mynstre fyre for his offeryng, & all the beastes therof, are not ynough to one sacrifice. All people in comparyson of hym are rekened as nothyng, & yf they be compared with hym, lesse then nothyng, and as it that is not: To whome then wyl ye lyken God? or what synilitud wyl ye set vp vnto hym? Shal the carner make him a carued ymage, and shal the golde smyth couer hym with golde, or caste hym into a fourme of syluer plates? Mozeouer shal the ymage maker, yf the pooze man which is disposed, maye haue some thyng to set vp also? seke out & chole a tree this not rotten, & carue there out an ymage that mourt not. Knowe ye nothyng. O wretches: heare ye neuer of it? hath it not bene preached vnto you since yf begynnyng? haue ye not bene enfourmed of this by the foundation of the earth, yf he stretteth vpon the cyrcle of the world, and that all the inhabytours of the world are in comparyson of hym, but as grechoppers? * That he stretcheth out the heavens as a couering, that he stretcheth them out, as a tene to dwel in: That he bygeth ym-ages to nothyng, & the Iudges of yf earth to dust so that of them it may be sayd they be not planted nor sowne agayne, neyther they stocke rooted agayne in the earth. For as sone as he bloweth vpon them, they wyther & fade away, lyke the strawe in a wynde wynde. To whom now wyl ye lyken me, and whom shal I be lyke sayeth the holy one: Lyste vp your eyes on hye, and consider: * who hath made these thynges, which come out by so great beapes, and he can cal the al by theyr names. For there is nothing dyd vnto the greatnes of his power, strength & myght how may the Jacob thinke, or how may Irael sape. My wapes are hyd from the Lorde, and my god knoweth not of my iudgements. Know-west thou not, or hast thou not heard yf the cuerlasting God yf Lorde which made all yf corners of yf earth is neyther wey nor sapint: & that his wisdom can not be comprehended: but yf he greuethe strength vnto yf wey, & power vnto the faint: Children are wey & faint, & the strongest men fal. * But vnto them yf haue yf Lorde before theyr eyes, shal townes also that they of Eder dwell in. Let them be glad that sit upon rocks of stone, and let them crye downe from the mountaynes ascribing glorie vnto the Lorde, & magnify hym among the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a Giant & take a stomache vnto hym like a free-we man of warre. He shall crye and crye, & ouer-come his enemies. I haue longe holden my peace (saith the Lorde) I haue bene still and refray-ned my selfe, but nowe I will crye lyke a true lynge woman, and at once will I destroy and deuoure. I will make wast both mountayne & hyle, & drye up euery greene thing that groweth thereon. I will drye up the floudes of water, & drynke up the ryuers. I will drye the blynde into a strete, that they knowe not, & lede them in to a forpath that they are ignozant in. I shall make darkenes lyght before them, and the light that is crooked to be straight. These thinges haue I done vnto them, and not forsahe them. * They are fallen backe: yee, & let them be ashamed earnestly, that hope in ydolles, and sape to falsified ymages: yee at our gods. Heare, O ye deafe men, & sharpen your sightes to se. (O ye blynde) * Who is blynde but my seruante? O so beaie as my messenger, whome I sente vnto them: For who is the ruler so blynde (saie they) as perfect man & so blynde as the Lordes seruante Thou vnderstandest much, & kepest nothing, & eares are open, & no man heareth. The Lorde is merciful vnto them for his ryghteousnes sake his woide might be magnified, and praised: But the people them selues is robbed & troden vnder foot, chayned in dongeons, & they al (I saie) be shut into pylson houses. * They are carped awaye captiue, & no man dothe lose them They be trode vnder foot, & nomā doth labour to bringe the agayn. * But who is he amōg you that pondreth this, that consydereth it, & taketh it for a warn- ing in tyme to come?

* Who suffered Jacob to bee troden vnder fote, & Israel to be spoiled? Did not the Lorde?
Because we haue sinned against him, and haue had no dyspente to walke in his wayes, neither be obedient vnto his lawe: Therefore he hath poured vpon hym his wrathful displeasure, & strong battel, which speaketh hym on euery spede yet wyl he not vnderstand. He burneth hym vp, yet sin-no strange God amonge you. And this record must ye beate poure selues: (saith the Lorde) y I am God. And euen he am I frome the begyn-nyng, and * there is none y ca: take any thing out of my hande. I do the worke and who shal be able to let it? Thus saith the Lorde the holly one of Israel poure redeemer: * for your sake I haue sente to Babylon, and broughte downe the strongest of them. All they are fugitiue with y Coaldees that bolt them of they: Quip, es: Eue I the Lorde your holly one which haue made Israel, and am your kynge. Thus saith the Lorde (* Euen he that maketh a waye in y see, and a forepath in y mighty waters) * which blygeth forth the charrettes and hoxles, the host & the y w: of warre, that they maye fall & neuer ryle, and be extinct, lyke as towre is quenched.

Remember not thynges of olde, and regard nothyng that is paste: Beholde, I shal make a newe thyng, and woorthly shall it apere, and shal you not knowe it? I wyl make stretes in the desert, and riuers of water in the wilderness: The wylde beastes shal w: thymme me: y Dragons and the young Estriches. * For I shal geue water in the wilderness, and streames in the desert y may geue drinke to my people, whome I chose This people haue I made for my selfe: and they shall (we say) my praise. For y (Jacob) wol-dest not call vpon me, but y haddest an valiste to ward me, O Israel, Thou gauest me not thy beastes, for burnt offerynges, neither didest honour me w thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no dere sprec with thy money, neyther pourest the fatte of thy sacrifices vpon me. * Howe beit, I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offe-

¶ The xlv. Chapter.

Thus

Ihus sayeth the Lord vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whom I haue taken by the ryght hand, to subdue nations before him. * I will loke & gyde of kynges and I wyl open the gates before his face, & not to shut their doores. I wil go before the, & make the crooked streyght. I shall bryke the brasen doores, & buest the yron barres. I shal geue the that hysd treasure, and the thyng whych is secretely kept, that thou mayst knowe. * I am the Lord God of Israel which haue called the by thy name and * that for Jacob my seruantes sake, & for Israel my chosen. For I called the by name & ordayned the: or euer thou knewest me. * Euen I the Lord before whome there is no other: for without me ther is no God: * I haue prepared the: or euer thou knewest me, & I might be knowen fro the rysyng of the sonne to the goyng downe of the same, & all is nothing without me. For I am the Lord, & ther is els none. It is I that created the lyght & darckenes. * I make peace and trouble: yea, euen I the Lord do all these thynges. Pe heauns from aboue droype downe, & let the cloudes raine righteousness. The erth openeth it self, & bringeth forth healeth, & therby righteousness maye flozpe. Euen I the Lord bryng it to passe. * Wo be vnto him that stpnerth with his maker, the potterd with the potter. Saith the clay to the potter: What maketh the: or thy worke serueth for nothing. Wo be vnto him that saith to his father: Why begettest thou: And to his mother: Why barest thou. Thus sayeth the Lord, euen the holy one & maker of Israel. Aske me of thynges for to come concernyng my sonnes: and put me in remembrance as touchyng the woiches of my handes. I haue made the erth, & created man vpon it: With myne handes haue I spread forth heaun, and geuen a commaundement for all the host thereof. I shall make him vp with ryghteousnes, and ordre all his wayes. * He shal bryde my cite, and let out my prisoners, and that nether for gyfte nor rewardes sayeth the Lord of hostes: Thus sayeth the Lord The occupiers of Egypt. The marchauntes of the Moztians and Sabers, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shal be thyne: they shal folow the, and go with cheynes vpon their sete. They shal fal downe before the, and make supplicacon vnto the. * For God (without whom there is none other God) shal be with the. * O howe profounde are thou O God, thou God and sauoure of Israel: Confounded are they all, and put to dishonour: they are gone hence together with shame, euen the makers of Images. But Israel shal be saued in the Lord: whiche is the euerlastyng saluacion. Pe shal not come to shame nor confusyon worlde wythoute ende. For thus sayeth the Lord, * euen I created heauen the God I made the erth, that fashioned it, and set it fast. He dyd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited. Euen I the Lord without whome there is none other: * I haue not spoken secretly neyther in darcke places of seeth. It is not for naught, & I said vnto the seide of Jacob seke me

I am the Lord whiche when I speake, declare the thynges that are righte and true, gather you and come together, draw nye hether, you are escaped of people. * Haue they any vnderstan dyng, I let vp the stones of their Idoles, and pray vnto a god, & can not helpe the: draw nye come hether, & let them aske counsel one at another, & the we forth: What is to be & tolde this before: or who spake of it euer sence I began myng. Haue not I the Lord doone it: * without whome there is none other God & true God & sauour, & there is els none but I. * And therefore turne you vnto me (al ye endes of the earth) & ye may be saued: for I am God, and there is els none. I sweare by my selfe, out of my mouth cometh the word of righteousness, & that no man may turne: * but all knees shal bowe vnto me, & all tonges shall sweare by my name, sayyng: Mercy to him shal me come, but al they that thincke scoorne of hym, shal be confounded. And the whole seide of Israel shal be iustified, and make they boast in the Lord.

The clvi. Chapter.

Tholatre is reproved, The heathen that cometh by Christ is prophesied.

Bel is fallen. Babel is broke downe & whole Images were a burthen for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make the wery. They are sonke downe, & fallen together for they may not ease the of their burthen, therfore must they go in captiuitie. Hecken vnto me O house of Jacob, and al ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel: whiche I haue bozne frome your mothers wombe: and broughte you vp from your byrth, tyl ye were grownen. I, I, whiche shal beate you vnto poue laste age. I haue made you: I wyl also nozpe you, beate you, and saue you. * Whome wyl ye make me like, or to whome wyl ye make me equal: or compare me that I shulde be like him, in fashyon or Image, that I maye be like him. * Pe soles (no doubt) wyl take out siluer & gold oute of your purses, and weye ye, & byze a goldsmith to make a God of it, that men may knele downe and worshippe it. * Yet must he be saue on mennes holders, and bozne and sette in his place that he maye stande, and not moue out of his place. Alas that men shulde cpe vnto him whiche geueth no answer: and delouer not the man that calleth vpon him from his trouble. Consyder this well, and be ashamed. So in to your owne selues (O ye runnagates) Remembre the thynges which are past, sence the begynnyng of the worlde, that I am God, and there is els no God: yea, and there is nothing like vnto me, in the begynnyng of a thyng. I the we the ende thereof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. My deuce standeth stand fastly stablished, and I fulfil al my pleasure. * I call a byrde out of the east, & the man by whom my counsel shal be fulfilled out of far countreies as sone as I thynke to deuyse a thyng. I do it.

The Prophecie.

Hear me, O pe that are of an hye stomache, but are from righteousness, I shall bring forth my righteousness. It is not farre, my deathe shall not tary long awaye. I will save deathe in Dion, and in Israel my glozpe.

The xlviii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lorde against Babylon.

BUt as for the (O daughter: thou virgin Babylon) yet thou downe in the dust, yet vpon the ground, and not in a throne. (O thou maide of Caldea) Thou shalt nomoze be called tendie and pleasaunt. Syng forth the quene: and grynne mele, vntill thy brodered beare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees, and wade thorow the water rivers. Thy name shall be discovered and thy priuities shall be seene. For I will aduenge me of the, & will shew no mercye to the as I do to other men. I saye thoure redeemer: which is called the Lorde of hostes the holy one of Israel.

Syt still, holde thy tongue, and get the into some darcke corner. (O daughter Caldea) for thou shalt nomoze be called lady of kingdoms. I was so wrathe with my people, that I punished myne inheritaunce, and gaue them into thy power. Neuerthelesse, I shewed them no mercy, but euen the very aged men of them dyddest thou oppresse eyngh soze with thy poke, & thou thoughtest thus: I shall be ladye for ever.

And besyde all þ, thou hast not regarded these thinges, neether remembred what was the ende of þatie Jerusalem. heare nowe therfore, thou wylful, þ syttest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thine herte: I am alone and without me is there none: I shall neuer be wyddowe nor desolate againe. And yet both these thinges shall come to þ vpon a day in the tynching of an eye.

Enamely, wyddowheade and desolaciõ. They shall mightely fall vpon the, for the multitude of witches, and for the great heape of thy counturers. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednes and hast said: A man seeth me. Thyne owne wysdome and cunnyng hath deceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpon the and thou shalt not know from whence it shall aryse. Wylschewe shall fall vpon the, which þ shalt not be able to put out. A loyapne vntee

Destruction shall come vpon the or euer þ beware. Nowe go to thine counturers, and to the multitude of thy witches (with whome thou hast wepyed thy selfe from thy youth) yf they maye helpe the or strenght þ. Thou hast herbert of ad many counceils of them: so let the, and gales and the beholders of starres, and moone prophetes come on nowe and deliuer the: yee, and lette them serue when these thynges shall come vpon the. Behold, they shall be lyke strawe, which yf it be kyndled with fyre no man maye ryd it for the verement of the flame. And yet it getteth no sunders to warme a ma by, nor cleare fyre to syt by. Thus are they with whiche thou hast wepyed thy selfe: and thus are thy marchauntes that haue bene with the from thy youth. Every one hath taken his owne waye and none of the shall defende the.

The prophesie of the Ieremie to reprobate. The Lorde alone will be worshipped, and he shall be glorified in the last daye.

HEare this, O thou house of Jacob, I saye that are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one stocke with Iuda: which swaie by the name of the Lorde, and beare witness by the God of Israel (but not with truth and right) which are called fre men of the holy cy. They are groudied vpon þ God of Israel, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thynges that I shewed you euer since the begynnynge haue I not broughte them to passe immediately as they came out of my mouth and declared them: they are come: howebeit, I knowe that thou arte obstinate, and that thy necke hath anyon wayne, and that thy browe is braile, neuerthelesse I haue euer since the begynnynge shewed þ of thynges for to come, and declared the vnto þ, or euer they came to passe: that þ shouldest not saye, myne ydell hath bene done it, my carued or molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou herdest it before and beholde, it is come to passe & whether can ye prophesie of thynges to come? But as for me I tolde the before at þ beginning, newe and secrete thinges that thou knowest not of.

And some done nowe, not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer herdest, before they were brought to passe: þ thou canst not say Beholde I knewe of them: howeouer, there be some wherof þ hast neether heard nor knowe, neether haue they bene opened vnto thine eares a soze tyme. For I knewe that thou woldest maliciously offende, therfore haue I called þ a trasgressoure, eue fro thy mothers wombe. Neuertheles, for myne names sake, I will withholde my wrath, and it shall be for mine honours sake yf I paciently forbeare the, yet not as siluer.

Behold, I haue poured the, yet not as siluer. I haue chosen the in the fire of affliction, and þ only for myne owne sake: yee, & eue for myne owne sake will I doo this, or els what dythoure wolde they do to my name? Herken vnto me, O Jacob and Israel whom I haue called, I am euen he that is, I am the first and last. My hande hath layde þ foundation of the erth and my right hande hath spanned ouer the heuens. A lone as I cal them they are there. Gather yon altogether and herken: whiche of yonder goddes hath declared this? The Lorde hath a lone vnto him, and he shall persourme his will against Babel, and declare his power against the Chaldees. I my selfe alone, eue I haue told yow this before: yee, I dyd call him: and byng him forth: and he shall make his wayes prosperous. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken anye thyng darke, since the begynnynge? when a thyng begynneth I am ther. Wherfore the Lorde God þ his spyes hath sente me. And thus sayth the Lorde God thy redeemer, the holy one of Israel. I am the Lorde thy God: which teacheth the. & profitable thynges, and leade the.

the thy wape, that thou shouldest go. * O thou haddest regarded my comaundementes, then had thy welthyng ben as the water streame, & thy righteounes as the waues flowing in the see.

¶ Thy seide also had bene like as a sande in a see, and the fruyte of thy body lyke a grauel stones therof. his name shulde not be rooted oute: nor destroyed before me. * So a way from Babilon, fye fro the Caldees, with a mery voyce speake of this, declare it abroad, and go forth vnto the ende of the world, saye ye: The Lord hath redeemed his seruant Jacob, that they suffered no thurst, he ledde them thorow the wyldeynes, & caused the waters to flow out vnto them from out of the rocke. * He claue the rocke asunder, & the water gushyd out. * As for y vngodly, they haue no peace, sayth the Lord.

¶ The. xlii. Chapter.

¶ Christ shall gather together all nationes be they neuer so farr of.

Ihesus herken vnto me, & take hede ye people fro farr. The Lord hath called me from my byrthe, and made nencis of my name from my mothers wombe: he hath made my mouthe lyke a harpe & werde vnder the shadow of his hande hath he defended me, and hidde me in his quyer as a good arrowe, and sayde vnto me. Thou arte my seruant Israel. * I will be honoured in the. Then answered I: I haue lost my labour, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

¶ Nevertheless I wil comit my cause and my worke vnto the Lord my God. And now sayth the Lord, euen he that hath poned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruante, that I maye byng Jacob agayn vnto him: howbeit, Israel wil not be gathered vnto him again. In whose syght I am great, whiche also is my Lord, my God & my strength. And he said: it is but a smal thyng that thou arte my seruant, to let vp the kynredes of Jacob, & to restore the destructio of Israel. * For I haue made the a lyght of the Gentiles, that thou maist be my helth vnto the ende of the world.

¶ Moreover, thus sayth the Lord the redeemer & holp one of Israel: bycause of the abhorryng & despying among the Gentiles, concernyng the seruant of all the that beare rule: kynge and prynces shal se, and ayle and wofull, bycause of the Lord that is faithful: and bycause of the holy one of Israel, which hath cholen the. And thus sayth the Lord: * In the tyme accepted haue I herde the, & in the daye of saluacyon haue I helped the. * I wyl perseuer the, & make the to be the attonement of the people, that thou maist helpe vnto the earth agayne: and possesse agayne the desolate peryages. * That thou maist saye to the prisoners: go forth, and to them that are in darcknes, come into the lyght, they shal se in the daye wapes, and gette their pasture in all hye places.

nes, & my footepathes shal be exalted. And behold they shall come from farr: so, some from the north & west, some fro the lande of Symp, which is in the south. * Reioyce ye heauens: and syng praples, thou earth. * Talke of hope ye heuyls, for God hath comforted his people, & wyl haue mercye vpon his that be in trouble.

¶ But God said, * God hath forsake, & my lord hath forgott me. * Al a wife forget a childe of her wombe, & not putre the sonne who she hath borne. And though she do forget, yet wil I not forget the. Behold, I haue written the vp vnto my handes, thy walles are euer in my sight. They make hast to builde the vp again. As for those that ouerthwe the, & made the wast, they shal departe from the. * Lyfte vp thine eyes, & looke about the: al these gather the together & come to the. As truly as I liue, saith the Lord, I shal put them al vpon the: as an apparel, and gird the to as a byrde doth her Jewels. As for thy lande that lieth desolat, wasted & destroyed, it shal be so narrowe for the that shal dwell in it. And they shal wolde deuoure the, they shal be farr away. Then a childe who shal be byng forth vnto the, shal saye in thine eare: this place is so narrowe, genc place that I may haue rounne. The shal I thinke by thy self: who hath begotten me these: syng I am bare alone, a captiue & an outcast. And who hath nourished the vp for me? I am desolat & alone, but fro where come these.

¶ And therfore thus saith the Lord God: Behold I wyl streche out myne hande to the Gentiles and let vp my token to the people. They shal byng the thy sonnes in their lappes: and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulers. For kinges shal be thy nursing fathers, & queenes shal be thy nursing mothers. They shal sal before the with their faces flat vnto the earth: & lyche vp the dust of thy feet: that thou maist know how that I am the Lord. * And who so putterh his trust in me shal not be confounded. * Who spoiled the graue of his pray: or who taketh the prisoner from the myghty: And therfore thus saith the Lord: The prisoners shal be taken from the graue: and the spoule deliuered from the violent, for I wyl maintayne thy cause agaynst thyne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wyl se thyne enemies with their owne fleshe, & make them drinke of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all fleshe shal knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lord, thy saupour, thy noble redeemer.

¶ The Iewes are reproued, and also called.

¶ Thus sayth the Lord: * Where is the byl of I your mothers deuourer? I sent her a way: or who is the vsurer to who I solde you? * Beholde, for your owne offences are pe solde, & bycause of your transgression, is your mother forsake. For why wold no man receiue me when I came? & when I called, no man gaue me answere. * As my hande shortned, that it myght not helpe: or haue I no power to deliuer: so as a word I drinke vp the see, & of the founteynes I make drye lande: so that for want of water of water the fythe corrupte and dye for synners. * As for women, I clothe with darchenes, & put as it were a sacke upon it.

B The Lorde God hath geuen me a wel learned tonge, * so that I can comfort them whiche are troubled: yee, and that in due season, he wakeneth me up by times in the moynynge, by times in the moynynge. I say: he wyl wake myne eare & I myght herk as to the scole masters. * The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye nape: noz withdraue my selfe: * but

C I offer my backe vnto the smiters, and my cheekes to the nippers. * I turne not my face from shame and spyttyng: and the Lorde God shall helpe me therfore shall I not be confounded I haue herdened my face lyke a synthe stone, for I am sure that I shall not come to confusyon. He is at hande that iustified me, who wyl then go with me to lawe: Let vs stande one against another: if there be any that wil reason with me let him come here forth to me. * Behold, y Lorde God standeth by me, what is he then that can condemne / loo, * they shall be lyke as an olde clothe, the moth shall eate them up.

Therfore, whoso feareth the Lorde amonge you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruaunte. Whoso walketh in darchenes, and no light shyneth vpo him, let him put his trust in the name of the Lorde, & holde him by his God. But take heed, ye al hyndle a fyre of the wrath of God, & steare vp the cooles, walke on in the glistering of your owne fyre, & in the cooles that ye haue hyndled. This cometh vnto you from my hand namely that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

H Erken vnto me, ye f holde of ryghte trounses, and ye that seue the Lorde Take heed vnto the stone, wherout ye are hewn, and to the graue wherout ye are digged. Consider. * Abba ham your father and Sara that bare you: howe I called him alone, and blessed him, & encreased him. Therfore shall the Lorde comforte Syon, and repayre all her decaye, making her deserte as a paradyse: & her wyldernes as the garden of the Lorde. Myrrh and ioye shall be founde there thaniggyng & the voyce of prayse. haue respect vnto me then, O my people both hygh and lowe and laye thyn eare to me: for a lawe & a bypnaunce shall go forth fro me, to lychten the Gentiles. And therfore, thou miserable & dyshen: he to be it not with wine, hear this: Thus sayth the Lorde: thy Lorde, & God f defender of his people: Beholde: I wyl take the sloumyng cuppe oute of thy hande, eue the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath: that fro henceforth, thou shalt neuer drynke it moze, but I wyl put it into their hande that trouble the: which haue spoken to thy soule, stoupe downe, that we may go ouer the, and thou laydest thy bodye euen with the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

Lord ſhal go before you, and the God of Iſrael ſhall gather you together.

Behold, my ſeruaunt ſhal deale wyſely, therfore ſhall he be magnified, exalted, and greatly honoured. Like as the multitude ſhall wonder vpon him, be cauſe his face ſhal be ſo deformed and not as a mans face, his * betwylke no mā Euen ſo ſhall the multitude of ſ Gentiles loke vnto him, and kynges ſhal put their mouthes before him. * For they that haue not ben told of him, ſhal ſee him, and they that heard no thyng of him ſhall beholde him.

¶ The propheticall ſuccenſſy of the Poſſion of our Saviour Ieſus Chriſt.

¶ BUt who hath * geut credence vnto ſ thyng ſ we haue heard: O: to who is the arme of the Lord knowe: For he dyd grow before the Lord like as a braunch and as a roſe in a drie grounde, * he hath nether betwile no: fauoure. When we ſhal loke vpon him there ſhal be no ſaynes: we ſhal haue no luſt vnto him. * he is deſpiſed & abhored of men, he is ſuch man as is aful of ſorrowe as hath good experience of infirmities: We haue reſhened him ſo vile, ſ we dyd our faces from him: yee, he was diſpiſed and therefore we regarded him not. Howbeit * he onely hath taken on him our infirmities, & bozne our paines. Yet we dyd iudge him, as though he were plagued and caſt downe of God: and punyſhed * where as he (not withſtandyn) was wounded for oure offences, and ſmitten for our wickednes. For the chaſtiſement of our peace was layde vpon him, and with his ſtrippes we are healed.

* As for vs, we haue goone all aſtrape (like ſhepe) euerie one hath turned his owne waye.
But the Lord hath heaped together vpon him the iniquitie of vs al he ſuffered violence & was euell increated, and dyd not yet open his mouth * he ſhal be led as a ſhepe to be ſlayne, yet ſhall he be as ſyll as a lambe before the ſhearer, and not open his mouth. he was had a waye from pyſon: his cauſe not hearde and without anye iudgemente: Whoſe generacion yet who maye nombr: he was cut of from the ground of the liuyng: whiche punyſhement dyd go vpon hym, for the tranſgreſſion of my people, which in dede had deſerued that punyſhment. * His graue was geuen him with the condemned, and with the riche man at his death. * Where as he dyd neuer violence no: vnyght, neyther hath there bene anye deſeractulnes in his mouth.

* Yet hath it pleaſed the Lord thus to burſte him with plagis, and to ſmyte him with inſpymites, that when he had made his ſoule an offeryng for ſynne he myght ſe longe laſtyng ſced And this deuyce of the Lord ſhall proſpere in his hande. With treuall and labour of his ſoule, ſhal he optayne frute and he ſhal be ſatiſfied * by the knowlege of him whiche is my righteous ſeruaunt: he ſhal iuſtifie the multitude, for he ſhal beare a way their ſynnes. Therefore wel I gene hym the multitude for his patie, and he ſhal deuide the ſpoyle with ſ ſtrongeſt, becauſe he geureth ouer his ſoule to deatch. * And is reſe-ned among the tranſgreſſours, which neuerthe-leſſe hath taken a waye the ſynnes of the multitude, and made interceſſion for the myſdoers.

The

C The lviij. Chapter.

The rightuous periseth, & no man regardeth it in his hart. Good godly people are taken a way, and no man consydereth it. Namely, that synners is conueyed a way fro the wiche. He cometh into peace, and godly men rest in their chaunces, and before the godlye man goeth peace. Come hither therfore ye chauncers chyliden, & ye sonnes of the aduouterer, and the whore: wherein take ye your pleasure / vpon whiche gape ye with your mouth, and beare out your tongue: Are ye not chyliden of aduoutre? And a seed of dissimulation? Ye make your eye vnder the oke, and vnder all grene trees, and ye offre chyliden in the vallies and denes of stone. Thy parte shalbe with the stony rockes by the ciuer. Yea, euen these shalbe thy parte. For they thou hast poured meate and drinke offering vnto them. Shoulde I delpe in that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaines, thou wentest vp thither, and there thou hast slaine sacrileces. * Behynde the doores and postes hast thou set vp thy remembraunce.

When thou haddest discovered thy selfe to another then me, when I wentest vp, & made thy bed wider, & with those ydoles hast thou made a covenante, & loudest their couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest streight to kinges with oyle & diuers oymmentes, that is thou hast sent thy messenges farre of, & yet arte thou fallen into the piete therby. Thou art weep for the multitude of thine owne wales, yet saidest thou neuer, I wil leaue of. * Thou hast had the life that thy handes wrought, & therfore I arte carelesse. For when wylt I be a bashed of feare seeing thou hast broken thy promise, and remembrest not me, neither hast me in thine hart? Thinkest thou, that I also wil holde my peace, as a foretyme, that thou fearest me not? Yea, verely I wyl declare thy goodnesse & thy workes, but they shall not prosper the: when thou cryest, let thy chosen hepe deliuer the. But the winde shal blowe them forth, and vanitie shal take them all away. * Steuerthelesse, they put their trust in me, shall inherite the lande: and haue my holpe hyl in possession.

D And therfore thus he sayth: * Make playne, make playne: & cleanse the stret, take vpon thy stumbling blockes oute of the way & leade the to my people. For thus sayeth the hye and excellent, euen he I dwell in euerylastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwell hye about: and in the Sanctuary, and with him also that is of a contrite and humble spyrte do I dwell: that I may deale a troubled mynde, & a contrite hart. * For I chide not euer, and am not wroth with out ende. But the blaspheming goeth from me: and is included in the body, and I made the breath: I am wroth with him for his couetousnesse. I smyte him, I hyde me, & am angry, wyl he turne him selfe, and foloweth the hy waye of his owne herte. I haue sene his wayes, and I deale him: * I leade him, and restore to hym comfort, and to those that were sorow, with him. I make the feutes of thankesgyuing, that demay say: Peace, peace: vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nyghe, sayeth the Lord, and I make him whole. But the wycked are like the ragging sea, that can not reste, whose water fommeth with the myze and grauell. * Euen so the wycked haue no peace, sayth God.

C The lviii. Chapter.

(The Lord by the mouth of the prophet sayeth the people for they sayyng, I wyll be full of synners)

Come now as loud as thou canst, & leaue not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, & shewe my people theyr offences, & the house of Jacob theyr synnes. For they seke me daily, and wyl know my wayes, euen as it were a people that oyd right, & had not forsaken the statutes of theyr God. They argue with me concernyng ryght iudgement, and wyl be nye vnto God. * Therfore fast we (saye they) and thou seest it not: we put our lyues to straitnesse, and thou regardest it not.

* Behold, when ye fast, your lust remaineth: I say, for ye do no lesse violence to your detters: lo ye fast to stryfe & debate, & to synne wylt of wyckednesse. Nowe ye shall not faste thus that you maye make your voyce be heard aboue.

* Thinke ye this fast pleaseth me, & a maid chaste him selfe for a day, & to wishe his heed aboute lyke a hoke, & to lye vpon fearth in an heape cloth? Shoulde that be called fastyng, or a daye that pleaseth the Lord? Doeth not this fastyng rather please me, & thou loose him oute of bondage, that is in thy daunger: that I ozake the othe of wicked bargaynes: that thou let the oppressed go free, & take from the all maner of burthenes: & to deale thy bread to the hungry, and byng the pooze wandryng, home into thyne house: when thou seest I naked that thou couer him, & hyde not thy face from thy neygbdoure, (and besyde that not thyne owne flesh.)

* Then shal thy light breake forth as the moyning, & thy health flourish right woefully, thy righteounesse shal go before the, and the glory of I Lord shal embrace the. * The yf thou callest, I Lord shal answer the: yf I cryest, he shall saye: here I am. Yea, yf thou layest away fro the thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, & ceasest fro blasphemous talkyng, yf thou hast compassid vpon the hungry, and refrestest the troubled soule: Then shall the lyghte spyrng oute in the darkenesse, & the darkenesse shalbe as the none day. The Lord shal cure be thy guide, & satisfy I desire of thine hart in I tyme of drought & fyl thy bones w mary. Thou shalt be like a freshe watered garde: lyke I fountaine of water I neuer leauest drynyng. Then the places I haue euer ben waste shalbe builded of the: there shalt thou lay a foudacion for many kynreds. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of bedges, and the buylder agayne of the waye of the Ihaboth.

Yea, yf thou turne thy lere in the * Saboth, so that thou do not the thing which pleaseth thy selfe in my holy daye, and thou cal the pleasant holpe and glorious habour of the Lorde, and that thou geue him the honour, so that he do not after thine owne pynagination, either seke thine owne wyl, nor speake thine owne wordes. Then walste thou haue thy pleasure in the Lorde, and I wyl carrie the hye above the earth, & seide the with the heritage of Jacob thy father for the Lordes owne mouth hath so promised.

The .lxv. Chapter.

I Behold, * the Lordes hande is not so weakened, & it cannot helpe, neither is his care so stopped that it maye not heare. But * your misdeedes haue sepe- rated you from your God, & your * sinnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. For your handes are defyled with bloude, and your fyngers with vnrightheousnesse. Your lippes speake leasynge, and your tongue stretcheth out wretchednes: so man regardeth rightheousnesse, and no man iudgeth truly. Currye man hopeth in vaine thynges, and pynagineth disceate * conceaith wearenes, & bringeth forth euil. They beede Cockatrice egges, and weaue the spiders webbe: Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one create vpon them: ther cometh vpon a serpente. They webbe maketh no clothe, and they maye not couer them with their laboures. Their beddes are the beddes of wretchednesse, and the woich of robbery is in their beddes. * Their feete runne to euil, and they make haste to shed innocent bloude, their counceils are wicked coun- cels, harme * and destructione are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goinges is no quite: their wayes are so croked y whosoeuer goeth therein knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause that quite is so far from vs, and that rightheousnes cometh not neare vs. * We loke for lighte, loo, it is darcknes, for the morning myne: se, we walke in darcke. * We grope lyke the blynde vpon the wal, we grope euen as one y hath none eyes. We stobbe at y none day as though it were toward vnght in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe deade. We moue all lyke Beares, and mourne vpon lyke dours. We loke for quite, but there is none: for health, but it is farre fro vs. For oure offences are manye before the, and oure synnes testifye against vs: Yee, we must confesse that we offende, and knowlege that we do amysse: Namely, transgresse and dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall awape frome oure God vyinge presumptuous and trayterous pynaginations, and callinge false matters into our herthes. And therfore is quite gone aside, and rightheousnes standeth farre off, & truthe is fallen downe in the strette, and the thing that is plaine & open, may not be heard. Yee the truthe is taken awape, & he that refrayneth him selfe from euil, muste be spoiled. When the Lorde saide this, it displeased him so, that there was no quite. He sawe also, that there was no man rightheous, and he wond: d that there was no man to helpe hym. Wherfore he helde hym by his owne power, and he sustayneth him by his owne rightheous- nes. He * put rightheousnes vpon hym for a brest plate, he set the helmet of health vpon his heade he put on watch in steade of clothing, and toke geulousye aboute hym for a cloke: (like as when a man goeth forth watchfully to recompence his enemies, and to be auenged of his aduersaries) * Namely, that he myght recompence & reward the Ilandes, wher the howe y name of the Lorde myghte be feared from the ryling of the sunne and his maiestie, vnto the goinge downe of the same. For he shal come as a violet water streame which the winde of the Lorde hath moued.

* But vnto Sion there shal come a redeemer and vnto them in Jacob that turne fro wretched- nes sayeth the Lorde. I wyl make this couena- unt with them (sayeth the Lorde) My spyt that is vpon the, and the wordes whiche I haue put in thy mouth shal neuer go out of thy mouth, nor oute of the mouth of thy chyldren chyldren, from this tyme forth for euermore world with oute ende, sayeth the Lorde.

The .lxvi. Chapter.

Et the vpon tymes, be vnght I (O Ierusalem) for thy * lyghte cometh and the gloire of the Lorde is ryfen vpon the. For loo, while y darcke- nesse and cloude couereth the earthe & the people, the Lorde shal shewe the lyght and his gloire shalbe sene in the. * The Gentyles shal come to thy lyghte, & hynges to the bright- nes that spryngeth forth vpon the. * Lette vpon thine eyes, & looke rounde about the. All these gather them selues: and come to the, thy sonnes shal come vnto the from farre, & thy daughters shal gather them selues to the on euerye syde. Then thou shalt se this: and be glorious, thou shalt maruaile exceedynge, and thine herre shalbe opened, when the aboundance of the sea shalbe couered vnto y (that is) wher the riches of the Gentyles shal come vnto the, the multi- tudes of Camels, shal couer the, the Dyomedar- ies of Adian and Cyba, * All they of Baba shal come, bringyng golde and incence, & theye inge the prayse of the Lorde. * All castell of Ce- dar shalbe gathered vnto the, & rames of Baba loth shal serue the, to be offered acceptabyle vpon the altar, * whiche I haue chosen: & in the house of my gloire whiche I haue garnished. But what are these that be here like y cloudes and as the dounes flyng to the? Wyndowes? The Iles also shal wayte for me, and specy- ally the Whippes of Tharsys, & they may bring thy sonnes from farre, and their siluer and their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto y holy one of Israell, chae hath glorified the: * Strangers shal buyde vpon thy walles, and the Kynges shal do the seruyce. For wher I was angry, I smote the: and of my c- mencye, I pardoned the: thy gates shal stand open vpon day and nyght, and neuer be shut that the hood of the Gentiles may come, and that their kynges may be brought vnto y. For euery people & hyngedom that serueth not the, shal shal perishe and be destroyed with utter destruction. The glory of Libanus shal come vnto þe The fyre trees, Sorens & Cedars together, to garnyshe the place of my Sanctuary for I wyl glorifye the place of my sece.

Moreover, those shal come knelyng vnto the, that haue vaxed the: and all they that despised the, shal fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cytie of the Lozde. Upon the cytie of the holy one of Israell. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated: so that no man wente thorow the: I wyl make the glorious for ever and to full thowout all posterities. * Thou shalt sucke the mylic of the Gentyles, and kinges brestes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lozde am thy sauour and redemer the mighty one of Jacob. For byasse wyl I gene the golde, and for pyon syluer: for wood brasse, and for stoness pyon. I wyl turne thine oppression into prayce, and thine exactions into ryghteousnes. Violence & robbery shal neuer be heard of in thy lande, neyther barne and destruccion within thy borders: Thy walles shalbe called helde, and thy gates the prayse of God. * The sunne shal neuer be thy daylyght: and the lyght of the mone shal neuer thine vnto the: but the Lozde hym selfe shalbe thine euerlastyng light and thy God shalbe thy glorye.

* The sunne shal neuer goo downe, and the mone shal not be hyd: for þe Lozde hym selfe shal be thine euerlastyng lyght, and thy sorrowfull dayes shalbe ended. Thy people shalbe al righteous & possesse thy lande euer, the flower of my plantynge: the worke of my handes, wherof I wyl reioyce. The yongest and least shal grow into a thousand, and the symplest into a strong people: I the Lozde shal hostely bynge this thyng to passe in this tyme.

¶ The prophete sayeth that Christe shalbe anointed & sent to preache.

In the spere of the Lozde God is vpon and sent me to preache good thynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde by the wounded heetes: that I myght preache deliuerance to the captiue, & open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable yere of the Lozde, and the daye of vengeance of our God: that I myght com-forte all them that are in deuynes, that I might gene vnto them that mourne in Sion, that I myght gene I sape hewty in steade of ashes, ioy full oynement for syghyng, pleasaunt ratymente for an heuy mynde. That they myght be called trees of ryghteousnes, a plantyng of the Lozde for hym to reioyce in.

They shal buyde the longe rougher wildernes, & set vp the wild desert, they shal repaire þe wast places, & such as haue bene voide thowout oute many generacions. Strangers shal stand and fede your cattell, and the Aleuantes shalbe your plowmen & dyers of your vines. * But ye shalbe named þe priestes of þe Lozde: men shal call you the seruauntes of our God. Ye shal enioye the goodes of the Gentyles, & triumphe in theys substaunce. For your greete reproche you shall haue double lope, and for shame shal they haue lope of theys poeison. For they shal haue double possession in theys lande, & euerlastyng lope shalbe with them. For I the Lozde which loue ryghte & hate robbery (though it were offer-red me) shal make theys workes full of fayth-fulnesse and make an euerlastyng conuauente with them.

Their sece also: and theys generacyon shal be knowne amonge the Gentyles, and among the people. All they that see them, shal knowe that they are the hygh blessed sece of the Lozde.
And therfore * I am ioyfull in the Lozde, and my soule reioyceth in my God. * For he hath put vpon me the garment of saluacion: and co-uered me wth the mantell of ryghteousnesse.

* He shal decke me lyke a bydegrome, & as a byde that hath her apparill vpon her. For lyke as the grounde bynggeth forth frute, and as the garden hosteth forth sece: so shal þe Lozde God cause ryghteousnes, and prayse to flosythe forth before all the heathen.

The lxi Chapter.

¶ A prophete of the comyng of Christe.

In Sions sake therfore wyl I not holde my tonge and for Ierusalem sake: I wyl not cease vntill theys ryghteousnesse byake forth as the burnyng lyghte, and theys saluacyon as a burnyng lampe. Then shal þe Gentiles see thy ryghteousnes, and all bynges thy glorye.
Thou shalt be named wth a newe name, which the mouth of þe Lozde shal shew. Thou shalt be a crowne in the hande of the Lozde, & a glorious garland in the hand of thy God. Fro this tyme forth thou shalt neuer be called the forsaken, & thy lande shalbe nomore called the wyldernes but thou shalt be called my pleasure is in her: & thy land shalbe called þe maryed woman, for the Lozde loueth the and thy lande shalbe ioynd in marryage. * And lyke as a ponge man taketh a doughter to marryage, so shal thy sonne be maryed vnto the. And as a bydegrome is glad of his byde, so shal thy God reioyse ouer the.

I haue set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Ierusalem) whiche shal neyther cease day nor nyghte to preache the Lozde. And ye also that remembre the Lozde, ye shal not kepe hym close nor leane to speake of hym vntill Ierusalem be set vp, & made the prayse of þe Lozde. The Lozde hath sworne by his ryght hand & by his strong arme, that fro henceforth he wyl not gene thy cozne to be meat for thine enemies, nor thy vine (wherein thou hast laboured) to be dynke for the straungers. But they that haue gathered in the cozne shal eate it, and gene thankes vnto þe Lozde and they þe haue bozne in the wyne, shal dynke it in the courte of my Sanctuary.

So you go you thowout þe gates make cleane the way for þe people, make plaine, make plaine the fote path, and take awaye the stoness out of it, and set out a token for the people.

Beholde, the Lozde proclaymeth vnto the endes of the world: tell þe doughter Sion: see G. d. thy thy dampoure cometh: behold, he dyngeth his treasure with by, and his woche god before him. For they whome I Lorde deliuereth shall be called the holy people: and as for the, which be named the greatie occupied, and not the forsaken cytie.

The lxiii. Chapter.

Of the redemption promysed to the people.

What is he this, that cometh from Edon, with red colored clothes of Sofra: (which is so coslye cloth) and cometh in so myghtely with all his strengthe. I am he that sea-cherd ryghteousnes, and am of power to helpe Wherfore then is thy clothynge red, & thy rap-ment lyke dy that treadeth in the wine presse?
I haue troden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people there is not one with me.

Thus wyll I treade downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my fete vpon them in my indignation. And they: bloude shall be spreunge my clothes, and so wyll I stayne al my raiment with.

* For the daye of vengeance is assigne in my herte, and the yere when my people shall be deliuered is come. I looked aboute me, and there was no man to shew me any helpe: I marvelled that no man helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse sustay-ned me. And thus wyll I treade downe the people in my wrath, and bath them in my dyspleasure, & vpon the earth wyll I laye the strength

* I wyll declare the goodnes of the Lorde, yet, and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the great good that he hath done for Israel: whiche he hath geuen them of his owne fauour, and accordyng to the multitude of his lounge kyndnesse. For he sayde: These no doubte are my people, and no shynking chyldren, so he was they: saupour. In they: troubles, he was also troubled with them, and the Caugell that went forth from his presence de-liuered them: Of very loue and kyndnes that he had vnto the, he redeemed the. He hath doone them and carped them vp, euer sence the world began. But after they prouoked him to wrath and vexed his holy mynde, he was they: enemy and fought agaynst the hymself. Yet remembred Israel the olde tyme of Moses and his people sayng: Wher is he that brought them from the water of the see: with them y feede his shepe Wher is he that hath geuen his holy spact: amonge them: he led them by the ryght hande of Moses with his glayous arme: deuidyng the water before them (wherby he gat hym self an euertlasting name) he led them in the depe, as an hazle is led in the playn, & they shulde not stumble as a tame beaste goeth in the felde: and the lyeth geuen of God, geuerd hym rest.

Thus O God: haste thou led thy people, to make thy self a glayous name world. Loke downe then from heauen, and beholde the dwellynge place of thy Sanctuarie, and thy glayse howe is it that thy gelospe, thy strengthe, the multitude of thy mercyes, and thy lounge kynd-nes wyll not be entreated of vs: Pet arte & our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquainted with vs. But I Lorde art our father and redeemer, and thy name is euerlasting. O Lorde, Wherfore hast thou led vs out of the waye: Wherfore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare I not: We at one with vs agayne, for thy seruantes sake, & for the generacyon of thyne herpage. Thy people haue had but a lytle of thy sanctuarie in possession: for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holie place. And we were thyne from the begynnyng when thou wast not they: Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

The lxiiii. Chapter.

Of the prophecie: whiche the people of the Jewes (whiche they call the house of David) shal receyue in the daye of the resurrection of the dead.

What thou woldest cleaue the seamen in sondre, and come downe: that the mountaines myght melt a waye at thy presence, lyke as an whote sy-er: and that the malicyns myght boyle as the water doeth vpon the fyre.

Wherby thy name might be knowne among thyne enemyes, and that the Gentyles myghte tremble before the. When thou wroughteste wonders straunge wayes, we looked not for them. Thou camest downe, and the hylls melted at thy presence. For sence I begynnyng: of the world it hath not bene heard or perceued, nether hath any eie sene another god beside I whiche doest so much for them I put they: trust in the.

Thou helpest hym that doeth ryghte with cheerfulnesse and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But loo: thou hast bene angrie, for we offended, and haue bene euer in synne, though I wolde haue cleaued to them: yet shal we be saued. We are all as an vncleane thyng & all our ryghteousnes are as the clothes of a woman, we fall euer chone as the leafe for our synnes carpe vs a waye lyke I wynde.

There is no man that called vpon thy name that standeth vp to take hold by the. Therfore hidest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs because of our synnes. But now, O Lorde, thou father of ours: we are thy clays, and I art oure porter, & we all are the worke of thy handes.

* Be not so soze displeased (O Lorde) & hepe not oure offences to longe in thy remembraunce but consider that we are all thy people. The cy-te of thy Sanctuarie lyeth wast: Zion is a wil-dernes, & Jerusalem a deserte. Oure holy house whiche is our beutie, where our fathers prayled the, is brynte vp: yee all oure commodities and pleasures are wasted away. Wylt I not be in-treated (Lorde) for all this: Wylt thou holde thy peace and scorge vs so soze?

The lxv. Chapter.

Of the fallacye of Jerusalem and the calling of the heathen.

They seke me, that hyder to haue not I asked for me, they synde me & hyder: to haue not soughte me, I haue sayde I am here. I am here, I am found of a people I neuer called vpon my name. For thus long haue I euer holden out my handes to an vn-sayful people that go not the ryght way, but after after their owne pmaginations: To a people is euer desynge me to my face. * They make their oblations in gardens, & their smoke vpon ankers of byrche, they lurke among the gra-nes: & lye in theyr benches all night. * They eat swynnes flethe: & vncleane byrth is in theyr vessels. If thou comest nye them, they saye touche me not: for I am holper then thou.

All these men when I am angry, shalbe turned to smoke and * fyre that shal burne for euer.
Behold, it is written before my face, & shal not be forgotten, but recompensed. * I shal reward it them into theyr bosome: I meane your misde-des, and the mysdoes of your fathers together (sayth the Lord) which haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaynes, and blasphemed me vpon the hylls: therfore wyl I measure their old de-des into theyr bosome againe. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: * lyke as when one wolde gather holy grapes, men saye vnto him: bpeake it not of, for it is holy: * euen so wyl I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I wyl not destroye them all. But I wyl take a sede out of Jacob & out of Iuda one, to take possession of my hyll.

My chosen shal possesse these thynges & my seruauntes shal dwell there. Sharon shalbe a shepe fold, and the valley of Echoz shal greue & stat lyng for the cattell of my people that feare me.

But as for you, ye are they that haue forsake the Lord, & forgotten my holy hyl. Ye haue set vp an auker vnto Iuppter, and giuen rich drinke offerings vnto the planetes. Therfore wyl I nombr you with the sword, that ye shalbe destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me answer: wher I spake, ye hardened not vnto me but byd wychednesse before mine eyes and chose the thyng that pleased me not.

Therefore, thus saith the Lord God: Beholde my seruantes shal eat, but ye shal haue hunger Behold, my seruantes shal drinke, but ye shal suffer thyrst. Behold, my seruantes shal be mery but ye shalbe confounded. Behold, my ser-uantes shal reioyce for a very quyetnes of hert but ye shal crye for sorow of hert: & complain for veracis of mid. Your name ye shal leaue accursed amonge my chosen, for God the Lord shal slaye you, and call his seruantes by another name. * Whoso reioyseth vpon earth, shal reioyse in the true God. And whoso sweareth vpon earth shal sweare in the true God. For the olde enemye shalbe forgotten, and taken awaye out of my syghte. * For lo, I shal make a newe heauen and a newe earth. And as for the olde, they shal neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in mynd: but the Lord sayth: be glad and euermore reioyse, for the thynges that I shal do.

For why? Beholde, I shal make a ioyfull Jerusalem, and his people ioyful: yee, I myselfe wyl reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people. * And the voyce of weeping & waylyng shal not be heard in her from thence forth.
There shal neither be chyld, nor olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chyld commeth to an. C. yere olde it shal dye. And yet be that is an. C. yere of age do wyng he shalbe curse. * They shal buyde houses and dwell in them they shal plant vineyardes, and eate the frute of them: They shal not buyde and another possesse: they shal not plant, & another eate.

* But the lyfe of my people shalbe lyke a tree, and so shal the worke of theyr handes.

My chosen shal lyue longe, they shal not laboure in vayne, nor beget wiche trouble: for they are the bygh blessed sede of the Lord, and theyr frutes with them. And it shalbe, that of euer they call, I shal answer them.

Whyle they are yet but thynkyng how to speake, I shal heare them. * The wolfe and the lambe shal fede together, and the Lyon shal eat haye lyke the bulloche. * But earth shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal no man hurte nor slay another, in al my holy hyl, saith the Lord.

The lxxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hands. He despiseth sacrifices done withoute mercy and fayth. God chos-eth them that are troubled for his sake, amonge the Chyrtien: the Abbot is continuall.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * Heauen is my seate, and the earth is my footestole, where shal I nowre & house stand that ye wyl buyde vnto me? And where shalbe the place that I wyl dwell in. As for these thynges my hande hath made them all and they are all created, sayeth the Lord.

Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is pooze & of a lowlye troubled spere and standeth in a we of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me doth me to greate dysponour as he that kylleth a man. He that kylleth a shepe for me, knetchech a dogge. He that byn-geth me meat offerings, offereth swines bloude.

Whoso maketh me a memoriaill of incence, prayseth the thyng that is vnyrghe. Yet take they such thynges in hande, and theyr soule de-lyteth in these abhominacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in laugh-yng them to scoone, and & thyng that they feare wyl I byrnyng vpon them. * For when I called no man gaue answer: when I spake they wold not heare: But did wychednes before mine eyes and chose the thynges that displeas me. Heare the worde of the Lord all that feare the thyng whiche he speaketh. Your brethren & hate you and cast you oute for my names sake, say: The Lord is greuous agaynst vs: but you shal see hym in ioye when they shalbe confounded.

Then shalbe heard a great noyse from the cyrte and the temple, the voyce of the Lord, that wyl reward, and recompence his enemies, lyke as wher a wyfe byngeth forth a man child of euer she suffre the paine of the byrth, and an gryth of the trauell. Who euer hearde of sawe suche thynges: doth & ground beare in one day, or are the people bozne at once, as Dion trauled in childe byrth & bare her sonnes: For thus sayeth the Lord.

Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh barren: sayeth the God? Reioyse with Jerusalem, & be glad with her, all ye that loue her: * Be ioyful with her, al ye that mourned for

The Prophecie.

The booke of the Pro phet Jeremie.

The fyrste Chapter.

The floure of Jeremie, an infant borne by prophesie. He expressed himselfe in the office of a prophet because he is taught of the Lord, and he himselfe telleth what he hath heard of the Lord. Jeremie is commanded to speak the word of God unto the Jews without feare.

These are the sermons of Jeremie the sonne of helkiah the priest one of them that dwelt at Bethanath in the lande of Benjamin when the Lord had first spoken with hym in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amion: kynge of Juda, in the thirtene yearre of his reigne: and so during vnto the tyme of Jeboahym the sonne of Josaph kynge of Juda, and vntill the xi. yearre of zedekiah sonne of Josaph kynge of Juda were ended, when Jerusalem was taken, euen in the fyfte moneth.

The worde of the Lord spake thus vnto me, before I had coneyed in my mothers wombe I dyd knowe the. And o ever thou walke bozne

I sanctified the, & ordeined the to be a prophet vnto the people. Then sayd I: Oh Lord God I cannot speake, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lord answered me thus. Saye not so I am yonge.

For I will go to all that I shall sende the vnto: & what soeuer I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of the faces. For I am with the, to deliuer the saith the Lord.

And with that, the Lord stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & the same Lord sayde vnto me: Beholde, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde: this daye doo I set the ouer the people & kyngdomes that thou mayste roote out, breake of, destroy and make waste & that thou mayest buyde vp and planter. After this the Lord spake vnto me, sayng: Jeremie what seest thou? And I sayde: I see a rod of an almonde tree. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Thou hast seene ryght, for I will make hast spe dely vpon my worde, to perfourme it. It happened afterward that the Lord spake to me agayn, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I dese a serpyng: & pot lokyng frome out of the Rothe.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I will call all the kyngdomes of the North (sayeth the Lord). And they shall come, and euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, in theyr walles rounde aboute, and in all the cyties of Juda. And thowowe theim shall I declare my iudgement vpon all synners of those men that haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto straunge goddes, and worshipped the images of theyr owne handes.

And therfore gyde by thy loynes, arpe & tell them all, that I geue the in commaundment feare them not, lest I destroy the before them. For behold, this daye do I make the a strong defended for her. For ye shall see some of the dwellers, and be satisfied. Ye shall see, and haue deliue in the plente of the power. For thus saith the Lord: Beholde, I will let peace come vnto her. Water shal be and the mightie of the heathen lyke a flowing streame. Then shall ye see, ye shall be bozne vpon her sides, and be topfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shall reioyse, & your bones shall saye lyke an herbe.

Thus shall the hande of the Lord be knowne amonge his seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lord shall come with fyre, & his charret shall be lyke a whyle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeance in his wrath, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the Lord shall Judge all fleshe with the fyre, and with his sword, and there shall be a great nombre slaine of the Lord. Such as haue made the felues holy and cleane in gardens, and those that haue eaten swynes flesh, myce, and other abhominacions, these shall come and see my gloire. Vnto theim shall I geue a token and sende a certayn of the (that be deliuered) amonge the Gentiles: into Cilicia, Africa, and Lybia, where men can handle bowes into Italie, and also Grekelande.

Jer. vii. 1. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

The Isles farre of, I haue not heard speake of me, and haue not sent my gloire, shall preache my praise amonge the Gentiles and shall bring al your brethren for an offering vnto the Lord out of all people, vpon horses, charettes, horse lytters, vpon mules, and carres to Jerusalem my holy hyl (sayeth the Lord) lyke as the chyliden of Israel, bring the offering in cleane vessels to the house of the Lord.

The.ii. Chapter.

God reuerſeth by benefytes howe into the Iewes agaynst the prestes and prophetes, or preachers that contemne and deſpyſe God. The Iewes are deſerued, because they ſay the God, and bytrauſe they cannot a worſhipping after people.

Ouer, the word of y Lozde came vnto me, ſaying: So thy way, cpe in the eares of Ierusalem, and ſaye thus ſayeth the Lozde: I remember the, for the kynedneſſe of thy youthe and bycauſe of thy ſtedfaſt loue, at the tyme of thy deſpouſyng, in that thou foloweſt me thowowe the wylderneſſe, in an vnplowed lande. Iſrael was an halowed thyng vnto the Lozde, and ſo was his ſpyte frutes. * All they that deuoure Iſrael ſhall offend: my fortune ſhall fall vpon them, ſayth the Lozde. Here therfore the word of the Lozde. O thou houſe of Iacob, and all the generacions of the houſe of Iſrael. Thus ſayeth the Lozde.

What vnſaythfulneſſe founde your fathers in me, that they went ſo farre away fro me, ſayinge to lygheſneſſe, and byyng ſo vaine? They thought not in they: heres: Wher haue we left the Lozde y brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte: * that led vs thowowe y wilderneſſe, thowowe a deſert and rough lande thowowe a dyke and a deadlye lande: pea a lande y no man had gone thowowe, and wherin no man had dwelt.

* And when I had broughte you into a pleaſante wel byplowed lande, that ye myght enioy the frutes and all the commodites of the ſame ye went forth and deſpyled my lande y broughte myne beytage to abhominacion.

The preſtes them ſelues ſaide not: Where is the Lozde? They that had the law in they: handes knowe me not: The ſpecheberdes offended agaynſt me. The Prophetes dyd ſerupce vnto Baal, and folowed ſuche thynges as ſhal byyng them no profyte.

Wherfore, I am conſtrayned (ſayeth the Lozde) to make my coplaynt vpon you, y vpon your chyldren chyldren: So into the ples of Ceſaym, and loke well: ſende vnto Cedar, take by lygheſe hede: eſe whether ſuche thynges be done there, whether the ſcayples the ſelues deale ſo falſely and vntuly with they: goddes (which yet ar no goddes in dede.) But my people haue gruen ouer they: hye honoure for a thyng that maye not helpe them.

Be aſtonyſhed, (O ye heauens) be aſtraled & aſhamed at ſuche a thyng, ſayeth the Lozde. For my people haue done it euyles. They haue forſaken me the well of y water of lyfe, and dygged them pyttes: pea dyke and broken pyttes, y can holde no water. In Iſrael a bonde ſeruaunt as one of the houſholde.

Why the is he ſo ſpoiled? Why do they roye & cry then vpon hym as a ſpon? They haue made his land waſt, * his cities are ſo byent by, that there is no man dwelling in the. Pee, the chyldre of Aſah and Caphtan haue deſpyled thy necke.

* Cometh not this vnto the, becauſe thou haſte forſaken the Lozde thy God, euer ſence he led the by the waye? And what haſte thou now to do in the ſtrete of Egypte: to drinke the water of Aſius? Eſther what maſt thou in the waye of Aſirya: To drinke water of y floude * Thynne owne wyckednes ſhal reſpoue the, and thy turnyng a waye ſhall condemne the, that thou mayſt knowe and vnderſtande, how euell and hurtfull a thyng it is, that thou haſte forſaken the Lozde thy God, y not feared hym, ſayeth the Lozde God of hoſtes. * I haue euer broken thy yoke of olde, and burſt thy bondes: yet ſayeſt thou: * I wyll nomore offende, but (lyke an harlot) thou runneſt aboute vpon all hye hylles, and amonge all greene trees, where as I planted the a noble vine and a good roote whole ſede is all ſayethfull. * Howe arte thou turned then into a bytter vnſtateful & ſtraſſe graper? Pee, and that ſo ſore: that though thou walke the with Aſytrus, and make thy ſelfe to ſanoure with that ſweete ſmelling herbe of Bozeth: yet in my lyght thou art ſtained with thy wyckednes, ſayeth the Lozde thy God.

Sape not now, I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed Baal. * Look vpon thynne owne wykes in the woodes, valleyes, and denes, ſo ſhalt thou knowe, what thou haſt done. Thou art lyke a ſwete dyomedar, that goeth eaſely his waye, and thy wantonnes is lyke a wyld aſſe, that bleth the wilderneſſe, and hat ſnoſſeth y bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that ſeke the ſhall not ſayle, but fynde th: in thynne owne vnclennes. Kepe thou thy ſelfe from nakedneſſe, and thy ſhote frome thpyſte, and wythoute ſhame thou anſwereſt. So, for I haue loued ſtraungers and them wyl I folowe.

Lyke as the cheſe that is taken with the dede cometh to ſhame, euen ſo is the houſe of Iſrael come to confulſion: the comen people, they: kinges and rulers, they: preſtes and prophetes.

* For they ſaye to a ſtocke, thou art my father: and to a ſtone, thou haſte begotten me. * yet they haue turned they: backe vpon me, and not they: face. * But in the tyme of they: trouble when they ſaye ſtande vp, and helpe vs: I ſhall anſwere them. Where are now thy gods, that thou haſt made y: let them ſtand vp & helpe the in the tyme of nede (yf they be able). * ſo loke howe many cities thou haſt (O Iuda) ſo many gods haſte thou alſo.

Wherfore then wyl ye gook to lawe with me, ſeyng ye all are ſynners agaynſt me ſayeth the Lozde? It is but loſte labour, that I ſmyte your chyldren, for they receiue not my correccion.

* Pour a ſwarte ſwearde deſtroyed youte prophetes lyke a deuourynge Lyon. O ye people: looke vpon the word of the Lozde. Am I then become a wyldernes vnto the people of Iſrael: as a lande that hath no lyght? Wherfore ſayth my my people then: we are Lordes, we will come no more vnto the: Worth a mayden forget her payment, as a byrde her stomacher: But as for my people, they haue forgotten my dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so highlye (to optayne fauoure there thowome) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemies and teachest thyne owne wayes?

The Prophecie.

Isa. 40. 1-2
Isa. 40. 5-6

* Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of pooze and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all these places. Per darrest thou say: I am innocent (without synne and) guiltlesse. Tylde his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condemne the in Judgemente because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to & fro to chaunge thy wayes? For thou shalt be confounded as wel of Egypt, as of the Assyrians: yee, thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smite thyne handes together vpon thine head. Because thou dost abhorre that confidence and hope of thine and thou shalt not prosper withall.

The .iii. Chapter.

God byng mercifull calleth vnto repentance his people, whiche he hath forsaaken for theyr iniquities with ydoles. He exhorteth Ierusalem vnto repentance promysynge therein her payment that shalbe haue the true knowledge of God. The seruants of Ierusalem vnto God confessynge theyr offence.

Isa. 40. 1-2
Isa. 40. 3-4

Comenly, * when a man putteth a waye bys wyfe, and she goeth from hym, and marreth wyth an other: then the questyon is: shuld he reforme vnto her anye more after that? Is not this selde then despyed and vncleane? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with manye louers: yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lozde. Lyfte vp thyne eyes vnto the hyl aulders and loke if thou be not despyed with whozdom Thou hast wayted for them in the stretes, and as a murder in the wyldernes. Thowost thy whozdom and shamefull blasphemies, is the blande despyed.

Isa. 40. 1-2
Isa. 40. 3-4

* This is the cause that the rayne and euening dewe hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores forbeade and wylste not be ashamed Elles woldest thou say vnto me: O my father thou art he that hast brought me vp, and leade me fro my yowthe: wilt thou the put me away, and cast me of for euer? O wylste thou withdraue thy selfe cleane from me? Seuerthelesse, thou speakest suche wordes, but thou art euer doynge worse and worse.

Isa. 40. 1-2
Isa. 40. 3-4

* The Lozde saide also vnto me: in the tyme of Josaph the kynge haste thou sene what the rebellyon of Ierusalem hath done: howe she hath runne vp vpon the hylles, and amonge all the thyghters, and there played the harlot, hast thou sene also (when she had done all this) howe I saide vnto her: that she shulde turne again vnto me, and yet she is not returned.

Isa. 40. 1-2
Isa. 40. 3-4

* Iuda that vnfaithfull syster of hers also saide this: namelpe, that after I had well sene the aduoutry of the whorishyng harlot Ierusalem: I put her away, & gaue her a byll of deuorcement. For all this, her vnfaithfull syster Iuda was not ashamed, but went backe, and played the whoze also: yea, and the noyse of her whoze dome hath despyed the whole lande. For she hath comytted fornicacyon with stones & stoches.

Seuerthelesse, her vnfaithfull syster Iuda, is not turned vnto me agayn with her whole herte, but saynedly: sayeth the Lozde. And the Lozde sayd vnto me: * The basyllder Ierusalem is more ryghteous then vnfaithfull Iuda & theyr soze go preache these wordes toward the North: and saye: Thou dyfobedpent Ierusalem, turne agayn (sayeth the Lozde) & I wyl not let my wrath fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (sayeth the Lozde) and I wyl not alway beare displeasure agayst the: but this I wyl, that thou knowe the greates blasphemies. Namely, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lozde thy God & hast made thy selfe partaker of strange goddes: vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wyl to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lozde.

* O ye dyfobedent chyldzen, turne agayne: saith the Lozde, and I wyl be married with you For I wyl take one of the scyth, & two out of one generacion from amonge you & byng you into Babilon: & wyl geue you herome after mine owne mynde, which shal fede you & learning & wisdom. Moreover, when ye be increased and multiplied in the lande, then (sayeth the Lozde) there shal no more boaste be made of the Arke of the Lozdes testament, and no man shal thinke vpon it, neither shal any man make mention of it for fro thence it shal nethe be visyted nor honored with gyftes. * Then shal Ierusalem be called the Lozdes seat, & all heathen shalbe gathered vnto it: for the name of the Lozdes sake, which shalbe set vp at Ierusalem. And from that tyme forth they shal folow no more the ymaginacyon of theyr owne froward herte.

Then those that be of the house of Iuda shal go vnto the house of Ierusalem: & they shal come together out of the North, into the same lande that I haue geuen your fathers. I haue shewed also, how I toke the by being but a chyldre and gaue thea pleasaunte lande for thyne heritage yea, and a goodlye hoste of the heathen, & howe I commaunded the, that thou shuldest call me saith thy onely, and not to wyprke fro me.

But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully saileth her husbende, so are ye vnfaithful vnto me: O ye house of Ierusalem (sayeth the Lozde).

* And therfore the voyce of the chyldzen of Ierusalem was heard on hye, wepyng and waylyng: for they haue despyed theyr wayes, and forgotten God the Lozde.

O ye dyfobedent chyldzen, turne again (saith the Lozde) to we are thyne: for thou arte the Lozde our God: And so shal I deale your backturnynges. Cruelly, namely trusteth he for helpe that loketh for it in the hylles, and in wayn is it sought in the multitud of the mountaynes, but the heith of Ierusalem standeth only vpon God our Lozde: Confusyon hath deuoyed our fathers labour from our yowthe vnto yea, theyr shep bullocks, their sonnes & daughters, & so we also also slepe in oure confuſion, and ſhame conuerth vs, for we and oure fathers from oure youthe vp vnto this day haue ſpynned againſt y<sup>e</sup> Lozde our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lozde of our God.

The.iii. Chapter.

The true repentance of returning to God. He reſtoreth to the circumciſion of the heart. The deſtruction of Jeruſalem is prophesied, for the multitude of theyr dettes.

Iſrael, yf thou wylt turne the, then turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lozde. And yf thou wylt put a waie thyne abhominacyons oute of my ſyghte, thou ſhalt not bee moued: * And ſwaite ſwaite. The Lozde liueth: in truth, in equitie & righteouſneſſe: & all people ſhall be ſo: tunable & toſſful in hym. For thus ſayth y<sup>e</sup> Lozde to al Iuda and Jeruſalem: plow your lande & ſow we not amonge the thornes. * Be circumciſed in the Lozde & cut away the foreskin of your hertes, all ye of Iuda and all the indwellers of Jeruſalem: that my indignacyon breake not out lyke fyre and kyndle, ſo y<sup>e</sup> noman may quench it, becauſe of y<sup>e</sup> wychedneſſe of your ymaginacions.

At the ſame tyme (ſayeth the Lozde) y<sup>e</sup> herte of the kynge and of the princes ſhall be gone, the preſtes ſhall be aſtonyſhed, and the prophetes ſhall be ſore aſtord. Then ſayd I O Lozde God, haſte thou then dyſceyned this people and Jeruſalem, ſaying: * Ye ſhall haue peace, and now y<sup>e</sup> ſwearde goeth thow we theyr lyues. Then ſhall it be ſayde to the people and to Jeruſalem: * A ſtrong wynde in the hye places of the wylde: neſſe cometh thow we the waye of my people but neyther to ſan, nor to clenſe.

After that, ſhall there come vnto me a ſtrong wynde from thoſe places, and then wyl I alſo geue ſentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh vp lyke a cloude, & his charetes are lyke a ſto: mye wynd. * His hoſtemen are ſwyſter then the Eagle. Wo vnto vs, for we are deſtroyed. O Jeruſalem, waſhe thine herte fro wychedneſſe that thou mayſt be helped. Howe long ſhalt thy noyſome thoughtes remaine with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyl of Ephraim ſpeaketh out, & telleth of a deſtruction. Remember the deſcen, & geue Jeruſalem warning, and preach vnto her that watchmen ouer her are comyng from ſarre countreyes. They haue cryed oute agaynſt the cyties of Iuda. And they haue beſet ther aboute in euery place lyke as the watchmen in the ſelde: * For they haue pſeued me to wrath, ſaith the Lozde.

* The wayes & thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, ſuche is thyne owne wickedneſſe and dyſobedynce, and becauſe it is a bytter thyng, it hath ſtrengthened the to the herte. Ah my helpe, ah my helpe (ſaith thou crye) howe is my herte ſo ſore: my herte panteth wpythin me I can not be ſtill, for I haue heard the cryng of the trompettes, and peales of warre. They crye: murder vpon murder, the hole lande ſhall periſhe. Immedyately, my tentes were deſtroyed, and my hanginges in the wyndhelmyng of an eye. Howe longe ſhall I ſee the tokens of warre, and heare the noyſe of the trompettes?

Acuert thyſſe, this ſhall come vpon theim. * becauſe my people is become foolyſhe, and hath not knowen me. * They are the chyldren of foolyſheſſe, and withoute any diſcrecyon. To do euell, they haue wylt ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wylſdom. I haue looked vpon the earthe, and ſee: it was waſte & voyde. I looked toward heauen, and it had no ſpyne. I beheld the mountaynes: and lo, they trembled and all the hylles were in feare. I looked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed ſelde was become waſte: yea, all the cyties were broken downe at the preſence of the Lozde, and indignacyon of his wrath.

For thus hath y<sup>e</sup> Lozde ſaid: The hole lande ſhall be deſolate, yet wyl I not then haue done. And theſe ſhall the earthe mourne, and the heauen be ſorry about: for the thyng that I haue ſpoken (to the prophetes) and taken vpon me to do, ſhall not repent me, & I wyl not go from it. The hole land ſhall ſyre, for y<sup>e</sup> noyſe of y<sup>e</sup> boyſmen and boydmen: they ſhall runne into denes, into woodes, and clim vp the ſtony rockes: All the cities ſhall be void, & noman dwellig therein.

What wylt y<sup>e</sup> now do, thou being deſtroyed? * For though thou clotheſt thy ſelfe with ſcar: let, and deckeſt the with golde: * though thou paynteſt thy face with coloures, yet ſhalt thou trym thy ſelfe in vayne. For thoſe y<sup>e</sup> byther to haue bene thy great ſauourers, ſhall abhorre y<sup>e</sup> and go about to ſlape the. For I heare a noyſe lyke as it were of a womā traueſing or one labouryng of her fyrſt chyld: Euen the voyce of the doughter Syon, y<sup>e</sup> caſteth out her armes, and ſonneth, ſaying: Ah, woo is me, how ſore vered and ſaint is my herte: for feare of y<sup>e</sup> murderers.

The.v. Chapter.

In Jeruſalem there no ſpychleſſe as ſayeth ſall man ſomthe, ſp: there amongſt the people of the rulers, for whoſe ſake the Lozde ſhould ſpare the cytye. Wherefore Jeremye is deſpoyſed of the Iſſyrians.

Oke thow we Jeruſalem, beholde: I and ſee, ſeke thow we her ſtreets alſo wpythin, yf ye can fynde one man y<sup>e</sup> doeth equall and ryghte, or ſeketh for the truethe, and I ſhall ſpare that cytye (ſaith the Lozde). * For though they can ſaye: y<sup>e</sup> Lozde liueth, yet do they ſwear to diſcreue.

Whereas thou (O Lozde) lokeſt onclpe vpon ſayth and truethe.

Thou

The Prophecie.

Thou hast scourged them, but they take no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and wold not amende.

B Therefore I thought in my self: peradventure they are so simple and foolyshe, & they understand nothing of  $\text{f}$  Lordes way & iudgements of our God. \* Therefore wyl I go vnto they hedes and rulers, and talke with them, if they know the way of  $\text{f}$  Lord and the iudgements of our God. But these (in lyke maner) haue byn hen the yoke, and burst the bondes in sondre.

Wherfore, a lyon oute of the woode hath burte them, and a wolfe in the euening hath destroyed them. The Leopard doeth lyke lurking by theyr cities, to teare in peces all them that come therrout. For theyr offences are multiplyed, and theyr departing awaye is encreased shoulde I then for all this haue mercede vpon the? Thy chyldre haue forsaken me, & swoyne by them that are no goddes. And albeit, that I fede them to the ful, yet they fall to aduouty, and haunte harlottes houses.

In the desire of vnclely lust, they are become lyke the stoned horse: every man neyeth at his neighbourys wyfe. * Shoulde I not correcte this layeth the Lord? Shoulde I not be auenged of euery people that is lyke vnto this? Elime vpon theyr walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not utterly: take awaye theyr fortresses, because they are not the Lordes.

For vnfaithfully hath the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, sayeth the Lord. \* They haue denyed the Lord, and sayde: it is not he that looked vpon vs. \* Thus there shall no mys-fortune come vpon vs, we shall see neither sword nor hunger. \* As for the warning of  $\text{f}$  prophetes they take it but for wynd: yea there is none of these whiche wyl tell them, that suche thyn-ges shall happen vnto them.

Wherfore thus sayeth  $\text{f}$  Lord God of hostes: because ye speake suche wordes, behold: \* The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fye, and make the people to be wodde, that the fye maye consume them. \* Lo, I wyl bypunge a people vpon you from far, O house of Israel (sayeth the Lord) a myghty people, an olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neyther understandest what they saye.

Theyr arrowes are sodayne deathe: yea, they theim selues be very spawntes. This people shall eate vp thy feute and thy meate: yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes. They shall eate vp thy grapes and tygges. As for thy strong and welfensed cities, wherein thou dydest trust, they shall bypunge to powder, and that thow be the suerde. \* Nevertheless I wyl not then haue done with you, sayeth the Lord. But if they say wherfore doeth  $\text{f}$  Lord our God al this vnto vs

Then answer them: \* because that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge god-des in your owne lande, euer so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob and crye it out in Juda, and saye thus: heare this (thou foolyshe and vndiscrete people) \* ye haue eyes, but ye see not: eares haue ye but ye heare not. \* Heare ye not me, sayeth the Lord. Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? \* which bynd  $\text{f}$  see with the sande, so that it can not passe his bondes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothing, & though the waves therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer. But this people hath a false and obstinat harte: they are departed and gone away from me.

They thinke not in their hartes: O let vs feare  $\text{f}$ the Lord our God, that geueth vs raine early and late, when ned is: whiche hepeyth euer styll the harvest for vs verely.

* Nevertheless, your misdeedes haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wyched persones, that pryncely laye snares and wayte for men, to take them and destroye them.
And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are theyr houses full of that whiche they haue gotten with falschyd and disceyte. Herof cometh their great substaunce and rychesse, herof are they fat and welthy, & are more myscheuous then any other.

\* They misyre not the lawe: they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause: yea, and they pros-pere: yet they iudge not  $\text{f}$  poore accordyng to equyte. \* Shoulde I not punyssh these thynges, sayeth the Lord? Shoulde I not be auenged of all such people as these be? horryble and greuous thynges are done in the lande. The Prophetes teache falsely, and the priestes receiue giffes, and my people \* haue pleasure therein. What wyl come therof at the laste?

The vi. Chapter.

chylde of Ben Jamin blow vp the trumpettes ye * Ecceyes, let vp a token vnto Bethcean, for a plage and a greate myltye appereth oute frome the North. I wyl lyken the daughter Syon to a fayze and tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepherders to theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shall they pitch rounde about her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande.
Make battayle agaynst her (shall they saye) Arise, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye. Alas, the day goeth away, & the nyght shadowes fal downe. Arise, let vs go vp by nyght, & destroy her strong holdes, for thus hath  $\text{f}$  Lord of hostes commaunded. Hewe downe her trees, & let vp bulwarkes agaynst Jerusalem, for  $\text{f}$  syne is come that this cite must be punysshed: for in her is all malicyousnesse. Lyke as a condyte spouteth out waters, so she spouteth oute her wychednesse. Robbery & vnyghteousnesse is herde in her, for sooth and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amende the O Jerusalem lest I wyche to my hart fro the, & make  $\text{f}$  desolate and thy land also,  $\text{f}$  no man dwell in it. For thus sayeth

sayth the Lord of hostes. The residue of Israel shall be gathered, as the remnant of grapes. And therefore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But unto whom shall I speake, whom shall I warne that he maye take hede? Their eares are so uncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take the word of God but for a scoyne, & haue no lust thereto. And therefore I am so full of thine indignaciō. (O Lord) that I may suffer no longer, but shew it out vpon the children that are without and vpon al ponge men. Pee, the man muste be taken prisoner with the wife, and the aged with the crepell. Their houses with their lades, & wiues shall be turned vnto strangers when I stretch out myne hand vpon the inhabitants of this lande, saith the Lord. For from the lest vnto the most, they hang al vpon couetousnes, & from the prophet vnto the priest: they go al aboute with falschod and lies.

And besyde that, they deale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayng: peace, peace wher ther is no peace at al. Where they ashamed when they had comytted abhominaciō. Truly say they be past shame. And therefore they shall fall among the slayne & in the houre wher I shall vylet them, they shall be broughte downe saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord: go into the strets, consyder and make inquisition for the olde waye, and pfit be the good & ryghte way, then go therin, that ye may fynde rest for your soules. But they saye we wil not walke therein, & I wyl set watchmen ouer you, and therefore take hede vnto the voyce of the troper. But they say we wyl not take hede. Heare therefore ye gentiles, & thou congregacyon of alte know, what I haue deuyfed for them. Heare thou erth also, be holde, I wyl cause a plague to come vpon this people, euen the frute of their owne ymaginacions. For they haue not bene obediente vnto my wordes & to my law, but abhored them. Wherefore I byng ye me incense from Saba, & swete smellyng Calamus fro farre countreyes. Your burnt offerings displease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrifices. And therefore thus saith the Lord beholde, I wyl make this people fall, & therefore shall fall among them the father with the childen, one neyghbour shall perry the with another.

Thus sayth the Lord. Beholde there shall come a people from the North, and a great people shall aryse fro the endes of the earth, w bowes and with dartes shall they be weaponed. It is a rough & scarce people, & an vmerciful people, their voyce roareth lyke the see, they ride vpon horses wel appointed to the battell against the daughter of Syon. The crye of them haue we hearde. Our armes are feble, heynnes & sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with childe. Let no man go forth into the felde let no man come vpo the hye strete: for the swearde and feare of the enemyes is on euery syde.

Wherefore gyde a sacke cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) sprinkle thy selfe with ashes: moune & wepe bytterly as vpon thyne onely beloued sonne. For I destroye that schemye fall vpon vs. The hane I sette for a strong towre (O thou prophete) and a well fenced toyl among my people, to sche & to try their waies. For they are al stubburne apostates & fallen a waye, walkyng disceytfullye, they are cleane brasse, and yd. for they hurt and destroy euery mā. The bellous are bent in the fyre, the leade is not molt: the melter melteth in vaine for the euil is not taken away fro them. Therefore do they call them naughtye slure, because the Lord hath cast them out.

The. vii. Chapter

Jeremy is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the wordes of God, whiche trusteth in the outwarde seruyce of the temple. He also that shall happen to the Iemes for the dyspyng of thery prophetes. Hieremye doth not the Lord cheryt requyre of the Iemes, but that they shalde cherye his wordes.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremy, sayng: Stand vnder the gate of the Lordes hous and crye oute these wordes there, with a loude voyce and saye: Heare the word of the Lord al ye of Iuda, & go in at this doze to worshyp the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hostes, God of Israel. Amende your wayes & pour counceils, & I wil let you dwel in this place. Truste not in fals lyng wordes, sayng: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord.

But rather in dede amende your wayes and counceils, & iudge ryghte betwyxe a man & his neyghboure, oppresse not the stranger, the fatherlesse, and the wyddow: Wed not innocent bloude in this place, cleane not to strange goddes to your owne destrucciō, then wyl I let you dwel in this place: yee, in the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for ever. But take hede: ye trust in lyng tales, that beggyle you and do you no good: For when ye haue stollen, murdered, comytted aduouty, and perury: When ye haue offered vnto Baal, solowynge strange and vnknewen gods that ye be vnpractised: Yet then come ye and stand before me in this house (which hath my name geuen vnto it) & say: We are absolved quite, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

What: thyncke you this house that heareth my name, is a den of theues? And yet I se what you thyncke, sayth the Lord. Goto my place in Syon, & wher vnto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke wel: what I byd to the same place for the wickednes of my people of Israel. And now though ye haue done al these dedes (sayth the Lord) and I my selfe rose vp euer by tymes to warne you and to comen with you, yet wold ye not heare me. I called, ye wold not answer. And therefore eue as I haue done vnto Syon so wyl I do to this house, that my name is geuen vnto (that you put your trust in) yee, vnto the place that I haue geuen to you: and your fathers. And I shall trust you out of my syght: as I haue cast out al your brethren the whole sede of Ephraim.

Therefore, thou shalt not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thanks, nor byd prayer.

The Propheeye.

prayre for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for the, for in no wise wyl I be the. Jer. xliii.
Wilt thou not what they do in the cities of Iuda, and in the streets of Ierusalem? The children gather sticks, the fathers kindle the fyre, the woman kneade dough: to bake cakes for a queene of beauf. They powze out bynche offerynges vnto strange gods, to prouoke me vnto wrath howbeit they hurt not me, saith the Lord, but rather confounde and shame them selues. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, my wrath and my indignacion shall be poured oute vpon this place, vpon men and cattel, vpon the trees in the felde, & frute of the lande, & it shall be burnt, so that no man maye quench it.

Jer. xliii. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: heape vpon your burnt offerynges wyth your sacrifices, and eate the fleche. Jer. xliii. For when I brought your fathers out of Egypt I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerynges and sacrifices: but thus I commaunded them, sayng * hearken & obeye my voyce, and I shall be your God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walke in al my wayes whych I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prosper. Jer. xliii. But they were not obedient, they inclined not their eares thersito, but went after they: owne ymagynacions, & after the inacions of their owne wyched herte, and so turned them selues away, and euerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, sed the tyme of your fathers came out of Egypt, vnto this day.

Jer. xliii. * Nevertheless, I sente vnto you, al my ser-uantes the prophetes. I rose vp early and sente you worde: yet wolde they not hearken, nor offer me they: eares, but were obstinate, & worse the they: fathers. And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto the, but they shall not heare the, thou shalt cry vnto them, but they shall not answere the. Therefore shalt thou say vnto the thys is my people, that neither heareth the voyce of the Lord they: God, nor receaueth his correc-cyon. Jer. xliii. * Ayrthelnes & truthe is cleane rooted out of they: mouth.

Jer. xliii. * Wherefore cut of thyne heare, O Ierusalem and cast it a waye, take vp a complaynt on hye, for the Lord hath cast a waye, and scattered the people that he is displeased wyth all. Jer. xliii. For the children of Iuda haue done euell in my syghte, saith the Lord. * They haue set vp their abho-minacions in the house that hath my name, and haue defiled it. They haue also buyded an aulter at * Topheth, whiche is in the valleie of the children of Hennom, & they might burne they: sonnes and daughters in fyre, whiche I neuer comaunded the neither came it euer in my thought.
And therefore beholde, the dayes shall come, sayeth the Lord, that it shall no more be called Topheth, or the valleie of the children of Hennom, but valley of slaughter. Jer. xliii. For I Topheth, they shall be buried, because they shall elles haue no rowme. * Pre, the deade bodies of this people shall be eaten vp of the foules of the aier: & wilde beastes of the earth, and no man shall fraye them awaye. Jer. xliii. And as for the voyce of mirth & glad-nesse of the Cyties of Iuda, and Ierusalem the voyce of synners, and of the byde, I wyl make them cease: for the lande shall be desolate.

The viii. Chapter.

Jer. viii. The destruction of the Iherusalem. The Lord moueth the people to amercement, rebeyng by they: synnes. In a reprobacyon the bygone doctrine of the prophetes and preachers.

The same tyme sayeth the Lord, I the bones of the kynges of Iuda, & bones of his synners, the boones of the preachers and prophetes: pre and the bones of the cytyzens of Ierusalem shall be brought oute of their graues & layd against * the sunne the mone, & all the heauynly host: whom they loued, whom they serued: wher they ranne after, whome they sought and worshipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buried, but shall lye as dong vpon the earth to they: shame and despylyng.

* And all they that remaine of this wyched generation, shall desire rather to dye the to lye wherefore they remaine and where as I sca-ter them, sayth the Lord of hostes. Thus shalt thou saye vnto them also, thus sayeth the Lord Women fall so, that they aryls not vp agayne: O yf Israel repent, wil not God turne agayne to the? Wherefore then is this people and Ieru-salem gone so farre backe that they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer the more obstinate, and wyl not be conuerted.

* For I haue looked & consyded, but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentance for his synne & wyl so muche as saye: wherefore, haue I doone this? But euerye man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth syl, like a wyde boyle in a battel: The dooche in the aye knoweth his apointed time, the Turtle dour: the Swallowe and the Crane, consider the tyme of their trauel * but my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punyishment of the Lord. How dare ye saye then, we are wyse, we haue the law of the Lord amonge vs?

* Truly in dayne hath he prepared his penne and daynly haue synners written it, therefore shall the wyse be confounded, they shall be afraide and taken: for so, * they haue caste out the word of the Lord: what wysdome can the be among them? Wherefore I wyl geue their wyues vnto aleauntes, and they: selues to destroyers.

* For from the lowest to the hyeste: they so-lowe all fylthy lucre, & from the prophet vnto the preast, they deale all with lyes. * Neuertheles they deale the hurt of my people very frendly, sayng: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all. Eye for shame, howe abhominable thin-ges do they: yet they be not ashamed: pre, they knowe of no shame. * Wherefore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the deade bodies, and be ouerthrowne sayeth the Lord.

Wherefore I wyl consume them in dede (sayeth the Lord) so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vine, neither one fygge vpon the fygtre and the leaues shall be plucked of. And the thyng that I haue geuen them shall be taken from the why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather our selues

It selues together. and go into the stronge Cytte, there shal we be in rest. For the Lord our God hath put vs to silence & geuen vs water myrte with gall to dryncke, because we haue synned against him. * We looked for peace, and we fate not the better, we waited for the time of health and lo, here is nothyng but trouble.

The noyse of his hoyses is heard from Dan the whole lande is afrayed at the neyng of his strong hoyses, for they are come in, and haue deuoured the lande, with al that is in it: the cities and those that dwel therein. * Whereouer I wyl sende Cochatrices and Serpentes amonge you, (which wyl not be charmed) and they shal bte you sayth the Lord.

I wolde haue had comfote agaynste sozowe but sozowe is come vpon me, and heauines vnto my herte, for loo, the voyce of the cryng of my people is heard for feare of them, that come from a farre countrie. Is not the Lord in Syon? Is not the King in her: Wherefore then haue they greued me (shal I saye) with theyr ymages and foolyshe straunge sayppons of a foryne God: The heruest is gone, & Somer hath an ende, and we are not helpe, I am soze vered because of the hurte of my people, I am heuy & abashed, is there no triacle at Giliad: Is there no Physicion there: Why then is not the health of my people recovered

Chapter.

The complainte & bewaynyng of the prophet for the miserie of the people. In the knowyng of God ought we only to weep. The bewaynyng of the herte.

Who * wyl geue my heade water ynough, & a well of teares for myne eyes, that I maye wepe nyghte and daye for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cottage some where farte from folke, that I might leaue my people, and go from them, for they be all aduourters and a shrinkyng sozt. They bende their tungen like bowes to shote out lies. They were strong vpon earth. As for the truth, they maye nothyng awayne with all in the world. For they go frome one wychednesse to another, and wyl not knowe me, sayth the Lord.

* Per, one must kepe him selfe from another no ma may safely trust his owne brother, for one brother vndermyndeth another, one neyghbour begyleth another. Per, one dissembleth with another, and they deale with no truthe. * They haue practised theyr tounge to lye, and taken greate paynes to do myschefe: Thou syrest in the myddes of a disceatfull people, whiche for very dyssembling falsch, wyl not knowe me sayth the Lord.

Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, be hold, I wyl meete them, & trye them: for what shuld I els do to my people? Theyr tungen are lyke sharpe arrowes, to speake dysceat. Wpeth their mouth they speake praciably to their neyghbour, but pruely they laye waite for him. * Shulde I not punyssh the for these thynges, sayth the Lord? * Shulde I not be aduenged of any such people as this? Vpon the mountaynes wyl I take vpon a lamentacion & a sorowful crie, and a mournynge vpon the saye playnes of the wilderness. Namely how they are so dysceit vp: that no man gothe there anye more. Per a man shal not heare one beaste crye there.

Birdes & catell are gone froe thence, * I wyl make Ierusalme also an heape of stones, & a den of venimous wormes. And I wyl make the Cities of Iuda so wast, & no man shal dwel there in. What ma is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? O to whome hath the Lord spoken by mouth & he maye the w this & saye: O thou lande, why peruest thou so: Wherefore arte thou so bent vp, & lyke a wilderness, & no man goeth thozow Per, the Lord him selfe tolde the same vnto the that forsoke his lawe, and hepte not the thyng that he gaue them in comaundement, neyther lyued thereafter: * but folowed the wychednes of their owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as theyr fathers taughte them.

Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wil fede this people with worme wode, & geue them gall to dryncke: * I wyl scatter them also among the heathen, who neyther they nor their fathers haue knowe and I wyl sende a swerd among them, to persecute them, vntill I bynne them to naughte Whereouer, thus sayth the Lord of hostes, beware of the vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and call for mournyng wyues, & sende for wyse women that they come shortly, & synge a mournyng songe of you, that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that our eye lyddes maye geue oute of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse heard of Si-on. O how are we so soze destroyed: O how are we so peteously confounded: We must forsake sure owne natural countrey, and we are thutte out of our owne lodgynges. Per heare I wolde of I Lord (O ye weime) & let your eares regard the wordes of hys mouth, & ye may leaue your doughtersto moune, & & eury one may teach her neyghbours to make lamentacyon Namely thus: Death is clymyng vp in at our windowes he is come into oure houses, to destroye & chylde befoze the doze, and the yonge man in the strete But tell thou playnlye, thus sayeth the Lord.

* The deade bodies of men shal lye vpon the ground, as the dong vpon the felde and as the hepe after the mower, and ther shalbe no ma to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lord. Let not the wyleman reioyce in his wysedome: nor the strong man in his strength: neyther the ryche ma in his ryches. * But who so wyl reioyce let him reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for I am the Lord whyche do mercede, equitie, & righteousnes vpon the earth. * Therefore haue I pleasure in suche thynges, sayth the Lord. Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord) that I wyl viler all them, whose fooze-shynne is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Jewes, the Edomites, & Ammonites, the Moabites, & and the Hauen Madianites & dwell in the wilderness. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcised in f flesh, but al the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

The Prophecie.

Chapter

The confutation of the flanders are not to be feared, nor the multitude of people, and of the power of God. Of

Hear the word of the Lord that he speaketh unto the, O thou house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord * Ye shall not learn after the manner of the heathen, and ye shall not be afraid, for the tokens of heaven: for the heathen are a frayde of such yea, all the customs: and lawes of the Gentiles are nothing but vanite. They hewe downe a tree in the woode, with y<sup>e</sup> handes of the workman, and say upon it with the axe, they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles & hammers, that it mouenot. It standeth as styffe as the palme tree, it can neyther speake nor go vne foote, but muste be downe. * Be not ye afraid of such, for they can do neither good nor euil. But there is none like vnto the, O Lord, * & great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? O kynge of the Gentils, for thine is the dominion.

For among al the wise men of the Gentils, in al their kynngdoms, there is none y<sup>e</sup> maye be likened vnto the. They are also together vnlearned and vnwise in this one thyng. Al their cōpyng is but vanite: namely wod, syluer: which is brought out of Tharlis, and beate to plates: and golde from Oppir, * a worke that is made with the hand of the craftelma, & the casket clothed it with yelow spicke & scarlett, euen so is the worke of their wise men also together. But y<sup>e</sup> Lord is a true God, a lyping God, & an euerglastyng kyng. * If he be worth, the earthe shal herbe: all the Gentiles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their gods thus shal you saye to them: they are goddes, that made neither heauen nor earth, therfore shal they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauē. But (as for our God) * he made the earth with his power, & with his wisdom doth he order the whole compass of y<sup>e</sup> world, wth his discrecyon hath he spred oute the heauens. At his voyce the waters gather together in payre, * he draweth vp y<sup>e</sup> cloudes to the uttermost partes of y<sup>e</sup> earth: he turneth y<sup>e</sup> dryng to rayne, and byngeth the forth the wyndes out of their treasures. his wisdom maketh all men fooles: And confounded be castles of ymages, for y<sup>e</sup> they calle, is but a vaine thyng, and hath no lyfe. * The wayne craftelmen with their workes, y<sup>e</sup> they in they<sup>r</sup> vanitie haue made, shal perishe one wth an other in tyme of visitacion. Neuertheless Jacobs porcion is none suche: but it is he that hath made all thynges, & Israel is the rod of his inheritaunce. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the lande thou that art in the strong place. For thus sayth the Lord. Behold, I wil now thynke as with a done syngre the inhabitours of this lande at this once, & wyl byngre trouble vnto them that they shal proue true the word, that I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, howe am I hurt: alas howe paynfull are my scourges vnto me: For I conspyde this for ome by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, & all my courttes are broken. My chyldre are gone from me, & I can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spred out my tent, and to set vp my hanginges. For the herde me haue done folysly, y<sup>e</sup> they haue not soughte the Lord. Therfore haue they beate vnwisely wth their cattell: and are scattered abrode. Beholde the noise is heard at hande and great sedicion out of the north: to make the cities of Iuda a wilderness, and a dwelling place for dragons. * Now I knowe (O Lord) that it is not in mans power to order his owne wayes, or to rule his owne steps and goinges. Therfore chasten y<sup>e</sup> vs, O Lord, but with fauour: not in thy wrath, byng vs not vnto naught. * Doute out thine indignacyon rather vpon the Gentyles, that knowe the not, and vnto the people that cal not on thy name. * And y<sup>e</sup> because they haue consumed, deuoured, and destroyed Iacob: and haue made his habitacion wast.

Chapter

A censure of them that obey not the wordes of Goddes promise. The people of Iuda following the steppes of their fathers, worshipped strange goddes. The Lord sayth that he wyl not heare the prayes, and forsydeth also Ieremy to praye for them.

This is another sermon, wherby the Lord commaunded Ieremy for to preach, sayng: heare y<sup>e</sup> wordes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto the men of Iuda, and to al them y<sup>e</sup> dwell at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: * Cursed be euery one y<sup>e</sup> is not obedient vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypt, fro y<sup>e</sup> y<sup>e</sup>on for nace, sayng: * Be obedient vnto my voyce, & do accordyng to al y<sup>e</sup> I commaunde you so shal ye be my people, and I wyl be your God, and wyl kepe my promise, * that I haue sworn vnto your fathers. Namely that I wolde geue them a lande wherby they shold with milke and honye, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I and said: Amen. Let it be euen so Lord as thou sayest.

Then the Lord sayd vnto me againe: Preach this in the cyties of Iuda & rounde about Ierusalem, & say heare the wordes of this couenaunt that ye maye kepe them, for I haue diligently exhorted your fathers euer sence the tyme that I brought the out of the lande of Egypt vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, sayng: heark vnto my voyce. * Reuerceles they wolde not obey me, nor encline their eares vnto me, but folowed the wyched ymaginacions of their owne hertes. And therfore, I haue accused them as trasgressours of al the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe which they (notwithstandyng) haue not kept.

And the Lord sayd vnto me: It is found out y<sup>e</sup> whole Israel & all the cytyzens of Ierusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of they<sup>r</sup> forefathers, which had no lust to heare my word. Euenly howe haue these also folowed strange Goddes, and worshipped worshipped them. The house of Israel and Judah have broken my couenaunt, whiche I made with theyr fathers.

C Therefore thus sayth the Lorde. Beholde, I will sende a plague vpon them, which they shal not be able to escape, and though they cry vnto me, I wyl not heare them. * Then shal the towne of Juda and the citezys of Jerusalem go, and call vpon their gods vnto whom they made their oblacions, but they shal not be able to helpe the in tyme of their trouble. * For as many cities as thou hast O Juda, so many goddes hast thou had also. And loke how many streets there be in the, (O Jerusalem) so many game, full alters haue ye set vp, alters I say to offere vpon them vnto Baal. * Therefore praye not thou for this people, byd neither praise nor praye for the, for though they cry vnto me in theyr trouble, yet wyl I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my house, seeing he hath woeked abhominacyon, seruyng many Goddes. * The holy fletche offerynge in the temple are gone fro the O Juda, and thou when thou hast done euell makest thy boast of it.

* The Lorde called for a grene Olive tre, a faire one, a fruitful one, a goodly one: but with great clamor hath the enemye set fyre vpon it and the brynches of it are destroyed. For the Lorde of hostes that planteth the, hath deuyled a plague for the (O thou house of Israel & Juda) for the euil that ye haue done to pouoke him to wraeth in that ye byd serupce vnto Baal.

D This (O Lorde) haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it, for thou hast betwed me their ymagynacions. * But I am as a meke lambe and dre that is caried awaye to be slaine, not knowing, that they had deuyled suche a counsell against me, sayng: * We wyl destroy his meat with wodde, and dyspue hym out of the lande: of flyyng: that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therefore, * I wyl beseeche the nowe (O Lorde of hostes) thou righteous Judge, thou that triest the reynes & the herres: let me see the aduenged of them: for vnto the haue I commytted my cause. The Lorde therefore spake thus of the citezys of Anathoth: that soughte to slaye me, sayng. * Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or els thou shalte dye of oure handes. Thus I sape spake the Lorde of hostes. Beholde, I wyl visite you. Pour vponge men shall perye the with the sword, pour sonnes and pour daughters shal utterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remaine: For vpon the citezys of Anathoth wyl I byynge a plague: euen the peare of their visitacion.

The prophete manereth greatly at the prosperite of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde, he sheweth agaynst Sycaxes, and prayeth that seduce the people. The Lorde threateth destruction vnto the nations that do wrong vpon Iuyer which troubleth and vexeth it.

Lorde, thou arte moare ryghteous, then I shulde dyspute with. Reuerthelisse, lette me talke wth the in thinges reasonable. * Howe hapeneth it, that the waye of the un-godly is so prosperous: & that it goeth so well with them which (without anye shame) offend & lye in wickednes. Thou plantest them they take roote, they grow, & byynge forth frute. They dost much of the, yet art thou farre from their rapnes. But thou Lorde (to whome I am wel knowe) thou that hast sent and proued my bert * take them away, like as a floche is caried to the slaughter house, and point them for day of slaughter. Howe longe shal the land mourne * and all the herbes of the felde perye, for the wyckednes of them that dwel therein.

The catell and the byrdes are gone: yet sape they tush. * God wil not destroye vs utterly. Beinge thou arte werpe in runnyng wth the sotemen, howe wylt thou then runne with hostes in a peaceable sure land thou mayst be safe. But howe wylt thou do in the furious byrde of Jordan. For thy brethren & thy kynred haue altogether despised the: and cried out vpon the in thine absente. * Beleue the not, though they speake faire wordes to the. As for me (I say) I haue forsaken myne owne dwelling place, and lefte mine heritage. Wylt thou also that I loue so well haue I geuen into the handes of mine enemyes. * Wylt thou heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wod, It crieth out vpon me, there fore haue I forsaken it. Wylt thou heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a birde of diuerse colours is vpon it. Come & gather ye together all f beastes of f felde, Come that ye maye eat it. * Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my neparde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wyldernes and desert. They haue layde it wast: and now it is wast, it lygheth vnto me. Per, f whole lād lieth wast, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery way, for f sword of the Lorde both consume from f one end of the land to f other, & no fletche hath rest. They haue sowne wheate, & reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in possession, but it doeth them no good. And f prophetes were ashamed of your frutes, because of the great wraeth of the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde vpon all myne euill neyghbours, that lape hande vpon myne heritage, which I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyl plucke them (namely Israel) out of the lande, and put out the house of Juda from among them. * And when I haue rooted them out, I wyl be at one with them agayne: and I wyl haue mercy vpon them: * and byynge them agayne, euery man to hys owne heritage, & into his lande. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyl learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be rehedmed among my people. But yf they wyl not obeye, then wyl I rote out the same folke, and destroye the sayth the Lorde.

Chapter. xiii.

The destruction of the Jewes is perswaded, and they are fringed aboute: why Israel was increased to the people of Can and why they were forsaken.

Thy ill Thus

The Prophecie.

Ihus sayeth the Lord vnto me: goo thy waie: & get me a lympe bierche & gyde it about thy loines, and let it not be wet. The Lord got me a bierch accordyng to the commaundement of the Lord and put it about my loynes. After this the seconde tyme, the Lord spake vnto me againe. Take the bierch that thou hast prepared and put aboute the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates & hyde it in an hole of a rocke. So went I, and hyd it at Euphrates, as the Lord commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, & the Lord spake vnto me. Up and get the to Euphrates, & let the bierch frow thence: which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, & toke the bierche from the place wher I hyd it, and beholde, the bierche was corrupte, so that it was ppyeable for nothyng.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lord. Euen so will I corrupte the pryde of Juda & the hie mynd of Jerusalem. This people is a wicked people, & they wil not heare my worde, they folowe the wycked ymaginations of their owne hert, and hang vpon a straunge god des, then they serue & worship: & therefore they shalbe as this bierch, that serueth for nothyng.

For as stravelly as a bierch lyeth vpon a mannes loines, so straightlye byd I bynd the whole house of Israel, & the whole hous of Juda vnto me saith the Lord: that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name that they myght be in honour, but they wolde not obeye me. Therefore laie this rible before the, & say Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel, Every pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shal say thynckeste thou we knowe not, that euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto them. Thus saith the Lord. Beholde I shal fyl all the inhabytours of this lande with drunkennes, the kinges & the pynces vpon Dauides stole, & prestres & prophetes, with all that dwel at Jerusalem. And I wil set them one against another yet, & father against the sonnes, saith the Lord.

I wil not pardon them, I wil not spare them nor haue pitie vpon them, but destroye the. Be obedient, geue eare: take not dysdayne at it, for it is the Lord him selfe that speaketh. Honour the Lord your God here is, or he take his lycht from you, & or ever your fete stumble in darckenys at the hil, least when you loke for the lighte he turne it vnto the shadowe and darckenes of death. But yf ye wil not heare me, & geue you secret warning, I wil mouerne from my whole herte for your stubbernes. & piteouslye will I wepe, & the traces shal gyshe out of myne eyes. For the Lordes floche shalbe carped awaye captiue. Tell the hyng & the quene humble your selues, set you downe lowe, for your bygnytie shalbe thowen downe, and the crowne of your gloire shal fall from your heade.

The cryes toward the south shalbe shut vp & no man shal open them. All Juda shalbe caried awaye captiue, so that none shall remayne.

Lyste vp your eyes, and beholde them that come frow the north, where is the floche (O thou land) that was giue the. And where are thy sat an ritch shepe. To whom wilt thou make thy more when the enemye shal come vpon the, for thou hast taught them thy self, and made them masters ouer y. Shal nor sozow come vpo the as on a woman traunaplyng w chylde. And yf thou woldest then saye in thine hert. Al befor come these thynges vpo me. Euen for multitude of thy blasphemies, shal thy byndre partes and thy feet be discovered.

Way a man of Inde chaunge his shyn, & the cat of a mountaine her spottes, no more maye ye that be exercised in euyl, do good. Therefore wil I scattere them, lyke as the stubble that is take awaye with the south winde. This shalbe your porcion, and the porcyd of your measure, wherwith ye shalbe rewarded of me, sayth the Lord: because ye haue for gotten me, & put your trust in disceitful thynges. & Therefore shal I turne thy clothes ouer thy heed, & discover thy thynges, that thy priuities maye be sene, thy aduouerie, thy deedly malice, thy beastlinesse, and thy shameful whozdom. For vpon the selbes and bylles I haue sene thynne abominacions. Woe be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wilt thou euer be cleansed any more?

The xiiii. Chapter.

Of the death that shoulde come in Jerusale. The prayer of the people at hyng merce of the Lord. The vnsparefull people are not here. A prayer, sayyng, and of his propheetes that rebuke the people.

The worde of the Lord shewed vnto Jeremij, concernyng the death of the frutes. Juda hadde mourned, his gates are desolate: they are brought to bentinesse euen vnto the grounde, & they crye of Jerusalem goeth vp. The lordes sence their seruantes to sech water, & when they came to the welles, they did finde no water, but caried their vessels home emptye. They be ashamed and confounded, and couer theyr heedes. & For the grounde is dryed vp, because ther cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, and couer their heedes. The bynde also forsoke the yonge sawe, that he brought forth in the felde, because there was no grasse. The wyde asses byd stande in the hygge places, and bew in theyr wynde lyke the dragons, theyr eyes bydde faple, for wante of grasse.

Woutlesse our owne wickednesse doth reward vs. But Lord do thou accordyng to thy name, though our transgressions & synnes be many, & against the haue we synned. & For thou art the comfort & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble: Al by wilt thou be as a stranger in the land, & as one goeth ouer the felde, & cometh in onely to remaine for a nyght: Al by wilt thou make thy self a coward, & as it were a gyafte that yet may not helpe. For (O Lord) art in a myddest of vs: & thy name is called vpo vs, for sake vs not. Thus hath the Lord said vnto this people seying they haue had such lust to wandre a bynde, & haue not refrained their feet, & therefore displeased the Lord: but he will nowe bypunge agayne to remembraunce all their mysdoes, & punysh punye the all their synnes. Per, even thus saith <sup>Jer. 1.10</sup> <sup>Jer. 1.11</sup> the Lozde vnto me: Thou shalt not praye to do this people good: For though they fast, I will not heare their prayers, and though they offer burnt offeringes and sacrifices: yet will not I accept them. For I wil destroye them with the sword, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lozde God, the prophetes saie vnto them: Tush, ye shall not need to feare no sword, and no hunger shall come vpon you, but the lord shall geue you continuall rest in this place:

And the Lozde sayd vnto me: The prophetes preache lies in my name, where as I haue not sente the, neither gaue I the any charge, neither dyd speake vnto the, yet they preache vnto you false visions, charmyng, vanite, and disceitfulnes of their owne hert. Therefore thus saith the lozde: As for those prophetes that preache in my name: whom I neuertheless haue not sente: and I saie: Tush: there shall no sword nor hunger be in this land: With sword and with hunger shall those prophetes perishe, & I people to whom they preache shall be cast out of Ierusalem, by the hunger & be slaine with sword: (as ther shall be no man to bury the) both they & their wiues their sonnes and their daughters: For thus wil I powre their wickednes vpon the. This shall I say also vnto them. Mine eyes shall wepe wout ceasinge daye and nyghte. For my people shall be destroyed with great harme: and shall perishe with a great plage. For yf I go into the felde: loo, it lieth al ful of slayne men. Yf I come into the cite: loo, they be all famished of hunger.

Per, their prophetes also & preastes shall be led into an vknownen lande. Hast thou then viterly forsaken Iuda: Doest thou abhorre Spone: Hast thou so plagued vs, & we ca be healed no moze? We looked for peace, & there cometh no good: for the tyme of helth: & loo, here is no thinge but trouble. We knowlege (O lozde) all our misdeedes, and the synnes of our fathers that we haue offered the. Be not displeased, O Lozde for thy names sake: forget not thy louing kyndnes. Rember the thone of thine honoure: breake not the couenaunt that thou hast made w vs. Are there anye amonge the gods of the Gentiles, that sende rayne: or geue the showres of heuen? Or make the heauens drop rayne without thy commaundement: Doest not thou it, O Lozde oure God in whom we trust? Per, Lozde thou doest all these thinges.

The xv. Chapter.

The Lozde will not heare wordes of Amon yf they praye for the people: but will wrappe them in many miseries. The cause of such greuous miseries.

Then spake the Lozde vnto me. Though Moyses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Dyrne the awaye that they maye go out of my sight: And if they saie vnto the, whether shall we go? The tell them: The Lozde geueth you this answer: Some vnto death: some to sword, some to hunger, some into captiuite. For I will bryng in, plagis vpon them saith the Lozde. The sword shall slay them: & dogges shall tear the in peaces the foules of paye, & beastes of the earthe shall eate the vp, & destroye them. I wil scatter them about also in all kingdoms: & lades to be plagued: because of Manasses sonne of hezekiah king of Iuda, for he thinges that be dyde in Ierusalem.

Who shall then haue pittie vpon the, O Ierusalem: Who shall be loy for the? O who shall make intercession, to obtayne peace for the? seynge thou goeste from me, & turnest backward, saith the Lozde: Therefore, I will stretch out myne hande agaynst the to destroye the, and I haue ben loy for so longe & I am wery. I haue scattered them a boade with the same on euery syde of the lande. I haue wasted my people & destroyed them. Yet they haue had no luste to turne to me they: owne waies. I haue made their wydowes mo in nombze, then the sandes of the see. Upon the mothers of their children dyd I bryng a destroyer in the none day. So denly and vnwares dyd I sende a feare vpon their cities. So that hath borne seuen children hath none, her herte is full of sorowe.

The Sunne doth faile her in the cleare day, she is confounded and fainty for very heuyness. As for those that remaine, I will deliuer them vnto the sword before their enemyes sayeth the Lozde. O mother, alas that euer thou dyddest beare me, a bzauier & rebuker of the whole lande: Though I neuer sente no: receaued vpon thy surty, yet all men speke euell vpon me.

And the Lozde answered me: Verely thy remembrance shall haue welthe: Come not I to the, when thou art in trouble & helpe the, wile thine enemy oppressed the: Doeth one yron burte another: or one metall that cometh from ynoth, another? As for thy riches & treasure, I will geue them out into a praye, not for anye monie, but: because of al thy synnes: that thou hast done in all coastes. And I will bryng I with thine enemies into a lande that thou knowest not for the fire that is kindled in my indignation, shall burne you vp.

O Lozde, thou knowest, therefore remember me, & viset me, deliuer me from my persecuters. Take me not from this life in the tyme of long patience, thou knowest, that for thy sake I suffer rebuke. Wile I had founde thy wordes. I dyd eate them vp greedely: they haue made my hert ioyful & glad. For thy name was called vpon me, O Lozde God of hostes. I dwel not among yf fozners: neither is my delite therein: but I dwel onely in the feare of thy hande, for thou hast fylled me with bitterness. Shall my heauyness endure for euer? At my plagis the so great that they maye neuer be healed: Wyle thou be as one that is false: and as a water that falleth and cannot contynue: Upon these wordes, thus saide the Lozde vnto me. Yf thou wilt turne a gayne, I shall set the in my seruice: and yf thou wyle take oute the thynges that are piercous from the vile, thou shalt be even as myne owne mouth. They shall conuerte vnto the, but thou ne not thou vnto the: and so shall I make the a strong bzaken wall against this people.

They shall fyghte agaynst the, but they shall not not p̄uaile. For I my selfe will be with the, to helpe the and deliuer the. I sayeth the Lord. And I wyl ryd the out of the handes of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the handes of spyauers.

The xvi. Chapter.

The prophecies of the prophets of the Jews, by the which that the wickedness of Israel is the contempt of God, the Lord is made manifest. The prophecies of the captivity of Babylon, and the deliverance from thence againe. The callings of the Gentiles.

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, nor breget children in this place. For of the children that are borne in this place & of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers that haue begotten the in this land, thus sayeth the Lord. They shall dye an horrible death: no man shall wepe for the nor bury them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall prey the thowme the swerde and hunger, and their bodies shall be meat for the foules of the aire, and bestes of the earth. For thus saith the Lord. So not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne & wepe for them: for I haue taken my peace from this people (saith the Lord) yee, my fauour and my mercie. And in this lande shall they dye, olde and younge, and shall not be buried, no man shall wepe them, no man shall clippe o: haue him selfe for them.

There shall not one vplift another, to mourne with them for their deade, o: to comforte them. One shall not offer another the cup of consolaciō to forget their heuinesse for father and mother. Thou shalt not go into their feall hous, to sit downe, to eat and drinke with them: For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place the voyce of myrrh & gladnes, the voyce of the bidegrome & of the byrde, yee, and that in your dayes, that ye maye see it.

Nowe when thou shewest this people al these wordes & they saye vnto the: * Wherefore hath the Lord deuised all this greates plague for vs? O: what is the offence & synne that we haue done against the Lord our God? Then make thou the this answer: * Because your fathers haue forsaken me: sayeth the Lord and haue walke after strange goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped, but me they haue forsaken and haue not kept my law. * And ye with your shameful blasphemies haue exceded the wickednes of your fathers. For euery one of you hath folowed the frowarde and euell ymaginaciō of his owne herte: and is not obedyent vnto me.

Therfore wyl I cast you out of this lande into a land that ye and your fathers know not and there shall ye serue strange goddes day and night, there wyl I shewe you no fauoure. Beholde, therfore (saith the Lord) the dayes are come that it shall no more be sayde: The Lord liueth which brought the children of Israel out of the lande of Egypt: But it shall be sayd: the Lord liueth that brought the children of Israel from the north, and from all landes where he had scattered the: For I wyl bring the againe into the lande that I gaue vnto theyr fathers Beholde (saith the Lord) * I wyl sende out many spyders to take them, and after that wyl I sende out hunters to hunte them out from al mountaynes and hilles, and out of the canes of Bone. For myne eyes beholde al their wayes, & they can not be hid fro my face, neither can their wycked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte. But first wyl I sufficientely rewarde theyr shamefull blasphemies & synnes, because they haue despoiled my lande, namely with their synning ydoles, and with the carions of theyr abominacions, wherewith they haue filled myne heritage. * O Lord, my strength, my power & refuge, in tyme of trouble. The gentiles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the world, and say, Verily our fathers haue cleaured vnto lyes their ydoles are but vayne and vnp̄ofitable. How can a man make those his gods, wherby are not able to be gods? And therfore I wyl once teach them, sayeth the Lord: I wyl shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lord.

The xvii. Chapter.

The frowardnes of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put theyr confidence in man, & those blessed that trust to God. Spawne here is wycked. God is the strength of the iust. The spynges waters are forsaiken. The palowynge of the Ass-bat is commaunded.

Youre synne (O ye of the trybe of Iuda) is wyrtten in the table of your vertes and grauen so vpon the hedges of your aulcers with a penne of yrb and with an Adamante clawe, that as the fathers thynke vpon theyr children, so thynke you also vpon your aulcers, woddes thycke trees, hye hilles, mountaynes and feldes. * Wherefore, I wil make my mounte that standeth in the felde al your subtiltie and treasure to be spoyled, for the greates synne that ye haue doone vpon your hye places thowme oute all the coastes of your land. ye shall be cast out also from the heritage that I gaue you. And I wyl subdue you vnder the heauye bondage of your enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue ministered hye to myne indignaciō, which shall burne euermoore. Thus sayeth the Lord: * Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, and that taketh helpe for his arme, and whose herte departeth from the Lord, he shall be lyke the brache, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thyng, that is for to come he shall not se it: but dwell in a drye place of the wilderness, in a salte and vnoctupied lande. * O blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lord, and whose hope is the Lord him selfe.

For he shall be as a tree that is planted by the waters syde: whiche spreadeth out the roote vnto moystnesse, whome the heate cannot harme: when it cometh, but his leafe shall be grene. And though there grow but lytle fruyte, because of drought: yet is he not carful, but le neuer leaureth of to bypnyng for the fruite. Amonge all thynges man hath the most disceantful & stubburne hart.

Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lord. I shall scarpe oute the grounde of the herte, and I ryde the

* The partyrbe maketh a nest of egges, whiche the layde not. he commeth by rycheesse, but not ryghteously. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynd hym, and at the last he founde a verrey foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose thron is moste glayous, excellent, and of moste antiquyte, which dwellest in the place of our holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israel. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that departe from the, shall be written in earth: for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very conducer of the waters of lyfe.

D Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be whole: save thou me and I shall be saved: for I put my prayse beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? (Let it come nowe.) Where as I neuerthelesse, obedyentely folowed the as a shepherd, and haue not vncalled taken this of sicke vpon me, this knowest thou well. My woordes also were ryghte before the. Be not nowe terrible vnto me, O Lorde, for thou arte he in whome I hope. When I am in perill. Let my persecuters be confounded: but not me: let them be afraide, and not me. Thou shalt byng vpon them the time of theyr plage, and shalt destroy them ryghte soe.

E Thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: So I stande vnder the gate where thozowe I people and the kynges of Iuda go oute and in: yea, vnder al the gates of Ierusalem I saye vnto them heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and all thou people of Iuda and all the cytyzens of Ierusalem, that go thozowe this gate. Thus the Lorde commaundet: Take ye de for your lyues, that ye carpe no burthen vpon you in the Saboth to bynge it thozowe the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthen alio out of your houses in the Saboth. Ye shall do no labour therein, but halowe the Saboth, as I commaunded your fathers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neyther harkened they vnto me but were obstinat and stubborne, & neyther obeyed me, nor receiued my correccio. A ruerthelesse ye will heare me (sayth the Lorde) & beare no burthen into I cytie thozowe this gate vnto the Saboth ye will halowe the Saboth, so ye do no worke therein: then shall there go thozowe the gates of this cytie kynges and prynces, I shall lyt vpon the thron of Dauid: They shall be carryed vpon charettes, & ryde vpon hoeses hotte they & theyr wyues. Yea whole Iuda & the cytyzens of Ierusalem shall go here thozowe: this cytie shall euer be the more & more inhabited.

There shall come men also from the cyties of Iuda, from aboute Ierusalem and from the lande of Ben Iamin, from the playne feldes, from the mountaynes, and from the wylernes whiche shall byng burnt offerynges, sacrifices oblacions, and incense, and offe vnto thanksgyng in the house of the Lorde. But if ye will not be obedyente vnto me, to halowe the Saboth, so that ye will beare your burthens thozowe the gates of Ierusalem vpon I Sabboth

Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem and it shall burne vnto the houses of Ierusalem and no man shall be able to quench the it.

The xviii Chapter.

¶ God sheweth by the example of a potter that it is in his power to destroye the bypness of his woordes and to helpe them as paye when they amette. The conficacy of the Iuda against Jeremye. His prayer against his aduersaries.

This is another comunicacyon that God had with Jeremye, sayng: Arise and go downe into the potters house and there shall I tell the moze of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house, I founde hym making his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes. So he began a new and made another vessel according to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: Wape not I doo wyth you as this potter doeth, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde: Beholde ye house of Israel, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the potters hande.

* When I take in hande to roote oute, to destroye, or to waste a wape anye people or kyngdomes. If the people agaynst whome I haue thus deuised conuert from theyr wickednes: I repent of the plage, & I deuised to byng vpon them. Agayn, when I take in hande to builde or to plant a people or a kyngdom, if I same people do euil before me, and heare not my voice I repent of that good & I deuised to do for them.

Speake now therfore vnto whole Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayeth I Lorde: Behold, I am deuising a plage for you and am taking a thynge in hande agaynst you.

* Therfore, let euery manne turne from his euell waye, take vpon you the thynge that is good & do right. But the said, A more of this we will folowe our owne pynagynacions, and do euey man according to the wilfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayeth I Lorde: Alke among the hearthen, if any man haue dearede suche horrible thynge, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shall not the snow that melteth vpon I stony rockes of Lybanus) moysten the felde? Or maye the springes of waters be so grauen away, that they runne nomoze, geue moystnes nor make fruteful? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne gods. And theyr prophetes make them fall in theyr wayes from the auncient pathe, and to go into a fote way not vsed to be troden of iust men. Where thozowe they haue broughte theyr lande into an euerlastyng wilderness and scame. So that whosoeuer traualleth therby shall be abashed, and wag their heades.

With an easie wynde will I scatter them before theyr enemy. And when their destruccio cometh, I will turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they: come let vs pynagyne some thynge agaynst this Jeremye: for the bycastes shall no be despyte of counsell, nor the prophetes destitute of I worde of God. Come and let vs smite hym with I tongue and let vs make all hye wordes, consider me: D Lozde, & heare the voyce of myne enemies: Whal they recompence euell for good: for they haue dygged a pyt for my soule. Remembze that I stode before the, to speake good for them and to turne away thy wrath from them.

Therfore, let they: chyldren dye of hunger and let them be oppressed with the sword. Let they: wyues be robbed of they: chyldren & become wyddowes: let they: husbannes be slayne let they: yonge men be kylled with the sword in the felde. Let synners be heard out of they: houses, wylt thou murder them suddenly upon the.

For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, and layde snares for my feet. Yet Lozde I knowest all they: counsel, that they haue deuised to slay me. Forgeue not they: wickednes: and let not they: synne be put out of thy syghte, but let the be iudged before the as the gyle. This wylte thou do vnto them in tyme of thy indignation.

The xix. Chapter.

The prophecye the destruction of Ierusalem for the cause of the synners and the synners of the house of God.

Ihus sayde the Lozde: So thy waye and by the aneathen pytcher, and byng forth & denatours & chepe pytches vnto the valley of the chyldren of hemon, whiche lyeth before the doze that is made of byrche: and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the: and saye thus vnto them. Heare the wordes of the Lozde ye kynges of Iuda and ye cptezens of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Irael: Scholde, I wyl byng suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed this place and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther they, they: fathers, nor the kynges of Iuda haue knowen. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes.

For they haue set vp an alter vnto Baal, to burne their chyldren for a burnt offering vnto Baal, whiche I nether commaunded nor charged the nether thought once there vpon.

Scholde therefore the tyme cometh (sayth the Lozde) that this place that nomoze be called Topheth, nor the valley of the chyldren of hemon, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place wyl I slaye the denatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the sword.

In the syghte of they: enemies, and of them that seke they: lyues. And they: dead carcases wyl I geue to be meat for the foules of the ayre, and the beastes of the felde. And I wyl make this cytie so desolate & despyled, that who soeuer goyth thereby, shalbe abashed and lest vpon her because of all her plagis.

Iwyl seke them also wyth the fleshe of they: sonnes and their daughters. Pea, euery one shall cate vp an other, in the bespygnyng and strappell, wherwith they: enemies (that seke they: lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pytcher shalte thou bryake in the syghte of the men that shalbe wyth the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes.

Euen so wyl I destroye they: people and cytie, as a man bryaketh an earthen vessel that cannot be made whole agayne. In Topheth shall they be buryed, for they shall haue none other place. Thus wyl I do vnto this place also sayeth the Lozde: and to them that dwel there in: yee, I wyl do to this cytie as vnto Topheth (for the houses of Ierusalem, and the houses of the kynges of Iuda shalbe despyled, lyke as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlours they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hostes of heauen, and powred drynke offerpnynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremie came from Topheth, wher the Lozde had sent hym to spyde and stode in the court of the Lozde, and spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Irael: Scholde, I wyl byng vpon this cyties vpon euerye towne about it: all the plagis & I haue deuysed agaynst them: For they haue bene obstynate, & wolde not obey my warnynges.

The xx. Chapter.

Jeremie is synghen and cast into prison for preaching of the word of God. He propheseth the captiuitie of Babylon. He complaineth that he is a mocking stocke for the word of God. He is compelled by the spere to preache the word.

When Balthur the prest, the sonne of Euer, cheke of the house of the Lozde heard Jeremie preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremie, and put him in the stocks & are by the gate of Beniamin, in the house of the Lozde.

The nexte daye folowynge Balthur broughte Jeremie oute of the stocks agayne. Then layd Jeremie vnto hym: The Lozde shal call the nomoze Balthur: for excellent and increasynge, but Agag: for he is fearful & afrayd: euery where for thus saith the Lozde, behold, I wyl make the afrayed euen thy selfe, and all the fauourers the whiche shall perishe with the sword of they: enemies: euen before thy face.

And I wyl geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kyng of Babylon, whiche shall cary some vnto Babylon prisoners, & slaye some with the swerde. Moreouer, all the substance of this lande, all they: precious & gorgeous wythes, all costlynes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Iuda, wyl I geue into the handes of they: enemies whiche shal spyle them, and cary the vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Balthur) shalte be caryed vnto Babylon with all thyne household, & to Babylon shalt thou come, wher thou shalt dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy fauourers to whome thou hast preached lyes.

O Lozde: Pf I am dyscreued, then haste thou dyscreued me: thou haste delte strongly, and haste preyayled, and makest me stronge agayne. Al the day long am I dyspysed & laughed to scoorne of euery manne, because I haue nowe preached longe agaynst the malycious tyrannyng and the wylde them of destruction. For the which cause they cast the wordes of the Lozde in my teth and take me snar to the word.

Wherfore I thought fro before, not to speake of hym, nor to preache any moze in his name.

But the worde of þe Lozde was a very burning fyre in my herte, and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stopped: I might not. For wher I þeard so many derispons and blasphemys on euery syde of me, complain vpon hym saye they: and we wyll tell his tale: yea, euen of myne owne companyons, & suche as were conuersant with me, went about to murder me: sayng: vpon hym, we shall one waye or other begyle hym, and pteuayle against hym: and be aduenged of hym.

But the Lozde stode by me lyke a myghtye gyant, therfore my persecuters fell, and could do nothyng. They shalbe sore confounded, for they haue done vnto wysely, they shall haue an euyl lastyng thame: * And now: O Lozde of hostes thou righteous searcher, (whiche knowest þe raynes, and the very hertes) let me se them punished, for vnto the, I comyt my cause.

D Syng vnto the Lozde, and prayse hym: for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppylled from the hande of the vyolente: * Cursed be the daye wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the day wher in my mother brough me forth. Cursed by the man that brought my father the tydynges to make hym glad, sayng: þu hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties which þe Lozde turned vpside downe. Let hym heare cryng in the moornyng, & at none day lamentable howlyng. Why sleepest thou not me as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe: O my mother had bene my graue her self, that the byrd myght not haue come out, but remayned still in her. * Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe: To haue experyence of labour & sorowe, and to leade my lyfe with wame.

The prophesie that Jeremye had taken, & the cytie burned.

I These are the wordes that the Lozde spake vnto Jeremye: what tyme as kyng zedekias sent vnto hym þat he shoulde be the sonne of Elchias, and so vpon as the sonne of Naathias prayste sayng: * Alke counceyl at the Lozde (we pray þe) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor þe kyng of Babilon besiegeth vs, yf the Lozde (peradventure) wyll deale with vs, according to his maruelous power, and take hym from vs.

B Then spake Jeremye: Seue zedekias thus answered. Thus sayeth the Lozde God of Israell beholde, I wyll turne backe the weapons þe haue in your handes, wher þe fyght agaynst the kyng of Babilon and the Chaldees whiche beslege you rounde about the walles: and I wyll byng them together in the myddest of this cytie, and I my self wyll fyght agaynst you with an outstretched hande and with a myghtye arme, in greate dyspleasure and terrible wraethe and wyll synke them þat dwell in this cytie: yea, both men & cattell shall dye of great pestilence. * And after this (sayth the Lozde) I shall deliuer zedekias þe kyng of Iuda, & his seruantes his people (and suche as are escaped in the cytie from the pestilence, swearde and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon: yea, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that folowe vpon theyr lyues whiche shall synke them with the swearde, they shall not pteie them: they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lozde: behold, I lay before you the waye of lyfe and deathe. * Whoso abyedeth in this cytie, shall perishe: either with the swearde with hunger, or pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that beslege it, he shall saue his lyfe, & shall wyne his soule for a praye. * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth the Lozde) to plage it and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the kyng of Babilon, & be bent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kyng of Iuda say thus: Heare þe word of the Lozde (O thou house of David) for thus sayeth the Lozde: * Whynest thou rightousnesse, and that sone: deliuer the oppylled from vyolent power, & cur my terrible wraethe breake out lyke a fyre and burne, so that no man maye quenche it, because of the wychednesse of your ymaginacions. * Behold (sayeth the Lozde) I wyll come vpon you that dwell in the valleys, rockes and feldeg, & say: * Cuth, who wyll make vs as a praye: or who wyll come into oure houses: For I wyll vylet you (sayeth the Lozde) because of the wychednes of your inuencyons, & wyll kyndle suche a fyre in your wood, as shall consume all þis about you.

¶ The xxiii. Chapter.

The exhortacyon the kyngs of Iuda to iudgement and rightousnesse: wherby Ierusalem is brought into captiuitie. The denyal of Belshazzar the sonne of Josiah is prophesied.

I Thus saide the Lozde: So do thoue into the house of the kyng of Iuda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lozde, thou kyng of Iuda, that sittest in the kynglye seat of David: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Lozde commaundeth: * hepe equyte and rightousnesse, deliuer the oppylled from þe power of the vyolente: doo not greue nor oppylle the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the wydow & shed no innocent blood in this place.

And hepe these thynges faithfully, then shall there come in at the doze of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauidys seate: they shalbe caried in charrettes, and ryde vpon horses bothe they and thy seruantes, and theyr people. But yf ye wyll not be obedynt vnto these commaundementes: * I sweare by myne owne selfe (sayeth the Lozde) this house shalbe waste. For thus hath the Lozde spoken vpon þe kyngys house of Iuda. Thou Silead art vnto me þe head of Lybanus. Shall I not make the so waste (and the cyties also) þe nom an shall dwell therein: I wyll prepare a destroyer with dys weapons for the to be we downe the espyrall Cedre trees, & to cast them in the fyre. And all the people þe go by this cytie shal speake one to another. * Wherfore hath þe Lozde done thus vnto this noble cytie: Then

Then shall it be said: because they have broken the covenant of the Lord their God, and worshipped & served strange gods.

* Woe not over the dead: and be not woe for them, but be sope for him that departeth away: for he commeth not agayne, and seeth his natyue countrey no more. For thus sayeth the Lord: as touching * Belai the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda: whiche rayned after his father, and is carped out of this place, he shall neuer come hether agayne, for he shall dye in the place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shall see this lande nomore. * Woe worth him & his house with vncyghteousnesse, and his parlours with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenceth his neyghbours laboure, nor payeth him his hire: he thinketh in hym self, I will builde me a wyde house and gorgeous parlours. He causeth windowes to be between therein, and & selpings and topes maketh he of Cedar, and painteth the with Sennar: * Thynkest thou to raygne nowe, & thou prouokest me to wrath with thy Cedar trees?

D Woe not thy father eate and drinke, and prosper well, as long as he delte with equitye, and cyghteousnesse? Per, when he helped the oppressed and poore to theyr ryghter, then prospered he well. From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lord: Nevertheless, as for thyne eyes and thine eare, they loke vpon courtesies, to shed innocent blood to do wronges & violence. * And therfore thus sayeth the Lord agaynst Jeohakim, the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda. They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas sister. Neither shall they say vnto hym. Alas spy, alas for that noble prince. But as an asse shall he be buried, corrupt, and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

E Cyme vnto the hyll of Lybanus: & I doughter Syon: lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Balan, cry from all partes: for all thy iouers are destroyed. I gaue the warning, whyle thou wast yet in prosperitie. But thou saydest: I will not heare. And this manner hast thou vsed from thy youth that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmen shall be dzinen with the wynd: and thy derlinges shall be caried away into captiue. Then shalt thou be brought to shame & confusyon because of all thy wickednes, thou & dwellest vpon Lybanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedar trees. * How lytle shalt thou be regarded when thy sorowes & panges do come on the as a woman traueylng with chyld.

* As truly as I live (saith the Lord) Though Conanias the sonne of Jeohakim, kynge of Juda were the sygnet of my ryght hande, yet will I plucke hym of. And I will geue the into & power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of the that thou fearest, into & power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of & Chaldees. Woecouer, I will sende the & thy mother & bare & into a strange lande where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye will desyre to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it againe. This man Conanias shall be like an ymage robbed and toyme in peces, whiche pleaseth no man for all his apparell. Wherefore, both he and his seide shall be sent away, and caste out into a land that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the woide of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord: Wryte this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperitie shall this man haue all his lyfe longe. Neither shall any of his seide be so happie, as to see vnto the seate of Dauid: & to beare rule in Juda.

Chap. xxi. Chapter.

¶ The speech agaynst the curates that make homache of the booke of the Lord. Of the corrupcion of the remnant of the Jewes to the payde. The closing of the true shephard. Christ is prophesied. Against false prophetes: when a prophet preacheth the word of God, God commeth the better of the hearers. Against prophetes that preach lyer vnder the name of God. The multitude of false prophetes.

¶ De be * vnto the shepherdes, that destruye and scatter my flocke, sayeth the Lord: Wherefore, this is the commaundemente of the Lord God of Israel: vnto the shepherdes that fede my people. Ye scatter and thruste oute my flocke and loke not vpon them. Therfore nowe will I vylet the wychednes of your ymaginacions, sayeth the Lord: And will gather together the remnaunte of my flocke frome all landes that I had dzynen them vnto, & will bring them agayne to theyr pastures, that they maye growe and encrease. I will set shepherdes also ouer them, whiche shall fede them. They shall nomore feare & drede, or there shall none of them be losse, sayeth the Lord.

* Behold the tyme cometh sayeth the Lord: that I will raise vp the righteous braunch of Dauid: whiche kynge shall beare rule, & he shall prosper with wisdom, and shall set vp equitye and cyghteousnes agayn in earth.

In his tyme shall Juda be saued, and Israel shall dwell without feare. And this is & name that they shall cal hym: * euen & Lord our cyghteousnes. * And therfore beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lord, & it shall be nomore sayd the Lord lyueth, whiche brought the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypt. But & Lord lyueth, which brought forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel out of the Assyrlande and from all countreies where I haue scattered them: & they shall dwell in their owne lande againe.

¶ Ye berte breakech in my bodye, because of the false prophetes, al my bones shake. I am become lyke a dzunken man (that by & reason of wyne canne take no reste) for verpe feare of the Lord and his holpe woide: because the lande is full of aduouterers, and thozowe swearing, it mourneth. * and the pleasant pastures of the deserte are dyed vp. Per, the wyde & men take is wyched, and theyr gouernance is nothyng lyke the holy woide of the Lord.

¶ For the prophetes & the prestes theim selues are polluted with pccptes & their wychednes haue I founde in my house, sayeth the Lord. Wherefore theyr way shall be slipperry in the darkenes wherin wherein they maye sacker and fall. For I will bring a plague vpon them, euen the pece of their dispracon, sayeth the Lorde. I haue sene folpe amonge the prophetes of Samary, & preached for Baal, and discepued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Ierusalem soule aduoutye, and presumtuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, flatteryng them: so that they can not returne from theyr wyckednes. All these wycked cytyens are vnto me as Sodome, and as Sennacherib of Somore.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes concernyng these prophetes. Behold, I will fede them with worme wood, and make them drinke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is vyccy come into all the lande.

And therefore the Lorde of hostes geueth you this warnyng. Heare not the wordes of the prophetes that preache vnto you, and discepu you: truelye they preache you vanyte, for they speake the meaning of their owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde.

They saye vnto them that despise me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tylke, ye shall prospeere ryght wel. And vnto all them that walke after the luste of theyr owne herte: they saye: Tylke there shal no misfortune happen you. For who hath sitten in the counsaile of the Lorde that he hath heard and vnderstande, what he is about to do? Who hath marked his deuyse, and heard it? Beholde, the storme wyther of the Lorde (that is his indignacon) shal go forth, and a wyolent whyle wynde shal fall downe vpon the head of the vngodlye.

And the wyathe of the Lorde shal not turne againe, vntill he perfoneme & fulfyll the thought of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I haue not sent these prophetes, sayeth the Lorde: & yet they canne. I haue not spoken to them, & yet they preached. But yf they had continued in my counsaile, they had opened to my people my wordes, and they had turned my people from theyr euell wayes and wycked pynnynges. Am I then God yf I see but the thyng whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farre of? sayeth the Lorde. May any man hys selfe so, that I shal not see hym, sayeth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth, sayeth the Lorde. I haue heard wel ynough, what the prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayyng: I haue dreamed: I haue dreamed.

Howe longe will this contynne in the prophetes herte to tell lyes, & to preach the craftye subtilty of theyr owne herte: whose purpose is (with the dreames & euery one tel) to make my people forget my name, as their forefathers did when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame let him tell it: and he yf vnderstandeth my word, let hym shewe it saythfully.

For what hath the chaffe and wheate to do together sayth the Lorde. Is not my word lyke a fyre, sayth the Lorde: and lyke an hammer: yf beareth the hard stone? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will vpon the prophetes that steale my worde pryncely from euery man: Beholde here am I, sayeth the Lorde, against the prophetes & make tynghes tendre to speake and to saye: The Lorde hath sayde it. Beholde here am I, sayeth the Lorde, against those prophetes that dare prophete lyng dreames, and myracles, whome I neuer sente nor commaunded thys. They shal do this people greute harme sayeth the Lorde.

Yf this people, either any prophet or preaste aske the, and saye, what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto them: what burthen? Therefore will I caste you frome, sayeth the Lorde, because ye your selues are a burthen. And the prophetes, preaste, or people that vser this tearme (the burthen of our Lorde) hym will I vylet: and his house also.

But this shall ye saye euery one to another, and euery man to his brother. What answere hath the Lorde geuen? what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lorde: ye shall speake nomore of it, for euery mannes owne word is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of the lynging God, the Lorde of hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen the? & what sayth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde. For so muche as ye haue vled thys terme the burthen of the Lorde where as I not withstandyng sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Behold therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, & wil cast you out of my pfectee: yet, & the cytie also & I gaue you and your fathers: and will bring you to an euerlastyng consulyon: and into such a shame as shal neuer be forgoth.

The xxiii. Chapter.

The vision of the paynnes of Egypt. The first vision signifyeth that parte of the people shal be brought agayne from captiuitie. The second that ierusalem and the rest of the people shal be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a vision. Behold, there stode two maundes of fyrges before the temple of the Lorde: after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had led awaye captiue Iechonias the sonne of Ieoachim: kyng of Iuda, the myghty men also of Iuda with the wojchemasters, and connyng men of Ierusalem: vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were verpe good fyrges, euen lyke as those that be fyre type. In the other maunde were verpe noughty fyrges whiche might not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seest thou Jeremie? I sayde: fyrges wherof some be very good, and some so euell that no man maye eate them.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, lyke as I knowest the good fyrges, so shal I knowe the men led awaye whom I haue sent out of this place, into the lande of the Chaldees.

The xrb Chapter.

*A Ieremye propheth that they shalbe in captiuitie. Ie. peres and s. because they contemned and despyed the worde of God.
He sheweth them that after the. lx. and. x. yeres, the Babilons shoulde be destroyed. The destruction of all nacions is prophesied in the mouth of the prieftes of the nacions to Ieremye.*

In the fourthe yere of Ierohym the of the Lorde hath ben compeeted vnto me.

* And so I haue spoken vnto you, I haue risse wyll I not punyssh you. Neuertheles, ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue despyed me with the workes of your handes, to pour owne grate harme.

* Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, because ye haue not hearkened vnto my worde Loo, I wyll sende oute, & call for all the people that dwell in the North (sayeth the Lorde) and wyll prepare Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon my seruant, and wyll bypnyng them vpon this land, and vpon al that dwel therein, and upon all the people that are about them, & wyll utterly roote them out. I wyll make of them a wyldernes, a mockage and a conynual desert.

* Moreover I wyll take from them the voice of gladnes & solace, the voice of the bydegrome and the byde, the voice of the anoynted with the cressetted, and this whole land shalbe come a wyldernes, and these nacions shal serue the kyng of Babilon. Ie. peres and x. * When the lx. yeres are expyed, I wyll vspyte the wychednes of the kyng of Babilon, and his people sayeth the Lorde: yee, and the lande of Chaldes, and wyll make it a perpetual wyldernes and wyll fulfyll all my wordes vpon that lande whiche I haue drupsed agaynst it, yee all that is wyten in this booke which Ieremye hath prophesied of all people so that they shalbe subdued vnto byuers nacions and greute kynges * for I wyll recompence them accordyng to their deedes, and workes of they: owne handes.

For thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cuppe of indignacyn from my hande, that thou maist cause all the people to whome I sende it, for to drynke of it: that when they haue drynken thereof, they maye be madde, & oute of they: wyttes, when I shewd cometh that I wyll sende, amonge them Then tooke I the cuppe from the Lordes hand and made all people to drynke thereof, vnto whome the Lorde had sente me.

But fyrste, the cytye of Ierusalem, and all the cytyes of Iuda, they: kynges and pynners, to make them desolate, waste, despyed, and hissed at, and cursed, accordyng as it is come to passe this daye. Yee, and Pharo the kyng of Egypte, his seruantes, his pynners & his people al together, one with an other. And all kinges of the lande of Hus: All kynges of the Philistines and of Ascalon, Azab, Accaron, and remnaunte of Ahdod, the Edomites, & Moabytes and the Ammonytes, All the kinges of Tyus and Sydon, the kynges of the Iles, that are beponde the sea, Tedan, Thema, Buz, & all them that dwell in the vttermoste partes of the world all the kinges of Araby, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the desert: all the kynges of Hamy, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of the Medes, all the kynges toward the North whether they be farre or nye, euery one agaynst his neygbbours: Yee, and all the kyngdomes are vpon the whole earthe. The kyng of Suetas sayde he: shal drynke with them also.

Therefore, saye thou vnto them: This is the comandement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Drynke and be drynken, sweete and sall, that ye neuer aryle, and that thow be the sward, whiche I wyll sende amonge you. But if they wyll not receiue the cuppe of chyne hand and drynke it: then tel them: Thus doth the Lord of hostes threten you: drynke ye shall, and that thow. For loo, * I begynne to plage the cytye that my name is geuen vnto, thynke ye then I wyll leane you vnpunished? Ye shall not go quite, for why? I cal for a sward vpon al synners of the earth: sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Therefore

Therefore, tell them all these wordes, and say vnto them: * The Lorde shall crye from aboute and let his voice be heard from his holy habita- cion. With a great noyse shall he crye from his court regall: he shall geue a greates voyce, (lyke the grapegatherers) & the sounde thereof shall be heard vnto the endes of the world. For the Lorde hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and will holde his court of iustyce with all fleshe, & punyssh the vngodly: sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Behold a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another, and a great rympe water shall aryse from all the cundes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde hym selfe slay them, from one end of the earth to another. Ther shall no more be made for any of the, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon the ground.

Mourne (O ye shepherdes) & crye, spynale your selues with albes, O ye rames of the floche for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slay one another, & ye shall be scattered and ye shall fall lyke vessels newly made.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flye and the rames of the floche shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye hoerbylde, and the rames of the floche shall mourne: for the Lorde hath consumed theyr pasture, and theyr best felde is dead, because of the horrible wrath of the Lorde. They haue forlaken theyr foldes lyke as a yon. For their land is waste, because of his furuous crueltie, and for hys fearfull indignacion.

The xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremye moueth the people to amendment. He is taken of the prophetes and prelates: & brought to iudgement. Alas the poeple is blyssed of Ierusalem contrary to the will of God.

In the begynnyng of the raygne of Jehokim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this woide from the Lorde, sayng: Thus sayeth the Lorde, stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche come out of the cyties of Juda, to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, all the wordes I commaund the to say.

* Loke that thou kepe not one woide backe, if (peradventure) they wyl herken, and turne eue- ry man from his wycked waye, & that I maye also repente of the plage whiche I haue deter- myned to bringe vpon them, because of theyr wycked inuencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde: If ye wyl not obey me to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you, to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes whome I sent vnto you, rplyng vpon tyme, and still sendyng: If ye wyl not folowe them (I saye) then wyl I do to this house as I byd vnto Babilon, and wyl make this cy- tyte to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the priestes, the prophetes, and all the peo- ple hearde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Now when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lorde commaunded hym to preache vnto the people: then the priestes, the prophetes, and all the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it byd vnto Babilon: and this cy- tyte shall be so waste, & no man shall dwell therein.

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremye, in the house of the Lorde, & prynces of Juda heard of this rumour, and they came sone oute of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde, and sat them downe before the & newe doore of the Lorde. Then spake the priestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the peo- ple these wordes: * This man is worthy to dye for he hath preached agaynst this cyte, as ye your selues haue heard with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cyte all the wordes that ye haue heard. Therefore amed your wayes, and your aduysmentes: and be o- bedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God so shall the Lorde repente of the plage, that he hath deuyed agaynst you. Howe as for me: I am in your handes, do with me as ye thinke re- pedynt and good. But this shall you knowe, if ye put me to deathe: ye shall make your sel- ues, this cyte, and all the inhabytours therof guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a truty that the Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the priestes and prophetes: This man may not be condempned vnto deathe, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde our God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Michas, the Mozaite whiche was a prophete vnder Ezechiah kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Upon shall be plowed lyke a feld, Jerusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shall be turned to an hye woode. Dyde Ezechiah the kynge of Juda and the people of Juda put hym to deathe for this: No verely: but rather feare the Lorde, & made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuyed agaynst them. Shulde we then do suche a shameful dede agaynst our sou- les: There was a prophete also & preached truly in the name of the Lorde, called Uria sonne of Semiah, of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cyte, and agaynst this lande accordyng to all as Jeremye sayeth. Now when Jehoa him the king with all the restates & prin- ces, had heard his wordes, & hym went about to slay hym. * When Uria perceyued that, he was afraied & fled, and departed into Egypte.

Then Jehoa him & hym sent his seruantes into the lande of Egypte: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achboi: & certayne men with hym into Egypte, whiche fetched Uria out of Egypt and brought hym vnto kynge Jehoa him, that slue hym with the sword, and cast his dead bo- dy into the comen peoples graue. But Iherem the sonne of Nathan helped Jerem. & he came not into the handes of the people to be slayn.

The xxv. Chapter.

Jerem. at the commaundment of the Lord sheweth how to the kynge of Juda and to the other kynge that were wylle, by they are commaunded to become subiectes unto Nabuchodonosor. he commaunded the people and the kynge & rulers, that they be not false prophetes.

In the begynnyng of the raygne of Jehoahim sonne of Josiah king of Juda, came this word vnto Jeremi from the Lord, which spake thus vnto me. Wake the bondes & chaynes and put them aboute thy necke, and sende them to the kynge of Edom, to the kynge of Moab, to the kynge of Ammon, to the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto zebediah the kynge of Juda, and byde them say vnto theyr masters: Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israell, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he, & made the earth, the men, and the cattel that are vpon the grounde, with my grete power, and outstretched arme: and haue geue it vnto who it pleased me: * And now wyl I deliuer al these liden into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruant. The bestes also of the felde shall I geue him to do him seruice. * And al people shall serue him, & his sonne, and his chyldren chyldren vntyl the time of the same lande be come also: pe many people and grete kynge shall serue hym.

For they preache you lyes: to bring you farre from your lande, and that I myght caste you out, and destroye you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym: those wyl I lette remaine still in theyr owne lande (saith the Lord) and they shall occupye it and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde Izedekia the kynge of Juda, and sayd: * Put your neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wyte thou and thy people perishe with the swerde with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lord hath deuyled for all people, that wyl not serue the kynge of Babylon? * Therfore geue no care vnto those prophetes (that tell you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon) for they preache you lyes: neether haue I sent them, sayth the Lord howbeit they are bolde, falsly to prophcey in my name, that I myght longer dyue you out, and that ye myght perishe by your preachers.

I speake to the prestes also and to all the people: Thus saith the Lord: heare not the wordes of those prophetes that preache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, * the vessels of the Lordes house shall shortly be broughte byether agayne from Babylon: For they prophcey lyes vnto you. heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon: that ye maye lyue. * Therfore wyl ye make this cite to be destroyed: But if they be true prophetes in verye dede, and if the worde of the Lord be comytted vnto them, then lette them praye the Lord of hostes that the remnant of the ornaments (whiche are in the house of the Lord, and remaine yet in the house of the kynge of Juda, and at Jerusalem) be not carped to Babylon also. For thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken, concernyng the pylers, the lauer, the seate: and the resydue of the ornaments that yet remaine in this cite, which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, * when he carped awaye Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoahim kynge of Juda with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem vnto Babylon captiue.

Pea, thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israell spoken, as touchyng the resydue of the ornaments of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem: * They shall be carped vnto Babylon, & there they shall remaine vntill I visyt them, sayth the Lord. * Then wyl I bringe them byether agayne. And this was done in the same yere, euen in the begynnyng of the raygne of zebediah kynge of Juda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The fals prophetes of Hananiah the prophet Jeremias sheweth that the prophcey of Hananiah is fals, by the example of the other prophetes. he sayng inspired of the Lord, reprooueth Hananiah, prophcing his death.

In the fourth yere of the raygne of zebediah kynge of Juda, in the fyfthe moneth it happened that Hananiah the sonne of Nethan the prophete of Gibeon, spake to me in the house of the Lord in the presence of the prestes and of all the people, & sayde: Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, * and after two yere wyl I bringe agayne into this place al the ornaments of the Lordes house, & Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon carped awaye from this place, vnto Babylon. Pea, I wyl bringe agayne Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoahim the kynge of Juda hym selfe, with all the pyloners of Juda (that are carped vnto Babylon) euen into this place, sayth the Lord. For I wyl breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the prophet Jeremias gaue answer vnto the prophet Hananiah before the prestes, and before all the people that were presente in the house of the Lord. * And the prophet Jeremias sayde: Amen, the Lord do that, and graunte the thyng whiche thou hast prophced: that he may bringe agayne all the ornaments of the Lordes house, and restore all the pyloners from Babylon into this place. Nevertheless, hearken thou also what I wyl saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme past, which prophced of war & trouble of trouble, of pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nacions and great kyngdomes, were proued by this: yf god had sent them in very dede: whyl the thyng came to passe, whych the prophete tolde before. And hananiab the prophete toke the chayne from the prophete Jeremies necke, & brake it, and with that sayd hananiab, that al the people mighte heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyl I brake the yocke of Babuchodonozor kyng of Babilo, from the necke of all nacions: yee, and that within this two yere. And so y prophete Jeremie went his way. Nowe after that hananiab the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophete Jeremies necke and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophete Jeremie, saying: Go, and tell hananiab these wordes. Thus sayth the Lorde: Thou hast broken the chayne of wodde: but in steade of wodde thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I wyl put a yocke of yron vpon synners of al this people, that they may serue Babuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon yee, and so shall they do. And I wyl geue him the beastes in the felde. Then said the prophete Jeremie vnto the prophete hananiab: Hear me hananiab. The Lorde hath not sent y but y bringest this people into a false belefe. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde, beholde: I wyl sende the out of the land and within a yere thou shalt die, because y hast sayde spake against the Lorde. So hananiab the prophete died the same yere in y. vii. moneth.

Chapter. xxi.

The prophete of Jeremie sent vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babilon. He propheseth that they shall returne from the captiuitie after lxx. yeres. He propheseth the destruction of the kyngdome and of the people that remaine in Iherusalem. He threatneth the captiuitie that shal be to the people. The death of Acherab the Ephetamite is prophesed.

These are y wordes of y booke that Jeremie the prophete sente from Iherusalem vnto the prisoners, y senators prelates, prophetes, & all the people whom Babuchodonozor had led fro Iherusalem vnto Babilon: after the tyme that kyng Sehoniah & his quene, his chamberlains the princes of Iuda and Iherusalem, the worche maisters of Iherusalem were departed thence. Whyche booke Eliaf the sonne of Saphan & Gomaraph y sonne of Belkiah had beare, who sedekiah the kyng of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Babuchodonozor the kyng of Babilo, these were the wordes of Jeremies booke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken vnto al the prisoners, that were led from Iherusalem vnto Babilo, & bupd you houses to dwel therein, plant you gardens: that ye may enioye the frutes therof. Take you wyues, to beare you sonnes & daughters, prouyd wyues for your sonnes, & husbandes for your daughters that they may get sonnes & daughters and that ye may multiplye there. Labour not to be serued but seke after peace and prosperite of the ctyte wherein ye be prisoners, & pray vnto the Lorde for it. For in y peace therof shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes y God of Israel. Let not these prophetes and soothsayers that be among you deceiue you & beleue not your owne dyemes. For why they preach you lyas in my name, And I haue not sent them, saith the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfilled lxx. yeres at Babilon, I wyl bringe you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wil carye you thither agayne into this place. For I knowe what I haue decreed for you sayth the Lorde: My thoughtes are to geue you peace, & not trouble: whych I geue you alreade: & that ye myght haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, & I will heare you. Ye shall seke me & fynd me. Yee, yf so be y ye seke with your whole herte: I wil be found of you saith the Lorde, & I wyl deliuer you out of prison: and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherein I haue scattered you, saith the Lorde, & wyl bringe you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried awaye captiue. But where as ye say, that God hath railed you vpon prophetes at Babilo: thus hath the Lorde spoken to the kyng that sitteth in the throne of Dauid, & to all the people that dwell in this ctyte, your bretheren that are not gone with you into captiuitie: Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hostes beholde. I wyl sende a swerde: hunger, & pestilence vpon them and wil make them like vnto yemely figges, that maye not be eaten for bitterness. And I wil persecute them w swerd, with hunger, & pestilence.

I wil deliuer them vp to be vexed of al kyngdomes to be cursed, abhored, laughed to scorne and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes: saith the Lorde whyche I sent vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes. I stode vpon earlye, and sente vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prisoners, whome I sent from Iherusalem vnto Babilon. Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ahab the sonne of Colaiab, and of sedekiah the sonne of Maasaph, which prophetes lyas vnto you in my name. Beholde I wyl deliuer them into the hande of Babuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon, that he maye slaye them before your eyes. And all the prisoners of Iuda, that are in Babilon, shall take vp this terme of cursynge and sape. Nowe God do vnto the, as he byd vnto sedekiah and Ahab, whome the kyng of Babilon rosted in fyre, because they sinned againe fully in Israel. For they haue not only despyed theyr neyghbours wyues, but also preached lying wordes in my name, whyche I haue not commaunded them.

This I testifie: and assure, saith the Lorde. But as for Semeiah y Ephetamite, thou shalt speake vnto him. Thus saith the Lorde of hostes y God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto al the people that are at Iherusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasaph the prest: yee, and sente them to al the

The Prophecye.

Preastes: wherein thou wast thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeyned the to be a preast in the street of * Jerolada & preast that thou shouldest be the cheefe in the house of the Lord, aboue all prophetes and preachers, and that thou myghtest set them vpon the pyllyer, or in the stocks. howe happenneth it then, that thou haste not re- poned Jeremy of Anathoth, whych neuer lea- ueth of his prophesying: And besydes all this, he hath sent vs worde & vnto Babilon, & tolde vs playnly: that our captiuitie shal long en- dure: that we shulde buyde vs houses to dwell therein: and to plante vs gardens, that we may enioye the frutes therof. Which letter Sopho- niad the preast reade, & let Jeremie the prophete heare it. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremie sayng: sende word to all them that be in captiuitie: on this maner: Thus saith the Lord God spoken concerning Semiah the Sebelamite: because that Semiah hath prophesied vnto you without my comission & broughte you into a false hope, therefore thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I wyl viset Semiah the Sebelamite, & his seed: so that none of his shal remaine amonge this people, and none of them shal see the good & I wil do for this people, saith the Lord. For he hath pyched falsely of the Lord.

The xxx. Chapter.

The returne of the people from Babilon God by his cha- ractering sheweth that the people is synnersfull, the destruction of the enemies of Israel.

Here are the wordes, that the Lord sheweth vnto Jeremie sayng. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently al the wordes & I haue spoke vnto the, in a booke. For loo, the time cometh, saith the Lord that I wyl bypnyng agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel, and Iuda, saith the Lord. For I wil restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shal haue it in possession. Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord, concern- yng Israel and Iuda: Thus saith the Lord. We haue hearde a terrible cry, feare and disqui- etnes. For what elles doth this synnyng, that Iler. Samiel: that all stronge men lmyt, euerye man his hand vpon his loines: as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer saw a man trauail: with chyldre: Enquyre thereafter, and se. Per. all they: faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dyedeful that none maye be spured vnto it, and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, for the whych he shal yet be deliuered. For in this daye saith the Lord of hostes I wyl take his yocke fro of chy ncke and breake the bondes: And strangers shal no more serue hym, but they shal do seruice vnto God they: Lord, and * to Dauid they: hyng, whome I wyl raise vp vnto the. And as for the, O my seruauit Jacob, feare not saith the Lord, and be not afrayed, O Israel. For loo, I wyl set the also from sacre, and they sede fro the lande of they: captiuitie. And Jacob shal turne agayne, he shalbe in rest, and haue a pro- sperous lyfe, and no man shal make him afrayd

For I am with the to helpe the faith the Lord. And though I shall destroye all the people among whom I haue scattered the, yet wil I not destroye the, but correct the, & that with dis- creation: For I know that thou arte in no wise without faute. Therefore thus saith the Lord Thy bysonnes are parious: and thy woundes redy to call the into sickness. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to laye plaster vpon or to bynde vp the wounded there maye no man helpe the. All thy louers haue forgotten the, & care nottynge for the. For I haue geuen a cru- el stroke, and chastened the roughly: & that for the multitude of thy misdeades: for thy synnes haue had powerhand. Whych maketh thou more for thyne harme: in dede, thou art soze wounded and in teopardye, but for the multitude of thy mysdores & synnes: I haue done this vnto the.

And therefore all they that deuour the, shal be deuoured, and al thine enemies shalbe led in- to captiuitie. All they that make the wast, shal- be wasted them selues, and al those that rob the wyl I make also to be robbed. For I wyl geue the thy helth agayne & make thy woundes whole saith the Lord, because they reuiled the, as one cast away & dispised. Shid: (said they) is the who no man regardeth. For thus saith the Lord. We holde: * I wyl bypnyng agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs retes & dede his dwelling place. The citie shalbe builded in her olde estate, & the hou- ses shal haue their right foundaciō. And out of them shal go thankyng: & the voyce of ioye.

I wyl multiplie them, and they shal not be fewe: I shall endue them with honour, and no man shal subdue them. They: chyldren shalbe as afore tyme, and they: congregaciō shal con- tinue in my syght. And al those that were them wil I viset: * A captaine also shal come of them and a prince shal spyng out from the middest of them, him wyl I challenge to my selfe and he shal come vnto me. For what is he & groweth ouer his verte to come vnto me saith the Lord. * He shalbe my people also, and I wyl be your God. Beholde: on the other syde shal I wathe of the Lord byeake out as a Roome water as a myghere whylle wynde, and shal fall vpon the beades of the vngodlye.

The terriblye dyspleasure of the Lord shal not leaue of, vntyl he haue done, & perfourmed the intente of his hert, * which in this latter daye ye shal vnderstande: At the same tyme: saith the Lord, shal I be the God of al generations of Israel, and they shalbe my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The prophesying that the people of Israel shal be restored agayne vnto the prosperite. To be rescued from the hande of the enemy. The birth of Christ is prophesied. All the which shal be in their iudgement. The new Testament & conuersion is prophesied. The Apostles are taught & instructed of the Lord. From synners they: so cometh, that they shal not once be thought on God promysed that he wil save of the Iewes. The bypnyng agayne of Ierusalem.

Thus saith the Lord: the people of Is- rael, whych escaped in the wyldernes fro the swearde, founde grace to come into they: rest. Even so shal the Lord nowe al so appere vnto me from sacre and saye, I loue

148. 149. * I lone the wyth an euerylastyng lone, therfore by my mercye I haue brynged the to me. I will repayre the agayne, O thou daughter of Israel that thou mayest be faste and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabernacles agayne, and go forth wyth the that leade the daunce. Thou shalt plant vynes agayne vpon the hylls of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plant, and communely eate of it.

For the dayes shall come when the watchemen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, aryse, * let vs go vpon vnto Shiloh to our Lord God for thus sayth the Lord. Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentyles: speake out, synge and saye: O Lord saue thy people, the remnaunte of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I will bryng them a-gayne from oute of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the world, with synners and lame that are amonge them, wyth the we-men that be greete wyth chylde, and such as be also deliuered: and the compaignye of them that come agayne, shall be greete.

They shall come wepyng and wyth mercyfull vyte wyll I bryng them hither agayne, I wyll lead the to fountains of water in a straght waye, where they shall not stumble. * For I am Israel's father, & Ephraim is my fyrst borne.

Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye Gentyles, preache in the yles, that Ipe farre of, and saye he that scattered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, and shall kepe hym, as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the vpylent, and they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes which the Lord shall geue them. Namely: wheat vayne: oyle, pynge shepe and calves. And they conscience shall be as a welwatered garden, for they shall nomoze be hungry.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce yet, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne they: sojowne into gladnesse, and wyll com-forte them from they: sojowes: and make them ioyfull. I wyll powre plenteousnesse vpon the ber-tes of the prestes, and my people shall be satisfy-ed with my goodnesse sayth the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * the voyce of benynesse, wepyng and lamentacyon was herde on bye euen of Rachel mournyng for her chyldren & wold not be comforted, because they were away.

But now sayeth the Lord, leaue of from wepyng and ceping, wythholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayth the Lord. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of they: enemyes: yee, euen thy posterite shall haue consolacyon in this, sayth the Lord, that thy chyldren shall come agayne into they: owne lande. Wo: couer, I heard Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne in this maner. * O Lord, thou hast correct me and thy chastenyng haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe.

Conuerter thou me, and I shall be conuerted: for thou art my Lord God: yee, as sone as thou tur-nest me, I shall resourme my selfe, and when I vnderstande, I shall synge vpon my thygh. For verely I haue comytted shameful thynges. For I haue borne reproche & confusion of my youth.

Vpon this complayne, I thought thus by my selfe, * is not Ephraim my bere sonne? Is he not the chylde, wyth whome I haue had all my myth and pastyme? For sens the tyme that I syllste comened with hym, I haue him euer in re-membraunce: therfore, my vercy herce dyueth me vnto hym, gladly and louyngly wyll I haue mercye vpon him sayth the Lord: Set watch men, proude teachers for the: set thine bet vpon the ryght waye, that thou shouldest walke, and turne agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, turne agayne to the cyties of thyne. Howe longe wylt thou go astraye, O thou synnyng daughter?
For the Lord wyll worke a newe thyng vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. It wyll come therto, that whi I haue broughte Iuda out of captiuyte, these wordes shall be hearde in the lande and in his cyties. The Lord which is the saye: bydegrome, of rygh-teousnesse, make the fructfull, O thou holy hyl.
And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cyties, & shepherdes, and husbandmen. For I shall fede the hungry soule, and refreche all saynt hertes.
When I herd this, I came agayne to my selfe. I mused lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete sleepe. Beholde, sayth the Lord, the dayes come that I wyll sowe the house of Israel, & the house of Iuda, with men and with cattell.

* Yee, it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes passe to rote them oute, to scatter them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chaste them: Euen so wyll I also go dyligently aboute, to buyde them up agayne, & to plante them, sayth the Lord. * Then shall it nomoze be sayd: the fathers haue eaten a sowye grape, and the chyldren seth are set on edge: for eueri one shall dye for his owne misdeede: so that who so eateth a sowye grape, his teth shall be set on edge. * Behold, the dayes come, sayth the Lord that I wyll make a newe couenaunt with the house of Israel, and wyth the house of Iuda, not after the couenaunt that I made with they: fathers, when I toke them by the hand and led them out of the lande of Egypt: whych couenaunt they broke: yee, euen when I as an husbunde had rule ouer them, sayth the Lord. * But this shall be the couenaunt that I wyll make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayth the Lord. * I wyll plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in they: hertes, * and wyll be they: God, and they shall be my people.

And from thence forth, shall no man teache his neyghboure or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lord. But they shall al knowe me from the lowest vnto the hyest, sayeth the Lord. For I wyll forgieue they: mysdoes, and wyll neuer re-mebye they: synnes any moze. Thus sayeth the Lord, which gaue the * sunne to be a lyght for the day, and the moone and starres to synne in the nyght: which moueth the see, so that the floudes therof waxe scarce: bys name is the Lord of hostes. A lyt as theys ordynance shall neuer be take out of my sight, sayeth the Lord. So shall the side of Israel never cease, but always be a people before me.

G Joyeouer, thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as the heauen above cannot be measured, and as the foundations of the earth beneath maye not be sought oute. * So will I also not caste oute the whole side of Israel, for that they haue comytted: sayeth the Lord: Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lord: that the cytie of the Lord shall be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner walle. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Sareb, and shall come aboute Sareb and the whole valley of the deade carhasses, and of the ashes, and al the felde vnto the brooke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the hogsegate towards the East, where as the sanctuarye of the Lord also shall be set. And when it is no more buylded, and let vp of thys falschpon, it shall neuer be broken nor cast downe any more.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

Jeremie is cast into prison, because he prophesied that the cytie should be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the tette that Jeremie bought of the commandment of the Lord, as thou shalt see, that the people should come againe to their owne possession. The people of God are bys seruantes, and he is thy Lord. To knowe God is Goddes gift, to the intent that thou maye be riched.

I these wordes spake the Lord vnto Jeremie, in the tenth yere of zedechiah kynge of Iuda: whyche was the eyghten yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hooste layde siege vnto Ierusalem: But Jeremie the p[ro]phet laye bounde in the court of the prison, which was in the kynge of Judas house: where zedechiah the kynge of Iuda caused hym to be layde, because he had prophesied of thys maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: * Beholde, I will deliuer thys cytie into the handes of the kynge of Babylon, whiche shall take it. As for zedechiah the kynge of Iuda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon which shall speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shall lye another in the face. And zedechiah shall be caried vnto Babylon, & there shall he be, vntill the tyme that I visyt him, sayeth the Lord. But yf thou takest in hande to fyghte agaynst the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

When vnto me. Beholde, Hananeel, the sonne of Belum thynne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the and requyre the to redeme the lande that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of hyndred it is thy ryghte to redeme it, and bye it out.

*Jer. lxxv. 2
Jer. lxxv. 3
Jer. lxxv. 4*

And Hananeel, myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prison, accordyng to the worde of the Lord, and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande, I praye the: that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Ben Jamin: for by heretage I haue ryghte to lose it oute for thy selfe, therefore redeme it. Then I perceyued that this was the commaundement of the Lord, and so I bought the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, mine vncles sonne and wayed hym there the money: euen seven sp-

cles, and ten silver pence.

I caused hym also to make a wytyng, and to seale it: and called receyde therby, and wayed hym there the money vpon the weyghtes. So I toke the eydence with the coppe when it was orderly seale & red it ouer, and I gaue the eydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Naasiah in syght of Hananeel, my cosyne and in the presence of the wytnesses, that be named in the eydence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the court of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying. The Lord of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this seale eydence with the coppe: and to laye it in an erthen vessel, that it may longe contynue. For the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined that houses felde, and vineyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande. Now when I had deliuered the eydence vnto Baruch sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lord, saying: O Lord God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and bye arme, and there is nothing hyd fro the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompensyst the wickednes of the fathers, into the bowels of the chyldren that come after them. Thou art the great & myghty God, whose name is the Lord of hostes: grete in counsell, and excellent in worke. Thine eyes lye vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to rewarde euery one after his waye: and accordyng to the frutes of his inuencions.

Thou hast done great tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypt, as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel, & vpon those men, to make thy name grete, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders with a myghty hand, with a stretched out arme and with grete terriblenesse: and hast gyuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promised vnto thy fathers. Namely, that thou wouldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye. * Now when they came thertin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, & walked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done, & therefore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwoorkes made nowe agaynst the cyty to take it: and it shall be wonne of the Chaldees that besyge it with swearde, with hunger, & death: and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, al thynges are present vnto the. Yet I sayst thou vnto me O Lord God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a peece of lande vnto my selfe, & take wytnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lord God of all flesh is there any thyng then to harde for me. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: * Behold, I shall deliuer this cytie into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor, the kynge kyng of Babylon, they shall take it.

For the Chaldees shall come and wyne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and polluted bynne offeringes vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For I seynge the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Iuda haue wrought wychednes befoze me euer from theyr youth vpon what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes, sayth the Lord.

What hath this crite ben els but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the day that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherein I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemies of the chyldren of Israel and Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, their kynges theyr pynces, theyr prelates, theyr prophetes, the men of Iuda, & the criteyns of Ierusalem.

When I spake by early, and taught them & instructed them, they turned their backs to me and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed & correct, but set theyr pboles in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to desyle it. They haue buylded byr places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to vowe theyr sonnes & daughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought to make Iuda synne with suche abhominacyon. And now therfoze, thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which (as ye your selues confesse) shal be deliuered into the hande of the kyng of Babylon when it is wonne with the swearde, with hunger, and with pestilence. Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wherein I haue scatered them in my wrath in my fearfull & great displeasure, & I will byng them agayn vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, & I will be theyr God.

And I will gyue them one hert & one way, that they may feare me al the dayes of their life that they & theyr chyldren after them may prosper. And I will set vpon euery lastyng coneuant with them. Namely, that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their hartes, so that they shal not runne awaye from me. Yee, I will haue a lust, and pleasure to do them good, & saythfully to plant them in this lande with my whole herte, & with all my soule. For thus sayth the Lord: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so will I also byng vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande: whereof ye sape now, that it shall neuer be inhabited of the people, nor of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shalbe bought for money, and euidences made there vpon, & sealed befoze wytnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Ierusalem, in the cyties of Iuda, in cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth yee, and in cyties that are in the south. For I will byng theyr pylsoners hyther agayne, sayth the Lord.

Chapter.

The prophete to monyche of the Lagne to gyue for the deluyne tyme of the people, whiche the Lagne promysed: God for gyth synners, and both graciously to the people, for ye ayme at none. Of the byth of Chyche. The kyngdome of Chyche in the church shall neuer be ended.

Where, the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye on this maner, when he was yet bounde in the Courte of the pylson. Thus sayeth the Lord, whiche fulfillerth the thyng that he speaketh: the Lord whiche persourmeth the thyng that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lord. Crepe vnto me and I will answer, and shew I greake and byr thynges, whiche were vnknewen vnto the. Thus (I sape) spake the Lord God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this crite and the houses of the kyng of Iuda, & they are vnknewen the odyneance & the swearde: Because the inhabytors of this crite are come to syghte agaynst the Chaldees, and they are fylled with the brade harkales of men whome I haue slayne in my wrath and displeasure: when I turned my face from this crite, because of all the wychednesse. Beholde sayth the Lord, I will repaere and heale theyr woundes, and make them whole I will open them the large treasure of prynces and truth. And I will returne the captiuyte of Iuda and Israel: and I will set them vpon agayn as they were afore. From all misdeedes, wherein they haue offended agaynst me, I will clesse them.

And all theyr blasphemies whiche they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I will forgyue them. And this shal get me a name a prynces, and honour amonge all the people of the earth, whiche shall heare all the good that I will shewe vnto them: yee, they shalbe ashynde: and asforned at all the good dedes and benefytes that I will do for them. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: In this place where of ye sape that it shalbe a wyldernesse, wherein neither people nor catell shall dwell: in lyke maner in the cyties of Iuda and wythoute Ierusalem (whiche also shalbe so voyde, that neither people nor catell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladnesse be heard agayne, the voyce of the byrdes of the byrde, & the voyce of them that shall syng: Praise the Lord of hostes, for he is louynge: and byr mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shall offer vpon giftes in the house of the Lord. For I will restore the captiuyte of this land, as it was afore: sayth the Lord, Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, It shall come yee therto, that in this lande, which is voyde from men and catell and in all the cyties of the lande, there shalbe set vpon shepheardes cosages: in the cyties vpon the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the south.

In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the felde of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hande of byrn, that tellerth them, sayth the Lord: Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lord: that I will persourme that good thyng, whiche I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel, and so the house of Iuda.

The Prophecye

In those dayes and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, the brāuche, of ryghteousnesse, and he shall do equyte and ryghteousnesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Iuda be helped: and Ierusalem shall dwel safe, and he shall call her, is euen God our ryghteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promysed: * Dauid shall neuer want one to set vpon the throne of his house of Israel: * neyther shall the priests and Leuites want one to offer alwaye before me burnt-offerings, to kindle the meat-offerings, and to prepare the sacrifices.

D And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie after this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde: Wap the couenaunt * whych I haue made wryth dauid and wyght be broken, that there shulde not be day and nyght in due season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, whych I made wryth Dauid my seruauant, & so he not to haue a sonne to raigne in his throne: & so shall also the priests and Leuites neuer sayle, but serue me. * For lyke as the starres of heauē may not be nombred neyther the lande of the see measured: so wyl I multiplye the sede of Dauid my seruauant, and the Leuites, my mynisters.

Wherefore, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, sayinge: Consydere thou no what this people speaketh: (Two hundredes say they) hath the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue despyed my people, and they reputed them as though they were no people. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt wryth dauid and nyght, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: the wyl I also caste awaye the sede of Iacob & Dauid my seruauant, so that I wyl take no pyppre out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abraham Isaac and Iacob. But yet I wyl turne agayne they captiuite, and be mercifull vnto them.

¶ The xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ The thirtieth that the cytie, & the kyng zedekiah also that be greden into the handes of the kyng of Babilon. He rebuketh them that broughte such of the cytie into captiuite, as were parched to go at their libertie.

In these are the wordes whych the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie: * What tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon & all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people foughte agaynst Ierusalem, and all the cyties ther of. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: So, and speake to zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, and tell hym: The Lord sendeth this word to the kyng of Babilon: he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, and deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babilon in the face and he shall speake wryth the mouth to mouth: & then shalt thou goo to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah, & kyng of Iuda: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne wryth the sword, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenytours were bzint: so shalt thou be bzint also, & in thy mourning they shall say: O Lord

For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde. Then sayd Jeremie the prophete all these wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kyng of Babilons host belieged Ierusalem, & the remnant of the cyties: Namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remained of the * stronge fenced cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all his people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed * a libertie, so that euery man shulde let his seruauant & handmayde go fre: Hebrue, and Hebrue, and no Iewe holde his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto this agreement, & euery man shulde let at libertie his bonde seruauant, & bond woman, & no longer to holde them bonde, euen so they were obedynt, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruantes and handmaydens, whom they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie from the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel. * I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when I broughte them out of Egypt, (that they shulde nomore be bondmen) saying: When leui peres are out, euery man shall let his bought seruauant an Hebrue go fre, if he haue serued hym syxe peres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned, and dyd ryght before me in that ye proclaimed, euery man to let his neyghbour go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in my temple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, & blasphemed my name. In this, & euery man hath requyred his seruauant and handmayden agayne, whom ye haue let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, & to be your bondmen, and bondwomen. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclaim freedom vnto his brother and neyghbour: wherefore I wyl call you vnto a freedom, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the sword, to the pestilence & to hunger, and wyl make you to be plagued in all the kingdomes of the earth. Per, those men that haue broken my couenaunt, & not kept the wordes of the appoyntment which they made before me, when they be wed & calfe in two, & when there went thow the two halves ther of: the princes of Iuda, the pyzners of Ierusalem, the gelded men, the priests, and all the people of the lande, whiche went thow the two sydes of the calfe: Those men wyl I gyue into the power of their enemies, and into the handes of them that followe vpon their lyues.

* And they dead bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda and his princes, I wyl deliuer them into the power of their enemies, and of them that desyre to slay them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babilons host, which * now is departed from you: But thow my comau commandement (sayth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cytpe, they shall fyght agaynst it: wyne it, and burne it: Forouer, I wyll laye the ctytes of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabites, & that by confounding the pybe & the wyne. The commandement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threatned punishment vnto the rebellious Iewes. He promysed p[er]petuall dwelinge vnto the Rechabites, for they obedyence.

In the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, in the raygne of Jehoahim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda are these: So vnto the house of the Rechabites, & call them out, and bynng them to the house of the Lorde into some commodious place, & gyue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniab, the sonne of Jeremye the sonne of Ihabaziniab, & his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole householde of the Rechabites: and brought them into the house of the Lorde, into the closet of schyldren of Haman, the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God, whiche was by the closet of the pynces, that is aboute the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whiche is the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the hyndred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cypres, and sayd vnto them: Drynke wyne.

But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaunded vs, saying: Pee and your sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne. * buylde no houses, sowe no seide: plant no vynes, pee: ye shall haue no vyngardes but for all your tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye may lyue long in the lande wherin ye be strangers. Thus haue we obeyed the commandement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all ye hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we noz our wyues our sonnes & our daughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs neyther vyngardes, noz come lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordyng vnto all ye Ionadab our father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vnto the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we may escape the host of the Chaldees and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Iuda and the inhabytours of Ierusalem: Wyl ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayth the Lorde: The wordes whiche Ionadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shuld drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey they: futhers commandement. But as for me: I haue stande vnto early, I haue spoken vnto you, & gyue you earnest warnyng: and yet haue ye not ben obedyent vnto me. Pee, I haue sent my seruauntes all ye prophetes vnto you, I rose vnto early, & sent you word, saying: Turne you now euery man from his wyched waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to wojshepp them:

that ye may contynue in the lande wyche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye wolde nryther heare me, noz folowe me.

The chyldren of Ionadab Rechabs sonne, haue stedfastly kepte theyre fathers commandement, that he gaue them, but thys people is not obedyent vnto me. And therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl bynng open Iuda, and vpon curye one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuyled agaynst toem. * For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuerthelesse, they wolde geue me no answer: Jeremye spake also to the householde of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commandement of Ionadab your father, and kepte all his preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all ye hath bydden you. Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: * Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stand alwaye before me.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wyrteth, as Jeremye endreth the booke of the curfew agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent by the booke vnto the people and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers and readeth it before them also. The rulers then vnto the wyng the wordes of the booke. Jeremi takeh the booke and readeth a litle of it, and caryeth it in the hert. Ther is another wyrteth at the commandement of the Lorde.

In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah the kynge of Iuda, came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: * Take a booke, and wyrteth ther in all the wordes that I haue spoken to ye agaynst Israel, agaynst Iuda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto thys daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, wher I haue deuyled for them they maye peraduenture, turne euery man from his wyched waye: that I maye forgyue theyr offences and synnes. Then byd Jeremye cal Baruch the sonne of Neriah: and Baruch wyrteth in the booke at the mouth of Jeremye all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had spoken vnto hym.

And Jeremye commaunded Baruch sayinge: I am in pylson, so that I maye net come into the house of the Lorde: therefore go thou thyr and reade the booke that I haue wrytten at my mouth namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade the in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng day, & the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come oute of egypten may heare. Peradventure, they wyl pray myshelp before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from his wyched waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst thys people. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah byd accordyng vnto all that Jeremye the prophet commaunded him, reading the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfte yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, in the ix. moneth, when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shulde faste before the Lorde & they also were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

The Prophecye

C Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremie oute of the booke within the house of the Lord: oute of the tresury of Samariah & sonne of Saphan the scribe, whiche is besyde the hyer lotte of the * newe doze of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Micheah & sonne of Samariah, the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of the Lord oute of þe booke he wente downe to the kynges palace into the scribes chambers, for ther all the princes were set. Elishama the scribe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semel, Elnathan the sonne of Ichbez, Samariah the sonne of Saphan, Jechiah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes þe he hearde Baruch reade oute of the booke befoze the people.

D Then all the princes sent Jechiah the sonne of Hananiah, the sonne of Delamiah, the sonne of Chail, unto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thynne hande the booke, wher oute thou haste red befoze all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Seriah, toke the booke in hys hande, and came unto them. And they sayde unto hym: Spete downe and reade the booke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare. Nowe when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certefye the kyng of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs howe yfdesse thou wyrtte all these wordes out of hys mouth. Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me w hys mouth, and I wrote them in the booke.

E Then sayde the princes vnto Baruch: So thy wape, hyde the with Jeremie, so that noman knowe where þe be: And they went into þe kyng to the court. But they kepte the booke in the chambze of Elishama the scribe, and tolde the kyng all the wordes, that he myght heare. So þe kyng sent Jechiah to fet hym the booke whiche he broughte out of Elishama the scribes chambze. And Jechiah red in it that the kyng and all the princes whiche were aboute hym myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth, and ther was a fyze befoze hym. And when Jechiah had red thre or foure leues thereof, he cut the booke in peces w a penknife and cast it into the fyze vpon the hARTH vntyll þe booke was all bynt in the fyze vpon the hARTH.

F Yet noman was abashed thereof, or rente hys clothes: neyther the kyng hym selfe, nor his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse, Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Samariah broughte the kyng that he wolde not burne the booke: not withstandinge the kyng wold not heare the, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amiech: Baraiah the sonne of Ezriel, and Delamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to lape handes vpon Baruch the scribe, & vpon Jeremie the prophet: but þe Lord kepte them out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had bynt the booke and þe sermons which Baruch wrote at þe mouth of Jeremie. The wordes of the Lord came vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take an other booke and wyrtte in it all the foze sayde sermons, that were wyrtten in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda hath bynt.

And tell Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda: thus sayth the Lord: thou hast bynt the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast þe wyrtten therein, that þe kyng of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste: so þe shall make bothe people and catell to be out of it. Therfoze thus the Lord sayth of Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda. * There shall none of his generacyon lye vpon þe throne of Dauid. His dead corse shall be cast out, that the heate of the daye, & the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I wyll vlyte the wychednes of hym, of his seide, & of his seruantes. Whereouer, all the euyl that I haue promysed them (though they hearde me not) wyll I byng vpon them, vpon the inhabytours of Ierusalem, & vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremie another booke, & gaue it Baruch þe scribe the sonne of Seriah, which wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremie, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoahym the kyng of Iuda byd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then befoze.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Jechiah succeeded Cononias. He sendeth vnto Jeremie to praye for hym. Jeremie saynge into the lande of Beniamin to be taken. He is beaten and put in prison. He is deliuered by the kyng Jechiah.

J Edehiah the sonne of Josiah * whiche was made kyng thowowe Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the lande of Iuda, in the steade of Cononias the sonne of Jehoahym. But neyther he nor his seruantes, nor the people in the lande wold obey the wordes of the Lord, whiche he spake by the prophete Jeremie. * Neuerthelesse, Jechiah þe kyng sent Jechiah the sonne of Delamiah, & Saphoniah þe sonne of Maasiah þe priest to the prophete Jeremie, sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Nowe Jeremie walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Pharaos host also was come out of Egypt: whiche when the Chaldees that besyged Ierusalem perceyued, they departed from thence. Then came þe word of the Lord vnto the prophet Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayth þe Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye gyue to the kyng of Iuda that sent you vnto me for consayle. * Behold, Pharaos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayn and fyght agaynst this cytie, wyne it, & let fyze vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: disceyne not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: Tush, þe Chaldees go now they wape for vs. No, they shall not go they wape. For though ye had slayne the whole host of the Chaldees that besyge you, and euery one of the slayne lape in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp and set fyze vpon this cytie.

Nowe when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken vp from Ierusalem, for feare of þe Egyptian armye: Jeremie went out of Ierusalem, towarde the lande of Beniamin, to gette hym from amonge the people.

And when he came vnder Ben Jampus porte there was a porter, called Jerpah, the sonne of Selemyah the sonne of * Hananiah, whych fell vpon hym, and toke hym, sayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Chalbees. Then sayde Jeremye: It is not so, I go not to the Chalbees. Heurthe les, Jerpah wolde not beleue hym: but brought Jeremye bound before the pynces. Wherfore the pynces were angry wth Jeremye, & smote hym and lapde hym in pylon in the house of Jonathan the scribe. For he was the ruler of the pylon. Thus was Jeremye put into the dongron & pylon, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then zedekiah the kynge sent for hym, and called him and asked hym quyetly in hys owne house, sayinge: thy necke is thou thy bulynes (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lord: Jeremye answered, yee, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Whereupon Jeremye sayde vnto kynge zedekiah: What haue I offred against the, against thy seruantes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue put me in pylon? Whereat your prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, and sayd: that the kynge of Babylon shulde not come agaynst you and thys lande: And therfore heare nowe O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me no more into the house of Jonathan the scribe, & I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kynge commaunded to put Jeremye in the foze entre of the pylon, and dayly to be geuen hym a bake of breade oute of the bakers breate vntill all the breade in the ctyte was eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the foze entre in the pylon.

At the motion of rulers Jeremye is put into a dongron. At the request of Abemelech the chamberlaine: the kynge commaunded Jeremye to be brought forth of the dongron. Jeremye sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

Saphatiah the sonne of Nathan, Godoliah the sonne of Shafur, Iucal & sonne of Selemyah, and Shafur the sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremye had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on thys maner, Thus sayeth the Lorde, * Who so remayneth in thys ctyte, shall perishe, eithet wth the swerde, wth hunger or wth pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Chalbees, shall escape, wyngyng hys soule for a praye, and shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: Thys ctyte (no doubte) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he shall wyne it. Then sayde the pynces vnto the kynge: Why we beseeche you let thys man be put to death, For thus he vscozaget the handes of the loudpers that be in thys ctyte, and the handes of all the people whiche speaketh such wordes vnto them. This man verely laboureth not for peace of the people but myscheffe, zedekiah the kynge answered & sayde: loo, he is in your handes, for the kynge maye denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremye, and cast hym into the dongion of Melchiah the sonne of Amelech that dwelte in the foze entre of the pylon: And they let downe Jeremye wth combes into the dongion, where there was no water but myse. Nowe when Abemelech the chamberlaine in the kynges court, vnderstand that they had cast Jeremye into the dongion, he wente oute of the kynges house and spake to the kynge, (whych then sat vnder the porte of Ben Jampus) these wordes: my Lorde the kynge, wher as these men medle wth Jeremye the prophete, they do hym wronge, namely in that they haue put him in pylon, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more breade in the ctyte. Then the kynge commaunded Abemelech the chamberlaine and sayd: Take from hence xxx. men whom thou wylte, & drawe vp Jeremye the prophete out of the dongion before he dye, So Abemelech tooke the men wth hym, and went to the house of the kynge: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges and woyme cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde into the dongion to Jeremye.

And Abemelech the chamberlaine sayde vnto the prophete Jeremye: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwixte them and the coardes: and Jeremye dyd so, So they drew vp Jeremye wth coardes, and toke hym out of the dongion, and he remayned in the foze entre of the pylon. Then zedekiah the kynge sent, and caused Jeremye the prophete to be called vnto hym, into the thyrde entre that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremye: I wyl aske the somewhat, but hyde nothyng fro me. Then Jeremye answered zedekiah: If I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cause me to suffre death: If I gyue the counsayl, thou wylte not selowe me. So the kynge sware an oth secretly vnto Jeremye, sayinge: As trulye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto zedekiah: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * If case be, that thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons pynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this ctyte shall not be bzent: yea, both thou and thy household shall escape wth your lyues. But if thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons pynces, then shall this ctyte be deliuered into the handes of the Chalbees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremye: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chalbees, lest I come in thers handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremye answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) which I speake vnto the: lo shalt thou be wel and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me this playnly: Beholde, all the women that are left in the kynge of Judas house, shall be led forth out to the kynge of Babylons pynces. And they shall saye, that thou art disceyued: and the men in whome thou dydest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, and set thy feet fast in the myse, and gone thys way from the. Therfore all thy wordes which they chylben shall they lede forth vnto the Chaldees and thou shalt not escape thes: habes, but shalt be the kynge of Babylons pynsoner: and thys crite shalt thou cause to be hient. Then sayd ze-dekyah vnto Jerem: loke that nobody knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the pynces perceaue that I haue talked wth þ and comie vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the: hyde it not from vs, and we wyl not put the to deathe. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kynge to þ: So thou gaue the thys answer: I haue doublytely delougth the king that he wyl let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jerem, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner of the kynge hadde hym.

Then they helde thes: peace and let hym alone: for they perceaued nothyng. So Jerem abode still in the foore entre of the pynson, vntill the daye that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxx. Chapter

Abuchodonozor king of Babilon, king of the Chaldees, took Jerem the prophet of the Lord, and brought him to Babilon. And he said unto him, I have heard that thou art a prophet of the Lord: now therefore let us see what thou canst prophesy. And Jerem said unto him, I cannot prophesy: for I am a stranger in this land. And he said unto him, I have heard that thou art a prophet of the Lord: now therefore let us see what thou canst prophesy. And Jerem said unto him, I cannot prophesy: for I am a stranger in this land.

When the crite of Ierusalem was taken (for in the ix. year of ze-dekyah kynge of Iuda, in the tenth moneth, came Abuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon and all his host, and beleged Ierusalem, and fought agaynst it, And in the xi. year of zedekeah in the xii. mo-neth, the ix. daye of the moneth, he brake into the crite) Then all the pynces of the kynge of Ba-bilon came in, and sette them downe vnder the porte Seragel, Sarezet, Samgarnebo, Sar-chachym, Rablars, Seragell, Sarezet, Rabmag wth all the other pynces of the kynge of Babilon: And when zedekeah the kynge of Iu-da wth his souldiers saw them, they fled, and departed out of the crite by nyght, thowwe the kynge garden, and thowwe the port that is betweene the two walles, and so they went toward the wyldernes.

But the Chaldees host folowed faste after them, and toke zedekeah in the seide of Jericho, and brought hym pynsoner to Abuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon vnto Beblath, that is in the land of hemah, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kynge of Babilon caused þ chylben of zedekeah and all þ nobles of Iuda to be slayne before his face at Beblath. And made zedekeah eyes to be put out, and bounde hym w two chaynes, and sent hym to Babilon.

When the Chaldees bente vnto the kynges palace, wth the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. And for the remnaunte of the people that were in the crite: and such as wer come to helpe them (what soeuer was lefte of the comon sort) Nabuzara-dan the chefe captayne caried them to Babilon.
But Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne let the cal-tell people (and those that had nochyng dwell still in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vine-yardes and come felde at the same tyme. Abu-chodonozor also the kynge of Babilon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge concerning Jerem, sayinge: take, and charye hym and make much of hym, for thou do him no harme but intreate hym after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Abu-sazban, Rablars, Seragel, Sarezet, Rabmag and all the kynge of Babylons Lozdes sente for Jerem, and caused hym to be fet oute of the foore entre of the pynson, and comfited hym vnto Sodoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Ma-phan: that he shulde carie hym home: and so he dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jerem laye yet bounde in the foore entre of the pynson, the worde of the Lozde came vnto hym saying: So and tel Abemelech the Mozyan. Thus sayde the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deuyled for thys crite, wyl I charye vpon them that thou shalt se it, but I wyl depuer the (saying) the Lozde, and thou shalt not come in þ han-des of those men whom thou fearest. For doubte-les, I wyl saue the, so that thou shalt not prey-the wryth the swearde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued and that because thou hast put thy trust in me: sayeth the Lozde.

The xl. Chapter

Jerem hath licence to go whether he wyl. He dwelleth with the people that rem. part of Ierusalem. And whome so Solap ruled Iohanan propheth deach vnto Sodoliah.

This is the worde that þ Lord spake vnto Jerem, when Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had let him go fre from Ramath, whither he had led hym bounde amonge all the pynso-ners that were caried from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chefe captayne called for Jerem and sayde vnto hym. The Lozde thy God spake myghtely before, of the myser vpon thys place. Nowe the Lozde hath sent it, and perfourmed it, as he hath promysed. For ye haue sinned agaynst the Lozde: and haue not bene obedynt vnto his voyce, therefore cometh thys plage vpon you. Beholde, Iose the bandes frome thy handes thys daye: yf thou wylte nowe go wth me vnto Babilon, vpon then: for I wyl se to the and prouyde for the. But yf thou wylte not goo wth me vnto Babilon, then remayne here.
Beholde, all the land is at thy wyl, loke where thou thynkest conuenient and good for the to a-byde, there dwel. For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Sodoliah, therefore he sayde to hym: go backe to Sodoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Mahan: whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernour ouer the crites of Iuda, and dwell wth hym amonge the people or remayne wheresoeuer it please the. So the chefe captayne gaue hym his expences with a re-warde and let hym go. Then went Jerem vnto Sodoliah the sonne of Ahicam, to Myza, and dwelte there wth hym amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the host of Iu-da (whycher wth thes: felowes were scattered abroad on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode, that the kynge of Babilon had made Sodoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the land: and that man

that man, wyfe, and chyldre, yee, and the poore men in ſlender: that were not led captiue to Babylon: ſhoulde be vnder hyſ ſurſpectyon. They came to Godoliab vnto Wyſpa: Namely Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah Iohanan, and Jonathan the ſonnes of Cariah, Wareah the ſonne of Chaboneth: the ſonnes of Ophai, the Netophathite: Jeſanah ſonne of Waachaty, wyth theyr company: And Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam, the ſonne of Sapphan ſware vnto them and theyr ſeloues in thys maner. * Be not afrayde to ſerue the Chaldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babylon ſeruyce, ſo ſhal ye proſper. Beholde, I dwel at Wyſpa to be an officer in the Chaldees behalf, and to ſatysfye ſuche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, come, & oyle, and kepe them in youre ware houſes, and dwell in youre cytyes that ye haue in keepynge.

D Yee, all the Jewes alſo that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonytes in Idumea and in all the countreyes when they hearde that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam the ſonne of Sapphan gouernoure, vpon them that were left in Iuda. All the Jewes (I ſaye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliab vnto Wyſpa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreover Iohanan the ſonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoſte that were ſcattered on euery ſyde in the lande, came to Godoliab in Wyſpa, and ſape vnto hym: Knoweſt thou not that Baallis the kynge of the Ammonites hath ſent Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah to ſlay the? But Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam beleued the not. Then ſayde Iohanan the ſonne of Careah vnto Godoliab in Wyſpa theſe wordes ſecretly. Let me go I praye the and I will ſlay Iſmael ſonne of Nathaniah, ſo that no body ſhal knowe it. Wherefore will he kyl the, that all the Jewes whych reſozte vnto the, myghte be ſcattered, and the remnaunt in Iuda perſhe. And Godoliab ſonne of Ahicam ſayde vnto Iohanan the ſonne of Careah. Thou ſhalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that thou ſayeſt of Iſmael.

Iſmael kylled Godoliab ſecretly, and many other wyth hym. Iohanan ſoloweth after Iſmael.

In the ſeuenth moneth it happened, that Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah the ſonne of Eliſama (one of the kyngeſ bloud) came wyth the that were greateſt aboute the kynge and ten men that were ſwoyne wyth hym: vnto Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam to Wyſpa, & theyr dyd eate to gether. And Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah wyth thoſe ten men that were ſwoyne to hym, ſtarte vp, and ſlote Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam the ſonne of Sapphan wyth the ſword and ſlewe hym, who the kynge of Babylon had made gouernoure of the lande. Iſmael alſo ſlew all the Jewes that were wyth Godoliab at Wyſpa & all the Chaldees that he founde there wythynge vpon hym & thoſe that were able to fyghe he ſlewe wyth hym.

The next daye after that he had ſlayne Godoliab (the maſter was yet unknowen) & there came certayne men from Sychem, from Wylo and Samaria, to ſe ſombe of. lxxx. whych had ſhauen theyr beards, rente theyr clothes, & wer all heauye, byngynge meate & drynges and in-cence in theyr handes to offre it in the houſe of the Lord. And Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah toke ſozth of Wyſpa & wepyng, to mete them. Now when he met them, he ſayde: So youre waie to Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam. And when they came into the myddelt of the cytye, Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah (wyth the that wer ſwoyne vnto hym) ſlewe them, euen at the myddelt of the cytye. Among theſe ſoure ſcore men there wer ten that ſayde vnto Iſmael: Oh, ſley vs not for we haue yet great treaſur in the ſeld of wheat, barley, oyle, and honye.

So he ſpared them, and ſlewe them not wyth theyr brethren. Nowe the cytye wherem Iſmael dyd caſt the deade bodies of the men (whome he ſlewe becauſe of Godoliab) had kynge Aza cauſed to be made for ſcare of Baaza the kynge of Iſrael, & the ſame pyt dyd Iſmael fyl wyth ſlayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kyngeſ daughters and all the people that were yet left at Wyſpa vpon whom Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had made Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah caried them awaye pryſoners toward the Ammonytes. But when Iohanan the ſonne of Careah, and all they whych had bene captaynes ouer the kyngeſ hoost wyth hym, herde of al wyckednes that Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had done, they toke theyr companions, & went out for to fyghe wyth Iſmael ſonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the great waters that are in Sychem. Nowe when all the people who Iſmael led captiue, ſawe Iohanan the ſonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the hoſt, they were glad. So all the people & Iſmael had caried awaye fro Wyſpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Iohanan the ſonne of Careah. But Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, fled from Iohanan wyth viii. of his ſwoyne companions, and went to the Ammonites. Then Iohanan the ſonne of Careah & all the captaynes of the hoost, that were wth him toke all the remnaunt of the people: whome Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had led awaye. (When he had ſlayne Godoliab the ſonne of Ahicam) whome they alſo had reſerued from hym: fyghepyng men, women and chyldren, and ſel-dead men, whom they brought agayne from Sychem & went from thence and ſat them downe at Geruth Canaan whych lyeth beſyde Beſlem, that they myght go into Egypte for ſcare of the Chaldees: of whome they were afrayd, becauſe that Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had ſlayne Godoliab Ahicams ſonne: whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernour in the lande.

So al the captaynes, and Jehanan the sonne of Careah: I amiah the sonne of Oziab, came wyth al the people that the lest unto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremy the prophet. * O heare our prayson, that I maye pray for vs, vnto the Lord thy God, namely, for al the remnaunte whereof there be very fewe of vs left of many, as thou seest vs. * The Lord thy God shewe vs a waye to go in, and tell vs what we shulde do. Then Jeremy the prophet sayde vnto them, I haue heard you. Beholde, I wyll pray vnto God your Lord, as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answer the Lord geueth you, I shall certify you therof, and kepe nothyng backe frome you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy. * The Lord of truth and saythfulnes be oure recorde, that we wyll do all that the Lord thy God commaundeth vs, wherether it be good or euil. We wyll hearken vnto the voyce of the Lord God, to whom we sende the that we maye prosper, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lord oure God.

And after thre dayes came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the people from the lest to the most, and sayde vnto them, Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel vnto whome ye sente me to saye for the poure prayers before hym: * If ye wyll dwell in thys lande, I shall builde you vp, and not breake you downe. I shall plante you, and not roote you out: for I repente, as concerynge the trouble that I haue done vnto you: feare not the kynge of Babilon of whome ye stande in awe: O be not afrayde of hym sayth the Lord: for I wyll be with you, to healte you, and deliuer you frome hys hande: I wyll parden you, I wyll haue mercye vpon you, and cause hym to ptepe you, and bypunge you agayne into poure owne lande.

Acuert the lesse. * If ye purpose not to dwell in thys lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lord poure God, but wyll say thus: we wyll not dwell here but go into Egypte, where we shall netheir feare warre, heare the noyse of the dryet, nor suffer hunger, ther wyll we dwell. Wherefore, heare now the worde of the Lord: O ye remnaunte of Juda: * Thus sayth the Lord, of hostes the God of Israel: If ye be wholy purposed to go into Egypte, and to dwell there as strangers: * The sword that ye feared, shal ouertake you in Egypte, and the hunger wherof ye be heare a frayde: shal hange vpon you: and solowe you in to Egypte, and there shall ye dye, And all they that of set purpose vnder take to go into Egypte to sojourn there, shal perishe wyth the sword wyth hunger and pestilence, not one of the shall remaine, there shall none escape the plage, that I wyll bypunge vpon them.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, lyke as my wrath and indignacion is moued agaynst the inhabytours of Ierusalem: so shall my displeasure be kyndled agaynst you also, if ye go into Egypte, and there ye shal be reuyed, abhorred: brought to shame and confusion: as for thys place ye shal neuer se it more,

The Lord shal byddeth you: O ye remnaunte of Juda that ye shal not go into Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly thys daye, for ye haue dyscembled wyth me: * If ye sent me vnto the Lord poure God and sayde: O praye thou the Lord oure God for vs: and loke what answer the Lord oure God geueth the, that bypunge vs agayne and we shal do therafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord poure God, for the wyche cause he hath sent me vnto you.

Nowe therefore, * If ye wyll not folowe it, be sure that ye shal perishe wyth the sword, wyth hunger and pestilence: euen in the same place where your lust is to go and dwell.

The xlii. Chapter

Johanan carryeth the remnaunt of the people into Egypte contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremy prophesied the destruction of Egypte.

Now when Jeremy had ended al the wordes of the Lord hys God: vnto the people whych to declare the Lord they: God had sent him to them: euen al these wordes, I saye, Baruch the sonne of Oziab: and Johanan the sonne of Careah wyth all the stubborne persons, sayde vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest, The Lord oure God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shuld not go into Egypte, and dwell there. But Baruche the sonne of Nerab prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myghte bypunge vs into the captiuitie of the Caldees, that they myghte slaye vs, and carry vs awaye prysoners vnto Babilon.

So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the host, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord: Name lyke, to dwell in the lande of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the host, carryed awaye all the remnaunte in Juda, * that were come to gether agayne frome all the heaten (among whom they had bene scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda, Men, women, chyl dren, the kynges daughthers: all those that Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had left wyth Gedoliah the sonne of Ahpham, the sonne of Shaphan. They carryed away also the prophet Jeremy. Baruch the sonne of Nerab, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedyente vnto the commaundements of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lord hapened vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take greete stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the byche wall, vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Taphnis: that all the men of Juda maye se and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I wyll sende a cal for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon my seruait and wyll set hys seate vpon these stoonies that I haue hyd, and he shal speeche hys sente ouer them.

And when he cometh, he shall smyte the land of Egypte: some wyth slaughter, some wyth prysonnement: and some wyth the sword. he shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians: God des, and burne them vp, and take them serues prisoners. Moreover, he shall rape hym selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a shepheard putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte, shall be breake in peeces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

The xliii. Chapter.

He reproveh the people for theyr idolatry. They that sit light by the chateauging of the Lozde are chastened. The destruction of Egypte and the Remembrance in prophesies.

Ihys is the worde that was shewed to Jeremye concerning al the Jewes: whych dwell in Egypt: at Migdol at Taphnis, at Auph, & in the land of Sathurs. Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene al the miserie that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, & vpon the cyties of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and noman dwellynge therein: and that bycause of the greates blasphemies whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and wo-ship vnto strange goddes: whome neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowe. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes al the prophetes. * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warning. O do no such abhominable thinges & thynges I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herken to turne from theyr wickednes, and to do nomore sacrifices vnto strange goddes.

Wherfore myne indignatio and wrath was kindled, and it brent vp the cyties of Iuda, the feldes with the stretes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: How happe-neth it, that ye do so great euill vnto your owne soules: thus to destroye the men & women: children and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your owne handes: When ye offer vnto strange Goddes in the lande of Egypte where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myghte utterly perishe, and that ye myghte be reuiled and shamefully intreated of all nacions. O haue ye now forgotten the wickednes of youre forefathers, the wychednes of the kynages of Juda and their wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the lande of Iuda, in the cite, & in the stretes of Ierusalem?

Yet are ye not sorry vnto this daye, ye feare not, neither waite ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you & your forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determined to punyssh you, and to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnaunte of Iuda, that purposely went into Egypte, there to dwell, I will take them, * and they shall al be destroyed. In the land of Egypte shall they perishe, beinge consumed with the swerde and with hunger.

For from the least vnto the moste, they shall perishe with the swerde and with hunger. Wo-ouer, they shall be reuiled, abhoyred, shamed, and despised: For I will visit them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue visited Ierusalem, with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence so that none of the remnaunt of Iuda, whych are gone to dwell in Egypte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda althoughe they thyngke to come thither agayne, & to dwell there For noone shall come agayne, but suche as are stedfast.

Then all the men whych knewe that theye wyues had offered vnto strange goddes, and a greatesoite of wyues that sit out there, per, and all the people that dwelt there in Egypte in the cite of Sathurs, answered Jeremye, and sayde: As for the wordes thou hast spoke vnto vs: in the name of the Lozde, we wyl in no wise heare them, but whatsoeuer goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that we wyl doo. We wyl do sacrifice and offer oblacions vnto the quene of heauen * lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure kynages and oure heades haue done in the cyties of Juda, and in the stretes and felde of Ierusalem.
For then had we plenteousnes of vntayles then were we in prosperite and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

* But sence we leste to burne incense: and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thynges, and perishe with swerde, and hunger. Laste of all: when we were in byd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, & we make her cakes and powder vnto her bynychofferpynges, euento that ymage byd we sacrifice and scrupce, without oure husban-des wylls.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto all the peole to the men to the women, and to al the folke which had geuen hym that answer: Did not the Lozde remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers: your kynages and rulers, which al the people, haue offered in the cyties of Iuda, in the stre-tes and lande of Ierusalem: and hath he not cosidered this in hys mynde? In so much that the Lozde myghte no longer suffer the wychednes of your inuencions, & the abhominable thynges whych ye byd. * Is not your land desolate and wyde: per, abhoyred and accursed: so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye.

* Whyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydols, and synned agaynst the Lozde: Ye haue not folowed hys voyce, so walke in hys lawe, in hys ordynaunces and statutes.

Yea, this is the cause that al mysfortune happened vnto you: as it is come to passe this daye.
Moreover, Jeremye spake vnto all the people & to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lozde all Iuda: ye that be in the land of Egypte. Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: Ye and your wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, that thyng ye haue fulfilled in dede.

* Yea, thus haue ye sayde: We wyl not sayle but perourme the vowes that we haue vowed we wyl do sacrifice & powe out bynche offerin-ges to ges to the queene of beane. Purposely wyl ye see all your owne meanynges and performe your vowes. And therfore, beare y<sup>e</sup> woide of y<sup>e</sup> Loide all Iuda ye that dwel in the lande of Egypte.

Ex. xlii. a Scholde, * I haue sworne by my great name sayth the Loide, that my name shall not be rehearsed thowoe any mans mouth of Iuda, in all the lande of Egypte, to saye, The Loide God lyneth, for I wyl wathe, to plage them, and not for theyr wealth.

Am. iii. a
* And al the men of Iuda that be in the land of Egypte shall perishe wth the swerde and wth hunger, vntill they be utterly destroyed.
Heurtheles, those that fled away for y<sup>e</sup> swerd shall come agayne into the lande of Iuda: but there shall be very fewe of them. And all the remnant of Iuda, that are gone into Egypte, ther to dwel, shall know whose wordes shall be found true, they: or myne. Take theys for a toke that I wyl vset you in theys place, sayth the Loide and that ye may knowe that I (without doubte) wyl performe my purpose vpon you to punishe you. Scholde, sayth the Loide, I wyl deliuer Pharao Hophra kynge of Egypt into the han-des of his enemyes that seke after his life: * eue as I gaue zedekiah the kynge of Iuda into the handes of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon his enemye, whych sought after his lyfe.

Baruch is reproued of Jeremie.

Jer. xlv. a These are the wordes that Jeremie the prophete spake vnto Baruche the sonne of Neriah, * after that he had wyrtten these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jeremie, in y<sup>e</sup> iii. yere of Iehoiachin the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda, saying: Thus sayth the Loide God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch. In so much as thou thoughtest thus: when thou wast wyrtynge: Wo is me, the Loide hath geuen me sorowe vpon sorowe. I haue weired my selfe wth synginge and haue founde no rest.

Jer. xlv. b
* Therfore tell hym, O Jeremie, that the Loide sayeth thus: Scholde, the thyng that I haue buiyled: wyl I breake downe agayne a roote out the thyng y<sup>e</sup> I haue planted, yee this whole lande, And seest thou yet promocyon? Looke not for it, and despye it not. For I wyl bynge a myserable plage vpon al flesh, sayth the Loide * But thy lyfe wyl I geue the for a praye in al places, wher soeuer thou goest.

The prophete chere destruction of Egypte. Delue: raunce in promysed to Israel.

Jer. xlv. a
Ite folowe the wordes of the Loide to the prophete Jeremie which he spake agaynst all the Gentyles. These wor-des folowynge preached he to * the Egyptians concernynge the booste of Pharao, hecho kynge of Egypt: * when he was in Chaream is besyde the water of Euphrates: What tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon slewe hym, in the fourth yere of Jehoachin the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda.

Jer. xlv. b
Make redye buckeler and shylde, and go sayth to fight: barne your bowes, and set your sheldes vpon the: set your sallettes fast on: byng forth speares, shoute your swerdes, and put on your best plates.

But alas how happeneth it, that I se you so afraide: why quynche ye backe? Theyr motyres are slayne. Yee, they runne so fast awaye that none of them loketh behynd hym: fearful-nes is fallen vpon euery one of them, sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Loide. The lyghtest of foote shall not stee away and the worstes shall not escape.

Towarde the North by the water of Euphrates, they dyd stonde and fal. But what is y<sup>e</sup> he theys, that swelth vp, as it were a floude, ro-rynge and ragynge lyke the streames of water?
It is Egypt that ryleth vp lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters wth so great noyse.

And he sayde: I wyl go vp, and wyl couer the earth. I wyl destroy the city with them that are therein, set ye vpon bowes, role forth ye cha-rettes comme forth worthyres, ye Hopyans, ye Libyans with your buckelers, ye Lybeans w your bowes. This daye of the Loide God of hostes, is a daye of vengeance, y<sup>e</sup> he maye adueng hym of his enemyes. The swerde shall deuour it shall be satisfyed and bathed in theyr bloude, For the Loide God of hostes shall haue a flaine offerynge toward the north, by the water of Euphrates. So vp, O Siliab, and bynne trespae vnto the daughter of Egypte. But in dayne shalte thou go to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The Erathen haue heard of thy name, and the lande is ful of thy confusion, for one stronge man dyd stonde vpon another, and they are fallen both together.

* These are the wordes that the Loide spake to the prophete Jeremie concernynge the com-pyng of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, whych was sent to destroye the lande of Egypte. Preach out thowoe the lande of Egypte and cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Roph and Tapnis a say: Stand still make the redye for the swerde shall consume the rounde about howe happeneth it, that thy mighty worthy-res are fallen: why stode they not faster? Euen because the Loide thrust the downe. The slaughter was greete, for one fell euer still vpon another. One cryed vpon another. Alas, let vs go a-gayne to our owne people, and to our owne natural contraye from the cruel swerde.

They dyd crye euen there, O Pharao, kynge of Egypt thou troublous kynge, the time wyl bynge sedicion. As trulie as I lyne sayeth the kynge, * whose name is the Loide of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Taboz, and as Liba-nus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypt make redye thy geare to sitte. For Roph shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The land of Egypt is like a good lie faire calfe, but destruction shall come oute of the north I saye it cometh. Her waged soubers that be with her are like fatte calves, they also shall stee away together, and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter, and the time of their visitation shall come vpon them.

The crye

The crye of them shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trumpet. For they shall entre in with theyr hooftes, and come wpyth axes, as it were betwixt doune of woodd. And they shall cut doune her woodd, saith the Lord: They shall be innumerable, for they shall be moze in nombre thes greif hoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell the. The daughter of Egypt is confounded, and delivered into the handes of the people of the North.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wyl wyser the restles people of Alexandria, Pharaos, and Egypte: yee, both they goddes and they kynges: euen Pharaos, and all them that put theyr trust in hym. Yee, I wyl deliuer them into the handes of those, that shall after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon and into the power of his seruantes. And after all these thynges it shall be inhabited as aforetyme: sayeth the Lord.

But ver not thou afrayed, O myseruaunte Jacob: feare not thou O Israel. For so, I wyl helpe the from farre, and thy seide from flande of theyr captiuite. Jacob also shall come again and be in rest: he shall piospere & no man shall do hym harme. Feare thou not, O Jacob myseruaunte: sayeth the Lord: for I am with the: and wyl destroye all nations, among whom I haue scattered the. Reuert ye, I wyl not consume the: but chasten the and correcte the: yee, & that with discrecion, neyther wyl I spare the as one that were faultles.

The xlviij. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Philistynes.

Here ar þe wordes, þe Lord spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharaos smote the cite of Azab. Thus saith the Lord. Beholde, there shall waters cysse out of the North: and shall growe to a great floud runnyng ouer & couerpyng the lande, the ctyes and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stampyng of theyr stronge barbed hozes, at the whynnyng of theyr charrettes and at the runnyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to the chyliden, so feble & weyfe shall theyr handes be at þe same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make waste both Tyzus, Sydon, and all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lord wyl destroye the Philistynes the remnaunt of þe yle of Caphtoz. Baldnes is come vpon Azab, Ascalon wpyth other valleys shall hepe der peace.

Howe longe wylt thou slepe, O thou swerd of the Lord: when wylt thou cease? Turne again into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But how can it cease, when the Lord hym self hath geuen hym a charge agaynst Ascalon and rayled it vpon agaynst the ctyes of the see coastes?

The xlviij. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Moabites.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: woe shall be to the ctye of Sebo: for it is layd wast, brought to confusion: and the richiari taken. Misgab is brought to shame & afrayed: Moab can boast nomoze of Sebo: for they haue deuised agaynst it. Come shall they say, let vs rose the out, that they may be nomoze amonge the nombre of the Gentiles: and that the madmen may nomoze be thought vpon: and the swerd shall persecute þe. I voice shall crye from Hozanaim: with great wastynge and destruction is Moab made desolate.

Chylozen could tel of the crye therof: for at the goyng vnto Luyth, he arose with lamenfacion and mourning, and downe toward Hozanaim, they heard a cruel and deadly crye. Get you awaye, saue your lyues, & be lyke vnto the trustid in thynne owne wozyches and treasure, þe shall be taken. Chamos with his preastes and pynces shall go awaye into captiuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon all ctyes: none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed and the felde shall be layde waste, lyke as the Lord hath spoken.

Geue wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye speedely: for her ctyes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein.

Cursed be he that doth þe woyle of the Lord negligently, and cursed be he that heperth back his swerd from the dyng of bloude.

Moab hath neuer ben riche and careles from her youth vp, she hath sitten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessel into another (þis) she neuer went awaye into captiuite, therfore her cause remaineth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh sayeth the Lord, that I shall sende der trusters to truste her vp, which shall remoue her from her dwelling: and emptye der vessels, & breake der wyne portes. And Moab shall be a named of Chamos, lyke as Israel was a named of Bethel, wherein she put her trust: therfore do ye thynke thus, we are myghty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed: and der ctyes bzent vp, der chosen yonge men be slayn, sayeth þe kyng, whose name is þe Lord of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and der fall is at hande.

All der neygbbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe der name, shall say, O how happeneth it, that þe stronge kaffe, & the goodly rodde is thus bzoke? And thou daughter Dibd come downe from thy gloze, and lye in thy aske. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Tzer, gett the to the skete, & loke aboute the, aske them that are fled and escaped, & saie: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Tzeron, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, and Iabazab, vpon Dibbaath & Dibon: vpon Rabbos

The Prophecie.

Rabob, and the house of Delaichaim vpon Caradhiarim and vpon the house Samall. vpon the house Moan, and Cariorb vpon Doyrah and all the ctytes in þe lande of Moab wher they lye farre of here.

The hoine of Moab is smytten downe: and her arme broken, sayeth the Lozde. Make her broken, for she magnified her selfe aboue the Lozde, that men maye clape theyr bandes at her vomite, and þe also may be laughed to scoyne. O Israel, walt thou not laugh hym to scoyne, when he is taken among theues? * Yea, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynst hym þe shalt be diuyn away. Ye Moabites walt leaue the cities, & dwel in rockes of stone and be come lyke doues, & make theyr nestes in holes.

Am. 1. 13.

E. Chap. 21. 1. 2. 3. 4.

* As for Moabs pride, we haue heard of it: he is very hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnesse her boastyng, her arrogancye, and the pride of her stomache, sayeth þe Lozde. I knowe (sayeth the Lozde) her indignacyon, she doth not ryght her wordes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therefore shal there mourning be made for Moab, and euery manne shal crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shal be made to the menne that stande vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the, O thou vine-yrarde of Sabmah. Thy vyne bryanches shal come ouer the sea, and the bryanches of Jazer but vnto the sea: the destroyer shal bryake into thy baruest and grapegatherynge: mythe and chere shal be taken away from the symbye feild and from the hole lande of Moab.

There shal be no swete wyne in the presse, the reeder shal haue no stomache to crye: yea, there be none to cry vnto hym: which also tyme was herd from Hezebon to Eleale & Jabez, whiche lyfted vp theyr voice from zoar vnto Hozonaim, the bullocke of thre pere olde shal go mourning. The waters also of Chemun shal be dyed w. Mozeouer, I wyll make Moab cease, sayeth the Lozde, from the offerpynges and censyng þe hath made vnto her Goddes in high places. Wherfore my heart mourneth for Moab lyke a cronde playng an heup songe: and for þe mens sake of the bysch walmy heart mourneth also: euen as a pype that ppyeth a doleful song: for they shal be very fewe, and destroyed.

* All heedes shal be shauen, and all bearded clipped of, all bandes bounde, & loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. vpon all þe house toppes and stretes of Moab there shal be lamentable mourning: for I wyll bryake Moab lyke an vnproffable vessel, sayeth the Lozde: O howe is she destroyed! O howe mourneth she! O howe both Moab hange downe her herd, and is ashamed. Thus shal Moab be a laughynge stocke and had in derisyon of all them that be rounde about her. * For thus sayeth þe Lozde: Beholde, the enemy shal come flyng as an Eagle: and spyed his wynges vpon Moab. They shal clime ouer the walles, and wynn the stronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens hartes in Moab shal be lyke the heart of a woman traueling w child. And Moab shal be made so desolate that she

Isa. 48. 1. 2.

shal nomore be a people because she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the Lozde. * Feare, ppe & snare shal come vpon the, O Moab, sayeth the Lozde. Whoso escapeth the feare shal fall in the ppe & whoso getteth out of the ppe shal be taken in þe snare. For I wyll byynge a pere of dyspacyon vpon Moab sayeth the Lozde. They that are hable to fite, shal stande vnder the shadowe of Hezebon: for there shal go a fyre out of Hezebon and a flame from Edon, and shal burne vpon that proude people of Moab, and the top of those sedicious chyldren.

Woe be vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe. Per: thy sonnes & doughters shal be led away captiue. Yet at the last, wyll I byynge Moab out of captiuitie agayne sayeth the Lozde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

The xlix. Chapter.

¶ The wordes the Lozde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Iouma, Damafcus, Cedar and Elam.

As concernynge the Ammonytes, I thus the Lozde sayeth: hath Israel no chyldren, or is he withoute an heire? Why hath he poure bynne then taken Gad in? Wherfore doeth his people dwel in his ctytes? Beholde therefore, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lozde: that I wyll byynge a noie of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes: & it shal be layde on a desolate heape & her ctytes byente vpon: and the Israelytes shal be lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth þe Lozde Hezebon shal mouene: for they shal be roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lozde.

The ctytes of Rabah shal crye out, & gyde them selues with sackcloth, they shal mourne and runne about þe walles: for their kyng shal be led away pylsoner: yea, his pysses and pynges with hym.

Wherfore trustest thou in the valley / thy valley hath flowed away: O þe scarce doughter / and thynkest thou that thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shal come to the? Beholde, I wyll byynge a feare vpon the sayeth the Lozde God of hostes, from all those that be about þe: so that ye shal be scattered euery man from another, and no man shal gather the together agayne that be fled. But after that I wyll byynge the Ammonytes also out of captiuitie agayne.

* vpon the Edomytes hath the Lozde of hostes spokē on this maner: Is there nomore dwel dome in Theman? Is there nomore goode counsaile amonge hys people? Is their wysdome then turned cleane to nought? Get you hence, tene your backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye ctyzens of Dedan.

For I wyll byynge destruction vpon Elam: yea, & the daye of his dyspacyon. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shalbe they not leaue some grapes? If ye wght robbers came vpon the shuld they not take so much as they thought were ynough?

But I wyll make Elam bare, and dyscouer his secretes, so that he shal not be hable to hyde them them. I have fled shall be wasted away: yea, they brethren and his neyghbours: and he hym self shall not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behynde the, and I wyll hepe them: and thy wy-dowes shall take theyr comfort in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. * Behold they that men thought were vnnite to drynke of the cuppe, haue broken wyth the fyre: and theyr selfe thou then to be free.

No, no, thou shalt neyther be quyte nor free: but thou must drynke also. For why? I haue sworne by my selfe, sayeth the Lorde: that Bozrah shall become a wyldernesse, an open shame, a laughynge stocke and cursyng: and all her cy-ties shall be a continuall deserte.

For I am perswysed informed of the Lorde, that he hath sent a message already vnto the hethen. Gather you together, & go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle: for lo, I wyll make the but small amonge the heathen, and lytle regarded amonge men.

* Thy lye stomache, and the pryde of thy heart haue deceyued the, because thou wylst dwell in holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountaynes in possession. Nevertheless, though thy nest were as hye as the Eagles: yet wyll I caste the downe, sayeth the Lorde. Moreover, Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: * whoso goeth by it, shall be a basched, & wondre at her miserable plages. * Like as Sodome, Gomorre, and the cities that lay thereabout were turned vpsyde downe sayeth the Lorde: so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habytacion there.
Beholde, lyke as the Lyon, so shall a destroyer come vp fro the pleasaunt meadowes of Iordan vnto the stronge dwellinge place: and when I haue made him quyet, I wyll make hym to flye from her: and all chosen men wyll I set in aray agaynst her: Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyll streue with me? What shepherde may stande in my handes?

* Therfore heare the counsaile of the Lorde that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and vpon purpose that he hath dryfled vpon the cytyzens of Thema. The least of the stocke shall reare them in peeces, and loke what saye theynge they haue, they shall make it waste: and them selues also.

At the noyse of theyr fall the earth shall quake: the crye of their voyce shall be herde vnto the red see. Beholde, the enemye shall come and lye by hyther, lyke as it were an Eagle, and lye by wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the wyrtynes in Edom be as the herte of a woman trauelyng of childe. * vpon Damascus, Heimath and Arphad shall come confusyon: for they shall beare cupell tydrynges, they shall be tol-led to and fro lyke the see that can not stand styll.
Damascus shall be soe afrayed, & shall lye, trem-blyng shall come vpon her. Moreover and payne shall ouertake her as a woman trauelyng with chylde. But how quide so woorthypful & glorious a citie be forsaken: here therfore: her yonge me shall fall in the strettes, & al her men of war shall be take away in that tyme, sayth the Lord of hostes:

I wyll handle a fyre in the walles of Damascus which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

* As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Habor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, & get you vp vnto Cedar, and de-stroye the people toward the east. Theyr tentes and their flockes, shall they take away: yea their hangynges and theyr vessels. Theyr camels also shall they carry away with them. They shall crye to them: Feare is on every syde.

Arise, get you gone away, crape into caves, & that ye may dwell there, O ye inhabyters of Habor sayeth the Lorde, for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath holden a couel concey-nyng you: and excluded his dryfles agaynst you.
Arise, and get you vp agaynst ponder riche and carelesse people: sayth the Lorde: which hath neither gates nor doore barres, but dwell alone.

Theyr camels shall be stolen, and the dyones of theyr cattel dryuen away. Moreover, those wyl I scatter toward al the wyndes: and byng the to destruction: yea, and that theyr owne sampleris, sayeth the Lorde. Habor also shall be a dwellinge for dragons, & an euell lastyng wyl-dernesse: so that no body shall dwell there: and no man shall haue there his habytacion.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the prophet Jeremie, concernyng * Elam, in the begynnyng of praygne of Iehoiachon kyng of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take away theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyll byng the four wyndes from the four quarters of heauen, and wyll scatter them agaynst the same four wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall lye vnto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afrayed of theyr enemies, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyll byng vpon them the indignacion of my wyath, sayeth the Lorde. And I wyll persecute them wth the swerde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to nought. I wyll set my thron in Elam, I wyll destroye bothe the kyng and the princes from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wyll byng Elam out of captiuitie a-gayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The I. Chapter.

The prophesie of the destruction of Babylon, and the deliuerance of Israel, which was in captiuitie.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophet Jeremie, concernyng Babylon, and the landes of the Caldees: * Preache amonge the Gentiles, let your voyce be heard, make a token, crye out, hepe no silence, but say: Babylon is wonne. * Bel is confounded, and Merodach is ouercome.

* Yea, theyr goddes be brought to shame, and theyr ymages burst in peeces. For out of the noyth there doeth come a people agaynst her, whych make her lande so waste, that no body dwell therein, neyther man, nor beaste: for they lye, and depart from thence. * In those dayes &

The Prophecye

at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israel that come, they and the chyldren of Iuda wepyng & makinge haile, and that seeth the Lorde they? God. They that alke the waye to Syon, whether shall they turne they? faces, sayinge: Come and we wyll cleaue to the Lorde, in a covenante that neuer shall be broken.

B My people hath bene a lost & floche, my shepherdes haue disceyued the, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylls. They haue gone fro the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and for gotten they? folde. All they came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and they? enemyes sayde: we haue made no default agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yea, euen the Lorde, whiche is the beauty of their rightousnes, and that defended they? fathers. Yet shall ye flye from Babylon, and depart out of the land of the Chaldees, & be ye as the rammes that go befoze the floche.
* For so, I wyll wake vp an host of people fro the northren lande, and bypnyng them vnto Babylon: these shall lape siege to it, and wynn it. Their arrowes shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shoteyth not wronge.

And the Chaldees shall be spoyled, and al they that spoyle them, shall be satysfied, sayth the Lorde: * although ye were so chereful & glad, to treade downe myne herptage, and fullylled yowr pleasures, as the calves in the grasse, and triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victoy. Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that beare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the least seth y amonge the nacyns: yorde: walled and dyed vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shall be whole desolate. * All they that go by Babylon, shall stande styll and be abashed, and shall wondre at all her plagues.

So forth in your tape agaynst Babylon rounde aboute, all ye can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arrowes: for she hath synned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out, vnto her, vpon her, agaynst her round aboute: she shall yeide her self her foundations shall fall, and her walles shall come downe: for it shall be the vengeance of the Lorde. * Yea, vengeance shall be take of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye w her. Rote out the lower from Babylon, and him that handleth the spyle in haruest. For feare of the swerde of the enemye every man shall get him to his owne people: and every man shall flye to his owne lande. Israel is a scattered floche y lyons haue dispersed them.

* For the kyng of the Assyrians denoured them, & last of al this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hath bryled all they? bones.

D Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will vylite the kyng of Babylon and his kyng dome as I haue vylited the kyng of the Assyrians, and wyl bypnyng Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may fede vpon Carmel and Basan, and be satysfied vpon the mount of Iphzaim and Galaad. * In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde: The office of Israel be songde for, there shall none be founde. Men enqwyze for the syn of Iuda: there shall be none: for I wyll be merciful vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne ouer.

Go downe, O thou auenger, into thy enemies lands, & vylite the that dwell therein: downe with them, & smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lorde: according to al that I haue comaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter & great murder, namely on this maner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus broken, & bryled in sondre? how chafeth it, & Babilis is become a wylder-nes among the heathen on this maner? I my self haue layed wayte for the, & thou art taken vnawares art & trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto angre. The Lorde hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the land of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes wothe.

Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: bye the vnto her cherties, chertys her as ye the? she come destroye her, that nothyng shall be left. Slaye all their myghty souldiers, & put the to death. Woe vnto them, for the day & tyme of they? visitacion is at hande. We thynke I dreare alreadye a crye of them: & be fled & escaped out of the lande of Babylon, which she we in Syon the vengeance of the Lorde our God, the vengeance of his temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitch your tentes rounde aboute her, & none escape. * Recompence her as she hath delerued: according as she hath done, so deale with her agayne, for she hath set vnto her self agaynst the Lorde, agaynst the holy one of Israel. Therefore shall her yonge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be rooted out in the daye sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy day shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proud shall stumbe and fall, and no man shall helpe hym vp. I wyll burne vp his cyties wth fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde aboute hym.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Iuda suffer violence togyther. Al they that haue them in captiuitie, kepe them faste, and wyl not let them go, but they? auenger and redeemer is myghty. Whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shall mayntayne they? cause: he shall make the land make, and iudge the that dwell therein, one wth an other. The swerde shall come vpon the Chaldees, sayeth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon they? prynces, and vpon they? wyse men. The swerde vpon they? sothsayers, as for those, they shall be come foolis. The swerde vpon they? wysemen, so that they shall stande in feare. The swerde vpon they? hoysmen and charrettes, and vpon all the comune people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become lyke women.

The swerde vpon they? treasure, so that it shall be stollen awaye. I brought vpon they? waters, so that they shall be dyed vp.

For the lande wyl wyppeth pynages, and delitysh helped in strange wondrous things. Ther fore that wilde beastes, Lamia & carol the most faynes, and estriches dwell therein, for there shall never man dwell there, neyther shall anye man haue his habitation there for evermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah: with the cities that lay thereabout, sayth the Lorde.

So shall no man dwell there also, neyther shall any man haue there his habitation. * Beholde, there shall come a people from the north with a great bonde of men, & many kynnes shall stande up from the endes of the earth. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruel are they & vnmereyful.

¶ They voyce roareth lyke the raging see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyght agaynst the, O Babylon. As soon as the kynge of Babylon heareth tel of them, his handes shall waie feble. Sorowe and heynesse shall come vpon him, as a woman traucelyng with childe.
Beholde, * lyke as the lyon cometh vp from the pleasur meddowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so will I dyspue them forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shall I chole out, and ordeyne to suche a thynge?
* For who is lyke me, or who will strepue with me? or what shepherde may stand agaynst me?
Therefore beare the consaile that the Lorde hath gyuen vpon Babylon, and the churche that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees.
The lesse amonge the people shall feare them in peeces, and loke what pleasaunte thynge they haue: they shall lape it waste. The noyse at the wynnyng of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the crye shall be heard amonge the Gentyles.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Thus hath the Lorde sayd: Behold, I will rayse up a perplous wynde agaynst Babylon and her cetyties that beare cruell wyl agaynst me. I will sende also into Babylons salners to fenne her cut, and to destroye her lande, for in the daye of her trouble they shall be about her on every syde. Moreover, the Lorde hath sayde vnto the bowmen, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in byaste plates. Ye shall not spare her pouge men: kyll downe al her hooste. Thus the layne shall fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, and the wouled in stretes. * As for Israel and Iuda, they shall not be forsaie of their God of the Lorde of hostes for the holy one of Isra-els sake: no, though they haue spyled all theyr lande ful of synne. * Flye away from Babylon, every man saue his lyfe, that ye be not roted out with her wycke dnelle: for the tyme of the Lor-des vengeance is come: yea, he will rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande, * a golden cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken: therefore are they out of theyr wyettes. * But so-daynly is Babylon fallen, and destroyed.

¶ Wourne for her, byng plasters for her wou-les, yf she maye perauenture be healed agayne.
We wolde haue made Babyls whole, say they:

but she is not recovered. Therefore wyl we let her alone, and go every man to his owne coun-tre. For her iudgement is come into beault & is come vnto her. The Lorde hath brought forth out of his thronnes. And therefore com on, we wyl helpe vpon & worke of the Lorde our God.

¶ Make harpe the arrowes, and multiplie your wyldes: * for the Lorde shall rayse vp the lypites of the kynge of the Medes, which hath alreadye a desyre to destroye Babylon. Thys shall be the vengeance of the Lorde, and the vengeance of his temple.

¶ Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon make your watche stronge, set your watchmen in arape: yea, holde prynces watches: and yet for al that shall the Lorde go forth with the deuple which he hath taken, vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

¶ Thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure & riches, thyne ende is come, and the rekenyng of thy wyngges. * The Lorde of hostes hath sworne by hym selfe, that he wyl ouerwhelme the wyth men, lyke greshoppers in nombe, whych wyl be a co-rage shall crye, alarum, alarum agaynst the.

¶ Yea euen the Lorde of hostes, that with his power made the earth, with his wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, and wyth his discretion sparde out the beastes. As soon as he letteth his voyce be heard, the waters in the ayre were feared. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. he turneth the lyghtenynge to rayne, he byngeth the wyndes out of theyr secret places: yf they be esteemed by their wysdom all men are become fooles. * Confounde d be all the casters of ymages, for the thynge that they make is but disceyte, & hath no byeach. Clayne is it, and an erromous worke: and in the tyme of vysitation it shall perrysh.

¶ Nevertheless, the porcyon of Jacob is none such: but he that made al thynges, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, he is the rodder of his en-gynne. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapons for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in peeces: & with the haue I destroyed kingdomes. Therow the haue I beat to ponder hoyle and hoyleman: yea, the charities and such as sat vpo them. Therow the I haue broken man and woman, olde and yonge, bacheler and mayden. Therow the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke, the husbandman and his cattell, the princes and the rulers. Therefore wyl I rewarde the cetye of Babylon, and al her cetyties, the Chaldees with all the cruell wyche they haue done vnto Sion: yea, that ye your sel-ues shall se it, sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyll, sayth the Lorde: thou that destroyest al landes: I wyl stretch out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and wyl make the a bent hyll: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foudations of stones shall be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate shall be thou lyf for euermore. sayth the Lorde.

¶ Set vp a conke in the land, blowe the trumpet.

The Prophecye

ers amonge the hepten: prouoke the nacjons agaynst her, calle the kyngdomes of Ararat, Aram: & Alcanes agaynst her. Set the pynne agaynst her, bynng as greates a lyste of temple boyles agaynst her: as if they were grethoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Medes with theyr kynges, princes, and al the cheif rulers: yea, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal make and be afrayed wile the demyle of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the land of Babylō so waste that no man shal dwell any moze therein. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, theyr strength hath fayled them, theyr qualbe lyke women. Theyr dwellynge places shal be bzent vp, theyr barres shal be bzoken. One purfuaunte shal mete an other: yea, one post shal come by an other, to bynng the kyng of Babylon tydynge: that his cytie is taken in on euerye syde, the fourdes occupied, the fennes bzent vp, and the souldyers sore afrayed.

B For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babylon hath ben in her tyme lyke as a thyrsyng flooze, but shortly shal her barne come. Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylō hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath mademe an empty vessel. he swallowed me vpon lyke a dragon, and fylled hys bellye with my delicates: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substance away, and the thyng that was left me hath he carped vnto Babylon, sayth the daughter of dweller in Syon: yea, & my blood also vnto the Chaldees, sayth Ierusalem. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I will defende thy cause, and auerge the: I will bynke vpon her see, and byr vpon her water springes.

E * Babylon shal become an heave of stones, a dwellynge place for dragons, a fearfulne and wondring, because no man dwelleth there. They shal roze together lyke Lyons, and as the ponge Lyons when they be angrye, so shal they bende them selues. In theyr hate I shal gyue them a dynner, and they shal be bzoken for ioye. * Then shall they slepe an euerylastynge slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde. I shal carpe them downe to be slayne like shepe, like wethers and gootes. O how was Selach wonner. O howe was the glory of the whole lande taken: howe happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondred at amonge theyr. The see is rylen ouer Babylon, and hath covered her wth hys greates waues. her cyties are layed waste, the land lych vnbuylde, and voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man traunyleth thezowe. Mozeouer, Jerem. l. i.

c. 39. v. 18.
Dan. c. 5. v. 30.

* I will vylite Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gylples also shal runne nomoze vnto hym: yea, and the wallies of Babylon shal fall.

Jerem. l. iii.
c. 38. v. 17.

O my people, * come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue hys lyfe from the fearful wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynt hearted, and feare not at euery rumour that shal be hearde in the lande: for euerye petye bynngeth newe tydynges, and in the petye folowynge in the tydynge and rebrynge in the lande, and lozbe vpon lozbe. And so, the tyme cometh, that I will vylite the ymages of Babylon, and the whole lande shal be confounded: yea, and her slayne shal lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth, wth al that is therein, shal reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, sayth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal ther sal many and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye & haue escaped & swerde half you, stande not styll, remembre the Lorde asarte of, & thynke vpon Ierusalem, for we are ashamed to heare & blasphemies our faces were couered with shame, because the strange alcauntes came into the sanctuarie of the Lorde. Wherefore beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme cometh, & I will vylite the ymages of Babylon, and thezowe the hole lande theyr shall mourne and fal. * Though Babylon clummed vpon into heauen, & kept her power on hys: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayth the Lorde.

A ptyous crye shal be herde from Babylon, and a great myserie from the lande of the Chaldees when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he byructh out the hys stomake and proude boostynge, wherwth they haue bene as furious as the waues of great water floudes, & made great crakes wth theyr woyses. For the destroyers shal come vpon her (ruen vpon Babylon) wher shal take theyr worthyes, and byrake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to aufge him self vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I will make theyr princes, theyr wyle men, theyr cheif rulers, and al theyr worthyes bzoken: so that they shal slepe an euerylastynge slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Mozeouer, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The thyche wal of Babylon shal be bzoken, and her hys gates shal be bzet vp. And & thyng that the Gylples and the people hath wrought wth great traunple and labour, shal come to nought and be consumed in fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremyp gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Acliah, the son of Masaiab, when he went towarde Babylon wth yedekiah & hynges of Iuda, in & fourth yere of his raygne. Nowe this Saraiab was a peaceable pynce, Jeremyp wrote in a booke all the myserye that shal come vpon Babylō: yea and al these sermons that be wyrtten agaynst Babylō, and gaue Saraiab his charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade all these woyses, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out this place, so & neither people nor cattell shal dwell there any moze: but to lye waste for ever: and when thou hast redde oute the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: euen thus shal Babylon synke, and be thurst downe wth the burthen of trouble, that I will bynng vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus saue are the byrachinges of Jeremyp.

The

The. lii. Chapter.

Therewith the taking of Jerusaleim. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees. Zedekiah's sonnes are hatched before his face, and his eyes put out. The cytie is burned. The temple is spoiled and robbed. They that were left in Jerusalem are carried to Babilon, hys sepulture is brought forth of pylson, and so lyne a kynge.

Zedekiah was .xli. yere olde when he was made kynge, and he reigned a lene yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremys daughter of Libna. He lyued wylchylde before the Lord, even as Jehoachim dyd. For the Lord was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his pience. And zedekiah fell from the kynge of Babilon. * But in the nyth yere of his reigne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon with all his host came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And this besyegging of the cytie endured unto the cleveneth yere of kynge zedekiah.

* And in the fourth moneth, the .ii. day of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the cytie: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake a waye, and fled out of the cytie by nyghte thowse the waye of the porte betwene two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet went these men theyr waye towarde the wyldernesse.

And so the Chaldees followed upon them, and toke zedekiah the kynge in the feilde of Jericho, when his host was runne from hym: So they carped for hys waye prisoner to Reblath unto the kynge of Babilon in the lande of hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

The kynge of Babilon also caused zedekiah's sonnes to be slayne before his face: yea, and put al the primers of Juda to deatch at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, and caused hym to be bounde with two chaynes, to be carped unto Babilon: and let him ly in pylson tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth, in the nyth yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne, and the kynge of Babilons seruauntes came unto Jerusalem, and bent by the house of the Lorde. He bent by also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buydynge in Jerusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees were with the chiefe captayne, brake downe al the walles of Jerusalem rounde about.

As for the poze people and suche folke as yet was left in the cytie, whiche also were fallen to the kynge of Babilon: yea, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne carped them away prisoners. But the poze people of the countrey, dyd Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vineyardes and felde. The Chaldees also brake the brasse pylers that were in the house of the Lord, yea, the seate and the brasse lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and carped all the metal of them unto Babilon. They toke awaye also the candelstiches, the tables, the shewbreads, the spones, and all the vessels that was occupied in the service, with the bakes, colepannes, spindlers, pottes, candlestyches, spones, and cuppes wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chiefe captayne toke also the two pylers the lauer, the twelue brasse bullockes that stode under the seate: which kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessel conteyned so much metal. It myght not be wyped. For every pyler was cyghteen cubites hie: and the rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubites, and foure syngers thicke and round. Now vpon the rope were brasse knoppes, and euery knoppe was fyue cubites hie: vpon the knoppes, were whopes, and pomegranates rounde about of cleane brasse.

After this maner were both the pylers fastenponed with the pomegranates, wherof there were an hundred and .xxvi. whych hanged vpon the whopes rounde aboute. The chiefe captayne also toke Saraiab the hie priest, and Sephonia that was chiefe next hym, and the thre hepers of the treasure. He toke out of the cytie a chambrelayne whiche was a captayne of the souldiers, and seven men that were the kynges seruauntes, whiche were founde in the cytie: and Sephera captayne that vled to mustre the men of warre, with thre score men of the countrey that were taken in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne toke, and carped them to the kynge of Babilon unto Reblath and the kynge of Babilon caused them to be put to deatch at Reblath in the land of hemath. And thus Juda was led away captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonosor led away captiue.

In the seuenth yere of hys reigne, he carped away of the Jewes, thre thousand and thre and twenty. In the .xviii. yere Nabuchodonosor carped awaye from Jerusalem eght hundred, thretye and two persones. In the .xxii. yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne toke awaye seven hundred forty and fyue Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousand and fyve hundred.

In the .xxvii. yere after that Jehoachim the kynge of Juda was carped awaye in the .xxv. daye of the .ii. moneth Eulmerodach kynge of Babilon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Jehoachim the kynge of Juda hys pardon, and let him out of pylson, and spake louingly to him. And set hys throne about the trones of the other kynges that were with hym in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his pylson, yea, and he dyd eate with hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a contynual luyng gyven hym of the kynge of Babilon, every daye a certayne thyng also wold hym all the dayes of hys lyfe vntill he dyed.

The

The Lamentacions

The Lamentacions

of Jeremie

The first Chapter.

Jeremie the prophet was brought into the city of Jerusalem by the king of Babylon, and he was there when the city was taken by the Babylonians. He was a man of great sorrow and grief, and he wrote these lamentacions to express his feelings.

A Las, how hath the city so be-solate, that somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a wyddowe: which was the lady of all nations: howe is she broughte vnder tribute: that ruled all landes: howe wepe she in the nyght, so that the reares runne downe her chekes: for a monge all her louers, there is none that gyneth her anye comforte: yea, her nexte frendes transgresse agaynst her, and are become her ene-myes. Iuda is taken prisoner, because she was despyed, and for seruynge so many straunge god-des, she dwelleth now among the heathen. She synneth no rest, al they that persecuted her, toke her in strait places, where she coulde not escape.
B The streets of Syon mourne, because no man commeth any more to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her piers make lamentacion, her maydens are carefull: and she her selfe is in greafe heuynesse. Her enemyes haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered, because the Lorde hath chastened her, for her greafe wychednesse: her chyldren are led awaye captiue before they enemyes. All the beautye of the daughter of Syon is awaye, her prynces are become lyke barters that synde no pa-ture. They are dyspued awaye before they enemye, so that they haue no power.

C Howe doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her mysery and disobedience: yea, the lopes pleasure that she hath had in tyme past, seeinge her people is broughte downe thowme the power of their enemy, and there is no man for to helpe her: her enemyes stande lookinge at her, and laugh her dubbordayes to scorn. Ierusalem hath sinned euery more and more, therefore is she com in decay.
All they that had her in honoure despyse her, for they haue sene her fylchynesse. Yea, she sygeth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

D Her synnes are despyed, she remembred not what wolde folowe: therefore is her fall so wonderful: there is noman to cosorte her. O Lorde consydre my trouble, for myne enemye hath the vpperhande. The enemye hath put his hande to al precious thynges that she had: yea, euen before her eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctuary: whom thou (newt helpe) hast for bydden to come within thy congregacyon.

E All her people seeke they: theye heere heuyn-nes, and loke what precious thynges every man hath, that giveth he for meate, to save his lyfe.
O Lorde, and se howe vyle I am become: haue ye no regarde, O all ye that goe farre by, beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherewith the Lorde hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboute hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones, and it burned: he hath layed a net for my feet, and he hath open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mourninge.

F The poke of my transgressions is come at the last, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, wherout I can not quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath bestrope all the mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter al my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the dought-er of Iuda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.

G Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out of water: for the comforte that shoulde quychen me, is farre from me.

H My chyldren are dyspued away, for why: the enemye hath gotten the vpperhande.

I Syon casteth out her handes, and there is no man to comforte her. The Lorde hath layed the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abhominacion in the midst of them.
K The Lorde is ryghteous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto angre. I take hede all ye people, and cosydre my heuynesse. My maydens and my ponge men are led away into captiuitie.

L I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my priestes and counsellors, but they perjured: euen whyle they sought for meate to save theyr lyues. O Lorde, howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquyeted, my hert turneth about in me, (and I am full of heuynesse) because I rebelled stubburnly. The swerde hurteth me wout, and within I am lyke vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that wyl comfort me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because I hast done it and thou hast broughte forth I tyme which thou calleddest, when they also shalbe lyke vnto me.

M From the shall come al theyr aduersites, thou shalt pluche them away, euen as thou hast pluch-ed me, because of all my wychednesse. For my sorowe is very great, and my herte is dreue.

The ii. Chapter.

A Las, howe hath the Lorde darkened the daughter of Syon so sore in his wrath: as for the honour of Israel, he hath cast it downe sed beauen vnto I earth. Howe happened it, I he remembred not his owne: for he was angry. The Lorde hath cast downe all the habitacions of Jacob wout any fauour: al the stronge places of the daughter Iuda hath be broken in his wrath, and shrowf the downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her prynces hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacyon he hath broken all the hope of Israel: he hath withdrawen his right hande fro the enemy yea, a flambe of fyre is kindled in Jacob, & hath consumed vp all rounde about: he hath bent vps hows lyke an enemye: he hath fastened vps twofe hande as an aduersary: and euery thyng I was pleasaunt to se, he hath smitten it downe.
He hath poured oute his wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

N The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and al his palaces: yea

yea, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, & killed the daughter of Juda with moche sorrowe and heynesse.

* Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solempne feastes and habbories in Sion: are cleane forgotten. In hye heuie displeasure hath he made the hyngre and plectes to be despyled.

The Lorde hath forsaken his owne anntare, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuare, and hath gryn the wallis of theyr towne into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

The Lorde thought to breake downe y walles of the daughter of Sion, he sprede ouer hye lyne, & yue not in his hand, tyl he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the streettes and the broken walles togyther.

Her gates are sonke downe to the groude, her barres are broken, and synetten in sondre, * her hynges and pynces are carped awaye to the Seneyles. They haue neyther lawe nor pprophetes, nor yet any vpsion from the Lorde.

The senatours of the daughter of Sion sate vpon the grounde in sylence, they haue strawed althes vpon theyr heedes, and gyded them selues with sackcloth. The maydens of Ierusalem digge downe their heedes to y ground. Wyne eyes begyn to faple me thowowe weeping, * my body is disquyeted, my licur is poured vpo the earth for the great hurt of my people, seing y chyldren and babes dyd sowne in the streetes of the cytie.

¶ Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meate and drynke / for whyle they so layde, they fell downe in the streetes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou daughter Ierusalem, to whom shall I saye the: To whome shall I compare the, O thou daughter Sion, to comfort the wofull hall: Thy hurt is lyke a mayne ser: who maye heale the.

The Lorde hath fulfilled the thyng that he was purposed to do: & performed that he had druped longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared: he hath caused thyne aduersarpe to triumphe ouer the, and set vpo the dozne of thyne enemye. * Let thyne herse crye vnto the Lord, O thou cytie of the daughter Sion: let thy teares ranne downe lyke a ruer, daye and nyght, & it will, and let not the apple of thyne eye leane of. * And make thy prayer in the synke water of the nyght, poure out thyne herse lyke water before the Lorde: lyft vp thyne handes for the lyues of thy yonge chyliden, that dye of hunger in the streetes. Scholde, O Lorde, and consyde, why hast thou gathered me vp so cleane / Shall the women then rate theyr owne frutes: euen chyliden of a spanne longe: Shall the priestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuare of the Lorde: Ponge and olde tye beynde the streetes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the swerde, whome thou in the daye of thy wraful indignacion hast put to death: yea, eue thou hast put them to death, and not spared them. My neyghbours y are rounde about me hast thou called as it were to a feast daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wraath none escaped, neyther was anye left beynde. Those that I haue brought and nourished, hath myne enemye destroyed.

The.iii. Chapter.

In the man, that (thowowe the rod of his wraath) haue experience of myserpe. he dyde me forth, and led me: yea into darknesse, but not into lighte. I gape me on lyfe he tourneth vpo my hande, and layeth it curre vpon me.

My flesh and my synne hath he made olde, and my bones hath he brused. he hath buyled round about me, and closed me in with gail, and trauayle. he hath set me in darknesse, as they that be deed for euer.

he hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuie lynkes vpon me. Though I crye and cal pitiously, yet heareth he not my prayer. he hath stopped vpo my wayes with foursquared stones, and made my pathes crooked. he layeth wayte for me lyke a Bere, & as a Lyon in a hole. he hath marred my wayes and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste al togyther. he hath bent his bow and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arrowes of hye quauer hath he shot euen into my reynes.

* I am laughed to scoorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. he hath fylled me with bytternesse, and gyven me worm wood to drynke. he hath smitten my teeth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

he hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges, I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lord. O remembre yet my myserpe, and trouble, y worm wood and the gail.

¶ Yea thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth a waye in me. Whyle I conspyde these thynges in my heart I get a hope agayne. Surely it is of y Lordes mercyes that we are not vterly consumed. For truly his pitiful compassion hath not ceased. Fewe mercyes shall the Lorde thewe vpon the carpe in the daye of payge, (O Lorde) great is thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lorde is my pacion, larch my soule: therfore wyl I hope in hym. O howe good is the Lord vnto the, that put theyr trust in hym.

The Lamentations

to the soule that seeth after hym. The good man with stylle and patience shall see the health of the Lorde.

D How good is it for a man to take the poke vpon hym from his pouth vpon he setteth alone, he holdeth still, and dwelleth quietly by hym selfe. He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf percase there happen to be any hope. He offereth his cheek to his smiter. He wyl be content wth reproches.

Long. 11. 1.

For the Lrd wyl not forsake for euer, * but though he punyssh the hym: yet accordyng to the multitude of his mercies, he receyved to grace agayne. For he doth not plague, and cast out the chyliden of men from his herite.

To terrade all the prisoners of the earth vnder his feet. To moue the iudgement of man before the moost hyghst.

To condemne a man in his cause. The Lorde hath not pleasure in such thynges.

What is he then that sayeth: there shoulde some thyng be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hyghst goeth not euill and good.

Wherfore then murmureth the lyping man? let hym murmur at his owne synne.

Joh. 11. 1. 2. 3. 4.

* Let vs loke well vpon our owne wayes, & remembre our selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lyft vp our hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wyle thou therfore not be incrated? Thou haste covered vs in thy wrathe, and persecuted vs, thou haste slayne vs without any fauoure.

Col. 1. 1. 2. 3.

* Thou haste hyd thy selfe in a cloude, that our prayer shoulde not go thowowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes and to be despyed amonge the people. All oure enemyes gaue vpon vs.

Thom. 1. 1.

Fear, and pytie is come vpon vs, pen, decepte and destruction. * Whole ryuers of water gush out of myne eyes, for the great hurte of my people.

Myne eyes runne, and can not cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wyle thou loke downe from heauen, and consyder?

I Myne eyes because myne hert bycause of a'l the doughters of my cytie. Myne enemyes hunted me oute sharply lyke a hynde: prea and I with out cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt, and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heed, then thoughte I: now am I yndone. I called vpon thy name, O lord, out of I dese pyt. Thou hast herd my voice & hast not turned away thyne eares fro my sighyng & crying. Thou hast enclayned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not. Thou (O Lorde) hast mapntayned I cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe. O Lord thou hast seene my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpon the. Thou hast well consydered howe they go aboute to dome harme, and that all they countayles are agaynst me. Thou hast hearde they despytful wordes (O Lorde) prea, and all they ymaginacions agaynst me.

G The spytes of myne enemyes, and they despytes that they take agaynst me, all the days long. When seest all they spytynges do wnt and they spyng up: they make theys songes of no thyng but of me. Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordyng to the workes of theys handes. Gyue them an obstinate hert, and thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacion, and roote them out from vnder the heauen.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Q How is the golde become so dimme? how is the goodly colour of it so fayne chaunged: as the stones of the wall: marue thus scattered in the corner of euery strete. The chyliden of Syon that were alwaye in honour, and clothed with the mooste petyous golde: how are they now become lyke the earthen vessels, whiche be made wth the potters hande? The dragons gyue theys ponge ones sucke with bare bzelles, but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylde: lyke the Estrachens.

The tonges of the suckyng chyliden cleue to the rofe of theyr mouthes for very thurst. The rong chyliden as he hied, but there is noman that gyuerh it them. They that were wont to fare delicately, preyth in the stretes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make now moche of dong: The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater then the wickednesse of Sodome that sodaynelye was destroyed, and not taken wth handes.

Gen. 11. 1.

Her abshapners (or Hazaries) were whiter then the snowe or mylke: their colour was fresh, red or Corall, theys brautye lyke the Sophye. But now their faces be very blache. Insomuche that thou shouldest not knowe them in the stretes. * They skynne cleaueh to theys owne bones. It is wythered, & become lyke a drye stocke. They that be slayne with the swerde are happer then suche as dye of hungre, and preyth a waye, samyspyng for the frutes of the felde.

Mat. 11. 1.

* The women (whiche of nature are pityfull) haue sodden theys owne chyliden with theyr handes, that they myght be theys meate in the miserable destruction of the daughter of my people. The Lord hath perfourmed his heuy wrath be hath poured oute the furyousnesse of his displeasure, he hath kyndled a fyre in Syon, which hath consumed the foundacions therof.

Mat. 11. 1. 2. 3. 4.

E Neither the hynges of the earth, nor all the inhabitours of the world wold haue beleued the enemy and aduersary shuld haue come in at the gates of the cytye of Ierusalem, whiche neuer thelesse is come to passe for the synne of her prophetes, and for the wyckednesse of her prieres, that haue shed innocentes bloode withun her. So that blinde men wente stombyng in the stretes, and stayned them selues with bloode. They wolde in no wyse touche theys garments. But they cryed vnto euery man, lye I saypyng, a waye, get you dence touche it not. For they lied, and remoued from them: prea, they haue layde amonge the hepyren, they shall nomore dwell in thys cytye.

Gen. 11. 1. 2. 3. 4.

The countenance of the Lorde hath banysht them, and shal neuer loke moze vpon them.

phetes Ezechiel.

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherein ezechiel prophesied and in what place he was at that tyme. The vision of the four beastes.
The vision of the wheels. The vision of the throne and of the image above the throne.

I chanted in the thyrtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth mo-nethe, that I was amonge the pysoners by the ryuer of Co-bar: where the heauens opened and I sawe a vpyson of God.

Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth, made out the fyfthe yere of kynge Iochims captiuitie.

At the same tyme came the worde of  $\text{J}^{\text{h}}$  Lord, vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the prierste, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Co-bar: where the bande of the Lord came vpon hym. And I looked, and behold, a stormy wynde came oute of the North with a great cloude ful of fyre, whiche wyth hys gylstre lpyghtened all ronnde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an Angell, and as it were the lpykenesse of .iiii. beastes, and thys was thei lpykenesse. They were fastyponed lyke a man: launge that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Thei legges were streyght, but thei feete were lyke bullockes feete, and thei gylstred, as it had be fayre scoured metall. And thei wynges, vpon al the foure corners thei had mens handes. Thei faces and thei wynges were toward the foure corners: yet were the wynges so that one ruer touched an other. When they wnt they turned them not aboute: but eche one went streyght forwarde. Furthermore this was the semblance of thei faces. * Upon the right syde of these foure, thei faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left syde they had the face of an ore, and the face of an Aegle. Thei faces also and thei wynges were lpyed out aboute: so that two wiges of one touched our two wynges of an other, and with the other they covered thei bodye. Euery one when it went, went streyght forwarde. Where as the spyrite led them, thither they went, and * turned not about in thei goynge.

The fastypon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, and as though burnynge cretters had bene amonge the beastes: (this was the vision) and the fyre gaue a gylster, and out of the fyre there went lpyghtenyng.
When the beastes went forwarde & backward one wolde haue thought it had lpyghtened. Now when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, wyth foure faces also vnto the beastes.

The fastypon and worke of the wheles was lyke the ser. The foure wheles were ioynd and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they went all foure, and turned them not aboute in thei goynge. They were large, great and honyble like v. to loke

for they them selues neyther regarded the eyes nor ppyed they elders. Wherefore per eyes saye vs: whyle we loke for vayne helpe, inge we be euer waytinge vpon a people, & can do vs no good. They say so thyrpe wait for vs that we cannot go safe vpon the stretes, for our ende is come, oure dayes are fulfilled, oure ende is here. \* Our persecuters are swifter then  $\text{E}$ - gles of the ayre, they folowed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes and layed wait for vs in the wyl-derdesse. The very birth of our month: and the anoynted Lord him selfe was taken in the net of whom we saye: Under his shadow we shalbe preserued amonge the beythen. And  $\text{J}^{\text{h}}$  (doughter Edom) that dwellest in the lande of huz, be glad and reioyse: for the cup shall come vnto the also, which when thou suppest of, thou shalt be dronken. Thy synnes be wel punished. (O thou doughter Syon) he shall not suffice the to be caried a way any moze. But thy wychednesse (O doughter Edom) shal be vplit, and for thy syn-nes lake he shall leade the into captiuitie.

The v. Chapter.

The prayer of Jeremie.

$\text{J}^{\text{h}}$  All to remembraunce (O Lord.) what we haue suffered, confounde, and se our confusion. Our inheritaunce is turned to the straungers and our houses to the aleauntes. We are become careful and fatherlesse, & our mothers are as the wyddowes. We are sayne to drynke oure owne water for money, & our owne wood must we bye with money. Our neckes are vnder persecution, we are weep, and haue no rest.

Afore tyme we solded our selues to the Egiptians, and now to the Assirians, onely that we might haue byed ynough. * Our fathers (which now are gone) haue synned, and we must beare thei wychednesse. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, & noman delpyereth vpon of thei handes.
We must get our lpyng with the peryll of our lyues, because of the mouth of the wyldenesse.

Our shyn is as it had bene bent in an ouen for very soze hūge. The wyues are rauished in Syon, and the maydens in the cyties of Iuda.
The pysoners are hanged vp with the hand of  $\text{J}^{\text{h}}$ enemys, they haue not spared the olde sage me they haue taken yong mens lyues from them, & the dayes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders sit nomoze vnder the gates, & the yongmen vse nomoze playing of musyke. The ioy of our hert is gone, our mery quere is turned into mouning.
The garland of our heed is fallen: alas, that we euer synned so soze. Therefore, our herte is ful of druynesse, and our eyes dym: because of the pyl of Zion is destroyed. Insomuche that  $\text{J}^{\text{h}}$  fores runne vpon it. But thou, O Lord, that remay-nest for euermore, and the seat world wythout ende: wherefore wilt thou stil forget vs, and for-take vs so long? \* O Lord turne thou vs vnto  $\text{J}^{\text{h}}$ so shall we be turned. Renewe oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banysed vs now lōg ynough, and hast bene soze displeased at vs.

The ende of the lamentacions of Jeremie.

to luke vpon. They beacke were full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And when the beastes the wheles went also. And when the beastes lyfte them vpon from the earth, the wheles were lyft up also. Whither soeuer the spyrte went, thither went they also: and the wheles were lyft up, and folowed them for the spyrte of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forth, stode still, or lyfte them from the earth, then the wheles also went, stode still, and were lyft up, for the breath of life was in the wheles. About ouer the heedes of the beastes there was a firmament, whych was fast spoynted as it had bene of the mooste pure crystal, and that was spoynted oute aboue vpon the beedes: vnder the same firmamente were the wynges layed abode one towarde another and two wynges couered the bodye of euery beaste.

And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of the wynges, lyke the noyse of greates waters, as it had bene the noyse of a great God and a rushing togyther as it were of an hooche of men. And when they stode stille, they lette downe the wynges. Now when they stode still and had lette downe the wynges, it thundred in the firmament that was aboue the beedes. About the firmament that was ouer the beedes ther was the fashion of a seate, as it had ben made of Sapphir. vpon the seate there sat one lyke a man. I beheld hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre within and without. And beneath, when I looked vpon hym vnder the foynges, me thought he was lyke a thynnyng fyre, that gyuerd lyght on euery syde. Pea, the spyrte and glyster that lyghened round about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glozy of the Lord appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and berkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The ii. Chapter.

The prophet is sent to call the people from theyr cruell.

And then sayde he vnto me: Stande vpon vpon the fete. O thou sonne of man, and I will talke wyth the.

And as he was communinge to me the spyrte came into me, and set me vpon vpon my fete: so that I marked the thynge that he sayd vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde thou sonne of man: I will sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken patte agaynst me, and are runne away from me: both they and theyr forefathers vnto this daye.

Pea, I will sende the vnto a people that haue rough vsages and stiff stomakes: vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner: Thus saith the Lord God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a froward household) they may knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

Therefore thou sonne of man, feare them not, neither be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prebokes and thornes are with the. Pea thou shalt dwelle amonge scorpions: but feare not theyr neither be not abashed at theyr lokest, for it is toward household. And that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate.

Therefore, thou sonne of man, obeye thou al thinges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styf necked, lyke as they are a styf necked household. Open thy mouth, and eat that I gyue the. So as I was loynge vpon, beholde, there was sent vnto me a hande, wherein was closed a booke, & the hande opened it before me, and it was wyrtten within and wythout full of carefull mourninges: alas, and woo.

The iii. Chapter.

The prophet bringe fed with the wordes of God and with the commandement of the spyrte: so sent vnto the people that were in captiuyte. The punishment of a curate that speaketh not the people theyr lymes.

After this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eat that booke and go thy way, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: So, I opened my mouth and he gaue me the booke for to eat and sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eat, & thy bowels shall be fylled with the booke that I gyue the. Then dyd I eat the booke, & it was in my mouth swete then honey. And he sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man, get the sonne vnto the house of Israel, and shew them the wordes that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a strange vnknewe, or harde speche but vnto a house of Israel: Not to many nacions, whych haue dyuers speches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. A euertelless if I sent the to those people they wolde folowe the. But the house of Israel will not folowe the, for they wyl not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue styffe foreheades, and harde hertes. Beholde, therefore I will make thy face prynciple agaynst theyr faces, and harden thy forehead agaynst theyr foreheades: so that thy forehead shall be harder then an Adamant or flint stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayd of them, for they are a froward household.

He sayde moore vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thynne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thynne herte: and go to the prynciples of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner. Thus saith the Lord God hath spoken: whether ye heare or heare not. With that the spyrte toke me vpon. And I hearde the noyse of a great rushing and remouyng of the most blessed glozye of the Lord oute of his place. I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed oute agaynst an order: yea, and the eatyng of the wheles that were by them, which rushing & noyse was very great. And when the spyrte toke me vpon, and carryed me away, I wente wyth an dreary and sorrowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnyng of the moneth Abib, I came to the prynciples: that dwelt by the wayes of Cedar, and remayned in the place where they

they were: And so continued I among them leue dayes being very long. And whyle the leue dayes were cryed, the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel, therfore take good heed to the wordes of my mouth, and geue them warning at my commaundement.

E If I saye vnto the concerning the vngodly man, that without doubt he must dye, and thou geuest not him warning, nor speakest vnto him that he maye turne from his euill waye: and so to lyeue. Tha shal the same vngodly man dye in his owne vngodlynes: but hys bloode wyl I requyre of thyne hand. Neuerthelesse, if thou geue warning vnto the wicked, and yet he forsaake not his vngodlynes: then shal he dye in his owne wychednes, but thou hast discharged thy soule. Howe if a ryghteous man go from hys ryghteousnesse, and do the thyng that is euil: I wyl laye a stumbyng blocke before hym, and he shal dye, because thou hast not giue him warning: yea, dye shal he in his owne sinne, so that the vertue wherof he dyde before, shal not be thought vpon: but his bloode wyl I requyre of thyne hand. Neuerthelesse, if thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous doo no synne: then shal he lyeue because he hath receyued thy warning, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: stande vp, and go into the feilde, that I maye ther talke with the. So whyle I had ryfen vp, I gone forth into the feilde: Beholde, the glorye of the Lorde stode there, * lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar. * Then fell I down vpon my face, and the spirite came into me, wherof he set me vp vpon my feet, and sayde thus vnto me: So thy waye and that thy selfe in thyne house. Behold (O thou sonne of man:) there shal chaynes be brought forth to bynd the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyl make thy tongue cleaue to the rooke of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumme, and not be as a chylder w them: for it is an obstinate household.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, whoso heareth, let hym heare: whoso wyl not, let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate household.

EE. liii. Chapter.

The besyge of the cite of Jerusalem is signified. The longe continuance of the captiuitie of Israel. An hunger is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

Thou sonne of manne: take a lytle stone and lay it before the, and describe vpon it the cite of Jerusalem, howe it is besyged, howe bulwoozkes and stronge dykes are grauen on every syde of it: describe also tentes and an hooste of men rounde aboute it with engyns of warre.

Whereouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixt the and the cite, in stede of an yron wal. Then let thy face toward it, to besyge it, & lay outmance agaynst it to wyne it. This shal be a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt lye vpon thy left syde, and laye the linne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appointed, thou shalt lye vpon that syde, & beate the house. * Neuerthelesse, I wyl appoynt the a tyme (to put of the synnes) and the nomber of the dayes: Thye hundred & xx. dayes must thou beare the wychednesse of the house of Israel. Whyle thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryghte syde fourtye dayes, and beate the lines of the house of Iuda.

* I daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere wyl I lye vpon the. Therfore set now thy face agaynst that besieged Ierusalem, and discouer thyn arme, that thou mayest prophesy agaynst it. Behold, I wyl laye chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the from one side to another, till I haue ended the dayes of this besyging.

Wherefore take vnto the wheate, barley, beanes, gromel seed, Willium, and fitches and put thes together in a vessel, and make the loues of bread thereof, accordyng to the nombere of the dayes that thou shalt lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eat for the hundred and xx. dayes. And the meat that thou eatest shal haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twenty speles every day. This appoynted meat shalt thou eate daily from the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the part of an hynd shal thou drynke daily from the begynnyng vnto the end. Barly cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrst toost them at a fyre made w mans donge, that they maye se it. And with that sayd I Lorde: Euen thus shal the chyldren of Israel eate their despyled bread in the myddest of the Gentiles, amonge to whom I wyl scatter them.

Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God. Behold, my soule was neuer yet stayned: for fro my yowth vnto this houer, I did neuer eat of a deed carcasse, or of that wherof was layne of wyld beasts, neither came ther ever any vncleane fleshy in my mouth. Where vnto he answered me and sayde: wel, than I wyl graunt I to take cowes donge for the donge of man, and to toost the bread w all before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Behold, thou sonne of man, * I wyl mynyshe all the pryncion of bread in Ierusalem, so that they shal wey the bread, and eate it with scarcenesse: But as for water, they shal haue very lytle measure therof to drynke. And when they haue nomore bread nor water, one shal be destroyed with an other, and samyn awaye for the wychednesse.

EE. v. Chapter.

The yddole of the deces, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The chaikes of the angles of God, towards the people.

Thou sonne of manne, take the then a sharpe knyfe: namely, a rasoure.

Take that and shawe the beere of thy herd and bearde. Then take the scales and the weyght, and deuide I beere also. And after thou hast accplyshed the dayes of siege: burne the thyrd parte thereof in the fyre in the myddest of the cite, and cut the other thyrd part in peces with a knyfe. * As for the thyrd parte that remaineth call it in the wynde, and I wyl drawe out a swerde after them.

The Prophecie

But afterwarde take a tytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a sacrifice of it and cast it in fyre in the myddell of the tyme, & burne it in the tyme: Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame vpon the whole house of Israel. Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. Is there in the myddell of the brethren, and nations that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgements more then I sentes them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nations that I have rounde about her. For they haue caste out myne ordynances, and not walked in my lawes: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: For so moche as ye haue bene more augmented in nombre of people, then the daythen that dwel round about you: and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordynances, & ye haue not liued so righteously as I beathen & are coulde about you. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God.

Ec. xiii. 2.

Jer. xli. 2.

Jer. xli. 2.

Jer. xli. 2.

EI will also come vpon the, I my selfe, I say: for in the myddell of the wil I set in iudgement in the spide of the beathen, and will handle the of such a fall upon as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer will do from that tyme forth, and that because of al thyne abominacions. For in the fathers' house I sayne to eate theyr owne sones and sones theyr owne fathers. Suche a court will I kepe in the, and the whole remnant of the wil I scatter into all the wyndes.

Wherefore, as truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I will speake thou hast despised my sanctuarie, with al manner of abominacions, and wals thy shameful offe:nces. For this cause will I also destroy the. Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neither will I spare the. & One thynde part wythin the shall dye of the pestilence and of hunger: In o:ther thynde parte shall be slayne downe, rounde aboute the with the swerde: The other thynde parte that remaineth wyll I scatter abrode to ward all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerd after them. Thus I wil perforce my indignacion, and let my wrath agaynst them, and calse my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall know that I am the Lord, whiche with a feruent Ielousie haue spoken it. Wherefore, I wil make the waste and abhorred, before al I beathen that dwell about the, and in the sight of al them that go by the, so that when I punyssh the in my wrath, in myne anger, and with the plague of my whole displeasure thou shalt be a very abominacion, shame a galyng and wondyrng stroke, amonge the daythen that I be about the. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shall come to passe, whē I shote amonge them the peryllous darter of hunger, which shall be but death. Yea, therefore shall I shote them, because I wil destroy you: I wil encrease hunger, and minishe all the prouision of bread amonge you. Plagues and mysery will I sende you: yea, & wilde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodshedding shall come vpon you, and the swerde wil I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

Ec. vi. Chapter.

Ad the wordes of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesye vnto them, and saye: Heare the wordes of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valles and dales. Beholde I, I my selfe I saye: will bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye your tye places: I will cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymagēs. Your slayne men will I laye before your goddes, and the dead carcasses of the chyldren of Israel will I cast before theyr ydols, your bones will I destroye rounde aboute your alters and dwelling places.

The cyties shall be desolate, the hylle chapels layed waste: your alters destroyed and broken, your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane roted out. Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe howe the Lord I am. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swerde, will I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I will scatter you amonge the nations. And they that escape of you shall thynke vpon me amonge the daythen, where they shall be in captiuitie. As for that whiche I vnsparedfull heres of theys, wherewith they runne awaye fro me: I will breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theys, that comyt fornicacion with theyr ydols.

Then shall they be ashamed and displeased with theyr selues, for the wickednes and abominacions whiche they haue done: and shall lerne to knowe that I am the Lord, howe that it is not in vayne, & I the Lord spake to bringe suche misery vpon them. The Lord sayd moze ouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, & stampe with the feet, and say: Wo worth all the abominacions and wickednes of the house of Israel, for because of them they shall perishe with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of shall oye of the pestilence that is nye at hande, shall perishe with the swerd: and the other that remaine and that are besieged, shall dye of hunger.

Thus will I satisfy my wrathful displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe that I am the Lord, when your slaynemen lye amonge your ydols, and about your alters, vpon all hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge al grene trees, amonge all thycke oke euen in the places where they did sacrifice to al theyr ydols. I will stretch myne hand out vpon them, and will make flande waste. So that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wilderness of Beibothad forth, thow al their hab. rathes to leaue them for to knowe, & I am the Lord.

Ec. vii. Chapter.

The end of all the landes of Israel shall finally come. The cause of the destruction thereof. The prophet is commanded to bringe the name of the Lord that are at hand.

I he worde of the Lord came unto me on this maner: The I call, O fone of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cometh vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verily the ende cometh vpon all the corners of the lande. But now shall the ende come vpon the, for I will sende my wrath vpon the, and will punish & according to thy wayes, and rewarde & after all thyne abhominacions. Mine eye shall not ouersee the, neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the accordinge to thy wayes, and declare thyne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, one miserie and plague shall come after an other, the end is here. The end (I saye) is come, it watched for the, beholde, it is come alreadye, thy destruction is earlie come agaynst the, that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedition is hard by, and the crye shall not be as the soun dyng agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore I will shortly poure out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfill my wrath vpon the: I wil iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the al thy abhominacions. Mine eye shall not ouersee the neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and thyne abhominacions shall be punished in the daye of the, to lette you to knowe how that I am the Lord that sayeth. Beholde the daye is here, the daye is come, & houre is run out, the rod is readye, & the warreth grene, malicious violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye waken to a staffe. Some of the shall remayne ouer, none of they: cryes, not one of they: seide and no lamentacion shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye: who so byeth, let hym not reioyse: he that setteth, let hym be sope: for why? Trouble shall come in the myddest of them al: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the thyng that he sold although they: lyfe be yet with the lyuing. For when the prophete was preached vnto all the people, none turned from they: sine, and no man toke strengthe to hym agaynst his wychednesse, to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall be blown, & make you all ready, but noman shall go to the batayl, for I am wroth with al the whole multitude. The swerde shall be without, pestilence and hunger within: so that who so is in the feilde shall be slayne with the swerde: and he that is in the cite: shall perishe with hunger and pestilence. And such as escape, and be left among them shall be vpon the hylls, lyke as the doves in the feilde: every one shall be affrayed, because of his owne wychednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, and al knees shall be weake as the water: they shall gird them selues with sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon the, they: faces shall be confounded: and they: heades balde: they: spluer shall they: cast forth in the streets, and they: golde shall be despyled: & yea, they: spluer and golde maye not deliure them, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lord.

They shall not satisfie they: hungry soules neither shall they: emptye bellies therewith: for it shall become they: owne decaye: they: owne they: wychednesse. And they: beutiful costly ornaments that God had ordeyned to be they: greates glory, in it they haue set vp abhominacions vnto they: ydols. For this cause will I make the and it to be abhoyred. Moreover, I will gyue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wyched for to be robbed, & they shall destroy it. My face will I turne from them, my treasury shall be despyled: for the thieues shall go in to it, and spende it. Make a chayne, for the land is whole despyled with vntygteous iudgement of innocent blood, and the cite is ful of violett oppressyon.

Wherfore I will bringe the moste cruel ty rauntes from among the heathen, to take they: houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to cease, and they: sanctuary shall be despyled. When this trouble cometh, they shall seeke peace, but they shall haue none. One miserie and sorrowe shall folowe an other, and one rumoure shall come after an other. Then shall he seeke vnyons in dayne at they: prophetes. The law shall be gone from the prestes, and wyl come from the elders. The kinges shall mourne the princes shall be clothed with bruyennesse, and the handes of the people in the lande, shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after they: own wayes, accordinge to they: owne iudgements: will I iudge them, to lette them knowe that I am the Lord.

The viii. Chapter.

An apperance of the similitude of god. Ezechiel is brought to Jerusalem in the spirit. The Lord sheweth the prospect the ydolatryes of the house of Israel, and chastyse of the prestes.

It happened, that in the fyrte yere, & fyrte daye of the fyrte month, I sat in my house, and the lordes of yscod: sayl of Iuda came: and the bande of the Lord god fel euen there vpon me: And as I looked vp, I sawe as it were a lykenesse of fyre from his loynes downe warde, and from his loynes vwarde: it shyned marvelous clere, and lyke an angel to loke vpon. This multitude stretched out an hande and toke me by the heary lockes of my head, and the spyrte lyft me vp betwyxte heauen and earth: and brought me in a visyon to Jerusalem, into the entry of the inner porte that lyeth toward the North: there stode an ymage, with whom he hath all thynges in his power was very wroch.

And beholde, the glorie of the God of Israel was in the same place: eue as I hadde seene it a foze in the feilde. And he sayde vnto me. Thou fone of man, lyft vp thine eyes, and loke to warde the North. Then lyft I vp mine eyes to warde the North, and beholde: besyde the porte northwarde, ther was an autler made vnto the ymage of pouocation in the very entrynge in. And he sayde furthermoze vnto me: Thou fone of man, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greates abhominacions that the house of Israel cometh in this place, to dyspuse me from my sanctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalt see yet grea.

yet greater abominacions. And with þe brought me to the court gate: and when I looked beholde, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou son of man, digge thou the wall. And when I digged thow the wall beholde, there was a doore. And he sayde vnto me go thy way in, and loke what wyched abominacions they do here. So I went in, and sawe, and beholde, there were all maner ymages, of wyemes and beastes, allyholis and abhomynacions of the house of Israel, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also befor the ymages. xiiij. lordes of the conseil of þe house of Israel, and in the myddst of them stode Jaazanih, the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of the had a censour in his hand, and out of the infence there went a smoke as it had ben a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man haste thou sene what the senarours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambze? * For they saye: Tush, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not þe world. And he sayde vnto me. Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the doore of the porte of the Lordes house towards the north. And beholde, there sat women mourning for Tanius. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacions then these are. And so he brought me into the inward court of the Lordes house: And beholde, at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entre and the altar, there were xviij. men, that turned the backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces towards the East, and there worshipped the Sunne.

And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? theyneth the house of Juda that it is but a trylle, to do these abominacions here? Shulde they fyl the lande full of wychednesse, and undertake to pioushe me to anger? Yea, and purposely to cast vp thei notes vpon me: Therefore wyl I also do some thyng in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shal not ouer se them, neyther wyl I spare them. * Yea, and though they crye in mine eares with a loud voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

Chapter. ix.

The destruction of yherusalem, and the comert on of the wythens. They that shalbe slayd are marked. They þe destruction of the people.

H I cried also with a loud voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come, heare ye rulers of þe cite, euerye man to his wyponed hand to the slaughter. Then came there syre men out of the strete of the upper porte towards the north, and euerye man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter. Ther was one amongest them that had on hym a linnen rayment, and a wyters ynkehoine by his syde.

Am. xij. d.
Et. viij. d.

These went in, and stode besyde the basen altar: for the gloire of the Lorde was gone awaye from the altar which was vpon hym and was come down to the threshold of þe house and he called a man þe linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyters ynkehoine by his side. And the Lorde sayd vnto hym: go thy waye thow the cite of Ierusalem, and set a marke vpon the forehebes of them that moune and are loy for all the abominacions that be done therein. And to the other he sayde, that I myght heare. * So ye after hym thow the cite, slaye, ouer se none, spare none: hyl, and destroye both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marke vpon them, se that ye touch them not: and begynne at my sanctuary. Then they beganne at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, & fylled the court with the slayne, then go youte waye forth. So they went out, and slue downe thow the cite. Nowe when they had done þe slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fel downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lorde God, wylt thou then destroye al the residue of Israel, in thy soze displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wychednesse of the house of Israel & Juda is very great so that the land is ful of bloode and the cite full of vnfaythfulnesse. For they saye: * Tush, the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therefore wyl I vpon them: myne eye shal not ouer se them: neyther wyl I spare them, but wyl recompence thei wychednesse vpon thei hebes. And beholde, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym and the wyters ynkehoine by his side tolde al the matter how it happened, and sayd: Lorde as þe hast comaunded me, so I haue done.

Chapter. x.

Of the man that hath burnynge coles out of the myddle of the wheles of the Cherubyns, in token of the burning of Ierusalem. A rehearsal of the vyson of the wheles, of the headres, and of the Cherubyns.

A S I looked, beholde in the firmament that was about the Cherubyns there appered þe similitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: * Then said he that sat therein, to him that had þe linnen rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thynne handeful of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubyns and cast them ouer the cite. And he crept in, that I myght se.

Am. xij. d.

Nowe the Cherubyns stode vpon the ryghte syde of the house when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the inner court. * But the gloire of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house: so that þe temple was full of cloude, and the court was full of the syne of the Lordes gloire: Yea, and the sounde of the Cherubyns wynges was herde into the forecourt, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almyghty God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hote coles from the myddst of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubyns: he went and stode besyde the wheles.

Am. xij. d.

Then the one Cherub reached for the hys hande from vnder the cherubyns, vnto the syde þe was betwene

15 betwene the Cherubyns, and toke thereof, and gaue it vnto him that had on the linen garment in his hande: which toke it, and toweit one. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I saw also foure wheles besyde the Cherubynes, so that by every Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fallow of the precious stone of Charis: pet, (vnto the syght) they were all foure of one fallow, as if one whele had bene in an other.

¶ When they went forth, they went all foure together, not turnynge about in theyr goynge. But where they stode, thither went they after also, so they turned not about in theyr goynge. Theyr whole bodies, theyr backes theyr handes and wynges: yea, and theyr wheles also were all full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I hearde hym cal the wheles. * Every one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were lifted vp above. This is the beaste that I saw at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns went, the wheles went with them and when the Cherubyns stoode theyr wynges to lyfte them selfes upward, the wheles remayned not behynde but were with them also. Wherfore when they stode these stode also. And when they were lyfted vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them: for the spiryte of lyfte was in the wheles.

¶ Then the glorie of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns flattered with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selfes vp: so that I saw when they went, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorie of the Lorde was vpon the. This is the beaste that I saw vnder the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceived that it was the Cherubyns. Every one had. iiii. faces: and every one. iiii. wynges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the figure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of them. Every one in his goynge went straight forwarde.

¶ Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Agayne the seer prophesied, shewing them how they shal be dispersed abroad. The renuing of the heere cometh of God, wherfore can we not walke in his commaundmentes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsailes.

¶ Againe, the spirite of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the east porte of the Lordes house. And behold there were. xxv. men vnder the doore amonge whome I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Delaiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then said the Lorde vnto me. Thou son of man, these men imagine myschance, and a wyched counsaile take they in this cite, saying: Tush, there is no destruction at hand, let vs buye houses, & we will dwell: for we are the cauldron, and we be the fleshe.

¶ Therefore shalte thou prophesie vnto them: yea, prophesie shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And say thus: Thus saith the Lorde God. And say vnto me: Speake, thus saith the Lorde. On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I know the ymaginations of your hertes. Many one haue ye murdered in this cite, and fylled the stretes full of the slayn. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God. The slayn men that ye haue layed on the grounde in the cite are the fleshe, and this cite is the cauldron. * But I will bring you out of it: ye haue feared the sword, and I will bringe a sword ouer you sayth the Lorde God. I will dyspue you out of this cite and dyspue you into your enemyes hand, and I will condempne you. Ye shal be slayn in all the colles of Israel. I will be avenged of you to lerne you to knowe that I am the Lorde. This cite shal not be youre cauldron, neyther shal ye be the fleshe therein, but in the colles of Israel I will punyssh you, that you may knowe that I am the Lorde, in whose commaundmentes ye haue not walked, nor kepte his lawes: * but haue done after the customes of the heathen, that ye rounde about you.

¶ Now when I preached, Delaiah the sonne of Bananiah died. Then fel I downe vpon my face and cried with a loude voyce, saying: O Lorde God, wilt thou then utterly destroy al the remnant in Israel: And so the word of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner, thou sonne of man, thy brethren, thy kynskolke, and thy whole house of Iuda which dwel at Jerusalem, saye: We are drawen farre from the Lorde, for the lande is gyven vs in possession. Therefore tell the: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will sende you far of amonge the Gentyles, and scatter you amonge the nacjons, and I will hallowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell them also: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will gather you agayne out of the nacjons, and bring you from the countreys where ye be scattered, and I will geue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shal come thither. And they shal take away al theyr ydols, and all theyr abominacions from thence. * And I will geue you one herte, and I will plant a newe spirite within your bowels.

¶ That stonpe herte I will take oute of your bodye, and geue you a fleshy herte, that ye may walke in my commaundmentes, and kepe myne ordynances, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God: but loke whole hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abominacions & wicked liuings: those mens dedes I bring vpon theyr owne herdes, sayth the Lorde God. After this did the cherubyns lyfte by theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glorie of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glory of the Lorde went vp from the myddest of the cite, and stode vpon the mount of the cite, forwarde the East. * But the wynde toke me vp in a vision: which came by the spirite of God: it brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the prisoners. Then the vision that I had sene was taken awaye from me. So I spake vnto the people.

man) make thy gerc readye to sit, and go forth by saye daye lxxij. that they may se. Prea, euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: for peradventure they will confy de, that they be a disobedient houtholde. Thy gerc that thou hast made readye to sit withal, shalt thou beare out by saye daye lxxij. & they out vpon hym and cathe him in my net, and ca ry hym to Babilon in the land of the Chaldees whiche he shall not se, and yet thal he dye there.

As for all his helpers and all hys hostes that be about him, I wyl scattere them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out a swerde after them.
* So when I haue scattered them amonge the they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Wherefore, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fear full heart, and fowme shalt thou rate the breed, with euerlastynge and fowme shalt thou bynke thy wode. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on this maner: thus sayth the Lorde God: to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and to y lande

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me a gayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what ma

But saye thys vnto them: y dayes are at hand that euery thyng which hath bene prophced shal be fulfilled. There shall no byspon be in vayne, neither any prophcey sayle amonge the chyliden of Israel: for it is I the Lorde y spake it: and whatioeuer I the Lorde speake, it shal be perfourmed, and not be flache in commynge.

Prea, euen in your dayes (O ye frowarde hou sholde) wyl I deuple some thyng, and bynke it to passe, sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: behold, thou sonne of man. The house of Israel sayth on this maner. Tush, as for the vison that ye haue sene it wyl be many a daye as it come to passe. It is facer of yet, the thyng that be prophcedeth.
Therefore say vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. All my wordes shal nomoze be flach, loke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

The xxii. Chapter

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the false prophetes, whiche teache the people the counsailes of theyr owne hertes.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, speake, prophcey agaynst those prophetes, that prache in Israel: and saye thou vnto them y proph cy out of theyr own hertes: heare the worde of y Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God * Woe be vnto those foolis y prophetes y folowe their owne spytte, and speake where they se no thyng. O Israel, thy prophetes are lyke y foxes vpon the dyse felde: for they stande not in y gap pes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battel in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thynges they se, & tell lyes, * to mayntayn theyr prachynges withal.
The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sene them. Vayne vissons haue ye sene, and spoken fals proph cies, when ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therefore thus sayth y Lorde God: Because y your wordes be vayne, and ye seke out lyes.
Beholde, I wyl vpon you, sayth the Lorde, Agayn

the handes shall come upon the prophets that loke out vayne thynges, and speake they shall not be in the counsel of my people, nor written in the booke of the house of Israel: nether shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lord God.
And that for because: they haue deceyued my people, and told them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a walle, and they daube it with loose claye.

Therefore tell them whyche dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great howe of rayne, great haile stones shall fall vpon it, & a foze strome of winde shall bryake it, so shall the walle come downe.

Shall it not thus be sayd vnto you: where is now the morter that ye dawbed it withall. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: I will bryake out in my wrathful displeasure with a stromp wind so that in myne angre there shall come a mightie howe of rayne, and haile stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

As for the walle that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I will bryake it downe, make it euen with the groude: so that the foundation thereof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yea and ye your selues shall perishe in the myddest therof, to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lord. Thus wil I persourne my wrath vpon this walle, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then will I sape vnto you: the wal is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophets of Israel, which prophete vnto the cite of Ierusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is sayeth the Lord God. Wherefore, O thou sonne of ma: set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophete out of their owne bertes: and speake thou, prophete agaynst them and sape thus.

Thus sayeth the Lord God. Woe vnto you, that sowe pillows vnder al arme holers, & bolsters vnder the heedes both of yonge and old, to catche soules withal. For wher ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie, ye pro-myse them lyfe, and dishonour me to my people for an handtall of barley, and for a peece of bierd when ye kille the soules of them that dye not, & promyse lyfe to them that lyue not. Thus ye dissemble with my people, that beleue your lyres.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I will also vpon the pillows, wher ye catche the soules in slaying: them will I take from your armes, and let the soules go that ye catche slaying.
Your bolsters also will I teare in peces, and de-liuer my people out of your handes, so that they shall come nomore in your handes to be spoyled and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord. Seeing that with your lyres ye discomfozte the bertes of the ryghteous, whome I haue not discomforted.
Agayne, for somoche as ye couage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not turne from his wycked way and lyue, therefore shall ye spee out nomore vanitie, nor prophete your owne gestynges: for I will deliuer my people out of your handes, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lord.

haue sinned. The first chapter of the booke of here resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the word of the Lord vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, these men beare theyr vnclenes in theyr bertes, and go purposely vpon the stombyng blocke of theyr owne wyckednesse: shoulde I then answer at theyr request? Therefore speake vnto them, and sape: thus sayth the Lord God: Every man of the house of Israel, that beareth his vncleane Pdoles in his berte, purposyng to stumbe in his owne wyckednesse and cometh to a prophet, to enquire any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man will I the Lord my selfe geue answer, accordyng to the multitude of the Pdoles, that the house of Israel maye be snared in theyr owne bertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for theyr abhominacions sakes. Wherefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lord God: * Be converted, forsake your Pdoles, and turne your wyues from your fyltynesse, and turne your faces from all your abhominacions.

For every man, whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, that sojourneth in Israel, whyche departeth from me, and carryeth Pdoles in his berte, purposyng to go styll stumbyng in his owne wyckednesse, and cometh to a pro-phete, for to aske counsaile at me thowoe him: vnto that man will I the Lord geue answer, by myne owne selfe. I will set my face agaynst that man, and will make him to be an example for other: yea, and a commune by woide: and will roote hym out of my people, that he maye knowe howe that I am the Lord: * and if that prophete be deceyued, when he telleth hym a woide: then I the Lord my selfe haue deceyued that prophet, and will stretch out myne hande vpon hym, to roote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punished for theyr wyckednesse. Accordyng to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomore from me thowoe error, and be nomore despyled in theyr wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayth the Lord God.

And the woide of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forthe in wyckednesse: I will stretch out myne handes vpon it, and destroye all the prouision of theyr bierd and sende derth vpon them, to destroye man and beaste in the land. And though Aoc, Daniel, & Job, these three men were among them, yet shall they in theyr ryghteousnesse deliuer, but theyr owne soules, sayeth the Lord God.

If I brynge noysome beastes into the lande to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, & no man may go therein

god herin for bearded: yf these thynges be done in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shall knowe that I am the Lord God, but be only despised them: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

Of I byrge a swerde into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the lande: so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, and yf these thynges were therein. As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but only be saved them selues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure oute my fure indignacion vpon it in blood, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Iot, Daniel & Job were therein, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shall deliuer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but save theyr owne soules in theyr tyghtronnesse. Whereouer thus sayth the Lord God.

Where moze when I sende my fure from blous plagues vpon Jerusalem: the swerde, hunger, perillous beastes and pestilence, to destrope man and beast out of it. Beholde, there shall be a remnant saved therein, which shall bring forth theyr sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto pou, and ye shall see theyr waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be comforted, as touchyng all the plagues that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte pou, when ye see theyr waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not without a cause that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I did sayth the Lord God.

The .xv. Chapter.

As the insupportable wood of the vine tree is cast into the fyre, so sayth the Lord God Jerusalem shall be burnt.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: what cometh of the vine amonge al other trees: and of the wyld vine stocke amonge al other tymber of the grower? Do men take wood of it, to make any worke? al: may there a nable be made of it, to hang any thyng vpon? beholde, it is cast into the fyre to be burnt, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it: the myddle is burnt to a skewer. Is it mete then for any worke? No. Seinge then that it was mete for no worke, beinge whole: much lesse may ther any thyng be made of it, wher the fyre hath consumed and burnt it. And therefore thus sayth the Lord God: Like as I cast the vine vnto the fyre for to be burnt, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyll I do wyth them that dwel in Jerusalem and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume the. * Then shall ye knowe, I am the Lord, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the lande waste: because they haue so lase offended, sayth the Lord God.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The prophet commeth to speake of the abominacions of Jerusalem both syns before the benediction of god toward it. Jerusalem is reproved of impietie for her fornicacions with Idols. He multiplyeth the wickedness of other people in comparison of the synes of Jerusalem. The trade of the abominacions is set forth to be the punishment. The synes are punished to the very end.

Aayne, the word of the Lord spake I vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: what cometh of the cite of Jerusalem their abominacions, and say: thus sayeth the Lord God vnto Jerusalem. Thy progeny and kynred came out of the land of Canaan: thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Canaanite, thus was the manner of the birth. In the day of thy birth when thou wast borne, I drynged of thy nauell was not cut of, I wast not bathed in water to make me cleane. Thou wast neither rubbed w salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded I so much, as to do any of these thynges for the, for to shewe the such fauour, but I wast vterly cast out vpon the seide: yea, despyed wast thou in the day of thy birth. Then came I by, and saw the troden downe in thyne owne blood and sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be despyed in thyne owne blood: yea, cut I (I tell the) sayd vnto the: Lyue, although thou be despyed in thyne owne blood. * So I platted the, as a blos som of the seide thou arte growen vp, and wares greates: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beauty, thy brestes are com vp, thy deer is good ly growen, where as I wast naked & bare afoze.

Nowe when I went by the, and looked vpon the: beholde, the tyme was come: yea, euen I tyme to wot the. Then sayd I my clothes ouer I to couer thy dishoneste. yea, I made an oth vnto I: and marped my selfe with the (sayth the Lord God) I so thou becomest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and pouerged thy bloode from the. I anoynted the with oyle. I gaue the change of raymentes, I made the shoes of Canaan: I gyrded the about with white silke I clothed I wyth herberes. I decked the wyth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy syngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore heed, earynges vpon thyne eares, & set a bea utfull crowne vpon thyne heed. Thus wast thou deckt wyth syluer and golde, & thy rayment was of fyne whete lyke of noble worke, and of dyuers colours. Thou dydst eat nothing but symnels, hony and oyle: maruelous goodlye wast I and bea utful: yea, euen a very quene wast thou. In somoch I thy beauty was spoken of amonge the deytful, for thou wast excellent in my bea uty which I put vpon the. sayth the Lord God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beauty, & playde the harlot: when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast comytted whoredome wyth al that wylt by I, and hast fulfilled theyr desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers colours, & deckt thyne aultares ther wyth, wher vpon thou myghtest fulfill thyne whoredome, * and of such a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shall be. * The goodly ornaments and Jewels which I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymagines ther of, and comytted whoredome wyth them.

Thy garmentes of dyuers colours haste thou taken, and deckt them ther wyth, myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them. My meate which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle, hony: (to fede the wythall) that hast I set before them.

them for a sweet savour. And thus came also to passe sayth the Lorde God: * Thou hast taken thine owne sonnes and daughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is this but a smal whozedom of thine (thinkest thou) that thou slepest my chyldren, and gnest them out, to be bzene vnto them? And yet in all thy abominacions and whozedomes, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy yowth, howe naked & bare thou wast at that tyme, & troden downe in thine owne bloude. After all these thy wickedneses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

Thou hast made thy beny to be abhozred, thou hast layd out thy legges to every one that came by, and multiplied thine whozedom. * Thou hast comytted fornicacion with the Egipcians thy neyghbours, whiche had muche flethe: and thus hast thou increased thine whozedom, to anger me. Behold, I byd stretch out myne hande over the, and byd * minishe thy stowe of fode, and delpynered the ouer into the wyllies of the Philistines thyne enemyes, whiche are ashamed of thy abominable waye.

* Thou hast played the whoze also wyth the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: yea, thou hast (I saye) with them played the harlot, and yet haddest thou not pnyough. Thus hast thou furthermoze comytted thy fornicacion fro the lade of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy lust not satysfied. Howe obstinate is thine herte (sayth the Lorde God) sayng thou doest all these wykes of an erraunte whoze: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of every strete, and thy byddel houses in all places: Thou hast not bene as an other whoze that holdeth scozne of a smal rewarde, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh othe in stede of her husbande. Sytters are gent to all other whozes, but thou gnest rewarde vnto all thy louers: & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, and to comytte fornicacion wyth the. It is come to passe wyth the in thy whozedomes contrary to the vse of other women: yea, there hath no such fornicacion bene comytted after the, sayng that thou proferest gyftes vnto othe, and no rewarde is geuen the: thus is a contrary thyng.

Therefore heare the worde of the Lorde, O harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God: For so muche as thou hast let forth thy yowth to whozedom & byttonered thy name, thowoe thy whozedom wyth all thy louers, and wyth all the ydolles of the abominacions in the bloude of thy chyldren: * whome thou hast geuen them: Beholde, therefore I wyll gather together all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe come: yea, and all them whom thou fauourest, & every one that thou hatest I wyll (I saye) gather the together to be about the: * and wyll byttoner thy name before them that they maye se all thy synnes.

* Moreover, I wyll iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murderer, and recompence the thine owne bloude in wrath & gelousy: I wil geue the ouer into theyr power, & shall breake downe thy stues, and deltrope thy byddel houses: they shall strep the oute of thy clothes, al thy saye & E demyfull Jewels shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked & bare: * yea, they shall byng the comen people vpon the which shall stonoe the and slay the downe with theyr sweardes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and puny the in the syght of many women. Thus wyll I make thy whozedom to cease, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewarde. Shuld I make my wrath to be styll, take my gelousye from the, be content and no moze to be displeased, sayng thou remembrest not the dayes of thy yowth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges? Beholde therefore, I wyll byngne thine owne wayes vnto thyne heade, sayth the Lorde God: howbeit I neuer byd vnto the accordyng to thy wickednesse and al thy abominacions. Behold, al they that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe al so agaynst the suche a mother, such a daughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne daughter that hath cast of her husbande and her chyldren: yea, thou arte a sytter of thy sytters, which forsake theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Pour mother is a Cethite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest sytter is Samaria, she & her daughters that dwel vpon thy left hande.

But thy yongest sytter that dwelleth on thy ryght hnde is Sodoma and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after theyr wayes, nor done after theyr abominacions: but thou stoodest a lytel and very small tyme, & in al thy wayes thou hast bene moze corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy sytter wyth her daughters, hath not done so euil, as I and thy daughters. Behold, * the synnes of thy sytter Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abondauce and ydelnesse: these thynges had she and her daughters. Besydes that they reached not theyr hande to the pooze and neddy, but were proude, and byd abominable thynges before me: therefore I toke them a waye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceded them in wickednesse: In so muche that in comparison of all the abominacions which thou hast done thou hast made thy sytters good women. Therefore thou (whych bydest condempne thy sytter) beate thine owne name, for thine owne offences, that thou hast comytted, moze abominable the they byd which in dede are moze righteous then thou art be thou (I saye) ashamed, & beate thy namefull rebuke: sayng that thou hast proued thy sytters in comparison of the ryght wyse.

As for theyr captiuite, namely the captiuite of Sodoma, and her daughters: the captiuite of Samaria & her daughters: I wyll byngne the agayne, so wyll I also byngne agayne thy captiuite amonge them: that thou mayst take thine owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of al that thou hast done, and so cōfōrte them. Thus thy sytters (namely) Sodoma and her daughters: Samaria and her daughters with thy self and thy daughters shalbe brought agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in the pynde, and before thy wychednes came to lyght: I woldest not heare I praye of thy sister Sodom, untill the tyme that the Assyrians with all thes townes, and the Philistines wale that I ye tolde aboute them, broughte the to shame and confusi on: that thou myghtest breake thine owne filthynes and abhominacion, sayeth the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God, I shulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyled the oth, and broken the coneuant: neuerthelesse, I will remember the coneuant that I made with the in thy youthe, in so muche that I shalbe an enierlastyng coneuant: so that thou also rememberest thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and younger sisters, wch I wyl make thy daughters, and that belyde thy conuauite. * And so wyl I renew my coneuant with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord, that I mayst thynke vpon it: be ashamed, & excuse thine owne confusion nomore: when I haue forgiven the, al that thou hast done, sayeth the Lord God.

The xvii. Chapter.

The parable of the two Agies.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou son of man: put forth a dache speakinge & a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Ther came a greete * Agie with great wynges: yea, with a myghty longe bodye, & ful of feathers of dyuerse colours vpon the mounte of Libanus, and toke the best bzaunche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and carped it into the lande of Canaan, and let it in a Cytie of marchantes. He toke also of the lede of the lande, & planted it in a frutesfull ground, he broughte it vnto greete waters, and set it as a willow tree therby. Then byd it growe, and was a greete vyne stocke, but lowe by the ground whose bzaunches turned into it selfe, and the rotes of it were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, & it brought forth blossoms, & spied out bzaunches. But there was an ocher Agie, a greete one, wch had great wynges and many feathers: & beholde, the rotes of this vyne had an hunger after hym, & spied out his bzaunches toward him that he myght water her with the orchard that he had planted. Neuerthelesse, it was plated vpon a good ground belyde greete waters: so (by reason) it shuld haue brought out bzaunches and frute, and haue bene a goodly vyne.

Speake thou therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Shall this vyne prosper: shal not hys rotes be plucked oute, hys frute be broken of, hys grene bzaunches wyther and fade a waye: yea, without any stroke arme of many people, shal it be plucked up by the rotes. Behold, it was planted: shal it prosper therfore? Shall it not be wythered by the wythered: yea, euen in the thynge out of his blossoms, as sone as the east wynd bloweth.

Wozen urr, the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Speake to the froward householde:

know ye not, what these thynges do synifye? Let them: Beholde, * the kyng of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kyng and his prynces, and led them to Babylon. He toke of the kynges lede, and made a coneuant with hym, and toke an oth of hym: The prynces of the laude toke he wyed hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell: but hepe the coneuante, and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym, and sente hys ambassytours into Egypt, that he myght haue horses and much people.

Shulde that prosper? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doeth suche thynges? O: Shulde he escape, that breaketh hys coneuants? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lord God, he shal dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, & made hym kyng: whose orde he hath despyled, and whose coneuante he hath broken. Neptre shal Pharas wyth hys great host and multitude of people, mayntayne hym in warre: wher they call vpon dyces, and set vpon bulwoikes to de stroye much people: For seynge he hath despyled the orde, and broken the coneuante (where as he yet gaue hys hande therupon) and done al these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I wyl byynge myne oth & he hath despyled, and my coneuant that he hath broken vpon his owne heade. * I wyl caste my nette aboute hym, and catch hym in my yarne. To Babylon wyl I carpe him, there wyl I punish him because of the great offence that he made me. As for those that he from hym out of the hoste, they shalbe slayne with the sword. The resydue shal be scattered toward al the wyndes: and ye shal knowe that I the Lord haue spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyl also take a bzaunche from an hys Cedre tree, and wyl let it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hys hyll: Namely, vpon the hys hyll of Syon wyl I plante it: that it maye byynge forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a great Cedre tree: so that al maner of foules maye buyde in it, and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of hys bzaunches.

And al the trees of the felde shal knowe that I the Lord haue broughte downe the hys tree, and sette the lowe tree vpon that I haue byyed vpon the grene tree, and made the hys tree to flopp. Euen I the Lord & spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The xviii. Chapter.

The sheweth that every man shal lede hys owne synne. To hym that amendeth, is saluacyon promysed. Death is promysed to the ryghteous, wch yet turneth backe from the right waye.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: What meane ye by this comen prouerbe, that ye vse in the land of Israel, sayinge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the chyldrens teith are set on edge. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, ye shal vse this by worde nomore in Israel. Beholde: all foules are myne. A yke as I father is myne, so is I son myne also. The soule that synneth, shal dye. * If a man be godly, and do the

do the thyng that is equal and right. he eateth not upon the hylls: he lyftech not hys eyes vpon the soule ydols of Israel: he defyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe: he medleth wth no mēstrous woman: he greueth no bodye: he gyueth hys better hys pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth hys meat wth the hongry: he closeth the naked: he lendeth nothyng vpon vsury, he taketh nothyng ouer: he withdroweth his hand from doyng wronge: he dealeth faythfully betwene man and man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them faythfully.

¶ If he nowe get a sonne, that is a murderer, a shedder of bloude: if he do one of these thynges (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hylls: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and nedye: he robbeth and spoyleth: he greueth not the better hys pledge agayne, he lyftech vpon hys eyes vnto ydols: and medleth wth abhominable thynges: he lyeth vpon vsury, he taketh moreouer. Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Dying he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, his bloud shall be vpon him.

¶ Nowe if this mā get a sonne also, that seeth all hys fathers synnes, whych he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyftech not his eyes vpon the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he vereth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neither spoyleth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat wth the hongry: closeth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor any thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This mā shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue wythout faile. As for hys father, because he oppressed and spoiled his brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is dead in his owne syn. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shuld not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therfore, because the sonne hath done equite and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth shall dye.

* The sonne that not beare the fathers offence, neither shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnesse of the righteous, shall vpon hym, and the wyckednesse of the wycked shall be vpon hym selfe also. * But if the vngodly wyll turne awaye from all hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes and do the thyng that is equal and ryght: doubtles he shall lyue, & not dye. As for al hys synnes that he dyd before, they shal not be thought vpon: but in hys ryghteousnesse that he hath done, he shall lyue. * For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lorde God, but rather if he conuerte & lyue: Agayne: if the ryghteous turne awaye from his ryghteousnesse, and do iniquite, accordyng to al the abhominacions, that a wicked man doth: shall he lyue? All the ryghteousnes that he hath done shal not be thought vpon:

but in the faulte that he hath offended wythal, in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

¶ And yet ye saye: Tush: the waie of the Lorde is not indifferent. hear therfore ye house of Israel: is not my waye ryght? Are not your waies rather wycked? * When a ryghteous man turneth awaye from his ryghteousnesse, & medleth wth vngodlynesse: he must dye therein. Yea, for the vngodlynesse that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne, * when the wycked mā turneth a waye from his wyckednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thyng whych is equal & ryght: he shall saue hys soule alpyue. For in so muche as he remembreth hym selfe, and turneth him from al the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shall lyue and not dye.

¶ And yet sayth the house of Israel. Tush: the waie of the Lorde is not equal. Are my waies vngodly? O ye house of Israel: Are not your waies rather vnequal? As for me I wyl iudge euery mā, accordyng to hys waies. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. * Wherfore be conuerted and turne you cleane frō al your wyckednesse so that there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye from you al your vngodlynesse, & ye shal be done: * make you new hertes and a new spyrte. Wherfore wyl ye dye? O ye house of Israel: I haue no pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The captiuitie of Ierusalem and of Ieroboam in synne lyed by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He seeth oute the prosperite of the crite of Ierusalem that is past, and he weepeth thereat that is present.

But thou sonne of mā mourne thou for the synners of Israel, and say. Wherfore lay thy mother flponesse amonge the lyons, and nourished her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyon, it learned of people, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and toke hym in theyr nets, and brought hym in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypt.

¶ Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: whych wente amonge the lyons, and became a feareful lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made theyr Cities waste. In so muche that the whole lande and euery thyng therein, were vnto the desolace, & howe the very voyce of hys roaringe.

¶ Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countrees agaynst him, layd their nettes for hym, and toke him in theyr pytt. So they bounde hym wth cheynes, and broughte hym to the kynge of Babylon: whych put hym in prison, that hys voyce shulde nomore be herd vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy blood, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braches are growe out of many waters, her stalkes were so stronge that men myght haue made stauess thereof for speers: we grewe so hye in her stalkes.

¶ So when men sawe that he exceeded the strength of the hergeth a multitude of her boughes, she was roted oute in dyspleasure, and caste doone to the grounde. The Casse wynde dyed vnder frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of: wythered & brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernesse, in a drye and thyrstie ground. And there is a fyre gone oute of her stalkes, whiche harde brennt vnder her boughes and her frute: so that she harde no more stronge stalkes, to be stanes for officers. This is a pytyous and mysletable thynge.

The xx. Chapter:

The Lorde beareth that he will answer them when they praye for the release of ungodlynes whiche he here abhorreth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from capti-uety. By the word that shal be spoken, to signifye the wyng of Jerusalem.

In the seventh yere the tenth daye of fyrth moneth, it happened, that certaine of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou son of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: are ye come hither to aske any thinge at me? I truly as I lyue (saith the Lorde) I will gyue you no answere. Wylte thou not reprove them (thou sonne of man) wylte thou not reprove them?
Shewe them the abominations of theyr forefathers and tell them.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, & lyft vp myne hande vnder the seide of the house of Jacob, & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: yea, when I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, & sayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to brynge them oute of the lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had promysed for them, which sheweth with mylke and ho-ny, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all order.
Then sayd I vnto them, * Caste a waye euery man the abominations that he hath before him and desyle not your selues with the ydols of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled against me, and wold not folowe me: to caste awaye euery man the abominations of his eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypte. Then I made hym to poure myne indignation ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yea, euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wold not do it: for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whome I shewed my selfe vnto them, & I wold brynge them oute of the lande of Egypte. Nowe when I had carped them oute of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed the my lawes, whiche who so kepeth shal lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixt me & them, & thereby to know that I am the Lorde, whiche halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernesse, they wold not walke in my commaundementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes (whiche who so kepeth shal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indignation vpon them: and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wold not do it, for my names sake, lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heathen, from the wyche I had carped them awaye. But I swoze vnto them in the wyldernesse that I wold not brynge them into a lade, which I gaue them: a lade that sheweth with mylke & hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabboths, for their heart was gone after theyr ydols. Nevertheless, myne eye spared them, so I wold not utterly slaye them, & consume them in the wyldernesse. Whereover, I said vnto the sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not theyr ordinances, & desyle not your selues with theyr ydols for: I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and doo them, halowe my Sabboths, for they are a token betwixt me and you, that ye may knowe howe that I am the Lorde your God. Notwithstanding, they sonnes rebelled against me also, they walked not in my statutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfyll them (whiche he that doth shal lyue in the) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. The I made me againe to poure out myne indignation ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vnder them in the wyldernesse. Nevertheless, I withdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vn-halowed amonge the heathen, before whom I had brought them forth: I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wold scatter them amonge the heathen, and strawe them amonge the nations, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabboths, and lyfte vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers ydols. Wherefore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, & lawes thowse the wyche they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes: (when I appoynted for my selfe all theyr fyrst borne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God.) Besyde al this your forefathers haue yet blasphemied me more and greatly offended against me. For after I had brought them into the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery hyll and al the thyrche trees: they made there theyr offerynges, and prouoked me with theyr oblations, makinge swete sauoure there, & poured out theyr dyspleasing offerynges.

Then I asked them what is the hyll altare that ye go to? And therefore is it called the hyll place vnto this daye. Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde God ye are euen as uncleane as your forefathers, and comye whozdomer also with theyr abominacions.
In all your ydols, wher vnto ye brynge your oblations, & to whole honour ye burne your chyliden

come. Both these streets shal go out of one hynges lade. And chose the place, at the heade of the street chose out a corner. Make the a street, that the swerde maye come towarde the heade of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytie of Ierusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shal stande in the turnynge of the waye, at the heade of the two streets: * to aske counsell at the sothsayers, callynge the lottes with his arrowes, to aske counsell at the ydolle, and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothsayers shal point to the ryght syde vpon Ierusalem, that he maye set men of warre to smyte it with a great noyse, to crye out alarum to set battell aymes agaynst the gates, to graue vpon wyches, and to make bulwokes.

¶ Auerthelelle, as for the sothsayers, they shal holde it but for vanite. And esteeme them as those to whome they haue often sworne: Notwithstandynge he shal remember they wychednesse, so that he ryght they must be take & wone. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God, For so much as ye pour felus we we pour offence, and haue opened your wychednesse, so that in al your wokes men may se your synnes: therfore are ye come to remembraunce, and ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wyched gyde of Israell, whose dape is come: euen the tyme that wychednesse shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the garlande, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the hible is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyshe, punyshe yea, punyshe them wyl I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fullyl vntyl he come, to whome the indgements belongeth, and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O some of man) prophete, and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God to the chyldren of Ammon, and to theyr blasphemers, speake thou: The swerde, the swerde is drawen forth already to the slaughter, and scoured to consume, that it glysteth (because thou hast looked the out vanities, & propheted lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke lyke as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne whose dape cam when they wychednesse was ful.

¶ Shulde I put it vpon agayner? Aye I wyl punyshe the, in the lade where thou wast noyshed and bozne, and poure myne indignacion vpon the, and wyl blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruel people, whych are learned to destroy. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy bloude shalbe shedde in the lande, that I maye put the out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

The xxii. Chapter.

The word of the Lorde agaynst Ierusalem for many synners, and keepinge the honoure vnto they fathers & mothers, and other wychednesse. Of the wyched doctrine of the false prophetes and preachers, and of theyr vncharitable conuersacions. The camp of rulers. The wychednesse of the people.

¶ Moreouer, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reprove this bloud thur synners? Shewe them theyr abominacions, and tel them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O thou Cytie, that sheddest bloud in the myddes of the, that thy tyme may come also: I maketh the ydolles to defyle the withal. Thou hast made thy selfe gylyte, in the bloude & thou hast shed: and defyled the in the ydolles, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, and made the tyme of thy peres to come. Therfore wyl I make the to be confounded amonge the heathen, and to be despyssed in al the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shal laugh the to scozne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte ful of myschefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed bloude in the. In the haue they despyssed father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the strainger, in the haue they vered the wydowe, and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyssed my Sanctuare, and vnholodest my Sabboth. Whereers are there in the, that shed bloude, and eate vpon the hylls, and in the they vse abhominacion.

Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy handes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shal byynge vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyl byynge it also to passe. * I wyl scatter the amonge the heathen, and strowe the about in the landes, and wyl cause thy spithynesse to cease oute of the. Yea, and thou shalt be thyme owne enderitaunce and not myne in the syght of the heathen, that thou maist knowe, that I am the Lorde. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to dross. Al theyr that shulde be brasle, tyne, yron, and leade are in the fyre become dross. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde god

For so muche as ye al are turned into dross beholde: I wyl byynge you together vnto Ierusalem, lyke as syluer, brasle, yron, tyne, and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them. Euen so wyl I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacion. I wyl byynge you together, and kindle the fyre of my displeasure vnder you, that you maye be melted therein. Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therein, that ye may know howe that I the Lorde haue powred my wrath vpon you, and the word of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vncleane land, which is not rayned vpon in the day of the cruel wrath: the prophetes are in the, are sworne together to deuour soules, like as a roatynge lyon, that lyueth by his prey. They

They receyue riches and good, and make many wyddowes in the. Thy priestes breake my lawe and desyle my sanctuary. * They put no difference betwene the holy and unholy, neither betwene they betwene the cleane and uncleane: they turne they eyes from my sabbothes, and I am unhalowed among them. They rulers in the arte lyke ranyng wolues to shed bloude, and to destroye soules for theyr owne couetous luche. * As for thy prophetes, they daube with vntempered claye, they se vanities, and prophcey lyes vnto the, saying: the Lorde God sayth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken: The people in the land vseth wicked extortion and robbery. They were the poore and needy and * oppresse the stranger agaynst ryght. And I sought in the land for a man, that wolde make vp the hedge, and set him selfe in y gap before me in y landes behalfe that it shoulde not be corrupted: but I could fynd none. Therefore wyl I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fire of my wrath: theyr owne wayes wyl I recompence vpon theyr heedes, sayth the Lorde God.

Of the fornicacion, that is to saye of the adulterie of Samaria and Ierusalem, vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibab. In comparacion of Samaria be sheweth that the fornicacion of Ierusalem is the spyder. The destruction of Ierusalem is prophced. The aduocacy of both the wyddowes is founde out. Theyr destruction.

In the wyorde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, there were two women, that had one mother: these (wher they were ponge) began to playe the harlottes * in Egypt. There were theyr byestes brused, & the pappes of theyr maydenhed dyd the Egyptians destroye. The eldest of them was called Oholah, & her yonger syster Oholibab. These two were my wyues, and bare sonnes & daughters. Theyr names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Ierusalem that was Oholibab. As for Oholah she began to go a whooring when I had taken her to me. * She was set on fyre vpon her louners the Assirians as her neyghbours which had to do with her, euen the princes and lordes that were dect in costly aray, saye ponge men, lustye ryders of horses.

25 Thus thowolde her whozdom, she cleued vnto al the yong men of Assiria. Yea, she was mad vpon them, and desyled her selfe with all theyr ydols. Neither crossed she from the fornicacion that she used w the Egyptians: for in her youth they lay with her, they bzused the byestes of her maydenhed, and poured theyr whozdom vpon her. Wherefore * I deliuered her into the handes of her louners: euen y assirians who she so loued. These discovered her shame, toke her sonnes and daughters, & slayd her w the sword: I newyl name gat her of all her people, and they punished her.

* Her syster Oholibab sawe this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, moze thā she, and excided her syster in whozdom. * She loued the Assirians (which also laye with her) namelye the princes, and greute lordes, that were clothed with all maner of gorgeous apparell al lusty horsemen and saye ponge persons.

C Then I sawe, that theyr body were desyled a-lyke. But she increased styll in whozdom: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh colours, with saye gyddes about them, & goodly donettes vps theyr heedes, lohyng all the princes (after the maner of the Babylonians, and Chaldees in theyr owne lande where they were bozne) immediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she bzent in loue vps them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye with her, and desyled her with theyr whozdom, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them * her whozdom and shame was discovered and sene: then my hert forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her sister also. Nevertheless, she vseth her whozdom euer the longer the moze, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherein she had played the harlote in the lande of Egypt: * she bzent in luste vpon them, whose flesch was lyke the flesch of Asses, and theyr seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast renned the fylthyngnes of thy youth, when thy louners bzused thy pappes, and marred thy byestes in Egypt.

Therefore (O Oholibab) thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl rase vp thy louners (with whome thou hast satysfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them togyther rounde about the: namelye, the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, myghtie men and tyrauntes, with all the Assirians: all ponge and saye louners princes and lordes, knyghtes & gentle men, whiche be all good horsemen. These shall come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a great multitude of people: which shal be harnessed about the on euery syde: with byest plates, shylbes and helmettes: I wyl punyssh the before the yea, theyr them selues shal punyssh the according to theyr owne iudgement. I wyl put my gelously vps the, so that they shal deale cruelly with the. They shal cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shal fal the, rowe y sword. They shal cary away thy sonnes and daughters, & the residue shal be bzent in the fyre. They shal strypp the out of thy clothes and cary thy costlye weis away with them.

28 Thus wyl I make an ende of thy fylthyngnesse and whozdom, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalte tourne thyne eyes nomoze after the and cast thy minde nomoze vpon Egypt. For thus sayth y Lorde: beholde, I wyl deliuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest yea, euen into the handes of them with whom thou hast fulfilled thy lust which shal deale cruelly with the.

All thy labour that they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whozdom shal come to lyghte. All these thynges shal happen vnto the bycause of thy whozdom which thou hast vset amonge y Gentiles, with whose ydols thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy sister, therefore wyl I gyue her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drinke of thy sisters cuppe, howe deepe and farre former it be to f botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorn, and had a greaue in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of drunkenness and loquace, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe is out euen to the diggers: yea thou shalt eat up the broke peces of it, and so teare thynne owne breestes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. For comoch as thou hast forgotten me and cast me asyde behynde the, so beare now thynne owne filthynesse and whoredome. The Lorde sayd mozeouer vnto me: Thou son of man, wylt thou not repproue Oholah and Oholibah? Seewe them theyr abominacions namely that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, and stayned theyr handes with bloude: yea, euen with theyr ydolles haue theyr commytted aduoutrye and offered them by the fyre theyr owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and haue vndalowed my Sabbath. For when they had stayned their chyldren for theyr ydolles, they came the same daye into my sanctuary to despyle it.

Jer. 17. 1. 2.

Lo, thus haue they done in my house: Besyde all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men out of farre countries: and when they came thou hast bathed & paynted thynne eyes with colours trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fashion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed and a table spred befoze the, wher vpon thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Jer. 17. 3.

Then was there greate cheare with her to obtayne peace, and though with those men many men came, yet were ther also brought me of Saba from the wilderness: which gaue the bracelets vpon theyr handes: and sette glozyous crownes vpon theyr heedes: and I sayde vnto her: & seeing she was styren in age in her whoredomes: now shall her fornicacions come to an ende with her. And they went into her as vnto a comen harlot. Ene so went they (I say) to Oholah and Oholibah those fylthy women. O al ye f loue vertue and ryghteousnesse, iudge them, punish them: as aduoutrers and murderers, ought to be iudged and punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in theyr handes. Wherefore thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl byynge a greate multitude of people vpon them & make them be scatted and spoyled: these shall stone them, and goze them with theyr swordes. They shall slay their sonnes and daughters and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

Jer. 17. 4. 5.

Thus wyl I destroy all such fylthynesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after your uncleynesse.

And so they shall laye theyr fylthynesse vpon your owne sculles, and ye shall be punished for the synnes that ye haue committed with your ydols, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

The xxiii. Chapter.

The promysed vengeance of Iherusalem by a parable of a lecherous pot. The parable of Ezechiel's wife being dead which he desired to marry.

In the nyntieth yere, in the tenth month I the tenth daye of the month came the word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wyte vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, when the kyng of Babylon set him selfe agaynst Iherusalem. Seewe that obstinate household: a parable and speake vnto the Thus sayth the Lorde God: Set the a pot, let it on, and power water into it: put all the peces together in it all the good peces: the loyne and the shuldr, and fyl it with the best bones. Take one of f best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therein. Wiche that sayde the Lorde God on this manner. * Woe be vnto the bloudy cytie of f pot, wher vpon the rustynesse hangeth, & is not yet scourd away. Take out the peces that are in it one after an other: there nede no lottes be caste therfore, for the bloud is yet in it. Tys a playne dyer stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde that it myght be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne dyer stony rocke, because it shuld not be hyd, and that I myght bring my wrathful indignacion and vengeance vpon her.

Wherefore thus sayth the Lorde God: O woe be vnto that bloudy citye, for whom euen I my selfe wyl make a great fyre and set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, & C lpyce the pot, so f the very bones shall be byent. Moreover, I wyl set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metall shall be byent, and molten also for heate, and the filthynesse of it shall be molten in it, and the dross of it shall be consumed. Thou takest great payne this to despyle thy self And it wyl not be poured from the exceeding dross in it: but thow wylt fyre shall the dross of it be purifyed. In thy filthynesse euen in the mischeuous dedes thou dost contynue, and because thy filthynesse is abhominable, for I haue clyssed the but thou art not clyssed. Thou shalt not be purged from thynne uncleynesse til I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpon the. Euen I f Lorde haue so deuysed. Yea, it is come therto alreadye that I wyl do it: I wyl not goo backe, I wyl not spare, I wyl not be entreated: but according to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punished: sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man beholde, I wyl take away the pleasure of thynne eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe, nor water thy cheeke: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone but vnto me deadly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonnet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feet, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mynyng, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the next morowe, I did as I was commaunded, and f people sayde vnto me, wylt thou not tell vs what this signifyeth toward vs, for this thou dost for our sake. I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyl suf-spende my Sanctuarie, euen the gloze of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left: that shall shewe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eat no mourning bread: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your feet. Ye shall neither mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shall be sorrowfull, and one repent with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shewetoken. For lyke as ye haue done, so (when this cometh) ye shall do also: that ye may learne to knowe that I am the Lord God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man, In the day whē I take from them their power, their ioye and honour, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of their lyues: namely theyr sonnes and daughters, that not this be knowen: Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, that thou mayst speake, & be nomozed. Psea, and I shall be theyr shewetoken & they may knowe how I am the Lord.

The xxv. Chapter.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, which was at the fall of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Syria, agaynst the Ammonites, agaynst the Philistines.

The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynst the * Ammonites, prophety vnto them, and say vnto the Ammonites: heare the word of the Lord God. Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarie. Aha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel: I trowe it be now desolate: psea, and ouer the house of Juda, I trowe they be now led away prisoners: Behold, I wyl deliuer the to the people of the east, that they may haue the in possession: these shall set theyr castles and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and dzyne vnto thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stall for camels and of Timon a shepfold: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord.

B For thus sayeth the Lord God: In somoche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and staped with thy feet: psea, reioyced in thyne heart ouer the lande of Israel with despise: beholde, I wyl stretche oute myne hande ouer the also, and deliuer the, to be spoiled of the heythen, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: psea, I wyl make the to be layd wast, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as Moab and Syria do saie: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be.

Therefore beholde, I wyl open the syde of Moab, and take away theyr strength, theyr cyties, and these coostes of theyr lande, whiche are the pleasures of thy cuntrye. As namely, Berbiamoth, Baalmon, and Cariahaim, these wyl I open vnto them of the east, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites, and wyl gyue them in possession, so that the Ammonites shall nomoze be had in remembrance amonge the heythen.

Euen thus wyl I punish Moab also that they may knowe how that I am the Lord.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord God. By cause that * Edom hath auenged and cald hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, & hath done great offence, and auenged hym selfe vpon them therefore thus sayeth the Lord: I wyl reache out my hande vpon Edom: and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Theman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shall be slayne with the swerde: that shewe my people of Israel wyl I auenge me agayn vpon Edom, they shall handle hym accordyng to my wrath and indignacion, so that they shall knowe my vengeance sayeth the Lord God.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as the * Philistines haue done this: namely taken vengeance with despitfull stomaches, and of an olde euill wyl set them selues to destroye, therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl stretche oute myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause al the remnant of the see coast to perishe. A great vengeance wyl I take vpon them, and punish the them cruelly: that they may knowe how that I am the Lord which haue auenged me of them.

The xxvi. Chapter.

The prophet sayeth that Tyne shall be overthruen by cause it was destroyed at the destruction of Jerusalem: For the dishonour and affrontment of the marchantes for the destruction of Tyne.

It happened, that in the eleuenth yere, the fyrst daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, because * Tyne hath spoken vpon Jerusalem. Aha, now I trowe the portes of the people be broken: and the towered vnto me: for nowe that she is destroyed, I shall be fylled. Psea, therefore sayeth the Lord God:

Beholde, O Tyne, I wyl vpon the, I wyl dzyne a great multitude of people agaynst the lyke as when the see aryseth with his wanes: These shall breake the walles of Tyne, and cast downe her towers: I wyl scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: psea, as the dzyne place where the fyshers hange vnto the nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it sayeth the Lord God. The Gentyles shall spoyle her: her daughters vpon the felde shall perishe with the swerde, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl dzyne by theer Nabuchodonozor (which is the kyng of Babilon, and a kyng of kynges) from the north vpon Tyne: with horses, charrettes, horsemen, and with a greates multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lande shall be slayne with the swerde, but agaynst the he shall make bulwokes, and graue vnto dyches aboute the, and lye vnto his wyde agaynst the. His singes and batclammes shall be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapōs breake downe thy towers. The dust of his horses shall couer the felde: they shall be so many, thy walles shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, charrettes, and wheles when he cometh to thy portes, as men do into an open cytie.

The Prophecie

cytie. With the bones of his house strete shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

C He shall slay the people with the sword, and breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shall wast a way thy ryches, and spale thy marchaundise. Thy walles shall they breake downe and destroy thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones thy timber & foundations shall they cast in y water. * Thus wyl I bring the melody of thy songs, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende so that they shall nomore be herde. I wyl make a bare stone of the pea, a dying place for nettes and thou shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God: thus hath the Lord God spoken concerning Tyre. The ples shall be moued at y noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of thy sayne that shall be murdered in the. All hynges of the see shall come downe from theyr seates regal: they shall lay a waue theyr roobes, and put of theyr costly clothyng. Pea, with trembling shall they be clothed they shall lye vpon the grounde: they shall be afraied at thy sodayne fall, and be abashed at y.

Jer. xlii.

Thimo. i. 9. 10.

D They shall mourne for the, and sape vnto the: * O thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that hast bene y strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom all men stode in feare. Howe arte thou nowe so utterly destroyed. Howe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabytours of the ples: pea and the ples the selues shall stande in feare at the ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: when I make the a desolate cytie, as other cyties be, that no man dwell in: and when I bringe the deape vpon the, that great waters maye couer the. Then wyl I cast the downe vnto them that descende into the pyt vnto a people that hath bene longe deed, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde bylde, with them whiche go downe to theyr graues, so that no man shall dwell more in the. And I wyl make the to be nomore in honoure, in the lande of the lpyng. I wyl make an end of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be found for euer more: sayth the Lord God.

Eccl. xlii. Chapter.

The prophet is moued to bewaile the desolation of Tyre as he looked out the people of Tyre for the hanging of many chaunces thereon.

I The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: O thou son of man, make a lamentable coplayne vpon * Tyre and sape vnto Tyre: thou which art a port of the see, that occupiest with moche people, and many ples: thus speaketh the Lord God, O Tyre, thou hast sayde: what I am a noble cytie, thy borders are in the myddell of y see, and thy buylders haue made the marvellous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of y mount Sany. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make y mastes, and the okes of Balan to make the rowers.

Eze. xxv. 17.

B Thy borders haue they made of purpy, and of costly wood out of y yle of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle worke oute of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy maste and thy hangynges of pelowe sylke, purple, out of the ples of Ciliah. They of Tydon and Arvad were thy maryners, and y wysst in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wysst as Gebal were they that amended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see with theyr shypmen occupied theyr marchaundise in the. The Perses, Libians & Idutens were in thyne host, and helped the to fyght, these hanged by theyr shylbes and belmettes with the, these set lorde the beautye.

They of Arvad were with thyne boote rode aboute thy walles: and the Hygmensians were thy watchemen vpon thy towers, these hanged by theyr quyers rounde about the walles, and made y marvellous goodly. Charlis occupied the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tyne and leade, and made thy market greete. Iauan Tubal, & Desech were thy marchautes, which brought the men and ornaments of metall for thy occuppyng. They of the house of Togarma brought vnto the at y tyme of thy marte, horse, bysmen and mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchautes: and many other ples that occupied with the, brought the wetters, elephant bones, and Decokes for y present. The Sirians occupied w the bycause of thy dyuers workes, and increased thy marchaundise, with Smaragdes with scarlet, with nedle worke, with whyte lynn cloth, with sylke, and with chypstall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, and brought vnto thy markettes wheat of Hith, and Baneg, balme, honey, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also vled marchaundise with the in the best wyne of Helbon, and with wol by cause thy occuppyng was so greete, & thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, & Desal, haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron reby made, with Cassia and Calamus, accordyng to thyne occuppyng. Dedan occupied w the in sayre tapystry worke and cuthyns. Arabia, and all the prynces of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wetters, and gootes.

The marchautes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the, in all costly spyes, in all pcyous stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy markettes. Haram Chene, and Eden, the marchautes of Saba, Affiria, & Chelmad were all doers with the, and occupied with the. In costlye raymente of pelowe sylke, and nedle worke ( verye pcyous, and therfore pacts and bounde together with ropes. ) Pea, and in cedre wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Charlis were the chefe of thy occuppyng.

Thus thou art ful, and in great woxshyppe, euen in the myddell of the see. Thy robbers shall bringe the into greete waters, the east wynde shall ouerbear the in the myddell of the see, so that thy wares, thy marchaundise, thy ryddell, thy maryners, thy shipmasters, thy builders of thy broken places, thy occuppers ( that brought the thynges necessarie ) the men of war that are in the, and al the comens that perche in the myddell of the see, in the dape of thy fall: The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of the shypmen.

All

All whery men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr botes, and set the kynges vpon the lande. They shall lyfe vpon theyr wyces because of theyr make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr bedes, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, and put sackcloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorrowe and heuy lamentation: yea, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what pite hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is: When thy wares and marchaundise came from the seas: thou gannest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth hast made thyce, thowest the multitude of thy wares occupying. But thou art now cast downe into the drepe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perswaded with the. All they that dwell in the yles are abashed at the, and all theyr kynges are afraide: for thy faces haue chaunged colour. The marchautes of the nations wondre at the: In that thou arte so cleane brought to nought, and comest nomore vp.

Eccl. xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God agaynst the kynges of Tyre, for how pite. Daniel the prophete is moued to denunciate the kynges of Tyre. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The Lorde promyseth that he will gather together the chylidren of Israel.

The word of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, tell the prynce of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: because thou hast a proude herte, and hast sayde: I am a God. I haue my seate in the myddest of the see lyke a god, wher as thou art but a man & not god, and yet stdest in thyne owne conceyte, that thou art god: Behold, thou thyselfest thy selfe wyldest thou Daniel, that ther is no secretes hyd from the.

With thy wysdome and thy vnderstanding thou hast gotten the great welthyngnesse, and gathered treasure of syluer and golde. With thy great wysdome and occupying hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy great rychesse thyne herte is proude.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as thou hast lyft vp thyne herte as though thou were God, behold, I will byynge enemies vnto the, euen thyzautes of the hepythen: these shall byawe out theyr swerdes vpon thy beauty and wysdome, and shall defyle thy gloire. They shall cast the downe to the pye, so that thou shalt lye in the myddest of the see, as theyr be slayne. Let se, yf thou wilt save them: before them that slaye the: I am God, wher as thou arte but a man and not God, in the handes of them that sle the. We wylte thou, euen as the vncircumcysed in the handes of the enemyes for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

Whereouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaint ouer the kyng of Tyre, and tel hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: thou arte a scale of a lykenesse, ful of wysdome and excellēt beautye: Thou hast ben in the pleasaunt garde of God: thou art deckt with all maner of pycyd stones: with Ruby, Topas, Chyistall, Ja-spat, Onix, Iaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle and gold. The beauty and the holes þe in the were set forth in the daye of thy creation. Thou art a lapyr Cherub, exalted by the annoynting, stretched wyde out for to couer. I haue set the in this dignitie vpon the holy mount of god there hast thou ben, & walked amonge the sayre glystryng stones. From the tyme of thy creatio thou hast ben ryght excellent, tyll wyckednesse was founde in the. * Because of thy great marchaundise, thyne herte is ful of wyckednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore wyl I cast the fro the mount of God (O thou conerynge Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glystryng stones. Thy herte was proude in thy sayre beautye, and thowest thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wysdome: I wyl cast the downe to the grounde, and that in the syght of kynges. Thou hast defyled thy sanctuary with the great wyckednesse of thy vnryghteous occupyinge. I wyl byynge a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the: and wyl make the to ashes, in the syght of all them that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquaynted with the among the hepythen shall be abashed at the, seinge thou art so cleane brought to nought, and comest nomore vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst Sydon: * Prophecy vnto it, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Sydon, I wyl vpon the, and get me honour in the: that it may be knowen, howe I am the Lorde: when I punyssh her, and get me honour in her. For I wyl sende pestilence and bloudshedding into her stretes, so that those whiche be slayne with the sword shall lye rounde aboute in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde. She shall nomore be a pychynge thowse, and an buryng hyer vnto the house of Israel, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her, and hate her, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: when I gather the householdes of Israel togyther agayne from the nations amonge whom they be scatred, then shall I be sanctified in them in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruante Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buylde houses, and plant vnyuersal des: yea, safely shall they dwell therein: when I haue punysshed all those that despyse them rounde aboute: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God.

Eccl. xxix. Chapter.

The prophete is agaynst Iherosolym. He promyseth the deliuation of Egypt, and the shakynge adowne of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he will redeme Egypt as agayne after 70. yeres. Egypt is the enemye of Iherosolym.

In the tenth yere vpon the twelenth daye of the thirmoneth, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, set now thy face agaynst Iherosolym & hyng of Egypt: * Prophecy agaynst hym, and agaynst the whole land of Egypt. Speake, and tel hym: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, O Iherosolym thou hyng of Egypt of Egypte. I wyl vpon the thou great dragon that lyest in the waters: thou that layest the water is myne. I haue made it my selfe. I wyl put an hoke in thy chawes, and bange all the scales in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that, I wyl draue the out of thy waters: yea, and al fythe of thy waters that bange vpon thy scales. I wyl cast the out of the drye lande, with the fylle of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the selde.

Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp: but thou shalt be meate for the beastes of the selde, & for the foules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egypte maye knowe: that I am the Lord: by-cause thou hast ben a staffe of reed to the house of Israel: wher they toke hold of the with theyr hand: thou brakest and pyckedst them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtedest the raynes of theyr backes. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: behold, I wyl byng a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast: yea, the lande of Egypte shall be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lord. Because he sayd: the water is myne: I my selfe haue made it. Behold therfore, I wyl vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyl make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate and in abasment, from the towne of Syene vnto the bouers of the Gyzians lande: so that in fourty yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of catel go there, neyther shall it be inhabited. I wyl make the lande of Egypte to be desolate among other waste countreys, and her cities to lye vpon deserte fourty yeres amonge other deserte cities: And I wyl scatere the Egyptians among the heythens and nations, and strowe them in the landes about.

Agayne: thus sayeth the Lord God: when the .xl. yeres are expyred, I wyl gather the Egyptians together agayne, out of the nacions, among whom they were scatred, & wyl byng the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Parthures theyr owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shall be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalt them selues about the hey-then: for I wyl so mynyshe them that they shall nomoze rule the heythens. They shall nomoze be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther pro-saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath made his host, with great traualle and labour to come before Tyre that euery deed maye be balde, & euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre gyven neyther him nor his hoost any rewarde, for great traualle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: behold, I wyl geue the lande in Egypte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, that he may take away al her substance, robbe her robbyes, & spoyle her spoyle to pay his host theyr wages wiche. I wyl geue him the lande of Egypte for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wyl I cause the house of Israel to growe forth, and open the mouth agayne among them: that they may knowe, how that I am the Lord.

Chapter.

The destruction of Egypt and of her cities in desertes.

The word of the Lord came more-ouer vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, prophesy & speake: thus sayth the Lord God. Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the day of the Lord is come: the darke daye of the houre is at hande. the swerde cometh vpon Egypte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacions are destroyed, the Gyz-ians lande shall be asrayed: yea the Gyzians land Libia and Libia, al theyr comen people, & Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thorow the swerde.

Thus sayth the Lord: The maynteyners of the lande of Egypte shall fall, the pyde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the towne of Syene: they shall be slayne downe wiche swerd sayeth the Lord God: amonge other desolate countreys they shall be made desolate, among other waste cities they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, when I hyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when al her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers go forth from me in shypes, to make the care-lesse Gyzians asrayed, and sozowe shall come vpon them accordyng to the daye of Egypte for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egypte thorow the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon. He and his people with hym: yea, and the cruell ty-rautes of the heythens shall be brought to de-stroye the lande. They shall draue oute theyr swertes vpon Egypte, and fylle the lande full of slayne men. I wyl drye vpon theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therein, I wyl destroye thorow the enemyes. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl de-stroye the ydolles, and byng the ymages of Aoph to an ende. There shall nomoze be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulness wyl I sende into the Egyptians lande. As for Parthures, I wyl make it desolate, and hyndle a fyre in soan the cytie. So, I wyl punyshe and poure my wathful indignation vpon Sin wiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substance of Alexandria wyl I destroye, and hyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greute heynesse, Alexandria shall be rooted out, and Aoph shall haue daye sozowe. The best men of Heliopolis and Bubaste shall be slayne with the swerd, and carryed awaye captiue. At Caphtan the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the sceptre of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power

shall have an ende. A cloude shall cover her, and her daughters shall be ledde a waie into captivity. Thus sayth I p[ro]ph[et] Egypt, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the eleuenth yere, vpon the thirtieth day of the first moneth, that the Lorde wo[r]de came vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I will breake the arme of Pharaos kynge of Egypt: and so, it shall not be bounde vnto be healed, neither shall any plaister be layd vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swerde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I will vpon Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, and breake his strong arme (yet is it but a broken one) & I will smyte the swerde out of his handes.

As for the Egyptians, I will scattere them among the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I will strengthe the arme of the kynge of Babylon, and geue him a swerde in his hande, but I will breake Pharaos arme so that he shall hold it before him p[ro]troussly like a wounded man.

¶ Pra. I will stablish the king of Babylons arme, and the armes of Pharaos shall fall downe that it may be knowne, that I am the Lorde which geue the kynge of Babylon my swerde in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon the land of Egypt, & that when I scattere the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, & strowe them in the landes about, they may knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The xxxi Chapter.

A composition of the propheticke of Pharaos with the p[ro]ph[et] of the Libanus. He p[ro]ph[et]eth a lyne betwixt them to the end both.

Moreouer, it happened in the eleuenth yere, the first daye of the thirde moneth, that the wo[r]de of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatness? Beholde, I will washe like a Cedar tree vpon the mount of Libanus with sayre b[ra]nches: so thyke, that he gaue shadowe & shote out very hye: hys toppes reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set hym vp an hye. Rounde about the roses of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sent out hys lytel ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde.

Therefore was he hyer then al the trees of the felde and thowowe the multitude of waters that he sent fro hym, he obeyned many longe b[ra]nches. All foules of the ayre made thei[n] nestes in his b[ra]nches: vnder his bowes gendered al the beastes of the felde, & vnder his shadow dwelre al people. Fawse & bewtiful was he in his greatnes: in the length of hys b[ra]nches, for his rote stode by the great waters, no Cedar tree might hyde hym. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyere tree like his b[ra]nches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

¶ Al the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his bewty, so sayre & goodly had I made hym w[ith] the multitude of hys b[ra]nches. In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God had enuie at hym.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God, for somoch as he hath lye vpon hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppes into the cloudes, and lenger his berre in p[ro]uise in hys hyghnes, I will deliuer him in to the handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, whiche shall rote hym out. Accordyng to his wychednes I will cast hym away, & enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghty men of the heathen shall so scatter hym, that hys b[ra]nches shall lye vpon all moystaynes, and in al vales his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde & sozowen out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shall go from hys shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shall lye vpon hym, and all the wyld beasts of the felde shall go aboute amonge his b[ra]nches so that from densio[n]ed, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppes vnto the cloudes, neyther shall anye tree of the water stonde so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they al be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I will cause lamentacion to be made, I will couer the depe vpon hym, I will stau[n]che his floudes, & the great waters shall be restrained. I will cause Libanus to be sozowful for hys sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I will make the heathen make at the sounde of his fall when I cast hym downe to hell, with them that descend into the p[ro]p[ter]. Al the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and al they that are planted vpon the waters shall mourne w[ith] hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hel w[ith] hym, vnto them that be slayne w[ith] the swerde, whiche dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To whom shall thou be likened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the erth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vntreucciled, w[ith] them that be slayne w[ith] the swerde. Euen thus is it w[ith] Pharaos and al hys people, sayth the Lorde God.

The p[ro]ph[et] is commaunded to denaile Pharaos the kynge of Egypt. He p[ro]ph[et]eth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt thowowe the kynge of Babylon.

In the eleuenth yere, the first daye of the twelenth moneth, the wo[r]de of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, & say vnto him: I arte reputed as a Lyon of the heathen, & as a whalefyre in the see. Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters w[ith] thy fere and stampst in thei[n] floudes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will spye me net oute the, namely, a great multitude of people, thei shall dyspue the into my p[ar]ne, for I will cast the vnto the lande: and let the lye vpon the felde that all the foules of the ayre maye lye vpon the. I will geue all the beastes of the felde p[ro]uough of the. Thy flebbe I will cast vpon the hylls, and fyll the vales w[ith] thy byghnesse. I will water the lande lande with the abundance of the waters, euen to the mountaynes, and the ground shall be full of thy blood. Tellen thou out, put out. I will conuer the braut, and make her barren againe. I will spredde a cloude ouer the mount, and the moone shall not giue her light. All the lightnes of heauen will I put out ouer the, and bringe darkenesse vpon thy lande, saith the Lord God.

I will trouble the heetes of many people, when I bringe thy destruction amonge the heythen and countreys, whom thou knowest not. Psea I will make manye people with the; hynges so astrayde thowwste, that they; heer shall stand vp, when I make my swerde at they; faces.
Morrow shall they be astonied, euerie man in himselfe, at the daye of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lord God, the kyng of Babylons swerde shall come vpon the, with y swerdes of the worshes will I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty among the Gentiles shall waite for the proude pompe of Egypt, and bringe downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypt will I destroye, that they shall come nomore vpon y waters, so that neyther mans foote nor beastes clawe shall stirre them any more. Then will I make they; wapes depe, and cause their floudes to runne yke opir, sayth the Lord God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countrey with al that is therein, shall be layd waite, and when I smyte al them which dwell in it, that they maye knowe that I am the Lord.
This is the mourninge that the daughters of the heythen shall make. Psea, a sorowe and lame racion shall they take vp vpon Egypte, and al her people, sayth the Lord God

D In the xiiij. yeare, the xv. daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: Take vp a lamnation vpon the people of Egypt, & cast the downe: yea them I say, & the myghty people of the hepten also euen to them: that dwell beneath: and with them that go downe into y<sup>e</sup> graue. Downe (how saye forer thou be) & lay the with y<sup>e</sup> vncircumcised.
Amonge those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye. To the swerde is she already de-liuered: therfore plucke downe to the grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghty worthies shall speake to him out of the hel: to his helpers that be gone downe and lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

E Thus is there also with his companion, and they graues rounde ab out, whiche were slayne and sell all with the swerde, whose graues Ie helpde hym in the lower pytte. His commens are buried rounde aboute his graue, all togyther wounded and slayne with the swerde, whiche men afoze tyme brought seare into the lande of the Iyungne.

There is Clam also wyth all his people, & they graues round about: which al being wolded & slayne with the sword are gone downe vncircised vnder the earth, wher the neuer theles somtyme by ought fraie into the lande of the lyving: for y<sup>e</sup> which they beare their name, w<sup>ch</sup> the order that be gone downe to the graue.

They buryall in gburn them, and all they people, amonge them that be slayne. They gra nd one wounde about all them whiche be wite tunished, and with them that be slayne theiow the swerde: for seynge that in tymes past, they made the land of the Ipyng a frefed, they must nowe beare theyr owne shame, with them that goe home to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Oseph hallio and Tubal, and they people, and they graues round aboute. These all are among the vncircumcised, and them thou shalt slay wth the sword, because as yettyme they made the lande of the Iuynges a fraye.

Should not they then lye also among / worthes & vncircumcised gyantes / which wethers Weapons are gone downe to hel whose swerdes are layed vnder their heades. whole wickednes is vpon thes bones: bycause that as wothers they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyving. Yea, among the vncircumcised shall thou be destroyed, and lye with them that perished thorowe the swerde.

There is Plande of + Edom wif her kinges and princes also, which with they strength are layed by them that were slayne wpeh f Edward. yea, among the vncircumcised, and them which are gone do wne into the pytte. Wozeouer, there be al the princes of the north, wpeh all the ap-donians, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With theyr feare and strenght they are come to confuſion, and lye there vncircuſed among choſe that be ſlayne with the ſwerde, and beare theyr owne ſhame, with them ſe be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe when Iſharao ſeech this, he ſhalbe comforted ouer al his people, that is ſlayne with the ſwerde, both Iſharao and al his hooff. ſayth ſe Lozde God For I haue giuen my ſtreit in the lande of the Iſrue. But Iſharao and al his people ſhall lye amonge the vncircuſed and amonge them that be ſlayne with ſe ſwerde ſayth ſe Lozde God.

The Father out the office of a cure that preachers the Gospel. He strengtheneth them that dyspneic, and bel deneth them with the promise of mercy. The word of the Lawe against the remnant of the people, against the makers of the wordes of the prophete.

Gayn, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou son of man speake to the children of thy people, and tell them: When I send a watche vpon a land, of the people of the lande take a man of theyr countrey, and set hym to be theyr watcheman, the same man (when he seeth the swerde come vpon the lande) shal blowe the trumpet and warne the people.

¶ If a man now heare the noyse of the trom-pet, and wyl not be warned, and the sward be com-mande take hym away, his blood shal be upon his owne head: say he heede the sounde of the trom-pet, and wolde not take heede, therfore his blood be upon hym. But if he wyl receyue warning, he shall save his lyfe.

A gayne, if the watchman is the sword come and the we is not with the trumpet, so that the people

people is not warned: yf the ſwearde come then and take any man from amonge them: the ſame ſhall be taken awaye in hys owne ſpynne, but his blood wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

* And nowe (O thou ſonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the houſe of Iſrael: that where as thou heareſt anpe thyng oute of my mouth, thou maſt warne them on my behalfe. ¶ I ſape vnto the wyched: thou wyched, thou ſhalt ſurely dye: and ſpynest him not warning, that he may beware of hys vngodly waye: then ſhall the wyched dye in his owne ſpynne, but hys blood wyll I requyre of thy hande. Reuerſeſſe, yf thou warne the wyched of his waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyl not be turned from it, then ſhall he dye bycauſe of his ſyn, but thou ſhalt deliuered thy ſoule.

¶ Therefore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake vnto the houſe of Iſrael. Pea ſay thus. Our offences and ſynnes lye vpon vs, and we are corrupte in them, how ſhulde we then be reſtozed vnto lyfe. Tell them: * As truly as I lyue ſayth the Lorde God, I haue no pleaſure in the death of the wyched, but moche rather that ſ wyched turne from hys waye, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes: O ye of the houſe of Iſrael, whither ſhall ye dye.

¶ Thou ſonne of man, tell the chyldren of the people. * The ryghteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhall not ſaue him, when ſoener he turneth a waye vnfaythfull ye. Agayne, the wychedneſſe of the wyched ſhall not hurte him, when ſoener he conuerteth from his vngodlyneſſe.

¶ And the ryghteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhall not ſaue his lyfe, when ſoener he ſpyneth. ¶ I ſay vnto the ryghteous, that he ſhall ſurely lyue, and ſo be truſt to his owne righteouſneſſe, and do ſpynne, then ſhall hys ryghteouſneſſe be nomore thought vpon, but in ſ wychedneſſe that he hath done he ſhall dye. * Agayne, ¶ I ſape vnto the wyched, thou ſhalt ſurely dye: and ſo he turne from hys ſynnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryght. In ſomuche that the ſame wyched man giueth ſ pledge agayne, reſtozeth that he had taken a waye by robbye, walketh in the commandmentes of lyfe, and doth no wrong. Then ſhall he ſurely lyue, and not dye. Pea, the ſynnes that he hath done, ſhall neuer be thought vpon. ¶ For in ſomoch as he doth newe the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he ſhall lyue. ¶ And yet the chyldren of thy people ſape: Truly, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, but they lye, where as they owne waye is rather vnrigh.

¶ When the ryghteous turneth from his ryghteouſneſſe, and doth the thyng that is wyched, he ſhall dye therfore. But yf the wyched turne from his wychedneſſe, doinge the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he ſhall lyue therfore. ¶ Yet ye ſay * the waye of the Lorde is not equal: O ye houſe of Iſrael

In the tweluerth yere, the fyfth daye of the ſyth moneth of our captiuitie, it happened, that one which was fled out of Jeruſalem, came vnto me, and ſayde: the cytie is deſtroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the eue ſayinge of the ſonne of man, which was cleaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, but yll the morninge that he came to me: pea, he opened my mouth. ¶ So that I was nomore domine. ¶ Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me, and ſayd: ¶ Thou ſonne of man, theſe that dwell in the waſted lande of Iſrael, ſay: Abrahams was but one man, and he had the lande in poſſeſſion: nowe are we many, and the land is giue vs to poſſeſſe alſo. ¶ And therfore tell them: ¶ Thus ſapeth the Lorde God: * In the blood haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyfte vp vnto idols, and haue your blood: ſhall ye then haue the lande in poſſeſſion.

* ¶ Then ſhall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waſte and deſolate bycauſe of all they abominations, that they haue wrought. ¶ And thou ſonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles, and in the dozes of they houſes, ſayinge one to an other. Come, lette vs heare what word is gone forth from the Lorde. ¶ Theſe come vnto the, after ſ maner of a great people: ¶ pea as who ſayth they were my people, they lye downe before the, & heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter, ¶ for in their mouthes they make a liſt of them, and they berke goeth after they owne courtous incre, and as a balet that hath a ſwete tune, and is pleaſant to ſynge, ſo ſhalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes ſhall they heare, but they wyl not do thereafter. ¶ Wilt this cometh to paſſe (for ſo: it cometh in dede) then ſhall they knowe, that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

¶ The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ Agayne the ſonne of man ſayeth that deſpoyle the ſtocke of Chanaan, and ſake theyr ſonne. ¶ The Lorde ſapeth that he wyl vſe his diſperſed ſtocke, and gather them to gyther. ¶ He reprobeth the malice of certayn of the ſtocke the promyſed the recte wyſe: ¶ the Lorde ſapeth that he wyl bringe peace.

¶ And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, ſaying: ¶ thou ſonne of man, prophete againſt the ſhepherdes of Iſrael, prophete and ſpeake vnto them. ¶ Thus ſayth the Lorde God. ¶ Wo be vnto the ſhepherdes of Iſrael, that fede them ſelues. ¶ Shulde not the ſhepherdes fede the flockes.

¶ Ye haue eaten vp the ſat, ye haue clothed you with the wol: the beſt fed haue ye ſlayne, but the ſtocke haue ye not nouerſhed. ¶ The weakke haue ye not holden vp: the ſycke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde togyther, the outcaſt haue ye not brought agayne: the loſt haue ye not ye not sought, but shall they be sought? ruled the. Thus are they sought and then without a shepherd: yea, all the beasts of the felde deuoure them, and they go astray.

B My shepe go wandryng upon all mountaynes, and vpon every hye hyl: yea, they be scattered abrode in all felde, and there is no man that careth for them, or seeketh after them. Therefore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue forsomuche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beasts of the felde, hauing no shepherd: so I charge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues only, and not my shepe. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde O ye shepherdes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I my selfe wyll vpon the shepherdes: and requyre my shepe from theyr handes, and make them cease from fedynge of my shepe: yea, the shepherdes shall fede them selues nomore. For I wyll deliuer my shepe out of theyr mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayth the Lorde God:

John 1. 2.
1. pet. 2. 2

* Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepherd among the flocke seeketh after the shepe that are scattered abrode, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloudy and darke day. I wyll byynge them oute from all people, and gather them together out of all landes. I wyll byynge them into their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the country. I wyll fede them in right good pastures, & vpon the hye moctaynes of Israel shall theyr foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

1. pet. 2. 2
1. pet. 2. 2

I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, & byynge them to theyr rest, sayeth the Lorde God. * Suche as be lost, wyll I seke: suche as go astraye, wyll I byynge agayne: suche as be wounded, wyll I bynde vp: such as be weake wyll I make strong, suche as be fat & stronge, those wyll I roote out, and fede them with the thyng that is lawfull.

E And as for you (O my shepe) sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers and the goates. Was it not ynough for you to eate vpon the good pasture, but ye must treade downe & resydue of your pasture with your feet also: Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye must trouble the resydue also with your feet?

Thus my shepe must be sayne to eate the thyng, that ye haue troden downe with your feet, and to drynke it, that ye with your feet haue defyled. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatte shepe from the leane: for somoche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and runne vpon them with your hornes, so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattered them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yea, I wyll discerne one shepe from another. I wyll raple vp vnto them one only shep-herde, even my seruante * Dauid, he shall fede them, and he shall be theyr shepherd. I the Lorde wyll be theyr God, and my seruante * Dauid shall be theyr kynge. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Moreover, I wyll make a couenant of peace with them, and bynne all euyl beasts out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woodes. Good fortune and prosperite wyll I gyue them and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyl. * I prosperous shalwe and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wood may byynge forth theyr frutes, and the ground her encrease. They shall be safe in theyr lande, and shall knowe that I am the Lorde, which haue broken their yoke, and deliuered them oute of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall nomore be spoyled of & heyden, nor deuoured with the beasts of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffer nomore hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reproche of the heyden any more. Thus shall they vnderstande, that I the Lorde theyr God am with them, & that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayeth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke, & ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayth the Lorde God.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The destruction that shall come on the hyls, that is on the Iudumans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

Moreover, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mounte * Seer, prophete vpon it, and say vnto it. Thus sayth the Lorde God:

Beholde (O thou mounte Seer) I wyll vpon the. I wyll reache out myne hande ouer thee: yea, waste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cyties wyll I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * For so moche as thou bearest an olde enemytys agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and haste drawn the chyldren of Israel vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for theyr synne. Therefore, as truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: I wyll prepare the vnto blood: yea, blood shall folowe vpon the: * I charge thou layest wayte for blood, therefore shall blood persecute the. Thus wyll I make the mount Seer desolate and waste, and byynge to passe, that there shall no man go thither, nor come from thence. My mountaynes wyll I fyll with his slayne me: thy hylles, valleyes, and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I wyll make the a perpetual wildernesse, so that thy cyties shall not returne to theyr former estate, that ye may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

And because thou hast sayde: what, bothe these nacions, and bothe these landes must be myne, & I wyll haue them in possession: where as the Lorde was there. Therefore thus sayeth the

For the Lord God as truly as I live, I will humble you according to thy wrath and jealousy. I have known among them, how I have punished the pea, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord have heard all the despytfull wordes, whiche thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, saying: Lo, they are made waste, and given vs to deuoure. Thus with your mou-thes ye haue made your boast agaynst me, yea, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue heard all together. Whereunto thus sayeth the Lord God: to the loye of all the worlde will I make the waste. * And lyke as thou O mountaine wast glad, because the herbage of the house of Israel was destroyed: even so will I do vnto the also, that whole Edom shalbe destroyed, and know, that I am the Lord.

Chapter. lxxvi.

C De promysed the despayraunce of the Gentiles vnto Israel. For benefices done vnto the Gentiles are to be ascribed to the mercye of God, & not vnto thei deseruings. God requirith our deuotion, that we may walke in his commandementes.

I Thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & saye: * Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God by cause your enemy hath sayde vpon you: A ha, the hye euellasyng places are now become ours, prophesye therfore, and speake, thus sayeth the Lord God: Being ye be wasted and troden downe on every side, and become a possion vnto the residue of the Gentiles: which haue brought you into mens mouthes, and vnto an euill name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lord God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyce of woloerues and desolate cities, which are spoyle: A id had in derision on every side, amonge the residue of the hepthen: Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lord God.
In the fyre of my jealousy haue I taken a deuice agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, and agaynst Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possiession: which also reioysed from thei whole herte with a despytfull sto-make, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

I Prophesye therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleys and dales thus sayeth the Lord God: Be-holde, this haue I deuised in my jealousy and re-uisible wrath. For somoche as ye haue suffered re-proche of the hepthen, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God. I haue sworne that the Gentiles which ly about you, shall beare thei confusion thelues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shote out your braynches, & bring forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that it wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I tourne me, that ye maye be tyllid and sowed.

I I will sende you moche people, which shall be of all the house of Israel, the cyties shall be inhalited, and the decayed places shall be repaired a-gayne. I will multiplye you with moche people and cattell: which shall increase and bring frute: I will restyle you also to your olde estate, and I will be your more kindnes then euer ye had before whereby ye shall knowe that I am the Lord. Yea people will I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue thei possiession, and I shall be thei encheptance, so that thou shalt nomore be with them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as they saye vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of the people: therfore thou shalt eate nomore men, neither destroy the people any more sayeth the Lord God. And I will not suffer the, for to beare thyne owne confusion, amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the re-proche of the nacpons, nor cast out thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lord God.

Whereouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, when I house of Israel dwelt vpon thei owne ground, they despyled the selues with thei owne wapes and ymaginations: so that in my sight thei wape was lyke the uncleines of a menstruous woman wherefore, I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloode that they had shed in the lande, and because of thei ydolles, where with they had despyled them selues. I sca-tered them also amonge the hepthen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. And ydng to thei wapes, and after thei owne inuencyons, so dyd I punish them.

Now when they were gone vnto the hepthen, and come in amonge them, they dythouterd my holy name: so that it was iaped of them: I rethel the people of God, and must go out of thei owne lande. Then spared I my holy name where the house of Israel had dyshonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therfore tel the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake which ye dis-honoured amonge the hepthen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I will halowe my great name agayne which amonge the Gentiles is euill spoken of: for ye your selues haue dyshonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before thei eyes, sayeth the Lord God.

As for you, I wyl take you from amonge the hepthen, and gather you together out of all coutries, and bypage you agayne into your owne lande. * Then will I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yea, from all your vn-cleannes, and fro all your ydols shall I cleanse you A newe herte also will I gyue you, and a newe spyrte wyl I put vnto you. As for that stonye herte, I wyl take it out of your bodie, and gyue you a fleshy herte. I wyl gyue my spiryte among you, and cause you to walke in my comman-dementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyll them.

And sope shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to your fathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. I will helpe you oute of all

of all your vncleannes. I will call for the come, and will encrease it, and let you have no hunger. I will multiplye the frutes of the trees, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall haue no more reppose of hunger among the hepten. Then shall ye remembre your owne wyched wayes, and your ymaginacions, whiche were not good: so that ye shall thynke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abominacions.

S But I will not do this for your sakes (sayth the Lord God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Whereouer, thus sayth the Lord God: What time as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cities to be occupied agayne, & will repaie the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shall be buylded agayne, which afore tyme lay waste in the sight of all them that went by. Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voydes, desolate & broken downe cities are now strong and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the hepten that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lord, whiche repaie that that was broke downe, and plant agayne that, that was made waste. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and will do it in dede.

Ier. l. 4. Thus sayeth the Lord God: I will yet ones be found agayne of the house of Israel, & do this for them: * I shall encrease them as a flocke of men. Like as the holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in shepseolcumpne feastes: so shall also the wyld waste cities be filled with flockes of men: & they shall knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The prophete sayth the bynging agayne of the people, being in captiuitie. He sheweth the vision of the ten tribes with the two.

In the hand of the Lord came vnto me, and carped me out in the spirit of the Lord, and let me downe in a playne felde, that lay full of bones, & heled me round about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde were very many, and merueylous dyde also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones and speake vnto them. Ye dyde bones, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto these bones: Behold, I wil put bryeth vnto you, that ye maye lyue: I wil geue you sinowes and make flesh growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: & so geue you bryeth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe that I am the Lord.

S. 13. So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophesying, there came a nofle and a great mocion, so that the bones ran euery one to an other. Now whil I had looked, behold, they had sinowes, and flesh grewe vpon them: and about they were couered with skynne, but there was no bryeth in them. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecy thou toward the wynde: prophecy and speake to the wynde.

Thus sayth the Lord God: Come (O thou syre) from the house wyndes, and blowe vpon these bones: that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied as he had commaunded me: then came the wynd into them, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vp vpon theyr feet, a merueylous great sort.

Whereouer, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dyed vpon, our hope is gone, we are cleane cutte of. Therefore prophecy thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, I will open your graues (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, and bynge you into the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your graues, and bynge you out of them. My synne also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord which haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke, & wyte vpon it. Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Israel his companions. Then take an other stycke and wyte vpon it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the housholde of Israel his companions. And then take bothe these together in thyne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Nowe ys the chyldren of the people saye vnto the: wyle I not thewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answer: thus sayth the Lord God. Behold, * I wil take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his fellows, and will put them to the stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke, and they shall be one in my hande: and the two styckes whereupon thou wytest, shall be one in thyne hande, that they maye se, and shall saye vnto them.

Thus sayth the Lord God: beholde, I wil take away the chyldren of Israel from amonge the hepten, vnto whome they be gone, & will gather them together on euery syde, and bynge them agayne into theyr owne lande: yea, I wil make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall nomore be two peoples from henceforth, neyther be deuyded into two kyngdomes: they shall also despyle them selues nomore with theyr abominacions, ydols, and all theyr wyched doinges. I will helpe them out of all theyr dwellynge places, wherein they haue synned: and will so cleanse them, that they shall be my people, and I theyr God.

Dauid my seruante shall be theyr kyng, and they all shall haue one shepderde only. They shall walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shall they bothe kepe and fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruante, where as your fathers also haue dwelt yea, euen in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, and theyr chyldren chyldren dwell for euer more, and my seruante Dauid shall be theyr euer lasting prince. Whereouer, I will make a bond of peace peace wyth them, whype shall be vnto them an euerlastyng covenante. I wyll settie them among them for euermoze. * My dwelling shall be with them: yea, I wyll be theyr God, and they shall be my people. Thus the hepten also shall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holpe maker of Israel, when my sanctuarpe shall be among the for euermoze.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The prophete that Gog and Magog shall come wyth an appointed host into the lande of promyse. Theyr intent. He sheweth that the coming of Gog was before prophesied of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

Ad the woide of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou son of man, turne thy face toward Gog lande of Magog, which is the cheefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophete agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou cheefe prince of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll turne the aboute, and put a byt in thy chaues: I wyll bypunge the forth and all thy host, both horse and horsemen, whiche be all weaponed of the best syllyon, a great people, that handle altogethyer speares, shylles, and swerdes: the Perles, Horiens, and with them the Libians, which all beare shylles and helmettes: Sommer and all his hostes, the house of Chogozma out of the north quarters, and all his hostes: yea and moche people wyth the.

Therfore prepare the, sette thy selfe in aray wyth all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou theyr defence. After many dayes thou shalt be vylsted, and in the latter yeres thou shalt come into f lande that hath bene destroyed wyth the swerde, and nowe is replenyshed agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whype haue longe lyen waste: yea, they be brought out of the nacpions, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come by lyke a storme wyther, to couer the land, and as it were a darke cloude, thou with all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people wyth the.

Wherfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagin mischefe, and saye: I wyll by to yonder playne lande, sepunge theyr syt at ease, & dwell so safely: for they dwell all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor doores to spoyle them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon their so wel inhabited wildernesses agaynst that people, that is gathered togyther from amonge the hepten, whiche haue gotten cartell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba & Dedan, and the merchants of Charis with al theyr worthies say vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people togyther, because thou wilt spoyle: to take syluer and golde, to carpe awaye cartell and good, and to haue a great praye?

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophete, and saye vnto Gog. Thus sayth the Lorde God: In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe, and shalt come from thy place out of f north partes: thou and moche people wyth the, whype shal be vpon hostes, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable hoste. Yea, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the land. Thus shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyll bypunge the vp into my lande, that the hepten maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before theyr eyes.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou arte he of whom I haue spoken aforetyme by my seruantes the prophetes of Israel which proph. cied in those dayes and yeres, that I shulde bypunge the vpon them. At the same tyme when Gog cometh vp into f lande of Israel (sayth the Lorde God) shall my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousye and hote displeasure I haue deuised* that there shall be a great trouble in the lande of Israel at that tyme. The very fishes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

The shylles also shall be turned vpsydedowne, the steyres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synke to the grounde. I wyll call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes (sayth f Lorde God) so that euery mans swerde shall be vpon an other. With pestilence and blood wyll I punyssh hym, storme rayne and hable stones, fyre, and byrmstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all his heape, yea, and vpon all that great people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnified, honoured, and knowe among the hepten: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

The xxxix. Chapter.

The sheweth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and his host. He prophesied that Gog and his company shall be deuoured of byrdes and beasts, wherof the house of Israel is made: theyr bringyng agayne from captiuitie is promysed.

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, prophete agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O Gog, thou cheefe prince at Mesech and Tubal, I wyll vpon the, and I wyll bypunge the wyth speares and lead the from the north partes, & bypunge the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wyll smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy ryght hand. Thou wyth all thyne heape, and all the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wyll I grue the vnto foules & wyde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vpon the felde: for euery I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

Into Magog, and amonge them that lye so cecles in the ples: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I wyll make also f name of my holynes to be knowe amonge my people of Israel: and I wyll not let my holp name be euill spoken of any moze: but the very hepten also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holpe one of Israel: Beholde, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. This is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

W. M. They

They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and see fyre vpon the heaped and burne them: sheldes and speares, bowes and arrows, bylles & clubbes, seuen yeares shall they be burninge thereof, so that they shall elles burne speches from the fyre, neither haue nede to be w doone out of the wood. For they shall haue weapons ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoiled them, sayeth the Lorde God. At the same tyme

E I will I gure vnto Sog, a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valley wherethowen men go from the east to fferwarde. Those that transpire therby, shall stop the noses for stynche. There shall Sog & all hye people be buried: & it shall be called the valley of y people of Sog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the lande. Yea, all the people of flande shall bury them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be deede buriers, euer going thowen the lande, and appoynt the certayne places to burie those in, which remaine vpon the felde, that the lande may be cleansed. Fro ende to ende shall they sche, and that seuen monethes long. Now those that go thowen the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, tyll the deede buriers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Sog. And the name of the cytye shall be called hamonah (that is a multitude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

E And thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God. Speake vnto al the soules & euery byrde, yea, & to all the wilde beastes of the felde, braye you together & come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate fleshe, and drynke bloode. Ye shall eate the flesh of the worthyes, and drynke the bloode of the pyners of y lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be al slayne at Balan. Eate the fatte pour belly full, and drynke bloode, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, wherch I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table with horses and stronge horsemen, with captaynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lorde God.

I will byynge my glory also amonge the Getyles, that all the hepten maye se my iudgement, that I haue kept, and my hande wherch I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israel may knowe how that I am the Lorde their God from that daye forth. And the hepten shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde into captiuitie: it was for theyr wychednesse sake, because they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hydde my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of theyr enemyes, that they myght all be slayne with the swerde. Accordynge to theyr vncleynesse and vnfaithfull dealynge, so haue I entreated them, and hydde my face from them.

S Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now will I byynge agayne the captiues of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, & be glorified by my holy names sake. All their confusions shall cease that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye, and so safelye shall they dwell in theyr lande, that noman shall make them a frayd. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of theyr enemyes landes, and am prayled in them before many hepten: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God, whiche suffered them to be ledde into captiuitie amonge the hepten, but now haue I brought them agayne into theyr owne lande, & not lette one of them ponder.

After that will I hyde my face nomore from them: but will poure out my spyrite vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lorde God.

The .xl. Chapter.

The rebuilding of the cytye of the temple that was to come, is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the .xxv. yere of our captiuitie in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the .xiii. yere after that the cytye was smytten downe: the same daye came the bande of the Lorde vpon me, and carped me forthe: euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and let me downe vpon a meruylous hye mountayn wherupon there was a buylding (as it had ben of a cytye) towarde the north.

Ther he carped me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, which had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meterod also. He stode in the doore, and said vnto me: thou sonne of man, marke well with thynne eyes, hearken to with thynne eares, and fasten it in thynne herte, whatsoever I shall shewe the, for to present that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hider. And whatsoever thou seest thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the meterodde that he had in his hande was fyre cubytes longe, and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldynge, which was a meterodde, and the heygth also a meterod. Then came he vnto the east doore, and went vp the staires, & measured the postes of the doore, wherof euery one was a meterodde thicke. Euery chambze was a meterod longe & brode betwene the chambzes were fyre cubytes. The post of the doore within the poiche, was one meterodde. He measured also the poiche of the innermer doore, whiche conteyned a meterodde. Then measured he the entrye of the doore, that contained eght cubytes, & his pillars two cubytes and thys entrye stode inwarde.

The chambzes of the doore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pillars also that stode of boche the sydes, were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydenesse of the doore, whiche was ten cubytes, and the heygth of the doore thytene cubytes. The edge before the chambzes was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambzes fyre cubytes wyde of eether syde. He measured the the doze from the rydye of one chambze to another, whose wydenes was .xxv. cubytes, and one doze stode agaynst an other. He made pylers also .lx. cubytes hie, rounde about the court doze. Beside the inward part vnto the foze entrie of the innermoze doze, were fifty cubytes. The chabzys & theyr pylers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze had fyve wyndowes. So had fyve entres also, whose wyndowes went round about wyth. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into fyve court where as were chambzes and paved woyses, made in the foze court round about .xx. chambzes vpon one paved woyshe. Now the paved woyshe was a longe beside fyve dozes, and fyve was the lower paved woyshe. After this he measured the bredth from the lower doze, vnto the innermoze court of the outsyde, whiche had an hundred cubytes vpon the east and the north parte. And the doze in the uttermost court towarde the north, measured he after the length and breadth: hys the chambzes also on either syde, with his pylers and foze entres: which had euen the measure of the fyft doze. His heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes, his wyndowes and porches with his date trees, had euen like measure as the doze toward the east: there were seven steppes to go vp vpon and theyr porche before them. Now the doze of the inner court stode streight ouer agaynst the doze, that was toward the North east. From one doze to another he measured .c. cubytes.

D After that, he brought me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward fyve south: whose pylers and porches he measured, these hadde the fyft measure: and wyth theyr porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyfte wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. wyth steppes to go vp vpon: his porch stode before with his pylers and date trees on either syde. And fyve doze of the inner court stode toward the South, and he measured from one doze to another hundred cubytes. So he brought me into the innermoze court, thowoe the doze of the southsyde which he measured: and it had the measure also sayde. In lyke maner hys chambzes pylers and foze entres, had euen the foze sayd measure also. And he had with hys porches rounde about wyndowes of .l. cubytes heygth, and .xxv. cubytes brode. The porches rounde aboute were .xxv. cubytes longe, and fyve cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the uttermost court vpon his pylers, there were date trees and eght steppes to go vp vpon.

E He brought me also into the innermost court vpon the eastsyde, and measured the doze accordyng to the measure also sayd, his chambzes, pylers and porches had euen the same measure as the fyfte had: and wyth hys porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes, hys porche reached vnto the uttermost court: hys pylers also had date trees on either syde, and .viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doze, and measured it, whiche also had the foze sayd measure. His chambzes, pylers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was .l. cubytes, and the bredth .xxv. His pylers stode towarde the utmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and .viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambze also whose entraunce was at the doze pylers, and there the burnt offeringes were washed.

In the doze porche there stode on either syde fyve two tables for the slaughteryng: to slay the burnt offeringes: syn offeringes, and trespass offeringes thereupon. And on the outsyde as men go forth to the north doze, there stode two tables. fyve tables stode on either syde of the doze, that is vnto tables, wherupon they slaughtered. fyve tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offeringes of a cubyte and an halfe longe and brode, & one cubyte hie: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornaments whiche were used to the buente and slayne offeringes: when they were slaughtered. And within there were doles fyve fingers brode, fastened rounde about to hange fleshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offeryng fleshe. On the outsyde of the innermoze doze were the fyngers chambzes in the inward court beside the North doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also beside the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambze on the southsyde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytacyon: and this toward the north is the prestes that wayte vpon the alter: whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch that do seruice before the Lorde in trade of the chyldzen of Levi. So he measured the foze court, which had in length an hundred cubytes, and a smoch in bredth by the four corners. Now the alter stode before the house. And he brought me to the foze entrie of the house, and measured the walles by the entrie doze, which were fyve cubytes long on either syde. The thychenelle also of the doze on either syde, was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes: the bredth .xx. cubytes and vpon steppes went men vp to it, by the walles also were pylers on either syde one.

The despoition and decaye of buyldyng agaynst the temple and the other thynges thereto belongyng.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes whiche were of both sydes fyve cubytes thicke, accordyng to the widenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the doze on either syde fyve cubytes. He measured the length thereof, whiche conteyned fourty cubytes, and the bredth twentye. Then went he in and measured the doze postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it selfe was fyve cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was seven cubytes. He measured the length & bredth thereof, which were every one twenty cubites, before the temple.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the holpest of all he measured also the wall of the house, whiche was fyve cubytes. The chabzys & stode rounde about

about the house, were curtye one foure cubytes wyde: and one stode hard vnto another, wherof there were .xxiii. there stode pether beneath by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were, the hygher the wyder, and had steyppes thowre them rounde aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboute, that from the lowest, men might go to the hiest by the mydd chambres. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacyon of the syde chambres was a meterob, that is, vi. cubytes hye. The thynknesse of the syde wall wythoute, conteyned .v. cubytes, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

But wente the chalyces was the wydenesse, .xx. cubytes rounde aboute the house. The chambres doores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one doze was towarde the north, the other towarde the south: and the thynknesse of the out wall was .v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was separated towarde the west, was .lxx. cubytes wyde, the wall of the buyldynge was .v. cubytes thynke rounde aboute, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house, which was an .l. cubytes longe, and the separated buyldynge with the wall, were an .l. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house, and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an hundred cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyldynge before & behynde with the chambres vpon both the sydes, and it conteyned an .l. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the foze court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pylers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vnto the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer wyth boozdes: and thus was it aboute the dooze vnto the inmost house, & without also. Pea, the whole wall on euery syde, both within & without was syled ouer w great boozdes. There were Cherubins & date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixt two cherubins. One cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge asyde towarde the date tree, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde about in al the house. Pea, the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vpon aboute the dooze, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hye postes of the temple were four squared, & the fallpon of the Sanctuarpe was & euen as it appered vnto me afore in the vision. The table was of wood, .iii. cubytes hye, and .ii. cubytes longe: his corners, the length & the walles were of wood. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Lozde. The temple and the holpest of al had epyther of them two dozes, and euery doze had two lytle wyckettes, which were foinden in one vpon an order, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the walles, and a great thynke balde of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Vpon both the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes & date trees, hangynge beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

The .xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for the preches, and the holy thynges.

Then carryed he me out into the foze court towarde the north, and brought me into the chambres that stode ouer agaynst the back buyldynge northwarde which had the length of an hundred cubytes, whose doze turned towarde the north. The wydenesse conteyned .lxx. cubytes, ouer agaynst the .xx. cubites of the innermer court, & agaynst the paired worke that was in the court, beside al these thre there stode pylers one ouer agaynst an other. And before this chambres there was a walkynge place of .x. cubites wide, & within was a way of one cubyte wyde, and they doozes towarde the north. Thus the hiest chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest & myddlemoost of the buyldynge, for they bare chambres vpon chambres and stode the together one vpon an other, not hauing pylers like the foze court: therfore were they smaller then those beneath, & in the myddest to reken from the grounde vwarde.

The wall wout that stode by the chambres, towarde the vtermost court vpon the foze syde of the chambres, was .l. cubytes longe, for the length of the vtermost chambres in the foze court was .l. cubites also: but the length therof before the temple was an .x. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intrader of the east syde, wher by a man myght go into the out of the foze court thowre the thynke wal of the foze court towarde the east, ryght ouer agaynst the separated buyldynge: Before the same buyldynge vpon this syde there were chambres also, which had a way vnto them, lyke as the chambres of the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

They intrancer, fallpon, and dozes were also of the same maner. Pea, euen lyke as the other chambres doozes were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steyppes on the east syde there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambres towarde the north and south which stande before the back buyldynge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the preestes that do seruyce before the Lozde, must eate the moost holpe offerynge: and there must they laye the moost holy offerynge: meattofferynge, synofferynge, and trespasse offerynge: for it is an holy place. When the preestes come therein, they shall not go out into the foze court: but (seinge they be holpe) they shall leaue the clothes of theyr mynistracon, and put on other garmentes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thowre the east parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde wyth the meterobde, whych rounde aboute contayned .v. C. meterobdes: And the north syde measured he, which conteyned rounde aboute euen so moche. The other two two sydes also towarde the fourth and the west, whyche he measured, conteyned cyther of them fyue hundreded metredobes. So he measured all foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde about fyue hundreded metredobes longe, & as brode also whych separated the holy from the vnholy.

The xliii Chapter.

The seerth the gloire of God garnge into the Temple, from whence it had before departed. He meruoneth the poulsey of the chyliden of Israel, for the which they were confounded and broughte to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentance.

So he brought me to the doze that turneth towarde the east. Beholde then cameth the gloire of the God of Israel, from out of the east, whose voyce was like a great noyse of waters and the earth was lyghtened with his gloire. Hys sight to loke vpon was as lyke the spalte that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cite shuld haue ben destroyed: and lyke the vpsion that I sawe by the water of Eobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the gloire of the Lorde came into the house, thowowe the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp and brought me into the innermer courte, & beholde: the house was ful of the gloire of the Lorde.

I hearde one speakynge vnto me out of the doze: and there stode one by me, that sayd vnto me: O thou sonne of ma, this roume is my seat and the place of my foote steps, where as I wyll dwell amonge the chyliden of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomoze desyle my holy name: neyther they, nor they: kynge thowowe they: whozedomie, thowowe they: hye places, and thowowe dead bodyes of their kynge: whiche haue dupided they: thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thre holdes, and they: postes almost at my postes: and a wal betwixt me and them. Thus haue they despyled my holy name with they: abominacions. & they haue chyncted. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wyath. But nowe they shal put away their whozedomie, and the deed bodyes of they: kynge out of my sight, that I maye dwell amonge them for euermore.

Therefore O thou sonne of man shewe thou the howsholde of Israel a temple that they maye be ashamed of they: wychednesse and measure the shuldes an temple therat.

And when they be ashamed of al they: wozynges, then shewe them the fourme and fashyon of the temple, the comynge in, the goynge oute, al the maner and description therof. Yea, all the vyses and ordynances of it, that they maye heye & fulfyll all the fashpons and customes therof.

This is the description of the house. About vpon the mount rounde about al the corners, it shalbe the holpest of all. Beholde, that is the description and fashpon of the house. This is the measure of the altare, after the true cubyte: which is a spanne longer then an other cubyte. His botom in the myddst was a cubyte longe and wyde and the ledge that went rounde about it, was a spanne brode. This is the heygth of the altare. From the ground to the lower steps, the length is two cubytes: and the bredthe one cubyte: and from the lower stepes to the hygher, are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

The altare was foure cubytes hye, & from the outwarde vwarde stode foure hoznes, and it was fyue cubytes longe, and twelue cubites brode vpon the foure corners: the couernynge of the altare was fourtene cubytes longe and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute had halfe a cubyte, and the botome therof rounde aboute one cubyte: his steps stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayeth the Lorde God these are the ordynances and lawes of the altare in the daye when it is made to offre burnt offerings, and to spynkle bloode ther vpon. To the prestes, to the Leuites that be of the seed of Aboch: and treate be soze me to do me seruice, sayeth the Lorde God. Vnto these gyue thou a pong bulloche for a synne offering: and take the blood of hym, and spynkle his foure hoznes withal: & the foure corners of the altare couernynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute, here wyth shalte thou cleanse it, & reconple it. Thou shalt take the bulloche also of the synne offering, and burne hym in a senerall place without the Sanctuary. The nexte daye, take a goe buche, with oute blempe for a synne offering, to reconple the Altare wythall, lyke as it was reconpled wyth the bulloche.

Nowe when thou hast made it cleane, then offer a pong bulloche: without blempe, and a ramme oute of the flocke without blempe also. Offre them befoze the Lorde, and let the prest cast salt ther vpon, and giue them so vnto the Lorde for a burnt offering. Seuen dayes shalte thou bynne every daye a goe buche for synne. A pong bulloche and a ram of the flocke, bothe without blempe, shal they offre. Seuen dayes shal they reconple and cleanse the altare, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyed, then vpon the eyghte daye and so forth, the prestes shal offer they: burnt offerings and beith offerings vpon the altare: so I wyll be merciful vnto pou, sayeth the Lorde God.

The seerth what doze of the temple is sharte. He is commaunded to vwarde the people with they: offence. The vncircumcised in herte, and in the flesh. Whos are to be admitted to the seruice of the temple: and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wolde haue admytted into the holy place, and also they: offering.

After this he brought me agayne to the outwarde doze of the Sanctuare on the east syde & that was shute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me, this doze shalbe shil shut and not opened for any man to go thowowe it: but onely for the Lorde God of Israel. Yea, he shal go thowowe it, elles shal it be shute syl. The prestes hym selfe shal come thowowe it, that he maye cate byrade befoze the Lorde. At the portche shal he come in, and there shal he goo oute agayne. Then brought he me to the doze vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde the gloire of the Lorde fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face.

So the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, listen thys to they: perfe: beholde, and take take diligent heed to all that I will say: and the congregation all the ordinances of it: and all his law: and ponder well with them: and the coming in of the house and the going forth of the Sanctuary: and tell that obdurate household of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye have now done enough: all your abominations, saying, that ye have brought into my Sanctuary strangers, buying uncircumcised heathen and flesh, where the house of my Sanctuary is defiled, when ye offer me bread, fat, and blood.

Thus with all your abominations ye have broken my covenant, and not kept the holy ordinances of my Sanctuary: but let hepers of my Sanctuary, even after your own mind. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: of all the strangers that dwell among the children of Israel, no stranger whose heart and flesh is not circumcised, shall come within my Sanctuary: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe from me: and have disceyved the people of Israel with all cruelties, going after their idols: therefore shall they beare their own wickednes. Shuld they be set and ordeined to minister under the doors of the house of my Sanctuary? And to do service in the house: to slay burnt offerings and sacrifices for the people: to stand before them and to serve them, saying the service that they do them, is before their idols, and cause the house of Israel to stumble through their wickednes: For the which cause I have plucked out mine hande over them, sayeth the Lord God: so that now they must beare their own iniquity, and not so come nigh me to serve me with their priest hode, in my Sanctuary, and most holiest of all that they may beare their own shame and abominations, which they have done. Shuld I use them to be porters of the house, and to all the service that is done therein? But the priests, the Leuites, the sonne of Sadoch, that kept the holy ordinances of my Sanctuary, when the children of Israel were gone from me, shall come to me to do me service, to stand before me, and to offer me the fat and the blood: sayeth the Lord.

They shall go into my Sanctuary, and tread before my table: to do me service, and to waite vpon myne ordinances. Nowe when they go in at the doors of the innermost court: they shall put on linnen clothes, so that no wolle come vpon them: while they do service under the doors of the innermost court and within. They shall haue sayre linnen bonettes vpon their heedes, and linnen byches vpon their loynes, which in their labour they shall not put about them. And when they go forth to the people into the outward court, they shall put off the clothes, wherein they haue ministered, and laye them in the habitation of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparel, lest they vndecore the people with their clothes.

They shall not haue their beedes, nor nor the vnde of their beere, but rounde their beedes only. In the priests that go into the innermost court, shall drinke no wyne: They shall mary no wydowe, neyther one that is put from her husband: but a mayde of the seede of the house of Israel, or a wydow that hath had a priest before.

They shall thewe my people the difference betwene the holy and unholy, betwixt the clean and vnclean. If any discorde arise they shall discern it: and give sentence after my iudgements. My sollemne feastes, my lawes and ordinances shall they kepe, and hallowe my Sabbaths. They shall come at no deade person to desire them selves, except it be father or mother, brother or sister, or brother or sister, that hath had yet no husband, in such may they be defiled.

And when he is cleansed, there shall be reckoned vnto hym seuen dayes: and if he go into the Sanctuary agayne to do service, he shall bring a sin offering, sayeth the Lord God. They shall haue an heire age: yea I my self will be their heritage: for I am they: possession. The meat offering, spyncoffering, and trespass offering shall they eat, and euer dedicate thinge in Israel, shall be theirs. The firstfringes of all the firstfrutes, and all the freewill offerings shall be the priests.

Ye shall give vnto the priest also all the firstfrute of your first borne, all I saye, and all that is separated vnto God, all your best offerings (I saye) shall be the priests, and also the firstfringes of your dough, that God may prosper the residue. But no deed carpon shall the priest eat, nor such as is deuoured of wilde beastes, foules, or cattell.

The xlv. Chapter.

Count of the lande of promise are there seuerall some portions, of which the first is given to the priests to the temple, the second to the Leuites, the third to the cite, & fourth to the prince. An echintacion vnto the heedes of Israel. Of the first frutes, &c.

When ye deuide the lande by lot, ye shall put asyde one part for the Lord to be holy from other landes: namely, xxv. meterods longe, & x. meterods wide. This shall be holy as wide as it is round about. Of this part the third shall belong vnto the Sanctuary. v. meterods in all the foure corners, and fiftie cubites wyde round about to the suburbs: and from this measure namely of xxv. meterods longe, and ten. meterods thou shalt measure wherein the Sanctuary and the holiest of all maye stande.

The residue of that holy ground shall be the priests which do service in the Sanctuary of the Lord, and go in before the Lord to serve him that they maye haue rowme to dwell in. As for the Sanctuary, it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house there shall be given twenty habitacions, of the xxv. thousand length, and tenthousand breadth: ye shall give also vnto the cite a possession of fyue thousand meterods broad, and xxv. thousand longe, besyde the parte of the Sanctuary: that shall be for the whole house of Israel. Upon both the sides of the Sanctuaries parte, and by the cite, there shall be gyven vnto the prince whatsoeuer lyeth once agaynst the cite: as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde, whiche shall be as long as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

east. This shall be his owne land in Israel: that my piynnes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And such as yet remaineth ouer in the land shall be giuen to the house of Israel accordyng to theyr trybes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: O ye piynnes, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynough: now leaue of, handle now accordyng to the thyng that is equal and lawfull: & thrust out my people nomore sayth the Lorde God.

¶ Ye shall haue a true weight, a true Ephah, and a true bath. The Ephah and the bath shall be a shephel. One bath shall containe the tenth parte of an homer, and so shall one Ephah be: they measure shall be after the homer. One shephel maketh twentye garters. So twentye shephels, and .xxv. shephels make a ponde. This is the beue offering that ye shall giue to be beueed: namely, the syxtene parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of wheate, and the .xvi. parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of barley. The oyle shall be measured wth the bath: euen .x. parte of one bath out of a cor.

¶ Ten bathes make one homer: for one homer filleth ten bathes. And one lambe fro two hundred shepe out of .i. pasture of Israel: for a mete offering, burnt offering, and helthe offering to reconcile them sayth the Lorde God. ¶ The people of the lande shall geue this beue offering with a fre wyl for the people of Israel. Agayne, it shall be the piynnes parte to offre burnt offerings, meat offerings, and dymnifications vnto the Lorde, in .i. holy dayes, new mones, Sabbathes and in all the hys feastes of the house of Israel. The synne offering, meat offering, burnt offering and helthe offering shall be gyue to reconcile the house of Israel.

¶ Thus sayth the Lorde God. The fyrste daye of the fyrst moneth thou shalt take a ponge bulloche without blemyshe, and cleanse the Sanctuary. So the priest shall take of the bloode of the syn offering, and spynkle it vnto the postes of .i. house, and vpon the four corners of the altar, with the doze postes of the innermost court. And thus shalt thou do also .i. seuenth daye of the moneth* (for such as haue sinned of ignorance, or byng discaued) to reconcile the house withal. ¶ Upon the .xiii. daye of .i. fyrst moneth, ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shall the feaste continue, wherein there shall no sowe nor leuended bryade be eaten.

¶ Upon the same daye, shall the piynce gyue for hym selfe and all the people of .i. lande, a bulloche for a syn offering. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery daye a bulloche & a ramme that are without blemyshe for a burnt offering vnto the Lorde: and an he gote dayly for a syn offering. For the meat offerings he shall geue euer an Ephah to a bullock, an Ephah to a ramme, and an hyne of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy one after another, eue as the other seuen dayes: with the syn offering, burnt offering, meat offering, and with oyle.

¶ The sacrifices of the Sabbath and of the new mones, & of the feastes which they shall geue in, as cometh out of the temple, &c.

¶ Thus sayth the Lorde God: .i. doze of the innermost court toward the east shall be that .i. syre doze piynge dayes: but in the Sabbath, and in the daye of the newe moneth it shall be opened. Then shall the piynce come vnder the doze post, and stande styll without by the doze cheke. So the priestes shall offer by hys burnte and helthe offerings. And he shall worshyp at the doze post, and go his way south agayne but the doze shall nomore be that tyme the euenyng.

¶ On the same maner shall the people of .i. land also do theyr worshyp before the Lorde without this doze vpon the Sabbathes and new mones. This is now the burnt offering, that .i. piynce shall byng vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabbath .i. syre lambes without blemyshe, and a ram without blemyshe, and an Ephah for a meat offering with the ram. As for the lambes, he maye gyue as many meat offerings to them as he wyl: and an hyne of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of .i. new moneth it shall be a ponge bulloche without blemyshe .i. syre lambes and a ram also without blemyshe. With the bulloche he shall geue an Ephah and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meat offering, but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hyne of oyle to an Ephah.

¶ When the piynce cometh, he shall go vnder the doze post, and euen there departe south agayne. But when the people of .i. lande come before the Lorde in the hys solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north doze to do worshyp, shall go out againe at the south doze. And they .i. come in at the south doze, shall go forth agayne at the north doze. There shall none go out at the doze where he came in, but shall go ryght forth ouer on the other syde, and the piynce shall go in and out amonge them. Upon the solempne and hys feaste dayes this shall be the meat offering.

¶ An Ephah to a bulloche, and an Ephah to a ram, and so the lambes, as many as he wyl put euer an hyne of oyle to an Ephah. Nowe when the piynce byngeth a burnt offering, or an helthe offering with a fre wyl vnto the Lorde, the east doze shall be opened vnto hym, that he maye do with his burnt and helthe offerings, as he doth vpon the Sabbath, & when he goeth forth, the doze shall be shut after hym agayne. He shall dayly byng vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde withoute blemyshe for a burnt offering: thus shall he do euery moonyng.

¶ And for a meat offering, he shall gyue .i. syrtte parte of an Ephah, and .i. thyrde parte of an hyne of oyle, to myngle with .i. cakes euery moonyng. Per, this shall be a dayly meat offering vnto the Lorde: for an euer lastyng ordynance: and thus shall the lambe, the meat offering and oyle be gyuen euery moonyng, for a dayly burnt offering.

¶ Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde God: If the piynce geue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes herptage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But if he wil gyue one of his seruantes, some of his herptage, it shall be his to the .i. fre yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto .i. piynce: for his heritage shall be his sonnes only.

The Prophecie

A The ymmer alle shall take mone of the prophecies inheritance nor put them from the ym-mer, but to his owne sonnes that he geue possession, & my people be not scattered abroad but that every man maye haue his owne. And he brought me thowowe the entraunce at the syde of the doze to the habitacyon of the Sanctuary that belongeth to the prestes and stode toward the north, and behold, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me.

C This is the place where the prestes shall bygge the frepalle and synoffrynges, and bake the meatoffrynges, that they nede not beare the into the outwarde court, and so to vnbalowe the people. So he brought me into the vermost court rounde about all the four corners. Beholde: in every corner of the court, there was yet a lytle court. Pra, in al. iiii. corners of the court, there was made a litle court of forty cubytes long, and threty cubytes bryde: these four lytle cour-tes were of one lyke measure, and there went a rydge wall rounde aboute them al four, vnder the which ther were herches made round about Then sayde he vnto me, This is the place where the mynstres of the house shall bygge the flayn offrynges of the people.

The. xliiij. Chapter.

C The vision of the waters that came out of the temple.
The courses of the lande of promise, and the dryptyon of the city.

After this he brought me agayn be-foze the doze of the house: and beholde there gushed out waters from vnder the postes of the house eastward, for the house stode toward the east that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the altar southwarde. Then caried he me out to the northdoze, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vermost doze turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the ryght syde. Nowe when the man that had the metro in his hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a thousand cubites and then he brought me thowowe the water, euen to the angles: so he measured yet a thousand, and brought me thowowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thowowe the water vnto the loynes.

After this he measured a thousande agayne then was it such a ryuer, & I myght not wade thowow it. The water was so depe, that it was needefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sent this. O thou son of man, and wpe that he brought me to the ryuer banke agayne. Nowe when I came there, ther stode many trees vpon eithersyde of the riuer banke. Then sayde he vnto me: These waters that stodeth out toward the east, and runneth downe into the playne scilde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out: and maketh the waters whole. Pra, al that lyue and moue, wherunto this ryuer commeth shall recover. And where this water commeth there shall be muche fysh. For al that cometh to this water shall be lully and whole. By this ryuer shall the dryvers stande from Engaddi vnto Eneglaim, and there spreade out threty nettes: for there shall be greates heapes of fysh as in the mayne see. As for his claye and pytted they shall not be whole, for why? it shall be occupied for salte.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the there shall growe all maner of fruitefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall they fruite perper: but euer be ripe at threty monethes for they water runneth out of threty Sanctuarie. His fruite is good to eate, and his leafe profitable for medycyne. Thus sayth the Lorde God Let this be the bozder wherein ye shall dryue the land vnto the twelue trybes of Israel, with the lyne. Part it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: * of the which lande I swaue vnto your fathers, that it shoulde fall to your inherytaunce.

This is the bozder of the lande vpon the north syde, from the mayne see, as men go to zabada: namely hemah, Scrotha, Dabartin, from the bozders of Damascus and hemah vnto hasar, Tichd, and that lyeth vpon the coles of ha-ran. Thus the bozders from the see forth, shall be Dazar, Euan: the bozder of Damascus, the north and the bozders of hemah, is the north parte.

The easie syde shall ye measure from ha-ran and Damascus, from Salead and the land of Israel by Jozdane and so forth, from the see coast, that lieth eastward: * this is the easie parte.

The southsyde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of styph vnto Cades, the ryuer to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the great see from the bozders thers of, till a man come vnto hemah this is the west parte.

This lande shall ye parte amonge you, ac-cordinge to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an herytage for you: and for the straungers that dwelle amonge you, and beget chyldren.
For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of your owne household, and countrey, and they shall haue herytage with you amonge the chyldren of Israel.
Looke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye gyue hym his heritage sayeth the Lorde God.

shall Isser haue his porcyon. Upon the bozders of Isser from the easie part vnto the west shall Aseptali haue his porcyon.

Upon the bozders of Aseptali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Danas haue his porcyon. Upon the bozders of Danas from the easie syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his

portion. Upon the borders of Ephraim, from the east parte vnto the weste: shall Ruben haue his portion. Upon the borders of Ruben, from the east parte vnto the weste: shall Juda haue his portion. Upon the borders of Juda, from the east parte vnto the weste, ye shall set asyde one portion of. xxv. W. metredores longe and brode, lyke as an other portion from the east syde vnto the weste, wherein the sanctuary shall stande.

* As for the portion that ye shall separte out for the Lord, it shall be. xxv. W. longe, and. x. W. brode: which separated holy portion shall be longe vnto these: namely to the prestes, toward the north. xxv. W. and toward the west. x. W. brode, toward the east. x. W. brode also, and toward the south. xxv. W. longe, wherein the sanctuary of the Lord shall stande. Pea, this same place shall be the prestes that are of the children, of Sadoch and haue kept my holy ordinaunce which went not astray in the error of the children of Israel, lyke as the Leuites are gone astray: and thus separated peace that they haue of lande, shall be the most holy. barde vpon the borders of the Leuites. And nexte vnto the prestes shall the Leuites haue. xxv. W. longe, and. x. W. brode. This shall be an eury syde. xxv. W. long, and. x. W. brode. Of this portion they shall sel nothinge, nor make any permutacion thereof, lest the corse of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord.

The other. v. W. after the bredth that lyeth by the. xxv. W. shall be comen: it shall belonge to the cite, and to the suburbes for habytacions, and the cite shall stande in the myddest thereof. Let this be the measure: toward the north part v. C. and. iiii. W. toward the south parte. v. C. and. iiii. W. toward the east part. v. C. and. iiii. W. toward the west part. v. C. and. iiii. W.

The suburbes hard vpon the cite shall haue toward the north syde. and. ii. C. toward the south. i. and. ii. C. toward the east. i. and. ii. C. toward the weste also. i. and. ii. C. As for the residue of the length, it lyeth barde vpon the separated holy ground: namely. x. W. toward the east and. x. W. toward the west, next vnto the holy portion: it is the encercle thereof of the altar for the meate: that labour in the cite. They that labour for the welch of the cite, shall mayntayne this also, out of what tyebe soeuer they be in Israel. All that is separated of the. xxv. W. longe and. xxv. W. brode on the. iiii. partes, that shall be put asyde for the separated portion of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the cite.

The residue vpon both the sydes of the sanctuary a possession of the cite, shall belonge to the prince before the place of the. xxv. W. vnto the east ende, and before the place of the. xxv. W. westwarde vnto the borders of the cite, this shall be the princes portion. This shall be the holpe place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stand in the myddest. Moreover, fro the Leuites and the cities possession, that lyeth in the myddest of the princes parte: loke what remayneth betwixte the border of Juda, and the border of Ben Jamin it shall be the princes.

of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the weste, shall Ben Jamin haue his portion. Upon the borders of Ben Jamin from the east syde vnto the weste, shall Simeon haue his portion. Upon the borders of Simeon from the east parte vnto the west shall Isahar haue his portion. Upon the borders of Isahar from the east syde vnto the west, shall Zabulon haue his portion. Upon the border of Zabulon from the east parte vnto the west shall Gad haue his portion. Upon the borders of Gad southwarde, the coses shall reache from Thamar forth vnto the waters of Sirye to Cadan, and to the floude, euen vnto the mayne see.

This is the lande with his portions, which ye shall distribute vnto the trybes of Israel, sayth the Lord God. Thus wyde shall the cite reache vpon the north parte. v. C. and. iiii. W. measures. The portes of the cite, shall haue the names of the trybes of Israel. The portes of the north syde, one Ruben, another Juda, the thirde Leui. Upon the east syde. v. C. and. iiii. W. measures, with the portes the one Joseph, another Ben Jamin, the thirde Dan. Upon the south syde. v. C. and. iiii. W. measures, with the portes: the one Simeon, another Isahar, the thirde Zabulon. And vpon the west syde. v. C. and. iiii. W. measures, with the portes also: one Gad another Aser, the thirde Nephtali. Thus shall it haue. xviii. W. measures rounde aboute. And from that tyme forth, the name of the cite shall be, the Lord is there.

The ende of the prophete of Ezechiel.

The booke of the Prophet Daniel.

The fyrste Chapter.

The prophet sheweth the captiuitie of Jehoachim kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captiuitie: the kynge commaunded to those mydd of them shoulde be taught the leueryng and language of the Chaldees. They are alowed the kynge feeding. Daniel abstergeth from the meat of the kynge of Babylon.

In the thirde yere of the raygne of Jehoachim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor, kynge of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, and besyged it: and the Lord deliuered Jehoachim the kynge of Juda into his hande, with certaine ornaments of the house of God, which he caried awaye vnto the lande of Sennar to the house of his God, and there he broughte them into his goddes treasure. And the kynge spake vnto Asaphanaz the cheefe chamberlayne that he shoulde bringe hym certayne of the children of Israel, that were come of the kynges seed and of princes, yonge spryngales without any blemish, but saye & well fauoured, instruct in all wysdome, conynge and vnderstandyng wherby were able to stande in the kynges palace to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldeyde.

Unto

The Prophecie

Into these the kynge had a chamberlaine porcyon of hys owne make: and of the wyne, whiche he dranke hym selfe, to drinke the other: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these now were certayne of the chyldren of Iuda: namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Arias. Unto these the chiefe chamberlaine gave other names, and called Danyel Belshazzar, Ananias Sadrach: Misael Misach: and Arias Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte with hym selfe, & that he wolde not be defyled thowhe the kynges meat nor the wyne whiche he dronke. And this he desired of the chiefe chamberlaine, lest he should defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel sauoure and grace before the chiefe chamberlaine that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my lord the kynge, which hath appoynted you your meat & drynke, lest he spee youre face to be worse ly kynge then the other spryngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my head vnto the kynge.

Ethen Danyel answered Belshazzar, whome the chiefe chamberlaine had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Arias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, & let vs haue portage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and they: that eate of the kynges meat. And as thou seest, so deale wylt vs thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter and proued them 10 dayes. And after the ten dayes, they: faces were better ly kynge and fatter then all the spryngaldes, whiche had eate of the kynges meat.

Thus Belshazzar toke away they: meat and wyne, & gaue them portage therfore. God gaue nowe these 111. spryngaldes conyng and learninge in al scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of al visions and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was cerryed, that the kyng had appoynted to byng in these ponge spryngaldes vnto hym, the chiefe chamberlaine brought them before Nabuchodonosor: and the kyng comanded with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Arias. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquired of them, he founde them ten tymes better, then al the soothsayers and charmers, that were in all his realme. And Danyel abode still, vnto the first pere of kynges Citus.

The seconde Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He callith vnto hym forth sayers, and requyred of them both the dreame and the interpretation thereof. They answered that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaunded all the wise men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyred tyme to solve the quechon the lord openly & mysty vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, & sheweth hym his dreame, & the interpretation thereof. Of the euill kynge kyngdome of Chalde.

In the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, & wherof he was troubled. His slepe was troubled from him. Then the kynge commaunded to call together al the soothsayers, charmers wytyches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in the Syrians speche: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruantes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees they: answer and sayde: It is gone from me. If ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretation thereof, ye shall dye, and your houses shall be pyred.

But if ye tell me the dreame & the menyng thereof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the signification of it. They answered agayne and sayde: the kyng must shewe his seruantes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a truthe, that ye do but prolong the tyme so much as ye see that the dreame is gone from me. Therfore if ye wyl not tell me the dreame ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, which ye speake before me, to put off the tyme. Therfore tel me the dreame, and so shall I know, if ye can shewe me what it meneth. Vpon this, the Chaldees gaue answer before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of: for, there is no other kyng, pryncer, nor lord, that ever asked such thynge as a soothsayer, charmer or Chalde: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requyred. Eytther is there any, that can certifie the kynge thereof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellinge is not amonge the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kynge was wroth with greute indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacion went forth, & the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Danyel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired of Arioch the kynges steward, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth al ready to kill suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch bepyche then the kynges deputy. Why hath the kyng proclaimed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Vpon this went Daniel vp, and desired the kynge that he myght haue leyfure, to shewe the kynge the interpretation, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thynge to Ananias, Misael, and Arias his companions: for they shuld beseech the God of heauyn for grace in this secreete that Daniel and his fellows with other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perswaded not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Danyel prayd the God of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of god myght be prayd for euer and euer, for wysdom and strengthe as his owne. He chaunged the tymes and ages, & he putted downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges, & he giueth wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandyng to those so those that vnderstand, be openeth the beate-certes: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in dark-nesse: for the lyght dwelleth wth hym.

I thanke the, and praye the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou wylte lende me wylde dome and strengthe, and haile shewed me the thyng, that we desired of the, for thou haile opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kyng had ordeyned to destroye the wylde at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wylde in Babylon, but dynge me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shewe the kyng the interpretacyon. Then Arioch broughte Daniel in to the kyng in al the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue found a man among the prysoners of Iuda, that shal shewe the kyng the interpretacyon. Then answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. Tete thou be that canste shewe me the drame, which I haue sene, and the interpretacyon therof: Daniel answered the kyng to hys face, and sayde: As for this secret: for the which the kyng maketh inquisition: it is neyther the wylde, the sozcerer the charmer, nor the deuyl con-furer that can certifie the kyng of it. * Onely God in heauen can open secrettes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy drame, and that which thou haile sene in thyne dreame vpon the bed, is this: O kyng, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shuld come hereafter. So be that is the opener of mysteries tellethe the, what is for to come. As for me, thy secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, moze then any other lyuyng, but onely that I myght shewe the kyng the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe the thoughtes of his owne herte. Thou kyng sauest, & beholde, there stode befoze the a great ymage whose fy-gure was maruelouse grete, and hys vrsage grymme. The ymages heade was of fyne gold his best and armes of syluer, his bodie and top were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Thys thou sauest tyll the tyme, that with oute anye handes, there was hewen of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken all together in peeces: and became lyke the chaffe of coyne, that the wynde bloweth a waie from the souer floures, that they can nomoze be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a grete moun-taine, whych fulfyllt the whole earth: Thys is the drame. And now we wyl shewe befoze the kyng what it meaneth.

* O kyng, thou arte a kyng of kynges.
For the God of heuen hath gyuen þa kyngdom eyen strenght, and maiesty: and hath deliue-red the all thynges, that are amonge the coyl-den of men: the brastres of the fynde and the sou-les vnder the heauen, and gyuen the domynon ouer them all: Thou art that golden heade. As for the firste shall be an other kyngdomme, which shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue domynacion in all landes. The fourth kyngdomme shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron bryseth & bre-keth all thynges: yea, even as yron beate the ene-ry thyng downe: so shall it beate downe and de-stroye. Where as thou sauest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuy-led kyngdomme, whych neuerthelesse shall haue some of the yron grounde myte wth it, for so much as thou haile sene the yron myte wth þ clape. The toes of the fete that were parte of y-ron and parte of clape, signifieth: that it shall be a kyngdom, parte ly stronge & partly weake.

And where as thou sauest yron myte wth clay they shal myngle them selues wth the seede of simple people, and yet not contynue one wth a nother lyke as yron wyl not be souldered wth a potte shearde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauen set by an euerlastyng kyngdomme which shal not perishe, and his kyngdomme shal not be giuen ouer to another people: yea, þ same shall breake, and destroye all these kyngdomes but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sauest, that without any handes there was cut out of the * mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, þ earth the syluer and golde in peeces: by that darbe the grete God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after this. This is a true drame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure. Then þ kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon hys face, and bowed hym self vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meat offerynges and sweete odours vnto hym. The kyng answered Danyel, and sayde: yea, of a truthe yow God is a God about all goddes, a Lord about al kynges, and an opener of secrettes: syng thou canst discouer this mysterie. So þ kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue hym many and great gyftes.

* He made hym ruler of all the countreyes of Babylon, and Lorde of all the nobles, that wer at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated the kyng for Shadrach, misach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer al the officers in þ land of Babylon. But Daniel hym self remayned tyll in the court by the kyng.

The iii. Chapter.

The kyng created by a golden ymage, which he commaundeth to be worshipped. Shadrach, misach, and Abednago are accused because they helpen the kyngs commaundment.
They are broughte into the kyngs and commaunded to worship the ymage, they refuse to do it, and are put into a burnyng furnace. By helpe of God they are deliuered from the fyr. Nabuchodonosor considereth the powere of God after the sight of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden ymage to be made, whych was forty cubytes hye, and fyre cu-bites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura, in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together þ dukes lordes and nobles, þ iudges and officers the debtyes and shrewes: wth all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to the dedication of

the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor had set up: So the dukes, Judges and officers, debettes and all rulers of the lande gathered them together and came vnto the dedicatyng of the ymage, & Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

B Nowe when they stood before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set up, the dedel cried out with all his myght: O ye people, kynnedes and tonges, to you be it sayde: & when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shalbe blowen, with the harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies and all maner of Musyke, ye fall downe and worshippe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set up. Alho- so then fallsthy not downe and bowesthyr selfe Shall euen & same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore when all the folke heard the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, Shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies, and all kinde of melody, then all & people kynnedes and nacjons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, & Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

C Nowe were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that went out then and accused the Jewes and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beyng kynge hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies, and all the other melodies shall fall downe and bowe their kynges, toward the golden ymage: whoso then fell not downe and worshipped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Now are there certayne Jewes: whome thou hast set out: the officers of the lande of Babylon: name ly Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. These me (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundment, yea they will not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that & hast set vp.

D Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wasche and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, will not you serue my goddes: nor bowe your selues to & golden ymage, that I haue set up? Wei, be soye hereafter, Alhen ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes Shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and al the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worship the ymage whiche I haue made. But ye worshippe it not, ye shalbe cast immediatly into an hote burnyng ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago answered the king and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter. for why? our God whome we serue: is able to hepe vs from the hote burnyng ouen (O kynge) & can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes.

E And though he wylnot, yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we will not serue thy goddes, for our conseruance to that Image, whiche thou hast set up. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenace of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shuld be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest workmen that were in his hoste, for to bind Misach, and Sidrach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burnyng ouen.

So these men were bounde in theyr cotes, hosen, shoes, with theyr other garmentes, and caste into an hote burnyng ouen: for the kynge's commaundement was so strypte, and the ouen was exceeding hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, & flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three men Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fel downe in the hote burnyng ouen, beyng fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maneypled and stode vp in al haste: he spake vnto his counsaile and sayde, whyd not you caste these three men bounde into the fyre? They answered and sayd vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge, he answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men goinge looke in the myddest of the fyre, & nothyng corrupte, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of god to loke vpon.

Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnyng ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago ye seruantes of the hye God, go forth and come wyther. And so Sidrach, Misach and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes, and nobles, and the kynge's counsaile came together to se these men, & vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In so muche that the verie heere of theyr heade was not burnt, and theyr clothes vunchaunged: yea there was no smel of fyre felte vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: & whiche hath sent his aungell, and defended his seruantes, that put theyr truste in him that hath alitered the kynge's commaundement and leuarde theyr bodies there vpon, rather then they would serue of do: any other God: excepte theyr owne God only.

Therfore I will and commaunde, that all people, kynnedes, and tonges, whiche speake any blasphemie against & God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shal dye, and theyr houses shalbe pyyled: Bicause there is no God & maye sane, as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach, Misach and Abednago in & lande of Babylon.

The iii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth a dreame. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme: and eateth his owne fleshe. He considereth the power of God, and is re- stored vnto his kyngdome.

Nabuchodonosor & kynge vnto al people, kynnedes, and tonges & dwelle vpon & whole earth: peace be multiplied among you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelouse workes, & the hye god hath wrought vpon me. O gode

How great are his tokens, and how myghty are his wonders: his kingdome is an everlasting kingdome, and his power lasteth for ever, and ever.

I Nabuchodonosor beinge at rest in myne house, and sloupyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afraied: & the thoughtes that I had upon my bed, wryth the visions of myne heere, troubled me. * Then sente Ioute a commission, that all they which were of wyl-dome at Babylon shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the soothsayers, charmers, Caldees, & counters of deuils: to whom I told the dreame but what it betokened, they coude not shew me tyl at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyle called Balthazar, accordyng to the name of my God) which hath the spirite of the holpe goddes in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthazar, thou prince of soothsayers: for so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the spirite of the holpe goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sente) maye signifie. I sawe a vision in my heere upon my bedde: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verpe hye, great and myghty: the heyghth reached vnto heauen, and the brydth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were saye, he had very moche frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I saw in my heere a vision vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holpe one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayinge: he we downe the tree, bryake of hys bryanches, wake of hys leaues, and scattre hys frute abroad: that all the beastes maye get them away from vnder hym, and the foules from hys bryanches. Neuertheless, leaue the ground of hys rote styll in pearth, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde, wryth cherynes of yron and stele. Wryth the dewe of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde wryth other wilde beastes.

That mans pette of hys shal be taken from hym, and the beastes heret shalbe gyven hym tyl seven yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This errande of the watcher is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the counsell of hym that is moost holpe: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyureth them, to whom it lyeth hym, and byngeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. * This is the dreame that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue sente. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so moche as all the wyle men of my kyngdome are not able to shew me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of p holpe goddes is in the. Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held his peace by the space of one houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So p kyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let nether the dreame nor the interpretation thereof leaue the. Balthazar answered, sayinge: O my lord, this dreame happened to thyne enemies, and the interpretation to thyne enemies. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great and myghty, whose heyghth reached vnto the heauen, and his brydth into all the world, whose leaues were saye, and the frute moche, vnder the whych the beastes of the felde had theyr habitation, and vpon whose bryanches the foules of the ayre dyd lyt.

Even thou, O kyng arte the tree, great and stryge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of p earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayd: he we downe the tree, and destroy it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth and bynde hym vpon the playne felde wryth cherynes of yron & stele. He shalbe wet with the dewe of heauen, and his part shalbe with the beastes of the felde, tyl. vii. yeres be come and gone vpon hym: This (O kyng) is p interpretation, yea, it is the very deupce of him, that is hyest of all & it toucheth my lord the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out from men, & thy dwelling shalbe wryth the beastes of the felde, wryth grasse shal thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet wryth the dewe of the heauen: yea, seven yeres shal come, and go vpon the, tyl p knowe * that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyureth them to whome he lyst. Moreover, where as it was sayd: p the rote of the tree shulde be left styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, p thy kyngdome shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Therfore, O kyng, be content wryth my counsaile, that thou mayst redeme thy synnes wryth almesse: & thyne offences wryth mercy to poore people: for this shal be an healyng of thyne erreure. All these thynge touche the kyng Nabuchodonosor.

So after. xii. monethes, the kyng walked vnto and do tene in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayd: This is the grete ctyte of Babylon, whiche I my selfe (wryth my power and strength) haue made a kynges court, for the honoure of my maieste. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken. Thy kyngdome shal departe from the, thou shalt be cast oute of mens compaigne, thy dwelling shalbe wryth the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eat grasse as an oxe, tyl seven yeres be come and gone ouer the: euen vntyl thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vnto the kyngdomes of men: & that he may gyure them: vnto whom it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of mens compaigne, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet wryth the dewe of heauen, tyl hys haire was as great as Eagles feathers, and his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lift vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne understandyng was restored unto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the lord: and magnified and praised hym that hath such mercie: whose power endureth alway, and his kyngdom from one generacion to an other: in compassion of whom al they that dwel vpon the earth are to be reputed as nothyng.

* He handeth accordyng to his wyl, amonge the powers of heauen, and amonge the inhabytours of the earth: and there is none that maye resyst his hande, o: saye: what doest thou? * At the same tyme was myne understandyng gyven me agayne, & I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignitie, and to myne ownelype agayne. My great estates & princies sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdom agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Balthazar donoz: loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all his wordes are true, and his wayes ryght. As for those that go on proudepe, he is able to byngne them downe.

The .v. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon, abusing the vessels of the temple, seeth an horrible myrrour on the wall. The soylayers called of the kyng, can not expounde the myrrour: Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar beinge slayn, Darius succeedeth in his crowne.

KYng Balthazar made a great banquet to his houtholde lordes: with al those thousande he made great chere, & while he was dronken wyth wyne, he commaunded to byngne hym the golden & siluer vessels: which his father Babuchodono:z hadde taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng and his lordes, with his quene and concubynes myghte bynke therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem: Then the kyng and his lordes with his quene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and played the: ydols of golde, silver, copper, yron, wood, and stone.

In the verpe same house there appeared synners, as it had bene of a mans hande wyrtynge, ryght ouer agaynst the candlestyeke vpon the playne wall in the kynges: place, and the kyng laide the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then changed the kyng his countenance, and his thoughts troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his bodye shoke: & his knees smote one agaynst the other. * Wherfore the kyng cryed myghtely, that they shoulde byngne hym the charmers, Caldees, and conuersers of deuyls. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, & sayd: Whoso can reade this wyrtynge, and shewe me the playne meaninge therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheryne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Upon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude neyther reade the wyrtynge, nor shewe the kyng what it signified. Then was the kyng sore afeared, in somuche, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed.

For the reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng and his lordes, the quene went vnto the kyng in the banquet house and spake vnto the kyng, sayng: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for ever. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For wher there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spyrite of the holpe goddes within hym, * as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath understandyng and wysdome lyke the goddes. Yea, the kyng Babuchodono:z thy father made this man chiefe of the soylayers, charmers, Caldees, and readers of bestmentes, because that such an abundaunt spyrite, knowledge and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doubtres) was founde in him, yea, euen in Daniel whome the kyng named Balthazar. Let the same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tell what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought befoze the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Arte thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whome my father the kyng brought out of Jewrye? I haue herde spake of the, that thou hast the spyrite of the holpe goddes experience & understandyng, and that there hath bene greates wysdome founde in the. Howe haue there bene brought me, wyse and connyng charmers, to reade this wyrtynge, and to shewe me the meaninge therof. But they coude not tell me what this matter signified. Then berde I saye, that thou canst expounde darke thynges, and declare harde doubtres. Well, then if thou canst reade this wyrtynge, and shewe me the meaninge therof, thou shalt be clothed in purple, haue a cheryne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayd befoze the kyng: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, o: geue thy ryche gyftes to an other: yet not the litle, I will reade the wyrtynge vnto the kyng, and shewe hym the interpretacion therof. * O Daniel Babuchodono:z thy father, the dignitie of a kyng wyth worshyp and honour, so that all my people hyn rebes and tonges stode in a we and feare of hym by reason of the hys estate, that he had lent him. For wher he slewe whome he wolde: he smote whom it pleased hym. Agayne, whom he wolde he set vp: and whom he lyst he put downe. * But because his herte was so proude, & his stomake set so fast vnto wysdomelike: he was depouled fro his kyngly throne, and his maiestye was taken fro him. He was thut out from amonge men, his herte was lyke a brastyn herte, and his dwellyng was with the wyde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, & his bodye was wet with the dewe of the heauen, tyll he knewe, that the hys had power vpon the kyngdomes of me and letted ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou hys sonne (O Balthazar) for all this, hast not submytted thyne herte, though thou knewest al these thynges: but hast magnified thy selfe aboute the Loyde of heauen, so that the vessels of his house were brought befoze the that that thou, and thy lordes, wyth thy Quene and thy concubynes, myght dwynke wyth them.

And hast prayed the ydols of syluer and golde, copper and yron, of wood and stone, whiche thou hast not vnderstande. As for the God in whose hande conspyeth thy breath, and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym.

Therefore is the pauline of thys hande sente hyther from bym, to token vp thys wytyng.
And thys is the scrpyture that is wyrtten vp.
Dane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacio of the thynge is this: Dane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: The-tel, thou arte wayed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lyght: Phares, the kyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar to clothe Daniel wyth purple, to hange a chayne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamacion co-cernyng hym: that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrde part of his kyngdome. The verrey same myght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, and Darius oute of Medea toke in the kyngdome, being. lxxi. yere of age.

The. vi. Chapter.

Daniel is made ruler ouer the lodes. The pynagacion of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamacion of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kyng: as a transgression: he is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaunde-ment of the kyng. He is deliuered by fawth in God. Daniels accusers are put vnto the Lyons, so be taine in sandre Darius by the proclamacion of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kingdom an. c. and. xx. lordes, whiche shulde be in all his kyngdome about.
Thou these he sette thre pynces (of whome Daniel was one) that the lozdes myght gyue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vnderseald.

But Daniel excceeded all these pynces and lordes: for the spyrite of God was plenteous in him: so that the kyng was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the pynces & lordes sought, to pyche out in Daniel some quarel agaynst the kyngdom: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faulte vpon hym. For wher he was so faythfull, that there was no blame nor dysonestye founde in hym.

Then sayd these men: we can get no quarrell agaynst thys Daniel, except it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon thys, went the pynces and lozdes together vnto the kyng, and sayd thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for e-uer. All the greates states of the realme, as the pynces, dukes, senatours, and iudges, are determined to put out a commaundement of f. kyng and to make a sure statute: namely, that whoso despyeth any petition, either of any God or man (wythin these. xxx. dayes) except it be only of f. kyng: the same person maye be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherefore, O kyng: cōfirme thou thys statute, and make a wytyng: f. the thynge whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wytyng: & confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstande that f. wytyng was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of his wall towarde Jerusalem stode open. There knel he downe vpon hys knees, three tymes a daye: there he made his petition: & prayed vnto God, lyke as hys maner was to do alioze tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makinge his petition, and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kyng and spake before hym concernyng hys commaundement, saying: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute: that wythin. xxx. dayes whoso requyreth hys petition of any God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into f. denne of the Lyons. The kyng answered, and sayd deirea, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Me-des and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the pynners of Juda, O kyng, regardeth neyther the nor thy statute, f. thou hast made: but maketh his petition thre tymes a daye. When the kyng herde these wordes he was sore greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, and put of f. matter, vntyll the Sunne went downe, to the intente that he myght saue hym.

These men perceyving the kynges mynde, sayd vnto hym: knowe this (O kyng) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute whiche the kyng ma-keth, maye not be altered. Then the kyng bad them bryng Daniel: and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alway seruest, can he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne, thys the kyng sealed with hys owne sygne, & wyth the sygne of his pynces: that the kynges commaundement concernyng Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kyng went vnto hys palace, and ate no meate that nyght, neither was there any my-nistrells brought in before hym, neyther could he take any slepe. But by tymes in the moynyng at the bryake of the daye, the kyng arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came npe vnto the denne, he cryed wyth a ppytous voyce vnto Daniel: pea f. kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunte of the lyvinge God, is not thy God (whom thou alway seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for ever. * O kyng hath sent hys angell whiche hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For wher myne vngyltynesse is founde oute before him. And as for f. O kyng, I neuer offered the.

Then was the kyng exceedingly glad, and comaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt was founde vpon hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men whiche accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to bryng them, and to call them in the lxxij. name. Item, they childe and they wynde. * And the lxxij. had the maistye of them, and made all they ben- nedyctioun, as euer they came at the gylde.

* After this, wrote kynge Darius unto all people, kynnedes and tonges, that dwelle in all landes: peace be multiplyed with you. Whiche maundement is in all my dominion and kyn- dome, that men feare and stande in awe of Da- niels God.

* For he is the lxxij. God, whiche aby- deth euer: his kynngdome shal not fayle, and his power is euerlastyng. * It is he that deliuereth and sauerh: he doeth wonders and meruailous workes in heauen and in erth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the lxxij. Chyrs Da- niel prospered in the raigne of Darius and Cy- rus of Persia.

The vii. Chapter.

A vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of the kynngdomes of the world, of the power and empyre of Babilon. Of the curle of the kynngdome of Assyrie.

In the first yere of Balthazar kynng of Babilon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vision was in his heed, vpon his bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake and sayd: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and be- holde, the foure wyndes of the heauen stode vpon the see, and foure great beastes came vnto the see one lyke an other.

The first was as a lyon, and yet hadde e- gles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans herte.

Beholde, the second beast was lyke a beare, and stode vpon the one hyde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had iii. greates longe teeth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Arise, eat vp moche fleshe. Then I looked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leopard, this had wynges as a foule, * even foure vpon the backe. This beaste had foure heedes, & there was power gy- uen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greates pson teeth, it deuoured and destroyed & stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was sayde vnto the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hoynes, wherof I take good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them an other lytle hoine, before whome there were three of the firste hoynes pluckt awaye. Beholde, this hoine had eyes lyke a man: and a mouth speaking presumptuous thynges. * I looked tyll the scales were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat hym downe. His clothyng was as whyte as snowe, and the herys of his heed lyke pure woll. His thron was lyke the fyrre flame, and his wheles as the burninge fyre. There were forth a fyre stream: and wente oute from hym. * I thownde tymes a thousande serued hym. x. tymes ten thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, and the bookes opened. Then

I sawe I hade the raimte, because of the voyce of the pson wyndes: which the hoine spake. I be- holde, the beaste was slayne, and his body de- stroyed, & gyuen ouer to be burnt in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye: but they lxxij. lxxij. were pro- longed for a tyme and seaso. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, which wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and dignitie regal, that all people, tribes and tonges shoulde serue him. * His power is an euerlastyng power, which shal neuer be put downe: and his kynngdome endureth vncorrupte. * My herte was deured, & I Daniel had a troubled spirit with- in me, & the visions of my heed made me afrayed tyll I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the truthe, concernyng all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me understande the interpretacion of these thynges.

These foure grate beastes are foure kynnges, whiche shal arise out of the earth. These shal take in the kynngdom of the saynctes of the most hest, and possesse it tyll moze and moze for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truthe, concernyng the fourth beast whiche was so farre vnto the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of pson, & his nayles of byalle: whiche deuoured and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder his fete: I des- pired also to knowe the truthe, as touching * ten hoynes that he had vpon his heed, and this o- ther whiche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre, which hoine had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked vnto a grymme visage then his fe- lowes. I behelde, and the same hoine made bat- tle agaynst the saynctes, yea, and gat the victo- ry of them vntill the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the first saynctes: and tyll the tyme that the saynctes had * kynngdome in possession. He gaue me this answer. That fourth beaste shal be the fourth kynngdome vpon earth, it shal be moze then al o- ther kynngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe and destroye all other landes.

* The ten hoynes are ten kynnges, that shal arise out of the kynngdome, after whome there shal stande by an other, whiche shal be greater then the first. He shal subdue the kynnges, and shal speake wordes agaynst the hest of all: he shal destroye the saynctes of the most hest * & thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be gyuen vnder his power, * vntill a tyme, two tymes and an halfe tyme.

But the iudgement shal be kepte, so that his power shal be taken from hym, for he shal be de- stroyed, & perishe at the last: As for * kynngdom, power, and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it shal be gyuen to the holie people of the most hest, * whose kynngdome is euerlastyng: yea, al powers shal serue and obey him. Thus saith the wynde. Nevertheless, I Daniel was so deured in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged changed: but wordes I kept styl in my hart.

The viii. Chapter.

A vision of a strete betwene a Ramme and an hogge The understanding of the vision of the battell betwene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the Ramme byge Antichrist.

In the thyrde yere of the raygne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a visio vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * fyrst. I sawe in a vision: and when I saw it, I was at Shulig in the cheste cite. whych lyeth in the lande of * Elam: and in the visyon, me thought I was by the ryuer of Alai.

Then I looked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whych had two horne: and these two hornes were hye but one was hyer then another: and the hyest came vp be hynde. I sawe that this ramme pushed wryth hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north and agaynst the south: so that no beastes myght stande before hym, nor defende them from hys power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & waxed great lye. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an hegoate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous wryth the horne betwixte hys eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had the two hornes: wher I had sene also by the ryuer syde. and ranne fearfully vpon hym wryth hys myght. I sawe hym drawe nyr, vnto the Ramme, beyng verie feare vpon hym: pea, he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. After that had the Ramme so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym doorne, trode hym vnder hys fete, and no man was able to deliuer the Ramme out of hys power.

The goate waxed excedyng greafe, & when he was at the strongeste, hys greafe horne was broken also. * Then grewe there other foure such lyke in the skede, towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. Pea, oute of one of the leest of these hornes, there cam yet by another, whych waxed maruelous great toward the south, toward the east, and toward the saye pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some doorne to the grounde, and of the star-res also, and trode them vnder fete.

Pea, it grewe vp vnto the pynce of the hoost from whom the dayly offryng was taken, and the place of the Sanctuarie casten doorne. And a certayne season was gyuen vnto it, agaynst the dayly offryng (because of wickednes) that it myght cast doorne the veritie to the grounde, & so to pynche in al thynges, that it went about.

Vpon this I harde one of the sayntes speakyng, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked this question. Howe longe shall this visyon of the dayly sacrifice and of the wallyngre abho-mination endure: that the Sanctuarie and the powze shall so be troden vnder fete: And he answered hym: Vnto the euynge and the monyng, euen two thousande and thre hundred dayes: than shall the Sanctuarie be clyed agayn.

Nowe when I Daniel had sene this visyon and soughte for the understanding of it: beholde there stode before me a thyng like vnto a man.

And I hadde a manyng in the ryuer of Alai whych cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man to vnderstande the visyon. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys com-yng, and fell doorne vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of mamarche well, for in the last tyme shall this vis-on be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakyng vnto me, I waxed saynt, so that I ranke doorne to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge: Scholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the last wyth: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfilled.

The Ramme whych thou sawest wryth the two hornes is the kynge of the Medes and Per-ses: but the goate is kynge of Greke lande: the greafe horne that stode betwixte hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake and foure other rose vp in the skede: it signyfyeth, that out of this people shall stande vp foure kynngdomes, but not so myghtye as it.

After these kynngdomes (whyle vngodlynes is a growyng) there shall arise a kynge of an vnshamefast face, whych shall be wyle in darcke speakynges.

He shall be myghtye and stronge, but not in hys owne strength. He shall destroye aboute measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prosper: he shall slope the stronge and holpe people. And thowhe hys chastynges, falsed shall prosper in hys hande, his herte shall be proude, and many one shall be put to death in hys welchynesse. He shall stande vp agaynst the pynce of pynces, * but he shall be destroyed wrythout hande. And this visyon that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euynge and the moynyng. * Therefore wyte thou vpon this sight, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe.

Vpon this was I Daniel very saynt, so that I laye syche cartayne dayes: but wher I rose vp I wente aboute the kynnges busynesse, and mar-uelled at this visyon, neuer theles, now I knowe of it

The Prophecye.

Baruch. * We haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue bene dyed by disobedience and gone backe: yea, we haue departed fro al thy preceptes and iudgements.

Baruch. * We wolde neuer followe the counsailes of the prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kynge & princes, to our fozfathers and to al the people of the lande. * O Lorde, ryghteousnes belongeth vnto the, vnto vs petyrlyth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto every man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nye, thowtwe out al the landes: wher-in thou haste strowed them, because of the offences, that they had done agaynst the.

Baruch. * Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to our kinges, & princes, to our fozfathers, euen to vs all, that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, petyrlyth merce and fozgurnesse. As for vs, we are gone backe fro hym, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God, to walke in hys lawes, * which he layd befoze vs by hys seruantes the prophetes: yea, al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe fro the lawe, so that they haue not hardened vnto thy voyce.

Baruch. * Wherefoze, the curse and oth, that is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses the seruante of God ( agaynst whom we haue offended ) is powred vpon vs. * And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst our iudges & iudged vs: to byng vpon vs such a great plage as neuer was vnder beauen, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all this plage, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer befoze the Lorde our God, that we myghte turne agayne from our wickednes, & to be learned in thy veritie. Therefore hath the Lorde made hast, to byng this plage vpon vs, for the Lorde our God is ryghteous, in all hys wordes which he both sayd & doth: we wolde not hearken vnto hys voyce.

Baruch. * And now, O Lorde our God: that with a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypte, to get thy selfe a name whiche remayneth this daye, we haue sinned O Lorde, & done wyckedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye ( I beseeche the ) from thy cite of Jerusalem thy holy hill. And wherof our synnes sake, and for thy wyckednes of our fozfathers, is Jerusalem & thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs: now therefore, O our God, heare prayer of thy seruante: and his intercession. O let thy face shyne ouer thy sanctuary, that lyeth wast: for the Lorden sake.

Baruch. * O my God, encline thine eare, and hearken ( as the left for thine owne sake ) open thine eyes beholde howe we be desolate, yea, and the cite also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not call our prayers befoze y in our owne ryghteousnes: no, but only in thy great merces, O Lorde: heare: O fozgure Lorde, O Lorde consider, carry not ouer longe: but for thine owne sake do it. O my God, for thy cite, and thy people is called after thy name.

Daniel. * As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowyng myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makinge so myne intercession befoze the Lorde my God, for the holy wyll sake of my God: yea: while I was yet speaking in my prayer: beholde, the man Gabriel (* who I had sene befoze in the visyon ) came flyenge to me, and touched me aboute the offsprunge tyme in the euenynge. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell sayd he: I am now come to make the vnderstande it. For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so deuyfled, and therefore am I come to shewe the. And why? * For thou arte a man greatly beloved.

Daniel. * Wherefoze, ponder the matter wel, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the visyon. Ix. weekes are determined ouer the people and ouer the holy cite: that the wyckednesse maye be consumed, that if synne maye haue an ende that the offence maye be reconciled, and to byng in euer lastynge ryghteousnesse to fulfill the visyon & the prophetes and annoynte the moost: oly one vnderstande this then, and marke it well: that from the tyme it shalbe concluded: to go and repayre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ ( of the annoynted ) synne: there shalbe seuen weekes: The first three shalbe stretes and wallen be buylded agayne Ixii. weekes: but wyth harde troublous tyme. After these Ixii. weekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. The third shal there come a people wyth the synne, & destroye the cite and the sanctuary. and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

Daniel. * He shall make a stronge bonde wyth many for the space of a weake: and when the weake is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meat offsprunge. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shal continue to the ende.

C. The .r. Chapter.

Daniel. * There appeared vnto Daniell a man clothed in lynen: wherof he sheweth hym wherfoze he is sent.

Daniel. * At the thyrde peare of kynge Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell ( otherwise called Balthazar ) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it, he vnderstode the matter well and perceyued what visyon was. At the same tyme, I Daniell moued for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eate bread: as for slepe & wyne there came none wythin my mouth: So, I dyd not once annoynte my selfe, tyll the whole thre weekes were out.

Daniel. * Upon the xiiii. daye of the fyrst moneth, I was by the greace floud, called * Tygris I lyft vp myne eyes, and loke: and beholde a man clothed in lynen, whose loynes were girded wth lyne golde of Arabye: hys bodye was lyke the Chalyce stone, hys face ( to loke vpon ) was lyke the sunne, hys eyes as the flame of fyre hys armes and leete were lyke the sayre glysterng metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the the voyce of a multitude.

C * Daniell alone sawe thys visyon, if he men that were with me, sawe it not: but a great feare fulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe thys greates visyon, so longe tyl there remayned nomore strenght within me.

Pea, I lost my colour cleane I wasted awaye, and my strenght was gone. Yet harde I þ voice of thys wordes: and as soone as I harde it, saynt nesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto me: * O Daniell, thou wilt becloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, for vnto the am I nowe sente.

And when he had sayd these wordes, I stode vntrembling. Then sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniell: for whye? I saye þ first day that I dydest set thyne harte to vnderstande, and dydest chaster thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue ben herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganest to speake, had not þ prince ouer þ king dome of the Perses withstande me. xxi. dayes.

But lo, * Michaell one of þ these prynces, came to helpe me, & I was left to continue therewith þ kynges of Persia, & am come to shewe the what shal happen vnto thy people in the later dayes. For it wylbe lōge yet on the visyon be fulfilled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the grounde and helde my tounge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my lyppes are loosed in þ visyon and there is nomore strenght within me.

Howe may my Lorde seruant the talke with my Lorde? sayenge there is no strenght in me, so that I can not take my breath: vpon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man: and comforted me, sayenge: O thou man so well beloued feare not: be content, take a good hart vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayd: Speake ou my Lorde, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wyl I go to fyght with the kyng and the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekelande shall come. neuertheless I wyl shewe the that thyng, that is sette noted in the scripture of truth. And as for ponder matters, there is none that helped me in the, but Michaell your prince.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

A prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Egypt. Of the kyngdome of Syria, and of the honde there of, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Syria. Of the yemes that tye vnto the kyng of Egypt, whome Antiochus: thus the kyng of Syria persecuted, whiche signified was to be Antiochus. The prynces of Antiochus.

In the fyrste yere of Marius of Media I stode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strenghten hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Beholde, there shal stande vp yet thys kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farrre re cher then they all. And when he is in the chiefe power of thys kynges, he shal prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekelande. * Then shal there arysen yet a myghty kyng, that shal rule with greates dominion, and do what hym lyke. * And as soone as thys kyngdome cometh vp, it shal be destroyed, and deuoyded toward the four wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shal not haue suche power and dominion as he: but thys kyngdome shalbe scattered, yea, euen amonge other then those. And the kyng of the south shalbe myghty, then thys other prynces. And one shalbe stronger then he, and shal rule thys dominion with greates power.

And in the ende of yeres, thys shalbe ioyned together, and the kynges daughter of the south shal come to the kyng of þ North, for to make frendshipp, but he shal not obtayne the power of that arme, nether shal he be able to endure thoroowe thys myght: but she, and such as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for thys tyme) shal be deliuered vp. Out of the branches of her roome, there shal one stande vp in thys stede whiche with power of armes shal go thoroowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to thys strenght. As for thes Idols and prynces, with thes costly Jewels of golde & syluer, he shal carie them awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shal raygne more yeres then the kyng of the North. And when he is come into the kynges realme of þ South, he shalbe sayne to turne agayn into his owne land wherfore his sones shalbe displeased, & shal gather together a myghty great host of people: & one of them shal come, & go thoroowe the water floude: then shal he returne, & go forth with despyce and boastynge vnto thys owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angrye and shal come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the north: yea, he shal bynne a greates multitude of people together, and a greates heape shal be geuen into thys hāde: these shal he carie away with greates pryde, for so muche as he hath caste downe so many thousandes, neuertheless, he shal not preyayle. For the kyng of the north shal gather (of the newe) a greates heape of people from aloze, and come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeres) with a myghty host, and exceedynge greates good.

At the same tyme there shal many stande by agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wyched chyldren of thy people also shal exalte them selues (to fulfill the visyon) and then fall. So the kyng of þ north shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fenced ctyes: And þ power of them of the south shal not be able to abyde hym, & the best men of the people shal not be so stronge, as to resist hym. Wherfore whē he cometh, he shal handle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. he shal stande in the pleasaunt countre, whiche thoroowe hym shalbe destroyed: he shal set thys face with all thys power to obtayne thys kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea, that shal he do, & gnye hym unto the daughters amonge women, to destroy hym. But he shall saye, neither shall hee of anye dys purpose. After this shall hee see his face vnto the Iies & take many of them. A pynne shall stoppe hym, to do hym shame, beyde the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall hee turne agayne to his owne lande, stromble and fall, and be nomore founde: so be that came vpo hym and byd hym violence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after fewe dayes hee shall be destroyed, and that neither in wyath, nor in battell. In his steade there shall arys a wyle persone, not holde worthy of a kyn ges dignitie: this shall come in peaceably, and obtayne the kyngdome wyth saye wordes: hee shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the pynce of the couenaunt.

D So after that hee hath taken treuce wyth him hee shall handle dysceitfully: that he may get vpon onercome hym wyth a small flocke: & so wyth craftynesse to get hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale other wyle, then ether his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For hee shall destroye the thynge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yea, & all theyr substance, ymagynyng thoughtes agaynst the stroge holdes, & that for a tyme. His power & harte shall be stered vpon wyth a great army agaynst the kyng of the south where thorum the kyng of the south shall be moued then vnto battell, wyth a greate & myghtye host also. Neuertheles hee shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shall hurt him: so that his host shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

E These two kynges shall be minded to do mischief, and talke of dysceyte at one table: but they shall not prospeere, for why: the ende shall not come yet: vnto the tyme appoynted. * then shall hee go home agayne into his owne lande wyth great good, and let his harte agaynst the holpe couenaunt, hee shall busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the time appoynted hee shall come agayne, & go towarde the south. So shall it happen other wyle then at the fyrste, yet once againe. And why? * the whippes wch Italia shall come vpon hym, that hee maye be smytten and turne agayne: that hee maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, hee shall turne him, and brawe such vnto him as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offryng, and to set vpon the abhominable desolation. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall hee flatter wyth saye wordes. But the people that wyl knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people shall enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted wyth swearde, wyth fyre, wyth captiuitie and wyth the takynge awaye of theyr goods. Howe when they fall, they shall be set vpon wyth a wyle helpe: but manye shall cleaue vnto them saynedye.

Yet some of those whiche haue vnderstandinge shall be persecuted also, that they maye be tryed purged and clenfed, tyl the time be out: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what him lyst: hee shall exalte and magnifie him selfe agaynst all that is God. Yea, hee shall speake marvelous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes wherein hee shall prospeere, so longe tyl * the wyath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is be upied already. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women. Yea, hee shall not care for anye God, for hee shall magnifie him selfe aboue all. In his place shall hee worship the myghtye stout God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall be honoure wyth gold and syluer, wyth precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

Thus shall hee do, thozow his stronge fenced places, settinge vpon his straunge God whom hee confesseth and encreasynge his gloire. Such as wyl receaue him, & take him for God, hee shall geue them great worship & power: yea & make them lordes of the multitude, and giue them the lande wyth rewarde. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south stryue wyth him, and the kyng of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him wyth charrettes, horsemen and wyth a great navy of shippes. Hee shall come into the landes, destroye & go thorow: hee shall entre also into the sayre pleasaunt lande: Many cities and countreys shall decaye * except Edom, Moab, & the best of the children of Ammon, which shall escape fro his hand. Hee shall stretch forth his handes vpon the countreys, & the lande of Egypt shall not escape him. For thozow his goyng in, hee shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethiopia: * Neuertheles, the tidynge out of the East & the north shall trouble him, for the which cause hee shall go forth to destroy and roote out a great multitude. The reyes of his palace shall be pitched betwixt the two sees, vpon the hil of the noble Sanctuary, for hee shall come to his death * and then shall no man helpe him.

The xlii. Chapter:

Of the prophete the resurrection of the dead. The backen of the prophete of Daniell.

In the tyme wyl come also, that the great pynce * Michael, whiche shall be on the peoples syde, shall arys vpon, for: there shall come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was, sence there began to be any people vnto that same tyme. Then shall the people be deliuered, yea, all those that be founde wyten in the booke. * Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake some to the euerslasting lyfe, some to perpetual shame and repproue * the wyle (such as haue taught other) shall glyster as the shynnyng of heauen: & those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the starrs, wch shall be without ende.

And thou O Daniell, shut vp these wordes, & scale the booke tyl the laste tyme. Many shall go aboute here & there, and then shall knowledge increate increase. So J Daniel looked and beholde the floodes: (as it were) other two, one upon this shore of the water, the other upon powder syde. And one of them sayd vnto hym, which was clothes in linnen, and stode aboue vpon the waters of the flood: Howe longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderful woordes?

* Then herde I the man with the linnen clo thes, whiche stode aboue vpon the waters of flood, when he helde vp his right and left hand vnto heauen, and swaie by hym whiche lyueth for euer, * that it shall tarre for a tyme, two ty mes and halfe a tyme: and when the power of holy people is cleane scattered abroad, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

I herde it wel but I vnderstode it not.
Then sayde I: O my Lorde, what shall happen after that? He answered: So thy waye Daniel, for these woordes shall be closed vp, and sealed, til the last tyme: and many shall be purifyed, clen sed and tryed. (as it were with fyre.) But the vngodly shall lyue wyckedly, * and those wycked (as ma ny of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstan dyng. As for such as haue vnderstanding, they shall regarde it. And from the tyme forth that I daily offeryng shall be put downe, and the abho minable desolatyon set vp, there shall be a . ccc. dayes. * I well is hym that waieteth and commeth to the .viii. c. and .xxv. dayes. So thou thy way now till it be ended: take thy rest and abyde thy lot, till the dayes haue an ende.

¶ The ende of the Prophecy of Daniel.

¶ The booke of the Prophete Oseas.

¶ The fyrste Chapter.

¶ The tyme wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by takinge an harlot to his wyfe, signifieth the whoredome of the people The destruction of the offspring of Iehu and of the house of Iehu, is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Be er: * in the dayes of Oseas Joa chan, Ihas, and Iezchias kynges of Iuda, and in the tyme of Iero boam the sonne of Joas kyng of Israel. First when the Lorde spake vnto Ose as, he sayd vnto him: * So thy way, take an har lotte to thy wyfe, and gette chyldren by her, for the land hath committed great whoredome against the Lorde. So he went & toke Somer, the dought ter of Deblaim, which conceived and brought forth a son. And the Lorde sayd vnto him: cal his name Iezrael, for * I will shortly auenge the bloud of Iezrael vpon the house of Iehu, & wyl brynge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyl I breake the bow of Isra el in the valley of Iezrael.

So he conceived yet agayne, and bare a dought ter: And he sayd vnto hym: Call her name Loim hamah (that is, not obeyning mercye): * for I wyl haue no pitye vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remem brance. * Nevertheless, I wyl haue mercye v pon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue them euen thowse the Lorde they: God. But I wyl not deliuer them thowse any bowe, sword, bat tyle, bowes, and horsemen.

Now whē she had wayned Loimhamah, she conceiued agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayd he: call his name Loamp. For why? ye are not my people: therefore wyl I not be your God. and though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be as the sande of the see, whiche can neyther be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayd vnto them, * ye be not my people: eue there shall it be thus reported of them * they be the children of the liuyng God: * Then shall the chyldren of Iuda, and the chyldren of Israel, be gathered together agayne, and chose them selues one hed, and then departe out of the land: for great shall be the daye of Israel.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ The people is called to repentance.

Tell your brethren, that they at my peo ple: and your sisters, that they haue obtained mercye. As for your mother ye shall chide with her, and reprob her, * for she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husband: onles she put away her who dome out of my syght, & her aduouty from her breestes. If no, I shall strip her naked, and let her * euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall laye her waste, and make her lyke a wylernes, and slaye her for thyself. I shall haue no pitye al so vpon her chyldren: * for they be the chyldren of fornicacyon.

They mother hath broken her wedlock, and she that bare them * is come to confusyon. For she sayde: I wyl go after my louers that gyue me my water and my bread, my woll and flaxe, myne oyle and my bynke. But I wyl hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her foote steppes, and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: she shall seeke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye: wel, I wyl go turne agayne to my first husband: for at that tyme was I better at ease then now. But this wold she not knowe where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, spicer, and golde, * whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherefore now wyl I take my corne and wyne agayne in they: season, and set agayne my woll and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. * And now wyl I discouer her folpynes euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of myne handes. Wherefore, I wyl take awaye all her myght * her holy dayes her newe moones, her Sabbothes, and al her so lemne feastes: I wyl destroye her vineyardes and figgetrees, though she sayth: lo, here at my re

Isa. 54. 4.

Then sayde the Lorde to me: * So yet thy waye and woe an aduontrous woman, whome thy neyghbour lo-ueth, as the Lorde doeth the chyldren of Israel: howbeit, they haue respected to strange goddes, * and loue þat wyne cannes. So I gate her for my frende & for my cannye. And for an homer and an halfe of barley, I sayde vnto her: Thou shalt abyde wryth me a longe season, but le that thou playest not the harlot, & loke thou medle with none other man, and then wyl I take me my selfe for the.

* Thus the chyldren of Israel shal be a great whyle without hyng and pynce, without offeryng and aulter, without prestre and reuelacion But afterwarde shal the chyldren of Israel co-uert, and seke the Lorde thy God, and * Dauid theyr hyng: and in þat latter dages they shal do wyl the Lorde, and his louyng kyndnesse.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Of the pynnyng agaynst the people: and the reuerence of Israel.

Hear the woide of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israel. For þat the Lorde must punyssh them þat dwell in the lade. And why: there is no trouth, there is no mercy, ther is no knowledge of god in the lande: but swearing, lyng, manslandre, thefte and aduontry haue gotten the vpper hande: and one gyltyngelle foloweth another.

Wherfore shal the lande be in a miserable case, & all they that dwell therein shal be rooted oute.
The beastes in the feilde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the see shal dye: yet is there none that wyl chaunge nor reproue an other. For * the people rebuketh the prestres, which shuld rescoure other men.

Wherfore stombrest thou in the dawe tyme, & the prophet with the in the nyght. I wyl hying thy mother to schynce: and why: my people pe-rysh, because they haue no knowledge. Wherfore then that I haue refused vnderstandyng, therefore wyl I refuse the also: so that thou shalt no-more be my prest. And for so much as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyl also forget thy chyldren. The more they increased in multytude, the more they synned agaynst me, therfore wyl I chaunge theyr donoure in to shame. * They cate vpon the synnes of my people and courage them in theyr wychednes. * Thus the prestre is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyl punyssh them for theyr wyched wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to theyr owne maginacyons. * They shal cate, and not haue pnyng. They haue bled whozdome, therfore shal they not prosper: and why: they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whozdome, wyne, and dyonkennesse taketh the heart awaye. * My people aske counsaile at theyr stockes, theyr staffe must tell them. For a whozdome mynd hath deceyued them so that they commit fornicacion agaynst their God. * They make sacrificies vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyr incense vpon the hilles: yea among the okes, groues, and bushes, for there are good shadows. Therfore your daughters are becom harlottes, and your spousen haue broken theyr word: I wyl not punyssh your daughters for theyr beynge deyled, and your wydes þat became wo-res: * leynge þat fathers them selues haue medled with harlors, and offered vnto vnchastites: but þat people that wyl not vnderstand, must be punished.

Though thou Israel arte disposed to playe the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou shouldest not haue runned vnto Gilgal, * nor haue gone vnto Bethaunem: nor haue sworn, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cow. The Lorde therfore shal make her fede as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become pat-taker of ydols: well, let hym go, theyr dyonken-nesse hath put them back, and brought them to whozdome. Theyr rulers loue rewarde, hying (saye they) to theyr owne shame. I wynde shal take holde of theyr fetters: and they shal be confounded in theyr offerynges.

The.v. Chapter.

Of the prestres and rulers of Israel.

O ye prestres, heare this, take heed, O thou houshold of Israel: gyue care, O thou hynglyre hous, for it were poure part to se iudgement done: but you are be come

become a mare vnto Assyria, and a spied net vnto the mount of Thabor. They shal sacrifice by heapes: and turne face from the Lorde, and I haue bene a rebuker of them al. * I know Ephraim well enough, and Israel is not hid from me, for Ephraim is now become an harlot, and Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto theyr God, for they haue an whorish harte, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

* But the pryde of Israel wyl be rewarded hym in his face: yea bothe Israel and Ephraim shal fall for theyr wychednesse, and Iuda with them also. * They shal come with theyr shep bullockes: to seke the Lorde, but they shal not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and broughte vp bakarde chyldren: a moneth therfore shal deuoure them with theyr poyspons. Blowe with the shawmes at Gibeā, and with þrompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethauen vpon the ponde- syde of Ben Iamin. In the tyme of þ plague shal Ephraim be layde waste, therfore dyd I sayth- fully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are þ prin- ces of Iuda become lyke them: that remoue the lande markes: Therfore wyl I poure out my wrath vpon them lyke water. Ephraim is op- pressed, & can haue no ryght of the law: for why they folowed the doctrynes of vngodlye men. Therfore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Iuda a caterpyller.

¶ When Ephraim sawe his synnes and Iuda his deafe, * Ephraim went vnto Assur, & sente vnto kynge Iareb: yet coude not he helpe you, nor ease you of youre payne: I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Iuda. Euen I wyl spolie them, and goo my waye. I wyl take them wth me, and no man shal rescue them. I wyl go, and retourne to my place, tyll they knowledg that they haue syn- ned, and seke me.

The vi. Chapter.

A Assyryon causeth a man to turne to God. The wy- chednesse of the preache.

In theyr aduersyte, they shal earlye seke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde: * for he hath smitten vs, and he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shal bynd vs vpon agayne: after two dayes shal he quychen vs, in the thyrde daye shal rayse vs vp, so that we shal lyue in his segder. Then shal we haue vnderstandyng, and endeuor our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shal go forthe as the spyng of the daye, and come vnto vs as the euenyng and moynge rayne vpon the earthe.

¶ O Ephraim, what shal I do vnto the? O Iuda, how shal I entreat the: seing your loue is lyke a moynge cloude, and lyke a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, & let them be slayne for my wo- des sake: so that thy punymente shal come to lyght. * For I haue pleasur in lounyng kynodes, and not in offeryng: yea in þ knowledge of God more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt and let me at nought. Silah is a cite of wy- ched doers of malycious people, and bloudested- den. And as they are armed, wayte for hym that passeth by the waye: Inche is the counsaile of þ preches, which with one agreed counsaile, mur- der their charyte: Inche as hepe the waye: yea, they darre to all vnspeakable myschefe. * Horrible thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is de- filed: yea, and thou Iuda hepest an harlotte for thy selfe, when I retorne the captiuitie of my people.

Cotte byes and wantonnesse of the people.

When I undertake to make Israel hole from the vngodlye doctrynes of Ephraim and the wychednesse of Samaria, cometh to lyght: then go they aboute wth lyes: therfore the these robberth wythin: & without the spolyer destroyeth. They confyde not in theyr hartes, that I remembre all theyr wychednesse. Nowe theyr owne inuencions haue be set them, whiche I se well enough. * They make the kynge and the prynces, to haue plea- sure in theyr wychednes & lyes. All these burne in aduoutye, as it were an ouen that the baker deateth when he hath left knedynge, tyll þ doue be leauened. Euen so goeth this daye with oure kynges and prynces, for they begyn to be wood- donken thowwe wyne, they vse familiarite with suche as deceyue them. They with the y- maginacion of theyr hert are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the moynge is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne Judges all theyr kynges are fallen, yet is there none of the that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mist amonge þ deatden. Ephraim is become lyke a cake that no man turneth. Strangers haue deuoured his strength: yet, he regardeth it not. He wareth full of grape beeres, yet wyl he not knowe it: * and the pryde of Israel is cast downe before theyr face, yet wyl they not turne to the Lorde theyr God, nor seke hym for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a doue þ is begyled, and hath no hart. * Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians now go they to the Assyrians: but while they be going here & there, I wyl spyed my net ouer the, and drawe them downe as the foules of þ ayre: and accordeyng as they haue bene warned, so wyl I punyssh them. * Wo be vnto the, for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue let me at nought: * I am he that rede- med them, and yet they dislede with me. * They call not vpon me with theyr hartes, but yf þou lyng vpon theyr beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meat and drynke, and me they wyl not obeye: I haue taughte them, and defended theyr arme: yet do they ymagine mys- chefe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not to the moost byest, and are become as a bro- ken bowe. Theyr prynces shal be slayne with þ sword, for the malice of theyr tonges, suche sco- nes shal they haue in the lande of Egypt.

Chap. viii.

Of the vengeance of God upon the children of Israel for their unfaithfulness.

Say ye to the man of the house of Israel (as an eagle) shall the enemy come against the house of the Lord: for they have broken my commandment, and transgressed my law. Israel should have said unto me: thou art my God, we knowe thee but he hath refused the thinge that is good, therefore shall the enemy follow upon him. * They have despised hynges, but not thozow me: they have made princes, and I must not knowe of it. * Of they: silver and golde have they made the ymages, to byrge them selues to destruction. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken away, for my wrathfull indignacion is gone forth against the. how longe wyl it be, as they can be clenfed. For the calfe came from Israel, the worshipman made it, therefore can it be no god but euen in peeces shall the calfe of Samaria be broken. They haue sowed wynde, therefore shall they reape a storme.

They seide shall beare no corne, there shall no meale be made of they: increase: though they reape, yet shall straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perishe, the Gentyles shall increate hym as a soule vessel. Syns they went vp to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wyld beast in the deserte.

* Ephraim gyueth rewarde to get louers, though they byze them amonge the hethen, yet now wyl I gather them vp. They shall begyn to be weryed wth the burthen of hynges and princes. Ephraim hath made many altars to do wychednesse, his altars: I saye: he had to his synne. Though I shewe them my lawe neuer so moch, they count it but straunge doctrine. * Where as they do sacrifice, offering the fleshe, and carrying it, the Lorde wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remembre they: wychednesse, and punishe they: synnes. * Israel turneth agayne into Egypt they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buyde saye palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cityes: * therefore wyl I sende a fyre into they: cityes, and it shall consume they: palaces.

Chap. ix.

Of the vengeance and captiuitie of Israel.

Not thou teumphe, O Israel, make no boasting ouer ioyous thinges as do the heathen: for thou hast corrupted aduoutry agaynst thy God: who is thy rewarde hast thou loved, more then all the corne floozes.

* Therefore shall they nomore enioy the corne floozes and wyne pzelles, and they: sweet wyne shall fayle them. They wyl not dwell in the Lorde's lande: * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypt, and eateth vncleane thinges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne for a bynyng offering unto the Lord, neither gyue they hym they: sayne offerings: but they be vn to them as mourners meates, wherein all they that eat them are defyled. For the bread that they haue such putt vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the last dayes, and in the feast of the Lord? Lo they shall get them a way for the destruction. * Ephraim shall receiue them, & Ephraim bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe they: pleasant goodes, and buere them in they: tabernacles. Be persure (O Israel) the tyme of visytacion is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hande: And then shall Israel know, that they were deceyued by a prophet foolyshe and mad, in a transye, for the multitude of theyne iniquitye, God shall multiplye enemies agaynst the Ephraim hath made hym selfe a watchman of my God a prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in euery streete, and abhominacion in the house of his God. They be gone to far, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore tyme: * at Samaria: * therefore they: wychednesse shall be remembred, and they: synnes punished.

I found Israel lyke grapes in the wyldernes and sawe they: fathers as the sytt & sygges in the toppe of the sygge tree. * But they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye from me to that shameful ydoll, and are become as abhominable as they: louers. Ephraim sheweth lyke a hynde, so shall they: gloire also: Insomuch that they shall neyther beget, conceiue, nor beare chyldre. And though they byrge vp anye, yet wyl I make them chyldles amonge men. Pea, who shall come to them, when I departe from them. * Ephraim (as me thynke) is planted in welthyngnesse, lyke as Tyus: but now we must be byrge per owne chyldren forth to the man sear.

O Lorde thou shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue them: geue them an vnfructful wbe and drye breasts. All their wychednes is done at Silgal, there do I abhor them. For the vngreatoulnesse of they: owne inuencions: I wyl byrge them oute of my house. I wyl lone them nomore, for all they: princes are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is breuen downe, they: roote is dried vp, so that they shall byrge nomore frute: pea, and though they byrge forth anye, yet wyl I slaye euen the best beloued frute of they: bodye. My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedyent vnto hym: therefore shall they go astraye amonge the heathen.

Chap. x.

Of the vengeance of God upon the children of Israel.

Irael was a goodly vine, but he hath brought forth vngoodly frute: pea, the more frute he had, the more ankers he made: the more good I byd to their lade the more trendypp shewed they to they: ymages. Their hert is deuicid, therefore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall byrge downe they: ymages, he shall destroye they: altars. Then shall they saye: we haue no hynges, for why: we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the hynges do to vs? They commune together, and sweare dayne othes: they be confederat together, therefore groweth their punishment as fyndes in the loweys of the lade. They

The selde shalbe wasted, the lande shall be in miserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, & sweete wyne shall come to confusyon, and people verely desolate. The husbandmen and pwyne gardeners shall loke pteouslye, and make lamentacion for the wheate, wine, and barley, and because the harvest vpon the feilde is so cene destroyed. The grape gatherers shal make greates mone, when the vynyardes and fygtrees be so verely wasted. Yea al the pomegranares, palm trees, apple trees, and other trees of the feild shal wyther a waye. Chapter ii.

The prophete the commynge and cuntyng of theyr tyme. An exhortacyon to moue them to conuerse.

Blowe out a trompet in Syon, and crye vpon my holpe hyll, that all suche as dwell in the lande, shall tremble at it, * for the daye of the Lorde cometh, and is harde at hande: a darke daye, a gloryng daye, a cloude daye: yea and as a stormy daye, lyke as the moonyng spredeth out vpon the hylls. Namely, a great and myghtye people: suche as haue not bene sence the begynnyng, neyther shalbe after them for euermore: before him shalbe a consumyng fyre, and behynde hym a burnyng flambe. The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before him: but behynde hym shal be a verely waste wylbernes, and there is no man that shal escape him: they are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, and runne lyke horsemen. They shalbe vpon the hylls as it were the sound of charrettes: as the flambe of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people redy to the battayle.

The folke shal be asfayde of hym, all faces shalbe as blacke as a potte: they shal run lyke gyrantes, and leape ouer the wallis lyke men of warre. Every man in his going shal kepe his waye, and not go out of his path. There shal not one hyne on other, but eache shal kepe his owne way. They shal breake in at the wyndowes and not by the dore. They shal come in to the citye, and runne vpon the wallis. They shal clyme vp vpon the houses, and apper in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shal quake before him: yea the heuens shalbe moued. * The sunne and the moone shalbe darkened, and the starres shal withdraue theyr hyne. The Lord shal be we his voyce before his dooste, for his doost is greates, stronge and myghtye, to fulfyll his commaundemente. Thus is that great and maruailous fearfull daye of the Lorde. * And who is able to abyde it?

Nowe therfore sayeth the Lorde: * Turne pou vnto me with al your hartes, with fastyng, wepyng and mourning: rent your hartes and not your clothes: Turne pou vnto the Lorde your God: * for he is a gracious and merciful, longe suffryng, and of great compassion: and ready to pardon wychednesse: Then (no doubte) he also shal turne and forgyue, & after his chastenynge he shal let your encrease remayne for meate and drynke offeringes vnto the Lorde your God.

Blow out with the trompet in Syon, proclamaye a fastyng, call the congregacyon, and gather the people togither: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, dryng the chyl dzen and suckynges togither. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwixt the porche and the altare wepyng, and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thy heritage be brought to such confusyon, lest the heathen be lordes therof.

Wherfore shulde they saye amonge the heathen: where is nowe theyr God?

Then shal the Lorde be gelouse ouer his land and spare his people: yea, the Lord shal answer and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wyl sende you corne, wyne, and oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I wylle nomore gyue you ouer, to be a reppose among the heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shal dryue hym farre from you: and put hym out into a drye & waste lande, his face towarde the east see, and his byndes partes towarde the uttermost see: The stynke of hym shal goo vp, and his fylthy corruptyon shal fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proude. Feare not (O lande) but be glad, and reioyce: for the Lorde wyl do greates thynges. Be not ye asfayde neyther (O ye beasts of the feilde) for the pastures shalbe greene, and the trees shal beare theyr frute: the fygtrees and vynyardes shal gyue theyr encrease.

and maydens. I will shewe wonders in heauen above, and tokens in the earth beneath: blood and fyre, and the vapour of smoke. The sunne shall be turned into darkness, and the moone into blood before the great and notable daye of the Lord come. And the tyme shall come, that who soeuer calleth on the name of the Lord, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Syon, and at Jerusalem, there shall be a saluacyon, lyke as the Lord hath promysed: yea, and amonge other remnant, whome the Lord shall call.

Of the judgment of God, against the enemies of his people.

Do take heed: in those daies and at the same tyme, whē I turne again the captiuitie of Iuda and Ierusa-of Josaphat: and there wyl I reason with them bycause of my people & heritage of Israel, whō they haue scatred about in the nations, & parted my lande: yea, they haue cast lottes for my people, the younge men haue they set in the bzobell house, and sold the damfels for wyne, that they might haue to bynke. * Thou Tyrus and Sy-Assemble you and come, all ye heathen rounde about gather you together: there shall the Lord beare all the gyauntes to the ground. Lett the people asyle, and get them to the valley of Jo-rybat, for there wpll I lye, and iudge all heafor they: bychedneffe is wazen great.

In the valley appoynted there shall be many people: for the daye of the Lord is nipe, in the valley appoynted. * The sunne and moone shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their light. * The Lord shall raise out of Syon, and crye out of Ierusalem, that the heauens and the earth shall quake withal. But the Lord shall be a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the children of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe that I the Lord your God dwel vpon my holy mount of Syon. Then shall Ierusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thozowe her any more.

* Then shall the mountaynes droppe sweete downe, and the hilles shall flowe with mylke. All the riuers of Iuda shall haue water ynough, and oute of the Lozdes house there shall flowe a spring, to water the brooke of: Sittim: but Egypt shall be layde waste: and Edom shall be desolate, because they haue drafte so cruelly wryth the chyldren of Iuda, and shed innocent blood in the lande. I sayne, Iuda shall be inhabited for evermore, and Ierusalem from generacyon to generacyon: for I wyl not leaue the: nor shall my name be vnauenged. And the Lord shall dwell in Syon.

¶ The ende of the prophete of Joel.

prophete Amos.

The first Chapter.

The time of the prophecy of Amos. The words of the Lord against Israel, against Tyre, against Edom, and against the sons of Ammon.

These are the sermonnes that were shewed vnto Amos, (whych was one of the shepherdes at Beersa) vppon Israel, in the tyme of O-siah * kynge of Iuda, and in the tyme of * Jeroboam the sonne of And kyng of Israel, two yere befoze the earth quake. And he sayde: * The Lorde hal roze out of Syon, and he we his voyce from Ierusalem so that the pastures of shepherdes shall be in a miserable case, and the top of Carmel dyed vp.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: saye they and foure wy-hednesses of Damascus, I wyll not spare her: because they haue therselued Galaad with yron nagles. But I wyll sende a fyre into house of Rezael, the same hal consume palaces of Benabab. Thus wyl I breake shectes of Damascus, and roze out the inhabiter from the feide of Aren: And him that holdeth the scepter out of pleasante house: so that the people shall be dy-uen out of saye Siria: sayeth the Lorde. Thus

sayth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of * Gaza, I wyl not spare her, because they make the pylsoners yet moze captyue, and haue bypnen them into the lande of Edom. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into the walles of Gaza, which shall deuoure her houses. I wyl roote out them that dwell at Asdod, and byn that holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remanant of the Philistines shall perishe, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of the cite of * Tyre, I wyl not spare her: because they haue entreated the captiuitie of the Edomites and haue not remembered the brotherly couenaunt. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into the walles of Tyre, that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of * Edom I wyl not spare hym, because he persecuted his brother with swerd, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very long, and so kept indignacion alway by hym. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into the man, which shall deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of the chyldren of * Ammon, I wyl not spare them: because they cryt by the womes great with chyldre in Galaad, to make the borders of the lande the wyder. Therfore I wyl byndle a fyre in the walles of Rabboth, that shall consume her palaces: with a great crye, in the daye of battaile, in tempest and in the daye of storme, so that they shal go into captiuitie, he and his pynces togither, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus sayth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of Moab, I wyl not spare hym: because he bzent the bones of the kynge of Edom to ashes.

Therfore, wyl I send a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perishe with noyse, and the sounde of a shawme. I wyl roote out the Iudge from amonge them, and slaye all his pynces with him, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of * Iuda I wyl not spare hym: because he hath cast asyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundmentes: for why? they wolde needs be dyscrued with the lyen that they: for: fathers folowed. Therfore wyl I send a fyre into Iuda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. For thre and foure wichekednes of Israel, I wyl not spare hym, because he hath solde the ryghteous for monye, and the poze for woos. They trade vpon poore mens heedes, in the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meake. The son and the father go to the harlot, to dishonour my holy name, they be byde every auitare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of they gods they bypne the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amoyte before them, that was as hye as the cedretrees, as strong as the oke: nor withstanding I destroyed his stute from about, and his stute from about. Agayne, I brought you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you forty yeres throughe the wilderness, that ye myght haue the Amoytes landes in possysson. I cryed vpon prophetes amonge youe chyldren, and abstayners amonge youe yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayth the Lorde? But ye gaue by abstayners wyne to bypne: yea, ye comaunded the prophetes saying: Prophecy not. Behold, I wyl crash you in sondre, lyke as a wayne crasheth that is full of sheaves, so that the swifte shal not escape, neyther the stronge be able to do anye thyng: no, the Spaunte shal not saue hym owne lyfe. The archer shal not abyde, and the swifte of fore shal not escape. The horsman shal not saue his lyfe, and he that is as many of stomake as a graunt, shal in that daye be sayne to runne his way naked, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

The reproche the house of Israel of wichekednes.

Behold, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israel) namely vnto all the tribes whome I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: * you onely haue I excepted from all the generacions of the earth: therfore I wyl bysite you in al your wichekednes. Wayt wayne walke togither except they be agreed amonge them selues: * Doeth a lyon roze in the wood except he haue a praye? Or except a Lyons whelp oute of his denne, except he haue gotten somethyng? Doeth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the erth where no fouler is. Takeh a man his snare vpon the grounde afore he catche somewhat: Crye they out Alarum with trompet in the cite, and the people not afrayed: Commeth there anye plage in a cite, without it be the Lordes doinge? Now doth the Lorde God no maner of thyng, but he tellethe his secret before vnto his seruantes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyl not be afrayed? Seinge then that the Lord God hym selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophete.

Byrache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you togither vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye le great murder and violent oppresyon amonge them, for why? they regarde not the thyng that is right, sayth the Lorde: they gather togither euill gotten goodes, and laye vpon robberye in theyr houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God. Theyr lande shall be troubled and besyged rounde aboute, theyr strength shalbe pluckt from the, and theyr palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lorde, lyke as an herdeman taketh two legges, as a peece of an eare oute of the Lyons mouthe: Euen so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria) haue bypne theyr couches in the corner, theyr beddes at Dainascus, shalbe pluckt awaye.

* Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Jacob, sayth the Lorde God of hostes, that I beganne to bysite the wichekednes of Israel, I wyl bysite the auitares at Bethel also: so that the doornes of the auitare shal be byzohed, and fall to the grounde.

The Prophecie

As for the winter house and summer house, I will smite them down: and the houses of perry: yea, and many other houses shall perishe, & be destroyed, sayeth the Lord.

The iii. Chapter.

Chapter the thirde of the prophecies of Jeremiah.

Hearke this worde, ye sayd hym, that be upon the hill of Samaria: for that do poore men wrong, and oppresse the neyghbour: ye that saye to your lordes: byngge byther, let vs drynke. Therefore, the Lord hath sworn by his holynesse. The dayes shall come upon you, that the enemyes shall carry you away in wyppes, and your posteritie shall be carryed away upon sylvers hookes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after an other, euen the kyngeys palace shall you overthrow, to make a way to scape, sayeth the Lord.

Became to * Bethel for to worke vngreatness, & haue increased your synnes at: Gilgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the mornynge, & your tythes vnto the thyrde daye. Ye made a thank-offryng of leuen, ye promysed serwyll offrynges, and praclaimes them. Suche lust had ye. Ope chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lord God. Therefore haue I gauen you ydle teth in all your cytyes, and scarcenesse of breed in all your palaces: yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. When there were but thre monethes vnto this daye, & I withelde the rayne from you: yea, I rayned vpon one cite: and not vpon an other, one peece of ground was moystured with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Therefore two: yea thre cities came vnto one, to drynke water: but they were not satisfied, yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord.

I haue smitten you with drought & blastynge and loke howe manye orchardes, vineyardes, figgetrees and olpue trees ye had: the caterpyllers hath eaten them vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Pestilence haue I sent amonge you, as I dyd in Egypte: your ponge men haue I slayne with the swerde, and caused your houses to be taken captiue: I made synnyng saunoure of your tentes, to come vp into your nostrils. Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Some of you haue I ouerthrowne, as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorre: so ye were as a bynde plucked oute of the fyre. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord.

Therefore, thus wyl I handle the agayne, O Israel: yea, euen thus wyl I handle the. Make ye redy then to mete the God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the molatyrus, he ordeyneth the wynde he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the mounyng and the darkenesse, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lord God of hostes is his name.

The v. Chapter.

Chapter the fyfth of the prophecies of Jeremiah.

Hearke this worde, O ye house of Israel, & whye I must make this mone for you. The virgin Israel shall fall, & neuer ryse agayne: she shall be cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For thus sayeth the Lord God: Where as there dwelt a thousande in one cytie, there shall be lesse than an hundred therein: and where there dwelt an. C. there shall be lesse than ten be left in the house of Israel. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord vnto the house of Israel: Behke after me, and ye shall lyue, but feare not after Bethel. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Bethlaba: For Gilgal shall be carryed away captiue, and Bethel shall come to nought. Behke the Lord, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Joseph be bzant with fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormewood, and cast downe ryngedrounnes vnto the grounde: * Ye forsake the Lord that maketh the. vii. starres, & the Quons, that turneth the nyght into daye, & of the daye he maketh darknesse. * He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: * Lord is his name. He rayseth destruction vpon the myghty people, and bynggeth downe the stronge holde. But they owe hym euill wyl: that reponeth them openly: & whoso erlieth them the playn truthe, they abhorre him. For so moche then as ye oppresse the poore, & rob him of his best sustenance: * therefore where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwel in them. Maruelous pleasant vineyardes shall you plant, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke: and whye? as for multitude of pome wickednesse & your stoute synnes, I know thet ye be well. Enemys are ye of the ryghteous, ye take rewarde, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therefore the wyse must not be sayne to holde his tyme, so wycked a tyme is it.

Behke after the thyng that is good, and not euill, so shall ye lyue: yea the Lord God of hostes shall be with you, accordyng to your owne desyre. * Hate the euill, and loue the good: slyt vp eight agayne in the poynt: & (no doubt) the Lord God of hostes shall be merciful vnto the remnant of Joseph. For no (sayeth the Lord God of hostes) they shall be mourning in al streets: yea, they shall say in euery strete: alas, alas. They shall cal the husbandman to lamentacion, & such as can mourne to mounyng. In al vineyardes there shall be drynesse, for I wyl come amonge you, sayeth the Lord. Woe vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lord. Wherefore wolde ye haue it? As for the daye of the Lord, it shall be darke and not clere.

Yea, lyke as when a man runneth from a lyon and a beere meteth meteth hym: or when he cometh into the house, and leaucth his hande vpon the wall, a serpente byteth hym. Shall not the daye of the Lord be darke & not clere? Shall it not be cloudye, and no shyne in it? I hate and abhorre your holy dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come together, I wyl not accept it. And though ye offre me burnt offrynges & meat offrynges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for your latten thank offrynges, I wyl not looke vpon them: I wyl with that noyse of the songes. I wyl not heare the playes of mulche: but se that equitie flowe as water, and ryngedrounnes as a myghty streame. O ye house of Israel, & gaue ye me offrynges and sacrificy-

er those forty yeres longe in the wilderness ye haue ye set up tabernacles to your: * * * * * and images of your pldles: yea, and the floure of your god Rempha, figures wherby ye made to worshipp them. Therefore wyll I cause you to be carped a waye beyonde Damascus, sayth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hostes.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

Agaynst the princes of Israel luyng in pleasures.

I Who be to the proude welth in Syon to such as thynke them so sure vpon mount of Samaria, which holde them sleues for the best of the worlde: & rule the house of Israel, euen as they lyst. So vnto Calne, and se: and from thence gette you to He-math the great ctyte, and so go downe to Gath of Philistines: be they better at ease then these kingdomes, or the ordie of the lande wnder their yokes? Ye are taken out for the euill dape euen ye that lyt in the scoole of wyfulnesse, ye lye vpon beddes of puerpe, and vse your wantonnesse vpon your couches: ye that eate the best lambes of the flock, and the fattest calves of the dzone: ye that synge to the lute, and in playng of instrumentes compare your selues vnto * Da-uid: ye that drynke wyne out of goblettes, and anoynt your selues with the best oyle, but no man is sorowful for Iosephs hurt. Therefore now shal ye be the fyist of them, & shal be led away captiue and flynt chere of the wyful shal come to an end.

¶ The Lorde God bathe swozne euen by hym selfe (sayth the Lorde God of hostes) I hate the pyrde of Jacob, and I abhorre hys palaces: and I wyll gyue ouer the ctyte wyth all that is therin: so that though there remaine ten men in one house, they shal dye. So they nette kynnsfolke and the deyd buriers shal take them and carie awaye theyr bones, and saye vnto hym, that is in the innermer house: is there yet any mo by the
And he shal answer: they are all gone, hold thy tongue (shalt he saye): for they wolde not remember the name of the Lorde.

¶ Beholde, the Lorde is mynded to smyte the greate houses, so that they shal decaye: and the lyle houses, that they shal cleaue a sondre.
Who can runne with hoxes, or plowe with oxen vpon the harde rockes of stone. For why, ye haue turned true Iudgement into bytternesse & the frute of ryghteousnesse into wormewood.
Yea, euen ye that reioyse in dayne thynge: ye that saye: haue not we obtayned hornes in oure owne strength? Well, take heede, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: I wyll brynge a people vpon you, whiche shal trouble you from the way that goeth towards He-math vnto the hoke in the meadowe.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

Of the captiuitie of Israel and Iuda.

I Who the Lorde God shewed me such a vision, behold, there stode one & made greshoppers, euen when the coyne was shopyng forth after the kynge had clippyd thepe. Howe when they vnderstode to cate vp all the grene thynge in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be merciful

These the, who shalde elles helpe vp Jacob & is brought so lowe. So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well it shal not be.
Agayne, the Lorde shewed me this vision: be-holde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyssh the wythall, and it denomed the great depe: yea, it clamed a parte alreedy. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thynne hande: for who shalde els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was merciful therin, and the Lorde God sayde: well, it shal not be. Whereouer he shewed me this vision: behold, the Lorde stode vpon a playsted wall, and a masons trowell in his hande.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Amos, what seest thou. I answered, a masons trowell. Then sayd the Lorde: behold, I wyl laye the trowell amonge my people of Israel, and wyl nomore ouersee them: but the hylchapels of Isaac must be layde waste, and the churches of Israel made desolate, * and for as house of Jeroboam, I wyl stande vp agaynst it wyth the swerde. Vpon this sent Amasiah the priest to Bethel vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, saying: Amos ma-herth the house of Israel to rebell agaynst the: & land can not a way with his wordes. For Amos sayth: Jeroboam shal dye with the swerde, and Israel shal be led away captiue out of the owne lande. And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence: thou that canst se so wel: & dye into the lande of Iuda, get the there thy luyng & prophete there: & prophete nomore at Bethel, for it is the kynges chappel, & the kynges court.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasiah. As * for me, I am neither prophete nor prophets son but a keeper of cattell. How as I was breakyng downe mulberyes, and goynge after the cattell, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: So thy waye, and prophete vnto my people of Israel.
And therfore heare thou nowe the worde of the Lorde. Thou sayest: prophete not agaynst Israel, and speake nothing agaynst the house of Isaac: wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde. Thy wyfe shal be defyled in the ctyte, thy sones and daughters shal be slayne with the swerde, & thy lande shal be measured out wyth the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalt dye in an vnclane lande, * and Israel shal be dyuyn out of hys owne countrey.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

*Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lord sheweth, & he wyll

I Who the Lorde God shewed me this vision and behold, there was a mannd with somer frute: and he said: Amos what seest thou: I answered, a mannd with somer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende cometh vpon my people of Israel, I wyl no more ouersee them. In that day shal the lages of the temple be turned into sorowe, sayth the Lorde God: many deed bodies shal lye in euery place, and be cast forth secretly. * Heare thys, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destruye the nedye in of come to make the bulwarkes, and the specke greater. We shall seeke up for us, and we shall we may get the peace under us with the money, and the neyde also for the people. The Lord shall not the people of Jacob: these words of the Lord I neuer forget. Shall not the lande tremble, and all they that dwell therein, mourne for they?

Shall not they destruction come vpon them, lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them as floude of Egypt? At the same tyme (sayth the Lord God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at noone: and the lande to be darke in the cleare daye. Your hye feastes wyl I turne to sorrowe and your songes to mourning: I wyl byng sack cloth vpon all backes, and baldnesse vpon euery head: yea, such a mourning wyl I sende them as is made vpon an only begotten sonne: and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Behold, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lord God) that I shall send an hungre into the earth, not the hungre of bread, nor the thirst of water: but an hungre to heare the worde of the Lord, so that they shall go from the one see to the other sea from the north vnto the east, running about to seeke the word of the Lord, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the sayre virgines and the ponge men crye for they: yea, euen they that swore in the execrable cause of Samaria: & sayd as truly as the Lord lyueth at Dan: and as truly as the Lord lyueth at Bersaba. These shall fall and neuer rise vp agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

The enemyes agayn Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

I sawe the Lord standyng vpon the analtare, and he sayde: I will seeke the doze cheke, that I possesse maye wake wryth al. For their couetousnes shall fall vpon all they: herdes, and they possesse they shall be slayne with the swerde. They shall not flye awaye, there shall not one of them escape nor be deliuered. Though they were buryed in hell, my hande shall fetch them from thence though they clyme vp to heauen: yet shall I cast them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shall I take them oute, and byng them from thence: though they creepe downe from my sight into the depe of hell, I shall commaunde the serpent, euen there to bite them.
If they go awaye before they enemyes into cap-tivitye, then shall I commaunde the swerde, there to slaye them. Thus wyl I set myne eyes vpon them: for they harme, and not for they welth.

For when the Lord God of hostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwell therein, must nedes mourne: And why? they destruction shall aryse as enery streame, runne ouer them, as the floude in Egypte. He that hath his dwelling in beauf, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earth. He that calleth the waters as the see, and poureth them oute vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lord. O ye synners of Israel, are ye not vnto me, euen as the Moyses, sayth the Lord: haue not I brought Israel out of the lande of Egypte? The Egyptians from Capthor: and the Syrians from Cier: hold, the eyes of the Lord are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the earth. Heuer they. I wyl not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, sayth the Lord.

For lo, thus I promise, though I lyfte the heide of Israel among al nations (lyke as they use to lyfte in a lyue) yet shall not the smallest granell stone fall vpon the earth. But al the wyched doers of my people, that saye: Cuse, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastily vpon vs: those shall perishe with the swerde. At that tyme wyl I buyde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and hedge vp bys gappes and loke what is broken, I shall repayre it: yea, I shall buyde it vp agayne, as it was afoze tyme that they were possesse the remnant of Edom: yea, and all such people as call vpon my name, to them shall I saye: which doth these thynges.

that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, & treader of grapes him that soweth seede. The mountaynes shall droppe sweete wyne, and the hylls shall be fruitful, and I wyl turne the cap-tivitye of my people of Israel: they shall repayre the waste cities and haue them in possessio, they shall plant vynyards, and bynk the wyne they of, they shall make gardens, and enioye the fru-tes of them. And I wyl plant them vpon they owne grounde, so that I wyl neuer roote them out agayne from they lande which I haue gyuent them, sayth the Lord the God.

The booke of the

Prophete Jonas.

The first Chapter

And the spirit of the Lord came upon Jonas the son of Amithay.

he worde of the Lorde came vnto * Jonas the son of Amithay saying: Arise, and get thee to Ninue that * great cite, and preach vnto them, how that they wychevnes is come vnto me. And Jonas made him redy to fflye vnto Tharlis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: where he foundede a shyp readye for to go vnto Tharlis, so he payde his fare, and went aboarde, & he myght go with them vnto Tharlis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a grente wynde into the see, and there was a myghtye tempest in the see, so that the shyp was in copendy of goynge in peces. Then the maryners were afrayed: and cried euery man vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the shyp, they cast into the see, to lpyghten it of them. But Jonas gatte hym vnder the barches, where he layed hym downe and slombred.

So the master of the shyp came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why slombrest thou? Up call vpon thy God: For God (happely) wyll thyne vpon vs, that we perishe not. And they sayde one to an other: come, lette vs caste lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. * And so they cast lottes, & the lot fell vpo Jonas. Then sayde they vnto hym: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupation? whence comest thou? (and what thyne godd thou?) What countre man art thou? and of what nacton: he answered them: I am an E-brye, and I feare the Lord God of heauyn, which made both the see and the drye lande. Then were the men exceedinglye afrayed, and sayde vnto hym: why dydest thou? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayd mozeouer vnto him what shall we do vnto the, that thou maye scape from troubling vs? (for the see wrought & was troubled) he answered them: take me, and cast me into the see, so shall it let you be in rest, for I wote it is for my sake: that this grente tempest is come vpon you.

Nevertheless, the men assayed with rowynge to brynge the shyppe to lande: but it wolde not be, because the see wrought so: and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherefore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde let vs not perishe for this mannes death, neyther laye thou innocent blood vnto our charge: for thou O Lord * hast done euery thinge as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and cast hym into the see, and the see left ragynge. And the men feared the Lorde exceedinglye, doinge sacrifices and makyng vowes vnto the Lorde.

The ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowede of a wyale. The prayer of Jonas.

Ps. xli. But thou takynge thy rest: shoulde they not feale, that they had ynough? If the grete paynter come vpon the, wold they not leaue the some greates?

But how shal they reape Esaus, and leaue the treasure? For the me that were swaine vnto the shall dyspue the one of the borders of thyne owne lande. They that be nowe at one with the, shall disceyne the, and ouercome the. * And they that rate thy baced shall betraye the, or enen thou preceue it. * What not? At the same tyme destroye the wyse men of Edom, and those that haue vnderstanding from the mount of Esau. Thy gyauntes (O Themas) shal be afrayed, for thow the slaughter they shal be all onerthrowen vpon the mount of Esau. Shaine shal come vpon the for the malice that thou shewdest to thy * brother Jacob: yea, for enuynouse shalt thou perishe, and that because of the tyme, when thou diddest see thy selfe agaynst him, euery when I enmyes carved awaye his host, and when the aleauntes came in at his portes, and cast lottes vpon Jerusalem, and thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

Thou shalt nomoze se the day of thy brother, thou shalt nomoze beholde the tyme of his capty-vitye, thou shalt nomoze reioyse ouer the chyldre of Iuda, in the daye of theyr destruction, thou shalt triumphe nomoze in a tyme of theyr trouble. Thou shalt nomoze come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of theyr decay: thou shalt not se theyr myserye in the daye of theyr fall.

Thou shalt sende out noman agaynst theyr host, in the day of theyr aduersitie: neither shalt thou stand waytyng any moze at the corners of the stretes, to murdre such as are fled, or to take them prysoners: that remayne in the day of theyr trouble. For the daye of the Lorde is harde by vpo al the hepythen. * Like as thou hast done so shalt thou be delt withall: yea & shalt be rewarded euery vpo thy heed. For I the wyse as ye haue dronken vpon my holy byll, so shall all the dep-then drynke continually: yea, drynke shal they & swallowe vp, so ye shal be as though ye had neuer ben. But vpon the mount Sion shal the sal-uation be, and holines, these shal be holy, and the house of Jacob shal possesse: euery thole. * I had them selues afore in possellion. Mozeouer, the house of Jacob shal be a fyre, the house of Ioseph a flame, and the house of Esau shal be strawe which they shal kyndle and consume, so that nothyng shal be left of the house of Esau, the Lord hym self hath sayd it. They of the south shal haue the mount of Esau in possellion: and lone tobat lieth vpo the ground, & shal I Philistines haue, the playne felde shal Ephraim & Samaria pos-sesse: & the mountaynes of Galaad shal Ben Jamin haue: And this host shal be the chyldren of Israels prysoners. Howe what followeth from Canaa vnto zarephad, and Sepharad, & shal be vnder the subiection of Ierusalem, & the ctyes of the south shal ender it. Thus they shall escape vpon the byll of Syon, shall go vnto punyshe the mounte of Esau, * and the kyngdome shal be the Lordes.

The ende of the booke of the prophete of Abdy.

But the Lord prepared a great fish, to swallowe up Jonas. And Jonas was in the belly of the fish three dayes, and three nightes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God, out of the belly of the fish, and sayd: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lord, and he heard me out of the belly of the fish. I cryed, & thou heardest my voyce. Thou haddest call me downe depe in the myddell of the see, and floudes compassed me about: yea, all the waues and coules of water went ouer me. I thought that I had ben cast away out of thy sight: But I wil yet agayne loke towards thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe lake aboute me. & the wedes were wrapte about myne heed. I went downe to the botome of the bylles, & was bared in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lord my God, hast broughte vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule fapnted within me, I thoughte vpon the Lord: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanityes, wyl forsake his merite. But I wyl do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgyving, and wyl pay that that I haue vowed, for whysaluacion cometh of the Lord. And the Lord spake vnto the fyller, and it caste oute Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninue. The repentance of the kynge of Ninue.

Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * vp & get the to Ninue that great ctyte, and preache vnto them the preachinge, whiche I haue the. So Jonas arose and went to Ninue at the Lordes commaundement. Ninue was a great ctyte vnto God, namelye of thre dayes iourney. And Jonas went to, and entred

Into the ctyte: euen a dayes iourneye, and cryed, sayinge: There are yet fourty dayes, and then shall Ninue be ouerthrowen. And the people of Ninue beleued God, & proclaymed fastyng, and arayed them selues in sackcloth, as well the great as the small of them. And the tidinges came vnto the kynge of Ninue, which rose out of his seate, and dyd his apparell of, and put on sackcloth, and sat hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed and comaunded in Ninue, by the auctorite of the kynge and his lordes, sayinge: * se that neyther man, nor beaste, ore, or therpe take ought at all: & that they neyther fede nor drynke water: but put on sackcloth boeth in a beast: & crye mightely vnto God: * Yea, se that every man turne from his euill waye, and from the wychednesse that he hath in hande.

Who can tell: God maye turne, and repent, & cease from his seuerce wrath, that we perishe not. And when God sawe they woldes, howe they turned from theyr wyched wayes: he repented on the euill, whiche he sayde: he wolde do vnto them. and dyd it not.

The. v. Chapter.

Jonas is repented of

Herfore Jonas was soze discontent, & angry. And he prayed vnto the Lord and said: O Lord, was not this my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my cotte? therfore I haue rather to dye vnto Thebes. * For I knowe wel enough, that thou arte a mercifull God, full of compassyon, long suffering, & of great kyndnes, and repented when thou wouldest take punishment: And nowe O Lord, take my lyfe from me (I beseech the) for I had rather dye then liue. Then sayd the Lord: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of the ctyte, and sat downe on the east syde thereof: & there made him a booth and sat vnder it in the shadowe, till he myght se what shoulde chaunce vnto the ctyte.

And the Lord God prepared a wynde wyne, whiche sprang vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heed, to deliuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceeding glad of the wynde wyne. But vpon the next morowe agaynst the spryng of the dawe, the Lord ordeyned a worme, whiche smote the wynde wyne, so that it withered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente east wynde: and the sunne better ouer the heed of Jonas, that he fapnted agayne, and withed vnto his soule that he myght dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Arise thou so angry for the wynde wyne? And he sayd yea, very angry am I, euen vnto the death. And the Lord sayd: I haue compassyon vpon a wynde wyne, wheron thou best wretchedest no labour: nor madest it growe, which sprang vp in one night, and perished in an other: And shouldest thou haue compassyon vpon Ninue that great ctyte, wherein there are aboute an hundred and .xx. persons, that knowe not theyr right hand from the left, belyde moche cattelle?

The ende of the prophete of Jonas.

The booke of the Prophete Micah.

The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of theyr idolatrye.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Micah the Mozaite in the dayes of * Iothan & * Jhas and * Iehzeiah kinges of Iuda: which was shewed him vpon Samaria and Ierusalem.

* Heare all ye people, marke this well I searthe, and all that therein is. Yea, the Lord God hym selfe be wytnesse amonge you, euen the Lord fro his holy temple. For wher: behold: I Lord shal go out of his place, & come downe, & tread vpon the hye thynges of I searthe. The mountayns shal consume vnder him, and the valleyes shal cleane asonde: lyke as was consumed at the fyre, & as the waters run downeward. And al this shal be for the wychednes of Jacob, & the synnes of the house of Irael. But what is the wychednes of Jacob?

cod, Is not? Samaria which is the place of Juda Is not? Jerusalem. Therefore I will make Samaria an heape of stones in the field, to late a boute the vineyard: her stones shall I cast into the valley, and discover her foundations. All her images shall be broken downe, and all her garments shall be burnt in the fire, yea al her idols will I destroy: for why? they are gathered out of the hye of an whoze and into an whozes hye: shall they be turned agai, wherefore I will moune: and make lamentacion, bare and naked will I go: I must mourne like the dragons and take sorowe: as the Estriches, for the yre wounde is past remedy. And why? It is come into Juda, and hath touched the porte of my people at Jerusalem already. Wepe not, lest they at Seth perceyue it.

Thou at Sathaphia, welter thy selfe in the dust and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Saphir, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boist nomore for very sorowe: and why, hez neygh-bour shall take from her what she hath. The re-belious cite hopech that it shall not be so euill but for al that the plague shall come from the Lozde euen into the porte of Jerusalem. The greates noise of the charettes shall feare them, that dwell at Lachis, which is an occasyon of the sinne of the daughter of Sion. for in the came up the widednes of Israel. Per, she sente her coursers into the lande of Seth. The houses of Iyes will discerne the hynges of Israel. And as for the thou that dwellest at Mozaia. I shall byng a possessioner vpon the, & the plague of Israel shall reache vnto Odulla. Make the bald, & shau the because of thy tender children: Make the cleane balde as an Aegle, for they shall be caried away captiue from the.

The seconde Chapter.

Ther agaynst the synfull people.

Woe vnto them, ymagyn to do harme and deuyse vngaciousnes vpon theire beddes, to perforce me it in the clere day for their power is agaynst god. When they couer to haue lande, they take it by vpolence, they rob men of theyr houses. Thus they opprelle a man for his house, and euery man for his heritage. Therefore thus sayth the Lozde: Beholde against this householde haue I deuised a plague, whereout ye shall not plucke your necks: Ye shall nomore go so proudly, for it will be a perplous tyme. In that daie shall this terme be vsed, & a mourning shall be made ouer you in this maner: We be utterly desolate, the porcion of my people is translated. When will be parte vnto vs the lande, & he hath taken fro vs? Reuerthelisse, there shall be no man to deuide the thy porcion in the congregacion of the Lozde. Tylle, holde your tongue (saye they) It shall not tal vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion, sayth the house of Jacob. Is the wyrtie of the Lozde so cleane awaye: or is he so minded? True it is, my wordes are friendly vnto them that lye right: but my people doth the contrary, therefore must I take part against the for they take away both coze and clothe from synple. Ye haue turned your selues to fight: the wound of my people haue ye shut out from their good houses, & taken away myne excellent gites from theyr children. Up, get you hence for here shall ye haue no rest. Because of theyr ydolatry, they are corrupte, & shall miserably perishe.

If I were a fleshy fellow, and a preacher of lies and tolde them that they myght lye bibbyng & dollyng, and be drunken. What were a prophet for this people. But I will gather the i dede O Jacob, and byng the remnaie of Israel alstoge ther. I shall carry them one to another as a flock in the folde, and as the cattel in theyr stals, that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh & gappeth, he shall go before. They shall breake vpon the porte, and go in and out at it. The kyng shall go before them, and the Lozde shall be vpon the heade of them.

Agaynst the crying of synners, and false prophetes.

As I sayde beate, O ye heades of the house of Jacob, & ye leaders of the house of Israel. Should not ye know, what were lawfull and ryght? But ye hate the good, and loue syn: ye plucke of mens shines & the flesh from theyr bones, ye eate the flesh of my people, and flape of theyr syn: ye breake theyr bones, ye chop them in peeces as it were in to a cauldron, & as flesh into a pot. Now yf tyme shall come, that when they cal vnto the Lozde he shall not heare the, but hyde his face from the because that theyz owne ymagynacions, they haue delt so wyckedlye.

And as concerning the prophetes & discraue my people, thus the Lozde sayth agaynst them.
When they haue any thing to bite vpon, then they preach that al shall be well, but if a man put not some thing into theyr mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym. Therefore your visyon shall be turned to night, and your prophesying to darkenesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those prophetes, and the daye shall be darke vnto the.
Then shall the visyon seers be ashamed, and the soldatiers confounded: yea, they shall be faine al the packe of the, to stop theyr mouthes for they haue not Soddes woide. As for me I am full of strenght, & of the spizite of the Lozde ful of iud-gement & boldnes, to shewe the house of Jacob theyr wickednes, & the house of Israel their synne.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye Judges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the ryng that is lawfull, and wick asyde the thing that is streygthe: Ye that buyde by syn with bloude, and Jerusalem with buying wryng. O ye Judges ye geue sentence for gytes. O ye Priestes, ye teach for lucre. O ye prophetes ye prophesy for mony. Yet wil they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lozde amonge vs? Tylle there, can no misfortune happen vs. Therefore shall syn (for your sakes) be plowed like a felde: Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, & the dyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye woide.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the calling of the Gentys, and conuersion of the Jewes.

The prophete

Bene in the latter dayes it shall come to passe that the hyll of the Lordes house shall be as high as the mount of Sion: and the multitude of the Gentiles shall haue them the dwelling place. Come, let us go vp to the hyll of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye see us, and we maye walke in his pathes. For the latter shall come out of Sion: and the worde of God from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence among the multitude of the heathen, and reforme the people of farre countrie: so that of their sweat they shall make ploughe shares, and of their spere speeres.

One people shall not lyfte vp a swerde agaynst a nother: yet, they shall no more learne to fygth: but every man shall speeke vnder his vyne parde and vnder his figger, and no man to frai hym awaye: for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it. Therefore where as all people haue walked euery man in the name of his owne God, we wyl walke in the name of our God for euer and euer. At the same tyme, sayth the Lord wyl I gather vp the lame and the out castes, & suche as I haue chastened, and wyl geue yllue vnto the lame, and make of the outcasts a great people: and the Lord hym selfe shall be theyr hyng upon the mount Sion, from thys tyme forth for euer more.

And vnto the O thou tower of Eder, thou stronge holde of the daughter Sion, vnto the shall it come euen the lordshipp and hyngdome of the daughter Ierusalem. Why then art thou now so heuere: is there no hyng in the care thy counsellors a waye that thou art so pained, as a woman in her trauailer? And now, O thou daughter Sion, be soyr, let it geue the as a wife la bouryng with childe: for now must thou ge the out of the Citie, and dwell vpon the playne feide. Pee, vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered: and there the Lord shall looke the from the hande of thine enemyes.

Nowe also are there many people gathered together agaynst the sayng: what, Sion is cursed, we shall se our lust vpon her. But they know not the thoughtes of the Lord, they vnderstande not his counsaile, that shall gather them together as the sheues in a barn. Therefore get the vp, O thou daughter Sion, and chere the out the soyr: for I wyl make thy boier yron: and thy clauys shall be, that thou maist grind many people: theyr goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lord, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The .v. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Ierusalem.

After that shalt thou be robbed the selfe, O thou daughter Sion: they shall laye siege agaynst vs, & myne the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. And thou bethelem Ephrata, arte lyie amonge the thousandes of Iuda, Out of the shall come vnto me which shall be the gouerner in Israel, whose out goyng hath bene from the beginning and from iust lastyng In the meane while he plageth them for a season vntill the tyme that they which shall beare) haue borne then: and the remnant of his bre that be converted vnto the chyldren of Israel, he shall stand fast: and geue lode in the strength of the Lord, and in the victorie of the name of the Lord his God, and when they be converted, he shall be magnified vnto the furthest parte of the world.

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assirya, may come into your lande, and tread in your bones. We shall byng vp. vii. shepherdes and. viii. prynces vpon them: these shall subdue the land of Assur with the swerde, and the lande of Nimrod with theyr naked weapons. Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assirya, when he cometh with i our land & sette his fote withyn our borders.

And the remnant of Jacob shall be amonge the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lord and as the drops vpon y grasle, that targeth for no man and daryeth of no body. Pee, the residue of Jacob shall be amonge the Gentiles, & the multitude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes of the wood and as the Lyons whelpe among a floche of shepe, which when he goeth forth, he treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hand shall lyse vp vpon thine enemyes, and all thine aduersaries shall perishe. The tyme shall come also, sayth the Lord, that I wyl take thine hozles from the, & destrope thy charets, I wil beate downe the ciyties of thy lande, and ouerthrowe al thy stronge holdes. Al witchcrafts wyl I rote out of thine hande, there shall no more sorchaismes be wythin the. Thyne ydols and thine ymages wyl I destrope out of the, so that thou shalt nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thine owne handes. Thy groues wyl I plucke vp by y rootes & break downe the ciyties. Thus will I be auenged also vpon all the heathen that wyl not heare.

The .vi. Chapter.

Of a reuocation to heare the iudgement agaynst Israel by yug vnygde. What manner of facit pces do please God.

Ethen nowe what the Lord sayth I let y billes heare thy voice, O heare the punishment of the Lord, pee most saynes, and ye myghty foundations of the earth: for the Lord wyl reproue his people & reason w Israel. O my people what haue I done vnto the, or wherein haue I hurt the: geue me answer. Because I brought the from the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of y house of bondage, Because I made Moses, Aaron, & Miriam to leade y: Remembre (O my people) what Balach y hyng of Moab had ymagined agaynst the, and what answer that Balaam y son of Beor gaue him, fro Bethin vnto Spigal that ye maye knowe the louyng & yndenes of the Lord. What acceptable thinge shall I offer vnto the Lord, that I bowe my knee to the Lord God: what I come before hym with burnt offerynges and with calues of a yee olde: hath the Lord a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle.

C Shall I geue my first borne for myne offences, and the fruite of my body for the syn of my soules? I wyl shew the, O man, what is good, & what the Lord requirerth of the, namely, to doe right to haue pleasure in long hyndnes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God. The Lordes voice cryeth vnto the cite, and the man that shal be saued considereth thy name. O Lord, hearken what is your rodde, and here hym that warneth you. Should I not be displeased, for the vnrightheous good in the houses of the wyched, and because the measure is mynished? O shulde I iustifie the false balances, & the bagge of dyscreitful weighters, among those that be full of riches vnrighteously gotten: where the cite sens deale with falsheed, speake lies, & haue dyscreitful tonges in their mouthes.

Therfore I wyl eate in bande to punyssh the, & to make the desolate, because of thy synnes. Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: pee, thou shalt bypunge thy selfe downe. Thou shalt see, but not escape: & those that thou woldest saue, wyl I deliuer to the sword. Thou shalt see, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olyues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynt thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt drinke no wyne. Be hepe the oppynances of Amri, and al the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folowe the pleasures, therefore wyl I make the waste, & cause thy inhabi- teters to be abhorred. O my people: & thus shalt thou heare thine owne shame.

A complaine of the lyke nombre of the righteous agayn the treuth ought we not to helde with oure greates frendes.

I Am become as one that goeth a gleanyng in the barneste. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wold I sayn: withal my bert haue of the best fruite. There is not a gouy vpon eeth: there is not one righteous among men. Thei labour all to shed blud, & euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye thei do wel, whet they do euill. As the prince wil, so saith the iudge, that he may do him a pleasure agayn. The great man speaketh what his bert despyrth: and the hearers allowe hym. The best of them is but as a thyle, and the most righte- ous of them is but as a bytar in the bedge. But whet the day of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be visited, then shal they be wasted away. Let no man beleue his frende, nor put his confidence in a brother. Kepe the port of thy mouth from her that lpeth in thy bosome, for y sonne shal put his father to dyshonour, the daughter shal pte a gaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe: and a mans foes shal be euen they of his owne household.

Reuerdelesse I wyl loke vp vnto the Lord. I wyl pacyently abyde God my sauoure, my God shal beare me. O thou enemye of myne, reioyse not at my fall, for I shal get vp again: and though I lye in darknesse, yet the Lord is my lyght. I wyl beare the punishment of the Lord, for why, I haue offended him: yet he lye in inogremt vpon my cause, and seethe I haue right. He wyl bypunge me forth to the lyght, and I shal be myghteously.

Doe that is myne enemye shal loke vpon it and be confounded, which now saith: Where is thy Lord God? Myne eyes shal beholde her, when she shal be troden downe as the clay in the streetes. The tyme shal come that thy gappes shal be made by, and the lawe shal go abrode: and at that tyme shal they come vnto the from Aflur vnto the strong cities, & from the stronge ctytes vpon the rpuer, from the one see to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

Not withstanding, the land must be wasted because of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of theyr owne ymagynacions. Therefore fede thy people with the rod, the floche of thine heepage, whiche dwell desolate in the wodde: that they may be fedde vpon the mount of Carmel, Basan, and Galaad, as afore tyme. Veruelous thynges wyl I shewe them, & lyke as when they came out of Egypte.

This shal the heathen se, and be ashamed for all theyr power, so that they shal lape theyr hand vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. They shal lyke the dust lyke a serpente, and as the wormes of the eeth, that tremble in their holes. They shal be afrayed of the Lord oure God, and they shal feare the.

Where is there suche a God as thou: that pardonest wychednes, and forgyuest the offences of the remnant of thine heepage? He kepeth not his wrath for euer: & why? his delpyte is to haue compassion: he shal turne agayne, and be mercyfull to vs: he shal put down our wickednesse, and cast al our synnes into the botome of the see. Thou shalt hepe thy tre with wich Jacob, & thy mercy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast swoyne vnto our fathers long ago.

E Full gracious is the Lord, and a strong holde in the time of trouble. He is with them that put their trust in him: when the flood cometh over, and beseteth the place: and when the darknesses be about them, and the shadow of death be upon them, and the shadow of death be upon them, and the shadow of death be upon them. What do ye imagine then against the Lord on this manner? (The when he hath once made an ende, there shall come no more trouble.) The scatterer shall come up against the, and lay siege to the castell. Loke thou wel to the streets, make thy loynes strong, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the Lord shall restore agayne the glory of Jacob, like as the glory of Israel. The destroyers have broken them downe, and marred the vine branches. The spylde of his giantes glysteth, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His charrettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forward, and his spere shaftes are toked in venom. The charrettes rolle upon the streets, and welter in the hye wayes. ## The booke of the Prophete Abacuc.

The fyrst Chapter.

A complayne agaynst Israhel.

This is the heuy burthen, which the Prophece Abacuc dyde. O Lord, how long shall I crye & thou wilt not heare? how long shall I complayne vnto the, sufferynge wylonge, & thou wilt not helpe? Why lettest thou me se weynesse and labour?

* Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is tozme in peces and there can not right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the ryghteous: this is the cause, that wylonge iudgement proceedeth. Beholde amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abashed: for I wyll do a thyng in your tyme, whyche thoughe it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. * For lo, I wyll rapse vp the Caldees, that bytter & swifte people: whiche shall go as wynde as the lande is to take possession of dwellynge places, that be not theyr owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, the se shall yte in iudgement & punyche.

Theyr horses are swifter then the cattles of the mountayne, and byre sozer then the wolues in the cunynge. Theyr horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they flye hastyly to deuoure as the Aegle. They come all tospoyl, oute of them cometh an eastwynde, whiche bloweth and gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as f. lande. They shall moche the kynges, and laugh f. pyntes to scozne. They shall not set by any strong holde, for they shall laye odyssaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freche corage vnto them: to go forth and to do more euill, and so ascribethe power vnto the: god.

But thou O Lord my God: my holy one, thou arte from the begynnynge, therefore shall we not dye. O Lord, thou hast rebaynded them for a punishment, and set them to expoure the might. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se euill, thou canst not beholde the thyng that is tuched. * Therefore thou dost: thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tounge when f. wyched deuoured the man that is better then hym selfe. Thou makest men as the fyre in the see, and lyke as the crespynge beastes, that haue no guyde, they take vp al with their angle, they catche it in theyr nette, and gather it in theyr parne: whet of they reioyce and are glad. Therefore offer they vnto theyr nette, and do sacrifice vnto theyr parne: bycause that thowost it theyr poeyson is become so fat, and theyr meat so plentous. Wherefore, they cast out theyr net agayns and neuer cease to slape the people.

The ii. Chapter.

Col the wyson of the prophete. Agaynst pottynge, couetous, the Ty and pottynge.

I stode vpon my watche, and set me vpon my bulwourke, to looke and se, what he wolde say vnto me, & what aunswere I shoulde geue hym that reproued me. But the Lord answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnlye vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, maye reade it. * For f. vision is yet farre off for a tyme, but at f. last it shall come to passe, and not faile. * And though he tarp, yet wape f. for hym, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke.

Beholde, the vnyghteous thynketh hym selfe in saugarde, as in a strong holde: but the iust shall lyne by his saythe. Lyke as the wyne dyscepueth the dronkarde: euen so the pynde shall faile, & not endure. He openeth his desyre wide vpon the hel, * and is as vnscapable as deathe. All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto hym all people.

But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst hym, and moche hym with a bye worde and saye: Alas vnto hym that heapeth vp ocher mennes goodes. How longe wyll he lade hym selfe wyth theyche clape? Howe sodeynlye wyll they stande vp, that shall byre, and a wake, that shall reare the in peces: yea, thou shalt be theyr praye. * Seynge thou hast spoyled many heathen: therefore shall the remnaunte of the people spoyl the: bycause of mens bloode, and for the wylonge done in the lande, in the Citie, and vnto all them that dwell therein.

* Alas vnto hym, that couetously gathereth euylly gotten goodes vnto his house, that he maye set his nest on hye, to escape from the power of mysfortune. Thou hast decypled the name of thyne owne house, for thou hast slayne to muche people, and hast wyllfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwixte the ioyntes of the buyldynge shall answer. * Alas vnto hym that buyldeth the towne with bloode, & mayn: sayneth the cytye with vnyghteousnesse. Shall not the Lord of hostes byng this to passe that the laboureers of the people shall be byente with a greate crye, and that the thyngs where vpon, the

I Lord, when I hearde speake of thee, I was afraid. The worke that thou hast taken in hande, shalt thou perseuerme in his tyme, O Lord: when thy tyme cometh, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thynekest upon merce, God cometh from Therni, and the holpe one from the mounte of Pharan: Behold.

His glory conereth the heauens, and his earth is full of his prayer. His thyne is as the sunne, and beames of light go oute of his hande, there is his power. Destruction goeth before him, and a pestilent synnelle goeth from his feet.

He standeth and meashureth the earth. He looketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaines of the world fall downe to powder, and the hilles are layne to bowe them selues, for his goynges are euerslastyng and sure.

I sawe that the panyons of the Moians, and the tentes of the land of Moian were vered for weynesse. Wast thou not angry, O Lord in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? yes, when thou sattest upon thy horse, and when thy charrettes had the victory. Thou shewdest thy bowe openly, like as thou haddest promysed with an othe.

Thou comest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne anoynted. Thou smorest downe the house of the vngodlye, and discoueredst his foundacyons, euen unto the necke of the hynd.

Thou dydest trye the thownde with his scripture the heedes of his playne people, whiche come as a storme wynde to scatter me abroad, and are glad when they maye cate up the pooze secretly. Thou makest a way for thyne horses in the see, euen in the myddest of the great waters. When I heare this, my body is vered, my lippes tremble at the voice thereof, my bones corrupt, I am afraid where I stande. O that I might rest in the daye of trouble, that I myghte goe up unto our people, whiche all are ready prepared.

For the figtrees shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no frute. The labour of the olive shall be but lost, and the lande shall bringe no corne: the shepe shall be taken out of the folde, and there shall be no cattell in the stables. But as for me, I will be glad in the Lord, and will reioyce in God my sauyour. The Lord God is my strength, he shall make my feete as the feete of hartes: and he which gyueth the victory shal bringe me to my hye places, syngyng vpon my plumes.

The booke of the Prophete Sophonys.

The first Chapter.

A preachinge agaynst Iuda and Ierusalem by cause of their podeltye.

This is the worde of the Lord, which came vnto Sophonys: the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedolia: the sonne of Amariah the sonne of the sephiah, in the tyme of Josiah, the sonne of Amion kynge of Iuda.

I will gather up all thynges in the land, sayeth the Lord. I will gather up man and beast: I will gather up the soules in the ayre, and the synners in the see: (to the great decaye of synners) and will utterly destroye the men oute of the lande, sayeth the Lord.

I will stretch out myne hand vpon Iuda, and vpon all such as dwell at Ierusalem. Thus wil I rote out the remnant of Baal from thy place, and the names of the Remusins and pries, and such as vpon thy house toppes wofullnesse, howe them selues vnto the holste of beuall, which sweare by the Lord, & by thy name: Walchon also: whiche starte abacke from the Lord, and neyther feare after the Lord, nor regerdyng.

Will still at the presence of the Lord God: for the daye of the Lord is at hand: yea the Lord hath prepared a dayne offering, and called his gested therto. And thus shall it happen in the daye of the Lordes dayne offering. I will visyte synners: the synners chyldren: and all such as weare straunge cloynges. In the same daye also wil I visyte all those that treade ouer the threshold, so proudly, wherby they the Lordes house with robbery and falschod. At the same tyme (saye the Lord) there shall be herde a great crye from the citye, and a howlyng from the other parte, and a great murdres from the bylles. Howle ye that dwell in the myll, for all the merchandise people are gone, and all they that were laden with syluer, are roted out.

At the same tyme will I seke thowowe Jerusalem with lanternes, and visite them that contynue in theyr dregges, and save in theyr bettes. * Thus, the Lord will do neyther good nor euell. Theyr goodes shall be spoyled, and theyr houses layde waste: they shall buyde houses, and not dwelle in them, they shall plante vyneyards, but not dzyne the wyne thereof.

For the great daye of the Lord is at hande, it is harde by and cometh on a pace. Horrible is the tydynges of the Lordes daye, then shall the giant crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrath, a daye of trouble and heuynesse, a daye of utter destruction and mysery, a darke and glomyng daye, a cloudy & stormy daye, a daye of the noise of trompettes & shawmes, agaynst the stronge cyties and hie towres. I will brynge the people into such veracyon, that they shall go aboute lyke blynde menne, because they haue synned agaynst the Lord. Theyr blood shall be wedde as the dust, and theyr bodies as ympe. * Kether theyr syluer nor theyr golde shall be able to deliuer them in that wretched daye of the Lord but the whole lande shall be consumed thowowe the fyre of his gelousye: for he shall soone make cleane ryddaunce of all them that dwell in the lande.

The ii. Chapter.

The moueth to returne to God, prophesyng into the one destruction, and to the other deliuerance.

Rampne yourelues & seache, thow nacyon, that hast no desyre to the lawe, or feyninge go forth that God hath concluded, & or the tyme come wherin man shall passe away as the duste: or the fearfull wrath of the Lord come vpon you: pea, or the daye of the Lordes soe displeasure come vpon you. Wike the Lord al ye me heberted vpon earth, ye that wozke after his iudgements: seke ryghteousnesse. * seke lowynesse: that ye may be deliued in the wrath full daye of the Lord: * for Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shall be layde waste. They shall cast out flood at the none daye, & Accaron shall be pluckt vp by the rootes.

Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the see coast: pe murderous people: the woide of the Lord shall come vpon you. O Canaan thow lande of the whilistnes, I will destroye the, so that there shall no man dwelle in the any more, and as for the see coast, it shall be herdmenne's cotages and shepfoldes: pea, it shall be a porcion for such as remaine of the house of Iuda, to fede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shall they rest towarde nyght for the Lord their God shall visite them, and turne away theyr captiuitie. I haue herde the despyte of Moab, and blasphemys of the children of Ammon, how they haue shamefully entreated my people, and magnified the skyn within the borders of theyr lande. Therefore, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord) I will be as Moab, and Ammon as Gomorren, wherby they haue bedges, salt pyres, and a perpetual wydernesse: The residue of my people shall spoye them, the remnaunte of my people shall haue them in possession. * Thus shall happen vnto them for theyr pride, because they haue delt so shamefully with the Lord of hostes people, and magnified them selues aboue them. The Lord shall be grymme vpon them, * and destroye all the goddes in the lande. And al the fles of the heathen shall woe my hymn, euerie man in his place.

Pe Moabians also shall perishe with my sword yea, he shall streche out his hande ouer synneth, and destroye Iher. * As for Amine, he shall make it desolate, drye and waste. The flockes and all the beastes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it: pellicanes and storkes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall syng in the wyndowes, and rauens shall sit vpon the balkes, for the borders of Cedre shall be ryuen downe. This is the proude and carelesse cytie, that said in her bert. * I am, and there is els none. O how is she made to waste, that the beastes lye there in: who so goeth by, mocketh her, and poynteth at her with his fynger.

The iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the gouernours of Jerusalem, of the callinge of all the Scythia. A comforte to the residue of Iher.

Wo to that abhomyable, spithy, and cruell cytie: which wyl not heare, nor be reformed. Her trust is not in the Lord, neyther wil she holde her to her God. Her rulers with in her, are as rozing & lyons: her iudges are as wolues in the euenynge whiche leaue nothyng but the skinne. Her prophetes are lyght persons and vnfaithfull men, her prestes vnbalowe the sanctuary, and do wronge vnder the pterence of the lawe. But the iust Lord that doth no vnygde, was amonge them, euerie moynynge he wynged them his lawe clearly, and ceased not. But the vngodly wyl not learne to be ashamed. Therefore wyl I roote out this people, and destroye theyr towres: pea, and make theyr streates so voyde, that no man shall go therein. Theyr cyties shall be broken downe, so that no body shall be left, nor dwell there any more.

I sayde vnto them: O feare me, and be contrite to be reformed. That theyr dwellinge shulde not be destroyed, and that there shoulde happen vnto them none of these thynges, wherewith I shall visite them. But neuertheless, they stande vpon early, to folowe the fytthines of their owne ymaginations. Therefore, ye shall wayte vpon me (sayth the Lord) vntill the tyme that I stande vp: for I am determined, to gat der the people, and to brynge the kyngdomes together, that I may powre out myne anger, yea all my wrathfull & displeasure vpon them. * For all the woide shall be consumed with the fyre of my gelousye

Prophecie zacharye

The fourth Chapter.

The fourth chapter of the booke of zacharye, and the fourth of the prophecies of zacharye.

In the eighth moneth of the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the Prophecie, sayinge: The Lorde hath ben soze displeased at your forefathers. And saue thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: * Turne ye vnto me (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayth the Lorde of hostes. * Se ye not lyke your forefathers, vnto whome the prophetes cryed afoze tyme sayinge. Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: * Turne you from your euyl wayes, and from your wyched imagnacions. * But they wolde not heare nor re-garde me sayth the Lorde. What is nowe become of your forefathers, and the prophetes? are they yet styll alpye? But byd not my wodes and statutes (whiche I commaunded by my seruauntes the prophetes) touche your forefathers: Upon this, they gaue answer and sayd: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deuyled to do vnto vs, accordyng to our owne wayes and imagi-nacions, euen so hath he delt wth vs.

Upon the xxiij. day of the xi. moneth, which is the moneth Sebad, in the second yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophecie, sayinge, I sawe by nyght, and lo, ther sate one vpon a redde horse, and stode styll amonge the myre trees, that were benethe vpon the grounde, and behynde him were there redde speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I, O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked wth me, sayde vnto me. I wyll shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the myre trees answered and sayde.
These are they whome the Lorde hath sente to go thowowe the woilde. And they answered the aungel of the Lorde, that stode amonge the my-re trees, and sayde. We haue gone thowowe the woilde: and beholde, all the woilde dwelleth at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungell gaue answer and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how longe wyll thou be vnnmercifull to Ierusalem, and to the cytyes of Iuda: * With whome thou hast ben dyspleased nowe these the scoze and ten yeres. * So the Lorde gaue a louyng and a confortable answer vnto the aungell that talked wth me. And the aungell that communed wth me, sayde vnto me: Crye thou, & speake. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. I am excedyngre gylous ouer Jerusalem and Iyon, and soze displeased at the carelesse heathen: For wher as I was but a lytle angrie, they byd they best that I myghte destroie them. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde I wyll

came out of the lande of Egypte: and my spirit shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Yet more wyll I make heauen & earth, the see, and the drye lande, yea. & I wyll moue all heathen, and the coforte of all heathen shall come, and so wyll I fyll this house with honoure, sayth the Lorde of hostes. * The splure is myne, and the golde is myne, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.
Thus the gloze of the last house shall be greater then the first, sayth the Lorde of hostes: and in this place wyll I gyue peace, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The xxiij. daye of the nynt moneth, in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the prophecie Aggeus, sayinge.
Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes. Alke the prieestes concernyng the lawe, & saye: * yf one beare holy flesch in his cote lap, & with his lap do touche the breade, potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meate, shall he be holy also? The prieestes answered & sayd: No. Then sayd Aggeus: How yf one beinge despyled wth a dead carcase touch any of these: shall it also be vncleane? The prieestes gaue answer, & sayd: yea, it shall be vncleane.
Then Aggeus answered & sayd: euen so is this people & this nation befoze me, sayth the Lorde: and so are all the woikes of theyr handes, yea, and all that they offer, is vncleane.

And nowe (I praye you) consydeze from this day forth, and how it hath gone with you afoze or euer there was layde one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde: that when ye came to a coyne heape of. xx. busshelles, there were scarce ten: * and that when ye came to the wyne presse foz to poure oute. l. pottes of wyne, there were scarce. xx. For I smote you with hete, blastynge and hyle stones, in all the labours of your han-des: yet was there none of you, that wold turne vnto me sayeth the Lorde. Consydeze then from this daye forth & afoze: namely, from the xxiij. daye of the nynt moneth, vnto the day that the foundacyon of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it well, * is not the seed yet in the barne? haue not the vynes the figgetrees, the pomgrana-tes, and olyue trees be yet vncroful, but from this day forth, I shall make them to prospeze.

Whereouer the xxiij. day of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake to zojobabel the prynce of Juda, and saye: I wyll make both heauen & earth, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kyngdomes, yea and destroie the mygdyr kyngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charrettes, and those that syt vpon them, so that both horse and man shall fall downe, euery man thowowe his neygh-bours swearde, and as for the, O zojobabell (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Ba-lathiel my seruaunte: I wyll take the (sayth the Lorde) at the same tyme, and make the as a scale, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The Prophecy

I will turne me agayne in mercy towards Jeruſalem. ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. I will be builded in it, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. yea, and the temple ſhall be builded againe in Jeruſalem, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes.

Crye alſo, and ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. My cryes ſhall be in good place: crye agayne, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. I will comforte you, and choſe Jeruſalem: Then ſaith I vnto myne eyes and ſaith, and behold, ſower boynes. And I ſaid vnto the aungell that talked with me, what be theſe? he answered me. Theſe are the boynes whiche haue ſattered Iuda, Iſrael, and Jeruſalem abroad. And the Lord ſhewed me ſower car-penters. Then ſaith I: what will theſe do? he answered and ſaid. Theſe are the boynes whiche haue ſowed Iuda abroad, that no man durſt liſte vpon his head: But theſe are come to fraye them away: and to caſt oute the boynes of the Gentyles: whiche liſte vpon the boynes ouer the lande of Iuda, to ſcattere it abroad.

The ſcourge of Jeruſalem and Iuda.

Lift vpon myne eyes agayne, and loke: and behold, a man with a meaſure line in his hande. Then ſaith I: whither goeſt thou? and he ſaid vnto me: To meaſure Jeruſalem, that I may ſee how longe and how wyde it is. And behold, the aungell that talked with me, wente bys waye forth.

Then wente there out an other aungell to mete hym, and ſaid vnto hym: Runne ſpeake to this ſponge man, and ſaith: Jeruſalem ſhall be inhabited without any wal, ſo the very multitude of people & cattel that ſhalbe therein. Yea, I my ſelfe (ſaith the Lord) will be vnto her a wal of fyre rounde aboute, & will be honoured in her.

O get you forth, O ſyre from the lande of the north, ſaith the Lord, yea: whome I haue ſcattered into the four wyndes vnder heauen, ſaith the Lord. Haue thy ſelfe. O ſyon: thou that dwelleſt with the daughter of Babylon, for thus ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. After that glorious powder hath he ſent me oute to the hee then, whiche ſpoiled you: for who ſo toucheth you, ſhall touche the apple of his owne eye. Beholde, I will liſte vpon my hande over them: ſo that they ſhall be ſpoiled of choſe: whiche afore ſcrud them, and ye ſhall knowe, that the Lord of hoſtes hath ſente me.

Be glad, and reioyce, O daughter of ſyon for lo, I am come to dwell in the myddelt of the, ſaith the Lord: at the ſame tyme there ſhall many heathen cleue to the Lord, and ſhall be my people. Thus will I dwell in the myddelt of the, and thou ſhalt knowe that the Lord of hoſtes hath ſente me vnto the. The Lord ſhall haue Iuda in poſſeſſion for his parte in the holy grounde and ſhall choſe Jeruſalem yet agayne.

Ad he ſaid vnto me: I ſaw ſeuen aungells ſtandynge before the aungell of the Lord, & ſatan ſtoode at the right hande to tryſte hym. And the Lord ſaid vnto ſatan: the Lord reſpouſe the (thou ſatan) yea, the Lord that hath choſen Jeruſalem, reſpouſe the. Is not this a bande taken oute of the ſyre? Howe I ſaw I was clothed in vncleane rayment, and ſtoode before the aungell worch and werred and ſapde vnto thoſe that ſtoode before hym: Take awaye the ſoule clothes from hym. And vnto hym he ſapde: Beholde, I haue taken a way the ſynne from the and wyl beche the wyrd challenge of rayment. He ſapde moztouer, ſet a ſayze myſter vpon his head. So they ſette a ſayze myſter vpon his head, and put on clothe vpon him, and the angel of the Lord ſtoode there. Then the angel of the Lord teſtified vnto Ieſua, and ſpake: thus ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. If thou wilt walke in my wayes, and kepe my wacche: thou ſhalt rule my houſe, and kepe my courtes, and I will gyue the place amonge theſe ſtand here. Heare (O Ieſua) thou hye preſt, thou and thy frendes that dwel before the ſoy: they are wonderous people. Beholde, I will bypunge forth the braynche of my ſeruant: ſo lo, the ſtone that I haue layde before Ieſua: vpon one ſtone ſhalbe leuen eyes. Beholde I will beu hym out (ſaith the Lord of hoſtes) and take a way the ſime of the land in one day. Then ſhal every man cal for his neighbour vnder the vine and vnder the ſyg tree, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes.

The iii. Chapter.

The viſion of the golden candleſtycke and the expoſition thereof.

Ad the aungell that talked with me came agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is raiſed out of his ſleepe and ſaid vnto me: What ſeeſt thou? And I ſaid I haue lohed, & behold a candleſtycke al of golde with a boule vpon it and his ſeuen lampes therein, & vpon every lampe ſeuen ſtalkes. And two olpue trees ſtoode by, one vpon the right ſyde of the boule, and the other vpon the left ſyde. So I answered, and ſpake to the aungell that talked with me: ſaying. O my Lord what are theſe? the aungell that talked with me answered and ſapde vnto me: knoweſt thou not what theſe be? and I ſapde: No my Lord he answered & ſapde vnto me: This is the woide of the Lord vnto ioyababel, ſaying: & ſepte the choiſe an hoſte of me, no choiſe ſtrength, but choiſe me my ſpirt, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. What arte thou? great mountayn, before ioyababel: thou muſt be made euen. And he ſhall bypunge vpon the ſyre & ſtone, ſo that men ſhal crye vnto hym good luche good luche.

Mozeouer, the woide of the Lord came vnto me, ſaying. The handes of ioyababel haue layde the foundation of this houſe: bys handes ſhall alſo ſynſtifie it, & that ye may knowe how that the Lord of hoſtes hath ſente me vnto you. For he that hath bene deſpyſed a tyll ſe alon, ſhal reioyce, when he ſeeth the tyme weyde in ioyababel.

in zabolabels hand. The seven eyes are the lastest which go throughe the whole world. Then answered I, and sayde vnto hym: what are these two olyue trees vpon the right and left side of the candlestyeke? I spake mozeouer, and sayde vnto hym: what be these two olyue brynnynges, (which thowolde the two golden pyppes) emptye them selues into the golde: he answered me and sayde: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd: no, my Lorde. Then sayde he: * These are the two olyue brynnynges, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The vision of the hynges books, signifyinge the curse of curues, and such as abuse the name of God by the vision of the measure is signified the destruction of Iuda in Babylon.

SO I turned me, lysteinge vpon myne eyes and lohed, and beholde, a hyngte booke. And he sayde vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a hyngte booke of twentye cubytes longe, and ten cubytes bryde. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all thynges shall be iudged after this booke, and all wearers shall be iudged accordyng to the same, and I will bring it forth (sayde the Lord of hostes) so that it shall come to the house of the therse, and to the house of hym that falsely sweareth by my name: and shall remayne in his house, and consume it, with the tymber and stones thereof. Then the Angell that talked with me went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyste vpon thine eyes, and se what is this that goeth forth? And I sayde: what is it? he answered: this is a measure goinge out. he sayde mozeouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earth) to loke vpon: And beholde, there was lyste vpon a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: this is vngodlynesse. So he cast her into the myddest of the measure, and threw the lompe of leade into y mouth of the measure.

D Then lyste I vpon myne eyes, and lohed: and beholde, there came out two women, and they wende was in they wings (for they had wynges like the wynges of a stork) and they lift vpon the measure betwixte the earth and the heauen. Then spake I to the aungel that talked with me: whither will these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: into the lande of * Synear to buyde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

By the four charrettes he describeth the prosperite of Iuda byng domes.

MOzeouer, I turned me, lysteinge vpon myne eyes, and lohed, and beholde, there came foure charrettes, oute, from betwixte two hylls, whiche hylls were of brasse. In the fyrste charret were * redden horses, in the seconde charret were blacke horses, in the thyrde charrette were whyte horses, in the fourth charret were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge.

Then spake I, and sayde vnto the Angell: what talked with me? O lorde, what are these? The Angell answered, and sayde vnto me: * These are the iiii wynges of Iherusalem, whiche became lye to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That was the black horse went into the lande of the north, and the white folowed them, and the speckled horses went forth towarde the south. These horses were verie stronge, & went out, and fought to god and to ke the theyr tourneye ouer the whole earth. And he sayd: get you hie, and go thowge the world. So they went thowout the world. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: beholde: these that go towarde the north, shall spyl my wyath in y north countreye.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Take of thy pypponniers that are come from Babylon: namely, helbat, Tobiah, and Iuda: and come thou the same day, and go vnto the house of Josiah, the sone of Sophony. They take golde and siluer, and make crownes therof, and set vpon the heed of Iesua, the sonne of Josedeck the hye prest, & spake vnto hym. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, the man whose name is * the brynnyng: and he that shall spryng vpon after hym, * shall buyde vpon the temple of the Lorde: yea, euen he shall buyde vpon the temple of the Lorde. * He shall beare the prayse, he shall set vpon the Lordes front, and haue the dominion.

* A prest shall be also vpon his fronte and a pleaceable coslape shall be betwixt them both. And the crownes shall be in y temple of the Lord for a remembraunce vnto helem, Tobiah, Iudiah and Ihen, the sone of Sophony, and such as be farre of: shall come and buyde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe, howe that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye will hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

The estimation of fastyng without mercy, the despayre of charite, and the obstynacy of the people.

It happened also in the fourth yere of hyngte Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto zacharye in the fourthe daye of the nynt moneth, whiche is called Caslen: what tyme as Darasar and Rogomelech and the men that were with them sent vnto Berhel for to praye before the Lorde, and that they shoulde saye vnto the prestes, whiche were in the house of the Lorde of hostes, and to the prophetes. Shoulde I wepe in the * fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres? Then came the voyce of the Lorde of hostes vnto me, sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the land, & to the prestes, and saye: wher ye fasted & mourned in the fyfth and vii. moneth (now this lxx yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? when ye dyd eate also and drynke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for youre owne selues? Are not these the wordes, whiche the Lorde spake by his prophetes afoze tyme when Ierusalem was yet enshayred, and with the, she and the cyties rounde about her: whil there dwelt men: both toward the south and in the playne countreys.

C And the worde of the Lorde came vnto charye, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: * Execute true iudgement: be mercie and louynge kyndnesse: every man to his brother.
Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the stranger and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyne euill agaynst his brother in his herte. * Neuer-thelesse, they wolde not take hede, but turned their backs, and stopped they: eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made they: hertes as an adamant stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes: * wherby the Lorde of hostes sent in bys holpe spirite by the Prophets afoze tyme.

D Wherefore the Lorde of hostes was verie wroth at the. And this is it come to passe: that lyke as he spake and they wolde not heare, euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) but scattered them amonge all Gentyles, whome they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there traueled no man in it neyther to nor fro: for that pleasaunt lande was utterly laped waste.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, and of the mercie of God toward them: Of good wo-res. The calling of the Gentyles.

I The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I was in grete gelousie ouer Syon: yea, I haue bene verie gelous ouer her in a grete displeasure, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I wyll tourne me agayne vnto Syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: * so that Ierusalem shall be called a faythfull and true cytie, the hill of the Lorde of hostes. Yea, an holpe hill.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne, in the streets of Ierusalem. Yea, and such as go with staves in their handes for very age. The streets of the cytie also shall be full of yonge boyes, and damels, playing vpon the streets.

B Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: of the res-due of this people thynke it to be impossible in these dayes: * shoulde it therefore be impossible in my sight. sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll de-liuer my people from the lande of the east and west, and wyll byynge them agayne: that they may dwell at Ierusalem. * They shall be my people, and I wyll be they: God, in truthe and covenant.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: let your handes be stronge, ye that now beare these wodes by the mouth of the prophetes wherby he in these dayes, that the foundation is layed vpon, the Lorde of hostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For wherby * before these dayes, neyther men nor cattell coulde wyne any thyng, neither myghte any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let every man go agaynst his neighbour.

Neuerthelesse, I wyll now intreate the res-due of this people nomore as afoze tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * but they shall be a seede of people, the vyneyarde shall gyue her frute, the gebund shall gyue her encrease, and the beaung shall gyue they: dewe: and I shall cause therein nauite of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the heythen ( O ye house of Iuda, and ye house of Israel) Euen so wyll I deliuer you, that ye shall be a blessing: feare not but let your handes be stronge.

F For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: lyke as I deuysed to punyssh you: what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I deter-mynd now in these dayes for to do well vnto the house of Iuda and Ierusalem, therefore feare ye not. Now the thynges that ye shall do are these * Speake every man the truthe vnto his neygh-bour, execute iudgement truely and peaceablye within your portes, none of you ymagyn euill in his herte agaynst his neyghbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are the thynges that I hate, sayeth the Lorde. And the word of the Lorde of hostes came vnto me, saying: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth the fast of the fyfth, the faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous hyfeastes vnto the house of Juda: only loue the truthe and peace.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet come people: and the enbaptours of many cyties, and they that dwell in one cytie, shall go to an other, saying: * Up, let vs go and praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hostes. I wyll go with you: yea, moche people and myghtye heythen shall come and seke the Lorde of hostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: In y tyme shall .c. men ( out of all maner of language of the Gentyles ) take one Iewe by the hemme of his garmente, & saye: we wyll go w you, for we haue herde, that God is amog you.

The ix. Chapter.

The churchyon of the Gentiles. The cominge of Christe cryng on an alle.

I The worde of the Lorde shall be recy-ued at Abzache, and Damascus shall be his cryng: for the eyes of all men and of the trybes of Israel, shall loke vp vnto the Lorde. The borders of hemah shall be harde therby: Cyrus also and Med, for they are very wyse: * Cyrus shall make her self stronge by spier as the lande, and golde as the claye of the streets. Behold, the Lord shall take her in, and haue her in possession: * he shall smite downe her power into the see, and she shall be co-sumed with fyre: This shall Ascalon se, and be afraid. * Gaza shall be very soze, so shall Accoron also, because her hope is come to confusyon.
For the hyng of Gaza shall perishe: and at Ascalon shall no man dwell.

Strangers

Strangers shall dwell at Iddo, and for the pride of the Philistines, I shall contend out. * They blood will I take away from their mouth, and their abominations from among their teeth. Thus they shall be left for our God: yea they shall be as a prince in Juda, & as a son in law as a Jebusite. And so will I compass my house round about with men of war, going to and fro: that no oppressor come upon them any more. For that have I seen now with mine eyes.

* Rejoice thou greatly, O daughter Sion, be glad, O daughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy king cometh unto thee, even the righteous and Saviour: lowly and simple is he, he rydeth upon an ass, and upon the foal of an ass. I will rote out the chariots from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, the battayle bowes shall be destroyed. He shall give the doctrine of peace unto the heathen, and his dominion shall be from the one sea to the other, and from the floudes to the ende of the worlde.

Ethou also thou owe the bloud of thy covenant. Wilt let the prisoners out of the: pette wherein is no water. Turne you now to the strong holde: that be in prison, and longe soe to be delivered. And this daie I will bring the worde, that I will rewarde the double agayne. For Juda have I bent out as a bowe for me, & Ephraim have I filled. Thy sonnes, O Sion, will I raise up agaynst the Sikes, and make the as a gaurte: swerde, the Lord God shall be sent above them, and his dartes shall go forth as the lightning. The Lord God shall blowe the trumpet, and shall come forth as a storme out of the south.

The Lord of hostes shall defende them, they shall consume and deuoure and subdue the with spunge stones. They shall daryne and rage as it were thowowe wyne. They shall be filled lyke balsam and the hoines of the altar. The Lord they: God shall deliver them in the daie as the flocke of his people. For the precious stones of a diademe, they shall be set up over his lande. O how prosperous and goodly a thyng shall that be: The corne shall make the yong men cheereful and the newe wyne the maydens.

The x Chapter.

The people is moved to requyre the doctrine of synne of the Lord. The Lord promyseth to vspyre and comforte the house of Israel.

Raise the Lord: then byrimes to give the latter rayne, * so shall the Lord make byrgher cloudes, and give you rayne ynough for all the increase of fruite. For wyne is the answer of ydols. The sothfayners lyes, and tell but vayne dreames, the comfort that they give is nothyng worth. Therefore go they astraye lyke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, because they have no shepherde. Wy withoutful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I will vspyre the geeris. For the Lord of hostes will graciously vspyre his flocke the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the battayle. * Out of Juda shall come the primer the napie, the battayle horse, and all the princes together. They shall be as the groundes, which in the battayle treache home the myse upon the strettes. They shall treade, for the Lord shall be with them, so that the hostes shall be confounded.

I will comforte the house of Juda, and preserve the house of Joseph. I will turne them also, for I pette them, and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am they: God, and will deare them. Ephraim shall be as a gaurte, and they: heret shall be cherefull as thowowe wyne: yea they: children shall be glad, and they: heret shall rejoice in the Lord. I will blowe for them and gather them in together: for I will rede me them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I will sowe them amonge the people, that they maye thynke upon me in farre countreys: they shall lye with they: children, and turne agayne I will bringe them agayne also out of lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Affrica. I will carry them into the lande of Silead, and to Libanus, and they shall want nothyng. He shall go vpon the see of trouble, and smyte the see waues so that all the floudes shall be dreyed up. The proude boasting of Assue shall be cast downe, and the scepter of Egypt shall be taken away. I will comforte them in the Lord, that they maye walke in his name: sayth the Lord.

The xi Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The case of the sayntes is comforted to Egypt by the latter. A gaurte vpon agaynst Jerusalem and Juda.

When thy doers, O Libanus, & the syre I maye consume thy cedretrees. Houe yefsyretrees, for the cedre is fallen: yea all proud are wasted away. Houe (O ye shetrees of Basan) for the mighty strong wood is cut downe. When maye beare the shepherdes mourne, for they: gloire is destroyed. When maye beare the ipons wrypses roie, for the pyde of Jordan is wasted away.

Thus sayeth the Lord my God: For the shepe of the slaughter, which shall be slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for: no synne, but they that sell them saye: The Lord be thanked, I am ryche: yea they: owne shepherdes spare them not. Therefore will I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (saye the Lord:) but lo, I will deliver the people, euerie man into his neyghbours hande, and into the hande of his kynge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of they: handes I will not deliver them.

I myselfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two laines, the one is called louyng hyndnesse, the other is called destroyer, and so kepte the shepe. The shepherdes I put out of offyce in one monethe, for I myght not stowe with them, neyther had they any helpe in me. Then sayd I: I will fede you nomore * the thyng that dyeth, let it dye: and that that will perishe, let it perishe: and let the remnaunte eate, euerie one the fleshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my louyng meke laines and broke it, that I might befall the + connaunt whereby I was the withal people. But last was broken in that day.

C Then the poore simple shepheard had a reuerens vnto me, and we shewyd that it was the man of of the Lord. And I sayd vnto the man, if y<sup>e</sup> thinke it good, brynge hyder my wyce: yf no, then leue.

Do then they weped downe the fyve silver pens, the value that I was pryed at. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: call it vnto the potter (a goodly myce fo: me to be valued as of them) and I toke 5 xxx. silver pens and call them to the potter in the house of the Lorde. Thā brake I myne other staffe also, (namelye destroyer :) that I myght loose the brotherhood betwixt Iuda and Israel. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the also the staffe of a folow (they call for a Jewell)

D into the hand of a rorow shepherde: for so. I will raile up a shepherde in the lande, whiche shall not feke after the thynges that be losse, nor care for suche as go astray, he shall not heale the wou ded, he shall not norishe the thyng that is whole: but he shall eate the flesch of suche as be fat, and teare the p. clawes in peces.

¶ Iudas the pcherber that leaueth the flocke: The swerde shall come vpon his arme, and vpon his right eye. his arme shall be cleane dyed vpon, and his right eye shall be sore blynded.

The iii. Chapter.

C Of the destruction and burying agayne of Jerusalem.

3 The heauy burthen whiche the Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde * whiche spied the heauens abzode, layed the foundation of the earth : and giueth man the brach of lyfe. Scholde, I wyl make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfette, vnto al the people that are rounde about her. * Yea Iuda hym selfe also shalbe in the siege agaynst Ierusalem. At the same tyme wil I make Ierusalem an heauy stone for all people, so that al such as lyft vp, shalbe tozne and rent and al the people of the earth shal be gathered together agaynst it.

25 In that day, sayeth the Lorde: I will make all horses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them to be oute of theyr wyters. I will open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all the horses of the people with blindenesse. And the princes of Iuda shall saye in theyr hertes: The inhabiters of Ierusalem shall geue me consolation in the Lorde of hostes theyr God. In that tyme will I make the princes of Iuda lyke an hore burning ouen with wood, and lyke a cresset of fyre amonge the strawe, so that they shall consume all the people rounde about them, both vpon the right hande and the left. Ierusalem also shall be inhabited agayne: namelye, in the same place where Ierusalem standeth.

C The Lorde shall preserve the tentes of Iuda like as afore tyme, so that the glorie of the house of David, and the glorie of the cittizins of Ierusalem shall be but litle regarded, in comparison of the glorie of Iuda. In that daye shall the Lorde defende the ctytizens of Ierusalem, so

And the weast amonge them shalbe as * Dauid and the house of Dauid shalbe lyke aggod house, and as the angell of the Lorde before tye.
At the same tyme wyl I go about to distrope all suche people as come agaynst Jerusalem.
I wyll court, vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon the eytyngs of Jerusalem & wyl I poure out the spyrte of grace and compassio, so that they shal loke vpo me, whom they haue perced, and they shal bewepe hym as men moune for theyr only begotten sonne: yea and be sorre for hym as men are sorre for theyr fyrst chyld.

* Then shall there be a great mourning at Jerusalem: like as the lamentation at Tabor non in the felde of Gaggadon. And the lande shal be waple euery kindred by them selues alone and they? wyues by them selues. The kindred of the house of * Nathan them selues. The kindred of the house of Dauid them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues. The kindred of the house of Levi them selues alone, and they? wyues by them selues. The kindred of the house of Simeon them selues alone, and they? wyues by them sel-ues. In lyke maner all the other generacions, euery one by them selue alone, and their wyues by them selues.

¶ Ceteri. Chapter.

Of the well of grace and truth. Of the cleane sp-bance of poplarre: and of false prophets.

In that tyme shall the house of Dauid and the citizing of Ierusalem haue an open well, so wash of synne and vncleannesse. And then (sayeth the Lord of hostes.) * I will destroye the names of the ydolles out of the laude: so that they shall nomore be put in remembrance.

* As for the falsse prophetes also, and the vncleane spryte, I will take them out of the land so that yf anye of them prophesye anye more his owne father and mother that begat hym, shall saye vnto hym. Thou shalt saye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, his owne father and mother that begat him shall wounde hym, when he prophesyeth. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, euerye one of his vision when he prophesyeth: neyther shall they weare sauclothes anye more, to discerne me withall. But he shall be sayne to saye: * I am no prophete: I am an husbande man, for so am I. I taught by * Adam from my youth vp. And yf it be sayde vnto hym: how came these woundes then in thyne bades: he shall answer. Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

37pfe, & thou ſwerde, vpon my ſhepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, ſaith the Lord of hoſtes. * Smyte the ſhepherde, and the ſhepe ſhall be ſcattered abroad: And ſo I will ſourne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it ſhall come to paſſe (ſaith the Lord:) that in all the lande two partes ſhall be rooted out, * but the thyrde parte ſhall remaine therein. And the ſame thyrde parte will I brynge thowse the frye, and will cleuſe them as the ſyluer is cleuſed: pea, and tepe them lyke as golde is teped.

Then shall they call upon my name, & I will

¶ The xiii. Chapter.

¶ The building of the church under the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kynge of the Lozde.

Behold, the daye of the Lozde cometh that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heathen to fight agaynst Jerusalem, so the cite shall be wone, the houses spoyled, & the women despyled. The halfe of the cite shall go a waie into captiuitie, and the residue of the people shall not be caried out of the cite. After that shall the Lozde go forth to fight agaynst those heathen, as me vs to fight in the day of battel.

¶ Then shall his free stande vpon the mount Oli-uete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem And the mount Oliuete shall cleue in two, east-warde and westwarde, so þat there shall be a great valeye, and the halfe mount shall remoue toward the north, and the other toward the south. And ye shall lye vnto þe valeye of my hylls, for þe valeye of the hylls shall reach vnto Alat. Pea, lye that ye like as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Osiab kynge of Iuda. And the Lozde my God shall come, and all sayntes with hym.

In that day shall it not be lycht, eyther cleare or dymme. * Thys shall be that special daye which is knowen vnto the Lozde, neither daye nor night but aboute the euynge tyme it shall be lycht.

* In that tyme shall there waters of lyfe runne out from Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them to-warde the east see, and the other halfe toward the vntermost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. * And the Lozde hym selfe shall be kyng ouer all the earth

¶ At that tyme shall there be one Lozde onely, & his name shall be but one. Men shall go aboute the whole earth, as vpon a seide from Siba to Wend, and from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: fro Jomins porte, vnto the place of the first porte, and vnto the corner porte: and from the towre of Hananiel, vnto the kynges wyne presses.

There shall men dwell, and there shall be nomore curfage, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherewith þe Lozde wyl smyte al people, that haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, they: first he shall consume a waie, though they stand vpon they: fete, they:
eyes shall be corrupt in they: holes, & they: tong shall consume in they: mouth.

In that daye shall the Lozde make a greates sedicion among them, so that one man shall take another by the hande, and lape his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. * Iuda shall fight also agaynst Jerusalem, and þe goodes of all the heathen shall be gathered together rounde about: golde and syluer, and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall thys plage go ouer hoyses, mules, camels, asses, and all the bestes þe shall be in the doost, lyke as yonder plage was. Eue-ry one þe remaineth then of al the people, whiche came agaynst Jerusalem, shall go by earlie, to destroye the kynge (euen the Lozde of hostes) and kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generation vpon the earth goeth not to Jerusalem for to worshippe the kynge (euen the Lozde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no raie. ¶ The kynges of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shall not rayne vpon them neyther.

¶ Thys shall be the plage wherewith þe Lozde wyl smyte all the heathen, that come not vp to kepe þe feast of tabernacles: pea, thys shall be the synne plage of Egypte and the synne plage of al people that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

¶ At that tyme shall the kynges geue of þe hoys-es be holy vnto þe Lozde, & the kettles in þe Lozdes house shall be lyke the basens before the aultre: pea, al the kettles in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holy vnto the Lozde of hostes and al the þat shalpe offeringes, shall come and take of them: & dryghte them therein. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Cananites in þe house of the Lozde of
hostes.

by Malachy. I haue loued you sayeth the Lozde, & yet ye say: Wherin hast thou loued vs?
* Was not Elau Jacobs bzo-ther sayeth þe Lozde: & yet haue

I loued Jacob, and hated Elau: * pea, I haue derne for dragons. And though Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wyl go buyde vpon gayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayeth the Lozde of hostes) * what they builded, that brake I downe so that it was called a cursed lide, and a people, whome the Lozde hath euer ben angry wyt hall.

Your eyes haue sene it, & ye your selues must confesse, that the Lozde hath brought the lande of Israel to great honoure. * Shulde not a shone honoure his father, and a seruante his master?
* ¶ I be now a father, where is myne honoure?
¶ I be þe Lozde, where am I feared? sayeth the Lozde of hostes.

¶ Come to you prestes, that despyse my name.
And ye saye: wherein haue we despyled thy name? In this, þe offer vncleane bread vpon

But they that feare  $\text{God}$ , saye thus one to another: The Lorde consydereth and heareth it.
Yea, it is before hym a memoiall booke wyteten for such as feare the Lorde, and remembre hys name: And in the daye that I wyll make (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) they shal be myne owne possession: and I wyll saue them, lyke as a man saueyth hys owne soules, that doeth hym seruice. Turne you therfore, & consyde what dysference is betwixt the righteous and yngodly. bet wyte hym that serueth  $\text{God}$ , and hym that serueth hym not.

The thyzde booke

of Eldras.

The fyfte Chapter.

¶ Josias heryng the pallasour. After howe much he had heard of the pallasour made byng in his brother's house, he went out, and sought in his brother's house. Jerusalem is broken down, and the children are taken.

After Josias held a feast of Easter in Jerusalem unto the Lorde. He slew the pallasour the xiii. daye of the fyfthe moneth. He set the priests also in order, accordyng to theyr daye of curies, beyng atayed in longe garments in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake unto the Levites the holpe mynistrers of Israel, that they shoulde halowe them selves unto the Lorde, to set the holy Arke of the Lorde, in the house of hymge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayd: Ye that name beare the Arke upon your shoulders. Nowe serve your Lorde and take the charge of his people of Israel, after your vyllages and your trybes: accordyng as hymge Dauid the kynge of Israel, hath ordeyned, and accordyng as Salomon his sonne hath honozably prepared: see, loke that ye all do scrupel in the temple accordyng to theyr ordynge, and scrupel of the pympnall me which are appoynted out of the tribes, so no scrupel for the chyldren of Israel. * Till the pallasour, and prepare of trynges for your brethren, and do accordyng to the commaundement of the Lorde, which was geuen unto Moses. And unto the people he was founde, Josias gaue xxx. thousande of shepe lambs, kyddes, and goates, and the thousand oxen. These the kynge (of his kynge lyberalite) gaue unto the people, accordyng as he had promysed: and to the pallasour for the pallasour, he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Wozouer Jechonias, and Semeias, and Rathanaell, his brethren, and Hasabias, Jechiel, and Josabab gaue them to the pallasour, fyne thousande shepe, and fyne hundred bullocks.

¶ And when these thynges were brought to passe, the pallasour and the Levites stode goodly in theyr ordynge, and had the unleuened bread thowme out the trybes. And after the ordynge of the pympnall men in the trybes, they offered unto the Lorde in the syght of the people, accordyng as it is wyrtten in the booke of Moses, and so they roasted a Easter lambe as accordyng was. As for the thankofferynges and the other, they dyght in the hettels and pottes, and set them before the people with good wyll, and afterwarde before them selves and the pallasour. For the pallasour offered the fat untill the tyme was expyred, but the Levites prepared for them selves and for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holpe trynges also, the chyldren of Alaph stode in theyr order, accordyng as Dauid deuysed. And the Alaph, zachary, and Iduthum, which were appoynted by the kynge. Wozouer the pottes and doze hepers stode by the doores and that dyligently, so that none went out of his standyng and scrupel: for theyr brethren (the Levites) prepared for them.

¶ Thus were all thynges performed, that belongeth to the offeringe of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the pallasour and offered thankofferynges befor the Lorde, and the Lorde accordyng to the commaundement of hymge Josias.

¶ So the chyldren of Israel which were then present helde an honourable pallasour, and the feast of Easter byade seven dayes longe. Per, suche a pallasour was not kepte in Israel from the tyme of the prophet Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as this which hymge Josias helde, and the pallasour the Levites, the Jewes, and all Israel, of all the that were at Jerusalem. And in the eighth tene yeare of the reigne of Josias was this pallasour kepte. And with a perfecte herte byd hymge Josias order all his woiches, before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wyrtten of hym in tymes past, concerning those that synned and were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before al people: that sought not the woide of the Lorde vpon Israel. * After all these actes of hymge Josias, Pharaos the kynge of Egypt went up and came toward Carmis by Euphrates, and Josias went to mete hym. Then sent he hymge of Egypt to Josias, saying: what haue I to do with the kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thy way home agayne in al hast. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon his charer, but vndertoke to fyght agaynst hym, and harkned not unto the woide of the prophet, which he tolde hym out of the mouth of God, but pytched battayle agaynst hym in the felde of Magaddo. And the pympnes pleased to hymge Josias. Then sayde he hymge vnto his seruantes. Carry me away out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediately his seruantes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. Then sat he vp vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed, and was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. And in all Iury they mourned for Josias, per, the rulers also and theyr wyues made lamentacion for him vnto this day. And this was done euer tyl in Israel.

¶ These thynges are wyrtten in the booke of the sayers of the kynges of Juda, namely al the actes and woiches of hymge Josias, his kynge ly power and maistly, his vnderstandyng in the lawe of God, and what he dyd, per, thynges which are not wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. * And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made hym kynge in steade of Josias his father, when he was xiii. yere olde. And he reigned ouer Israel. iii. monethes. And the kynge of Egypt put hym downe, and he shoulde not reigne in Jerusalem, and rayled vp a tace of the people: namely, an hundred talentes of silver and one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt also made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda, and Jerusalem. As for them of the kynge's counsell with the kynge hym selfe and zacharys his brother, he toke them and rayled them awaye prisoners into Egypt.

and Jerusalem, and he dyd cruel before the Lozde. After this Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came up, & bound him with bandes of yron & carped hym vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonosor also toke al the vessels & their instruments in the temple of the Lozde, & all the Jewels, & carped them vnto Babilon, & brought them into his owne temple at Babilon. Of his wickednes & ungodlines it is wyrtten in the booke of the actes of the kynge. And Joachim his sone raygned in his stead he was made kynge beyng. xiii. yere olde, and raygned but. iii. monethes and. x. dayes in Jerusalem, and dyd cruel before the Lozde. So after a yere Nabuchodonosor sente and caused him to be brought vnto Babylon wth the holy vessels of the Lozde & made Seberchas his brother kynge of Juda and Ierusalem, when he was xxi. yere olde, and he raygned. xi. yere.

And he dyd cruel also in the synne of the Lozde and rased not for the wordes that were spoken vnto hym by the prophete Jeremij, at the mouth of the Lozde. And where he had made an oth vnto king Nabuchodonosor, he forsooke him selfe and fell fro hym haupinge a synnecke & a herte, & transgressed all the statutes & othynances of the Lozde God of Israhel. The rulers also & the heades of the people of the Lozde dyd muche euell, & became vngodly, moze then the heathen, beyng despyled in all maner of abhominacions: Pea, & despyled the holy temple of the Lozde at Jerusalem. And the God of they: fathers sent his messengers vnto the, to turne them backe: and to cal them agayne from they: synnes: for he wolde spare haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had bys messengers in despyson: and loke what God spake vnto them by his prophetes, they made but a spozte of it. & his drewe on so longe tyl the Lozde was wroth wth his people for they: vngodlynes, & tyl he caused the kynge of the Chaldees to come vp, which sette they: poge men wth they: swerde yet, even in the compasse of they: holy temple, & spared no body, neither poge nor olde, neither mayden nor yong man, but they were al deluyered into the power of the kynge of the Chaldees, & al the holy vessels of the Lozde & the kynge's treasures toke they and carped them vnto Babilon. As for the house of the Lozde, they went vp in to it, and brente it, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towers, destroyed all her noble buyldynges & brought them to naught, and the people that were slayne wth the swerde, they carped vnto Babilon.

Thus became they prisoners and bondmen of the kynge of Babilon, tyl they were deluyered & raygned for themselves, & wth the wordes of the Lozde were fulfilled, whiche he promysed them by the mouth of the prophete Jeremij, and tyl the lande had her rest: namely all the tyme that laye wast, had it rest and quyetnes. lxxvii. yeres.

The .iiij. Chapter.

¶ The growth brente to the Jewes to reforme to Iherusalem, and to shew that the holines of the temple. After that our fathers before went to Babilon: whiche caused the Jewes for hardynesse of the cytie: and to in the buyldynges of Iherusalem the growth of Babilon.

Owe when kynge Cyrus raygned over the Persians, & wth the Lozde wolde persourne the wordes that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophete Jeremij: the Lozde rased vp the spyzes of Cyrus, & kynge of the Persians: so he caused his wyspynge to be proclaimed thowow out bys whole realme, saying: Thus sayeth the kynge of Persians: The Lozde of Israhel that hys Lozde hath made me kynge of the lande, and commanded me to buyde hym in a house at Jerusalem in Jewry. Pether be any nothe of your people the Lozde be wth hym, & go vp wth him to Jerusalem. And all they that dwel rounde aboute that place shal helpe them, whet her it be of gold wth syluer, wth gyftes, wth horses and necessary catel, & al other thinges shal be brought wth a freewyl to the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem.

¶ Then the pyncepsall men out of the cytyes & byllages of Juda, and Ben Jamin rode vp to dyd the pzealles also and the Leuites (whome the Lozde had moued) to go vp, & to buyde the house of the Lozde at Jerusalem. And they that were about them helped the wth all maner of gold, and syluer, and catel also, & wth many lyberall gyftes, and this dyd many one, whose mynde was stirred vp thereto. Kynge Cyrus also brought forth the vessels, and ornaments, that were halowed vnto the Lozde: whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon had carped awaye from Jerusalem and consecrated them to his Idol, and ymage) and deluyered them to Mithridatus, his treasurer, and by hym they were deluyered to Salamanasar the debyte in Jewry. And thys was the nombze of them. ii. M. and. iiii. C. syluer boules xxx. siluer basens. xxx. basens of gold. ii. M. and. iiii. C. vessels of syluer, and a. M. besyde. Al the vessels of golde & syluer were. v. M. viii. C. and lx. These were nombzed vnto Salamanasar, & to them shew come agayne wth him to Jerusalem out of the captiuite of Babilon. Nowe in the tyme of kynge Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia, these men: Balamus & Mithridatus, Sabellius Rathimus, Balthemus, Demetius the scribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria & in other places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherein they displayed vnto the kynge of them in Jewry & Jerusalem. The letter was made after thys maner. By the seruauntes Rathimus, the scribe wyrtter, Sabellius the scribe, & other iudges of the court in Celosia, and Bhenices. Be it knowen & manifest to our lozde the kynge, & the Jewes whiche are come vp from you vnto us into the rebellyous and wyched cytie begynne to buyde it agayne, & the walles about it, & to set vp the temple a newe Nowe if this cytie and the walles therof be set vp agayne they shal not onely refuse to geue tributes and taxes, but also rebel vterly agaynst the kynge. And for so muche as they take this in hande nowe aboute the temple, we thoughte it reason, to thynke no lesone of it but to shewe it vnto our Lozde the kynge, and to certifie hym therof: to the intente that if it please the kynge, he maye cause it to be soughte in the booke of olde of Eldras thou shalt fynde such warnyng: wy-om, & that vnderstande þe chys cytie hath alwaye bene rebellious and dyobedient, that it hath subdued kynge & cyties, & that þe Jewes whych dwel therein, þane bene a rebellious, obstinate unfaythful, & fyghtryng people, for the whiche cause thys cytie is wasted. Wherfore now we certefye oure lord the kynge, that yf thys cytie be buylde and occuped agayne, and the wal-les thereof set vpon newe, thou canst haue no passage into Celosyia and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus, the sayd wynter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius, the scribe, & to the other officers & dwellers in Moria, and Phenices, after thys maner: I haue red the epistle whiche thou sentest vnto me, & haue commaunded to make diligent searche, & haue found, þe cite hath euer resisted kynge, that the same people are dyobedient, and haue caused muche warre, & that myghty kynge haue ragged in Ierusalem, whiche also haue ragged vpon axes of Moria, and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaunded those people, þe they shal not buyde the cytie, þe they make nomore in it, and that they pcease no farther with the buydyng for so muche as it myghte be the cause of warre and dypleasure vnto kynge.

Nowe when Rathimus & Sabellius the scribe & the rulers in the lande had red the wytyng of kynge Ierobabell, they gat them togeather, and came in all the haste to Ierusalem wyth an host of horsemen, and wyth much people of foote, and forbadde them to buyde. And so they left off from buydyng of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Darius.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. For the sentence of the chys people men, of the which the first is Darius.

Kynge Darius made a great feast vnto his seruantes, vnto all his counte, & to all the officers of Media and Persia, yee, to all the debtyes and rulers þe were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia an hundred and xxvii. countrees. So whē they had eaten & dronke, bryngge satysfied, and were gone home agayn. Darius þe kyng went into his chaber, layde hym downe to slepe, and so awoke.

Then þe poore men, þe kepte the kynge's person, & watched his body, comoned amonge them selys, and spake one to another: let every one of us seye some thyng & loke whose sentence is wyser & moze excellent then the other, vnto him shall kyng Darius geue great gyfte, & clothe hym w purple, he shal geue hym vessels of golde, to dync in, clothes of golde & conerynges: he shall make him a costly charre & byble of gold, he shall geue him a bonet of whyte sylke, & a chayne of gold a bout his necke: yee, he shal be þe seconde & pryncy-pal lorde vnto kynge Darius, & that because of his wysdom, & shal be called the kynges kinsma.

So every one wrote his menyngge, sealed it and layde it vnder the kynge's pelowe, & layde: when the kynge awoketh, we wyll geue hym one wytyngge, and loke whose wyde the kynge & his chere lordes iudge to be the mooste wyslye spoken, the same shall haue the wytyngge. One wrote: the kynge is a stronge thyng. The seconde wrote: the kynge is stronger. The third wrote: Women haue permoze strengthe, but aboue all thynges the truth beareth a waye the wytyngge.

Nowe when the kynge was clyen vp, they toke they wytynges & deliuered the vnto hym, & so he red the. Then sent he forth to call all his chere lordes, & all the debtyes & rulers of þe countrees of Media & Persia. And whē they were set downe in the countre, the wytynges were red before them. And he commaunded to call for the poore men þe they myghte declare they menynges the selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto them: shewe vs, & make vs vnderstande what the thynges are þe ye haue wytyten. Then began the first whiche had spoken of the strengthe of wyne & sayde: O ye men & wyne is mercurious stronge, & ouercommeth them þe dyncche it: it deceaueh the mynde & dyncgeth bothe the poore man & the kynge to dorage & vanite. Thus doth it also w the bond-man & wyth the fre, wyth the poore & ryche: it taketh a way they vnderstandyng, & maketh them carelesse and mery, so that none of them remembereth any beuynesse, or det, or butte. It causeth a ma to chynche also þe the thyng that he doth is donest & good: and remembereh not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in any chynche, and that he ought not to do luche thynges. Wherouer when men are dyncchynge, they forget all frendshipp all brotherly faythfulnes & loue, but as sone as they are dyncchen, they dyncche out þe sword & wil fyghte: and whē they are layde downe from the wyne, & so clyen vpon agayne, they ca not tel what they byd: iudge ye nowe is not wyne þe strongest?
For who wolde els take in hāde to do luche thin-ges? And whē he had spoke this: he held his tōg.

¶ The. iij. Chapter.

¶ The declaration of the two laste sentences of the poore men: propounded in the chapter before: of which the first is, that wyne beareth & dynccheh in all thynges & in mooste communed and auailed. Darius myghte iudged to all the rulers vnder hym, that they shoulde ake Ierobabell, to the buydyng of Ierusalem.

Then the seconde whiche had sayde: þe the kynge was stronger began to speake, sayenge: O ye men, are not they the strongest & mozt excellent, þe conquere the land and the see, and al that is in the see & in the earth? Nowe is the kyng lord of all these thynges, and hath the domynyon of them all, and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. Yf he send him self forth a warfarr, they go and brenne downe hylles, walles, and towers.
They are slayne, and slaye other men: them sel-ues, and ouerpasseth not þe kynge's wyde. Yf they get þe victory, they bryng the kyng al þe spoyle.
Yf he wille the other þe medle not wyth warres & fyghtryng, but tyll the grounde: whē they reape they bryng trebutte vnto þe kyng. And yf þe kyng alone do but commaund to kyll, they kyll: yf he co-maunde to forgeue, they forgeue: yf he commaunde to symte, they symte: yf he byd dyncche awaye, they dyncche awaye: yf he commaunde to buyde, they buyde: yf he commaunde to brenne downe, they brenne downe: yf he commaunde to plant, they plant.

The thynde booke

B The comen people and the rulers are obedyent vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane se alon speeth hym downe, eatech and dysparched and tareth his reffe: then kepe they watche round about the kynge, and not one of them dare get hym out of the waye, to do hym ome busynes, but must be obedyent vnto the kynge at a woide. Judge ye now, O ye men dothe shuld not be go farre aboue, vnto whom me are thus obedyent? And when he had spoke thus, he held his tounge. The thynde, whose name is iozobabell, whiche had spoken of women, and of trouth beganne to saye after this maner: O ye me it is not þ great kynge, it is not the myltitude of men, neyther is it wyne that excellith: who is it then that hath the loydehpy ouer them? Haue not women borne the kynge, and all the people that rule those thinges: haue not women borne them and broughte them vp, that plante the dynes, whereoute the wyne cometh? They make garmentes for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde and syluer and all precious thynges, & se a well fauored womā, they leaue altogether and turne they eyes onely vnto the womā, and gaze vpon her, and haue moze desyre vnto her, then vnto þ syluer & golde, or any maner of precious thyng. * A man leaureth his father that broughte hym vp, leaureth his owne natural countree, and cleaureth vnto the womā, yee, he leopardeeth his lyfe wth the woman, and remembereyth neyther father, nor mother, nor countrey. By this then ye must nedes knowe that women haue domynyon ouer you.

Gen. 1.1.3
Gen. 1.1.4
I. Cor. 1.2.3
Eph. 1.2.3

Doeth it not greue you? A man taketh his swerde, and goeth his waye to steale, to kyl, to murder, to laye vpon the see, & seyth a lye and goeth in the darchnes: and when he hath stolen, byscaued & robbed, he byngereyth it vnto his lone agayne, a mā loueth his wyfe better the father or mother: yee, many one ther be, that run out of they wyttes, & become bondmen for they wyues sake, many one also hath perished haue den hayne, and haue synned because of women.

D And nowe beleue me I knowe a kyng, whiche is great in his power, & all landes stande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hande vpon hym: yett byd I se, that I came, (the daughter of the great kyng Sarracus) the kynges concubine, lat desyre the kyng vpon the ryght hand, & toke of his crowne from his head, and set it vpon his owne head & smote þ kyng wth her left hand. Whereouer the kyng looked vpon her with open mouth, & she laughed vpon hym, he laughed also, but yf she toke any displeasure in him: the kyng was fayne to flatter her, and geue her good wordes, yll he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

O ye me, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, & grete is the heauen. Who doth these thinges? Then the kyng & the princes looked one vpon another. Who be beganne to speake of the trouth: O ye men are not women stronger? Great is the earth, grete is the heauen, swyft is þ course of the sunne, * he compasseth the heauen rounde aboute, & seetheth his course agayne to his owne place in one day. Is he not excellent? Both the? Yee, great is the trouth, & stronger then all thynges. All the earth called vpon the trouth, the brauen prayeth it, all woemen shake and tremble at it, and wyth it is no vnyrghteous thyng. Wyne is vnyrghteous: the kyng is vnyrghteous: women are vnyrghteous: all the chyldren of men are vnyrghteous: yee, all they woemen are vnyrghteous, & there is no trouth in the: in they vnyrghteousnes also shal they be destroyed and perethe. As for the trouth * it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it lyueth and conquereth for ever moze: wylde wythout ende.

The trouth accepteth no persons: it putteth no difference betwixte ryche or poore, betwixte the myghtie or symple, but doth reygde vnto euery mā, whether they be euil or good, & al me are loyngly dealt wthall in the wothes of it. In the iudgement of it, there is no vnyrghteous thyng but strength kyngdome & power & maiestie for ever moze. Blessed be þ God of trouth. And wyth þ he helde his tounge, & al the people cryed & sayd: Great is the trouth, & aboue al. The sayd þ kyng vnto hym: Al the what þ wyte, moze then is appointed in the wyrryng, and I shall geue it the: thou art founde wyse then thy companyons thou shalt sit next me, and be my kynsman. The sayd he vnto the kyng: Remembre thy promise and vowe, whiche thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to thy kyngdome) to buyde vp Jerusalem, and to lende agayne all the vessels, and Jewels that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: whiche Cypus separated, when he offered in Babylon, and wolde lende the agayne. And thy mynde was to buyde vp the temple, whiche the Edomites byent, when Jerusalem was destroyed by þ Chaldees. Thy onely (O kyng) is þ thyng that I requyre this is thy maiestie, whiche I desyre and aske of the: thou performe the vowe, whiche thou wist thyne owne mouth hast made vnto þ kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kylled hym, * & wrote a letter vnto all the debytes and shreues, to al the lordes and nobles, þ they shulde conuey hym forth, and all them þ wolde go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto al the shreues that were in Celosyia, and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, that they shulde byawe Cedze trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buyde the cype wythall. Whereouer, he wrote vnto all the Jewes þ were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome, & no officer nor ruler, nor shreue, shuld come to they dores, and that all they lande whiche they had conquered, shulde be free & not trybutarpe: And that the Edomites shulde geue ouer the cypes & pylages of the Jewes, whiche they had taken in yee, and þ they shulde yearely geue twentye talentes to the buyldyng of þ temple, vntyl the tyme þ it were synished, & to the dayly halowynge of the byentofferynges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearely also: And þ all they which come fro Babyls to buyld þ cite, shuld haue fre lyder tye: they & they chyldren, and all the yeailes.

He wrote the greetnes also and commaundbut that I shoulde garmente wylde be given them wherein they myght feed: and to shew that commendement shoulde be given to the Levites, whiche the have, that the house were syncretized, and Jerusalem multiplied up, & commanded I all they that watched the citty shoulde have theyr porcyons & wages. He came over all the welles that Cyrus had separated from Babyld: and all that Cyrus had given in commandment, the same charged he also: that it shoulde be done, and sent unto Jerusalem. Nowe when this yonger man was gone forthe, he turned his face toward Jerusalem, & prayed the kyng of heauen, and sayd: "Of the commeth the victorie, of the commeth wysdom and clearenes, & I am thy seruant. Blessed art thou whiche hast given wysdome: the wyll I praise O Lord, thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, & wente unto Ba-byld. And when he cam there, he tolde this unto all his brether, & that were at Babylon, and they prayed the God of theyr fathers, that he had geuen them refreshynge & lybertie to go up and to buyld Jerusalem & the temple (wherein the name of the Lord is called upon) and they reioysed w instrumentes and gladnes seven dayes longe.

Of the v. Chapter.

¶ These I entruer to Jerusalem at this tyme. They begonne that executed the office of the preasthode, & were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achufos, the sonnes of Addin, whych maryed one of the daughters of Pharieleg, and were named after hym. The wyrtynge of the same hynred was sought in the register of they: generacon, but it was not founde, & therefore were they sobydren to execute the office of the preasthode.

Unto them sayd Achemias, and Astaras that they shulde haue no porcion in the Sanctuarye, till there rose up an hye preaste, that were wel instructe in the playne clearenesse and truth. Of

E They: heades also and the rulers in the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem, and wolde buyde and set up the temple of God agayne in hys place, they gaue (after they: babilite) vnto the temple, to the treasure, and to the scrupce of the Sanctuarye. xlii. M. posidex of golde, fyue thoutes. And so dwelte the preastes and the Leuytes and the people that went out to Jerusalem, and in the countrey there aboute, the syngers also & the postres, euery one of Israhel in hys owne lade.

Let. iii.

* So when the leuente moneth came: and when the chyldren of Israhel were euery man at hys busynesse, they came all wyth one assente in to the court whiche was before the East doore.
And there stode Iesua & sonne of Joseder, & hys brethren the preastes, and zojobabell, the sonne of Dalathpel, and hys brethren, settinge up an auter, to offer burnt sacrifices vpon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses.

Ex. xxxvi.
Lev. xvi.
1. Mach. i. c.

There came people also of other countreys & the heathen out of all landes, to set up the alter in his place, and offered sacrifices and burnt offeringes vnto the Lorde in the mornyng. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, as it is commaunded in the law. And dayly offered they as accorde was, and made the sacrifices appointed, the offerings also of the Saboths, and of the new Moones, and all holpe feastes.

Let. iii.

* And all they that bowed offerings vnto the Lorde, began at the new Moones of the leuente moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yett buyde. And they gaue vnto the masons & carpenters, money, meate, & drynke wyth chearfulnesse, vnto them of Sydon, also & Tyre, they gaue carres, & they could carry Cedre trees, from Lybanus to be topres, and beames and that they shulde make they: pyes in the haue of Joppe, accorde as it was appointed and ordyned by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

And in the secde yere, they came into the temple of God, at Jerusalem. * In the secde moneth began zojobabel the sonne of Dalathpel, & Iesua the sonne of Joseder, & their brethren the preastes and Leuytes: and al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of captiuite of Babylon, & layed the foundacis of the temple, in the newe Moone of the secde moneth in the secde yere, & they were come into Jewry & Jerusalem.
And they apointed the Leuytes (that were about xx. yere old) vnto the scrupce of the Lorde, so Jesua and hys sonnes, and hys brethren, al the Leuytes stode together, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynance in the house of the Lorde.

And the preastes stode, and had they: garmentes & trompettes, and the Leuytes, the son-nes of Asaph, had cymbales, geuyng thanks and mayles vnto the Lorde, accorde as was ordained by the kynge of Israhel had ordyned.

And the longe that they byd synge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. * Osynge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpon Israhel endureth for euer. And al the people blew out wyth trompettes, & sage wyth loude voyce praysynge the Lorde together, in the rearyng up of the house of the Lorde. * There came also amonge the preastes & Leuytes the rulers and elders accorde to the trybes & hynredes, such as had sene the house afore to the buydynge of this temple with great crye, & great mornyng many also wyth trompettes & great ioye: In so muche, that the trompettes myghter not well be derde for the wepyng & mornyng. For the ch mune people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamin, to knowe what that tropt tyng & noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceyued that it was the which were come agayn out of captiuite, & wolde buyde the temple up a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israhel. So they went to zojobabel, and Iesua, and the rulers of the byllages, & sayde vnto the. What we buyde with you also? For we likewise haue heard you Lorde, & we walke after the same maner from the dayes of Ahasareth the kynge of Assyria, which brought vs hether. Then zojobabel and Iesua, & the rulers of the byllages of Israhel, sayd vnto them: It is not mete, for we shulde buyde the temple of our God with vs, we our selues alone wyl buyde vnto the Lorde, lyke as Cyrus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the land layde them sel-ues agayn those that were in Jewry, & helde the buydynge from them, layed wayte vnto the pynelye, stoppede such as brought any thyng to them, sayd them to buyde, & synned those that

that made them passage, that the buyldinge shoulde not be synched: and thus continued to bygge as hynges Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldinge, for the space of two peeres, vntill the raygne of hynges Darius.

The vii. Chapter.

Aggeus and Zachary prophete. When Darius the temple was let as by the commandment of Darius.

Notwithstanding: in the second pear of the raygne of Darius. * Aggeus, and zacharye the sonne of Addo, prophesied vpon them in Jewry, and Jerusalem, in the name of God of Israel: * Then Zorobabel, the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua, the sonne of Josede stood vp & beganne to build the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, when the prophetes oft be Lorde helped them. At the same time came Disennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, with the lanlozdes and hys companions, and sayde vnto them, Who ha the bydden & commaunded you to buylde the house to make the rooffe and al other thinges againe? And who are the woiche men: that buyld them? neuertheles, the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the Lorde, that they wolde not be lette (though they were prouoked thereto) but buylde on styll: vntill the tyme that hynges Darius were certified thereof, and an answer receaued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto hynges Darius was after this maner

Disennes the vnderthene in Siria, and Phenices, and the lanlozdes with theyr companions, whych are ded rulers in Siria, and Phenices, send theyr salutation vnto Darius & hynges Cyrus the Lorde the hynges, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem where we founde them buylding the great house of God, and the temple, with grente costly free stone, and with goodly tymber for the walles per, they make grente haste with the woiche, and helpe one another, & it goeth forth the prosperously in theyr handes, and with grent diligence & woichip it is made. Then asked we the elders who had commaunded the, to make vp & house and the buyldinge: and thus we dyd, to the entente that we myght certify the perfectly, and wyte vnto the, the names of those that were & rulers of the woiche. So they gaue vs thus an swere: we are the seruantes of the Lorde, whych made heauen and earth, and as for this house, it hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by & great and myghtie hynges of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & sined agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor hyng of Babylon the hynges of the Chaldees whiche dyde he do the house and bent it, and carped awaye the people prysloners vnto Babylon. * Neuertheles, in the xxiij. pear that hynges Cyrus reigned at Babylon, Cyrus the hynges wrote & commauended, to buyld vp the house agayne, and al the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped away from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, and appoynted vnto hys owne temple, these broughte Cyrus forth agayne, and deliuered them to zoio babel and to Salmanaar, the vnderthene: & commaunded them, that they shoulde bringe those same ornaments agayne to Jerusalem, into the temple & beginning from that tyme forth, to buyld the temple agayne, in hys owne place. Then Salmanaar layde the foundacion of the Lorde house at Jerusalem, & euer sence they haue buylded, and yet is not ended. And therfore, O hynges if thou thynkest it good, let it be sought in the lybraries and rolles of hynges Cyrus. If it be founde then, that it is done with the counsell and consente of hynges Cyrus, and of our lord the hing be so minded, let him writ vnto vs therof

* Then commaunded hynges Darius to seke in the lybraries: and so at Egbarbanis in a little cytye of Media there was founde suche a wytyng. In the xxiij. pear of the raygne of Cyrus the same hynges Cyrus commaunded the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shoulde be buylded agayne, and obours there to be made continual ly vnto the Lorde, whose byght shalbe .x. cubytes and the bredthe .ix. cubites, and .liii. square with thye hewen stones, with a loft of timber of the same countre: per, with a newe loft, and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of hynges Cyrus, and the ornaments of golde & siluer that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Disennes also the vnderthene in Siria, & Phenices, the prynces, and theyr companions: & the other & be head rulers in Siria & Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thing to do with place. Cyrus haue commaunded also, that they shal buyld the house of the Lorde hole vp: and haue ordayned them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuyte: till the house of the Lorde be synned: and out of the trybute and taringe that is yearly raysted vp in Siria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe of the offering of the Lorde: and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel the offyce, that he therewithall may ordayne oxen, rammes, lammes, and cozne, salt wyne, and oyle, and that continuallye euery yere: after the expences: whych the prestes & be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made dayly, they shal be geuen vnto them without delaye, & they may offer sacryfices dayly to the diest God, for the hynges and for hys seruantes and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery syde, & whosocure breaketh or despyseth this commaundemente of the hynges, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of hys owne good) and al his goodes shalbe seyloned vnto the hing. The Lorde therfore whose name is there called vpon roote out, and destruy al the hynges, and people that vnder take by violence to hinder & flame, or to deale vncurtously with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. Darius the hynges haue ordayned & these thinges shalbe done with all diligence.

The vii. Chapter.

The temple is theyr God and be created, and the host of the vniuersal byode is within.

The thyrd booke

with theyr company wher, wher the thynges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were by hym in the holy booke, and were ordeyned with the othe rulers of the Jewes. And in þe moneth of the february were they ordeyned, when Aggeus, and zachary prophesied. And they performed all thynges that were the commandement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kynge of Persia.

B And thus was once house synghed vnto the Jewes. In the moneth of the vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, the prestes and Leuites, and forther that were come out of captiuitie, and such as were ioynd vnto them, did accordyng as it is wrytten in the booke of Moses. And in þe dedycacyon of the temple, they offered an. C. Oren, two hundred rammes, iii. C. lambes, and xii. goates, for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after the number of the tribes of Israel. The prestes also and the Leuites shode arayed in theyr preastly garmentes, after the tribes, ouer all the wynges of the Lorde God of Israel, accordyng to the booke of Moses, and the postres by all the doores.

C And the chyldren of Israel (with those that were come out of captiuitie) helde the passouer the fourtene daye of the fyrst moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captiuite were not all sanctified together. But the Leuites were sanctified together, and so all they that came out of captiuite, kylled the Easter lambe for their brethren for þe prestes and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel, that came out of captiuite and escaped from all the abhominacions of the heathen, soughte the Lorde, and kepte the feast of the vnleuened breade seven dayes longe, eating and drynkyng and were merry before the Lord that the Lord had turned the deuyce of the king of Assyria, and comforted theyr handes to the workers of the Lorde God of Israel.

The viii. Chapter.

C. Eliahu comforteth the people in assyria and cometh forth from thence and rebuketh them the lorde. They hope the lord of the february.

And after hym when Artaxerxes the kynge of the Persians raygned there wente vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Saraia, the sonne of Baran, þe sonne of helchiah, the sonne of Shallu, the sonne of Shabbach, the sonne of Barith, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abih, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazer, the sonne of Aaron the fyrst preast. This Esdras wente up from Babylon, for he had good vnderstandyng in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taught and done in Iude. And the kynge honoured him, and had hym grete worship and honour, after all his desyres. There wente up with hym also certeyn of the chyldren of Israel, of the prestes, of þe Leuites, of the syngers, postres, and mynystrers of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the threthye yeare of the raygne of kynge

Artaxerxes, in the v. moneth, that is the f. vii. yeare of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the new moneth of the v. moneth and came the fye daye to Jerusalem after þe commandement, lyke as the Lorde had wyspered theyr iourney. For in these dayes gat grete instructioun, that he shold leaue none of the thynges be hynde, which are in the lawe and commandementes of God. And he taughte hole Israel all ryghteuousnes and iudgementes.

Then came the secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, and deliuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artaxerxes the kynge) to Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. And this is the coppe of the letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth þe gretyng vnto Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Offrende thy and good wyll, I haue ordeyned and charged þe there be any of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which despyse and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he maye do it. Therfore, yf any be mynded to be with the company, let the come together, and go with the lyke as I am consente. My seuen frendes, my counsellors to it what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewye, and kepe the thynges accordyng as thou hast, in the lawe of the Lorde, and so byng the gyfte vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promised to Jerusalem, and al the syluer and golde that is in the country of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem with the thing that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Per, that þe same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oren, Rammes, shepe, and goates, and other that belonge to these thynges, and that they may offer sacrificys vnto the Lorde, vpon the auter of the Lorde which is at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyll do with the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordyng to the commandementes of the Lorde thy God, and lyke with the holie vessels that are geuen the, for the seruyce of the house of þe Lord thy God, and other thynges what soeuer is necessary for the woche of the temple that shalbe geuen of the kynge's treasure, also what thou with thy brethren wyll do with the golde and syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lorde. And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Assyria and Phenicia that whatsoeuer Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wyll, it shalbe geuen him, tyl an. C. talentes of syluer, and of gold in lyke maner. Of coyne also an. C. measures of tyl an. C. vessels of wyne, and other plentiful thynges without number. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the best God, that the maych of God arys not in the realme of the kynge of his sonnes. I commaund you also that ye require no targe nor tribute of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, and mynystrers of the temple, nor of the wryters, and that no man haue auctorite to make any thyng against the. As for þe Esdras let thou iudge and arbitere in the hole lande of Assyria and Phenicia, after the dyctum of God, and leaue all such as are ignorant in the lawe of God the Lorde, and let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punished: whether it be with death, or payne, or bechidened in mony, or to be banished.

Then sayde Eldras the wyrtre: * Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geuē so good a mynde and wyll into the herte of the kynge to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syghte of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accord-yng as the Lorde my God helped me, & chose me out of Israel to go with me. * And these are the brether after theyr kyndes and houses of theyr fathers that went wth me fro Babylon out of the kyngedome of Artaxerxes. Of the sonnes of Phares: Seronius. Of the sonnes of Semirath, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Da-uid: Accus, the sonne of Cecilia:

Of the sonnes of Phares, zachary, and with him ther returned agayne an. C. and .l. men. Of the sonnes of the capytane of Moabils, zary, & with him. ii. C. l. men. Of the sonnes of zacharys Jechonias, zecholi, and wth hym. ii. C. l. men.
Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Gotholie, lxx wth hym: Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zaryas, Whelie, and wth hym. lxx. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias, Jecheli, and wth hym. ii. C. & .xii.
men. Of the sonnes of Saania, Salimoth, the sonnes of Josaphia, and wth hym. an hundred and thye scoze men. Of the sonnes of Beer, zacha-rie, Bedei, and wth him two hundred and .viij.
men. Of the sonnes of Elead, Johannes, Eze-cham, and wth hym an hundred and tennemen.
Of the sonnes of Adoniam, those that were last, and these are theyr names. Eliphalam: the sonne of Sebel, and Semelas, and wth him. lxx men. All these called together by the water Thia where we pitched our tente thye dayes: & there I mustred them.

* As for the sonnes of the preastes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Eccelom, and Walmam, & Galobam and Canaathan, and Hamea, & Jorhimath, & Eunaga, zachary, Mosolamun (these were the elders and men of experyence) and I sent them withe þe theyr shulde come vnto Loddus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddus and to his brethren, & to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs such men, as myghte execute the preastes office in the house of the Lorde our God, and wth the myghtye hande of oure Lorde God, they broughte vnto vs men of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Wooly-us, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebelam, and the sonnes and his brethren Albin, & Anin, of whom there were. xviij. From among the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananeus, & theire sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the pryncypall men þe mynystred for the doctre vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. xx. men whose names are all tokened vp in wyrtre.

* Then commaunded I a fastpage vnto the young men before the Lorde, that I myght be-lyue of hym a prosperous iourney, & a good way for vs: for, for vs: our chyldren and for the Cattell, because of the lapynges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kinge men of hoste and of foote: to comyng vs safely agaynst our enemyes, for we had sayde vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shulde be wth them that seke hym wth theyr hole herte. And therefore, we soughte God oure Lorde earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer, And I separated from among the rulers of the people, and from the preastes of the temple. xii. men and Sebelia, and Alania, and .x. men of theyr brethren wth them. And weyed them the golde and the syluer and all the preastly ornaments of the house of our God, whiche the kinge and his counsell: and his prynces and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an. C. l. talentes in syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of gold and of golden vessel, seven tymes twentye and vesselis of other metall (ye, of good metall) xii. gyltterynges as the golde, and sayd vnto the ye are holy vnto the Lorde, and the vesselies are holy, and the golde, and the syluer is promysed vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers.

Be dyligente now, and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the preastes, to the Leuites, and to þe princypall men of the cytyes of Israel in Jerusalem and in the chamber of the house of our God.

* So the preastes and Leuites whych recea-ued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessel, broughte it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from the cytye of Thia, we hane vp the twelue daye of the fyrst moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thye daye was past, they weyed golde and syluer was delyuered in the house of the Lorde the forth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Jos the preast, and wth hym was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and wth them were Josabbus the sonnes of Jasnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, & cer-tayne of the Leuytes to the nomber and to the weyghe, and the weyghe of them was wyrtren vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuyte, they offered sacrifice vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen twelue oren for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes. lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne, twelue kyne for a thankoffering all to the sacrifice of the Lorde. And the kinges commillion deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kynge, and to the vnderlye ues in Celocyria, and Phenycia.

* Nowe when those thynges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacyon of Israel, the prynces, the preastes and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande haue not put awaye theyr vncleynesse, from the Cananites herpites pherestites, from the Moabites, Egipcians, and Edomites. For both they and theyr sonnes haue mingled them selues with the daughters of them, and the holy seede is myxted wth the outlandyshe heathen and

The thynde booke

¶ Since the beginning of thynges, I have seen a headen bene partaken of their wickednes.
 ¶ As I have seen I had heretofore thynges, in-L. xlii. a. m. p. I have seen my holy garments: I pulled out the beard of my beard and my beard: I late me downe sorrowfull and how. And at they that were round about me the word of the Lord of Israel, came unto me, and said: I am full of heavyness unto the evening sacrifice. Then stood I up from fasting, having rent clothes and the holy garments, knelt downe upon my knees, helde out my handes unto the Lord, & sayde: O Lord I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many upon our hea-des: and our wickednesses are exalted unto the heauen. For since the tyme of our fathers, we are in greave synne unto this daye. And for the synnes of us and our fathers, we wyth our bye thren and wyth our prelates have bene delivered unto the henges of the earth: into the sword and into captivite, and became a spoyle wyth confusion and shame unto this day. And now O Lord God, howe greave is thy merite that we have gotten of the: in that thou hast left us a name and a root in the place of thy Sanctuary, to discover our lyghte in the house of the Lord our God, and have given us meate at all tymes of our mynistracion. And when we were in captivite we were not forsaken of the Lord our God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious, & favourable unto us: so that they gave us vntayles, and meate, pee, and leane to buyde up the temple of our Lord God agayne to repaire the wasted places of Zion: & to dwell in Jerusaleme and Jerusalem. And now O Lord what shal we saye: havinge all these thynges in possession: For we have broken thy comma-ndementes: which thou gavest unto us by the handes of thy servants the prophetes saying The land that ye govnto and that is given you for an heritage to have in possession, is defiled with the uncleynesse and synfulness of the heathen and with their abominacions have they po-luted it altogether. Therefore, shal ye not for-6 pour daughters unto theyr sonnes, nor mar-yage your sonnes unto theyr daughters. Whosoever ye shal not sike to make peace wyth them, that ye maye entere and eat the best, in the land, and that ye maye devide the inheritance of the land unto your chyldren for ever moore. And for the thing that nowe happened unto us, it cometh all for our wicked wyches and greave synnes yett hast thou given us such a roote that we are come agayne into our land, and we are so wyched that we have broken thy statutes & comma-ndementes agayne: and myngled ourselves with the uncleynesse of the outlandish heathen.
 O Lord art thou angry wyth us: wylte thou rote us cleane out: that our rote & name remaine no more? O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yett unto this present day And behold, now we are we before thee in our syn-nes, now we can be not stande before thee in them.
 ¶ And when Elshaz wyth his prayer hadde L. xlii. a. k. n. o. w. i. d. g. e. d. the synne, wepyng and lying flat upon the ground before the temple, there gathered unto hym frome Jerusalem a greave multitude of men and women, of yong men, and may-dens, for there was a very greave wepyng, and monnyng in the congregacyon. And when Je-chonias the sonne of Jehely one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayde unto Elshaz: we have sinned agaynst the Lord, because we have ma-rryed outlandish women of the heathen. How art thou over al Israel. We wyll swere an oth therfoze unto the Lord: that we shal put away all our wyves which we have taken of the heathen, wyth theyr chyldren, lyke as it is appoy-nted by our fore elders. And stand up then, open thou it & declare it playnly unto us, accordyng to the lawe of the Lord, for I matter belongeth unto the and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Elshaz arose, and toke an oth of the rulers, of the prelates, and of the Levites and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they swar

The ix. Chapter.

¶ After Elshaz had red the lawe, the people put a shawe theyr drawing upons: and then returned every man unto his duty his other dwelling.

¶ Then Elshaz stood up from the court of the temple, wythout, and went into the chamber of Jonathan the sonne of Nabasus, and remayned there & dydeat no meate, nor doynh dyynche: for the multiplye of the wychednes of people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewry and at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem oute of captivite that whosoever came not to Jerusalem wythin two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the old Lordes of the counsell) his goodes shuld be taken from him, and be excluded from the cogregacyon of the captivite. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twen-tie daye of the .ix. moneth. And the whole multitude sat trymblyng in the court of the temple for it was wynter. So Elshaz rose up, and sayde unto them, ye have done unrighteousnes in ye have taken outlandish wyves, to mary-age, & so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And now we knowlege the same, & geve prayse unto the Lord God of our fathers, & perfourme this wil departyng from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyves. Then cryed I holt multitude wyth a loud voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but so farre as as the people are manye, and the wynter heare, we maye not stande without the house: Agayne this wyche is not a thyng that can be finished in a day or two. For we be many, that have sinned in these thynges. Overyne therfoze that the rulers of the multitude, & they that dwell wyth us, and as many as have outlandish wyves & the prelates also and iudges of every place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lord in this busynesse.

¶ Then Jonathan the sonne of Eziel, and O-5. shaz & Theman receaved the charge of this matter, and Boyozaimus and Leius, & Sabathus helped them thereto. After this, all they stode up

by that were come oute of captiuyte. And Edoas the p̄iest chose vnto hym the p̄yncypall men from amonge f̄athers accordyng to theyr names. & in the newe moneth of f̄. x. moneth they sat together, to examine this matter. And so the matter was a determyngge, concernyng the men that had outlandyde wyues, vntill the newe moneth of the first moneth. And of the p̄iestes that had myxted them selues wyth outlandyde wyues, there were found. * Of the sonnes of Iesu, the sonnes of Ioseph, and bys byethien. Nazareus, Eleazer, Joabius, & Joadeus, whych offered them selues to put away theyr wyues and to offer a rāme for their ignozaunce. And of the sonnes of Demetri, Wallesas, and Elles, & Jerlech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Kocera, Limostas, Hilmaen, Nathanea, Justo, Jedbus, & Talas. And of the Leuites, Iosabbus, Demetis, & Coitis, Caletas, Kactas, Colnas, & Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary. Eliarib, zacharus. Of the porters, Dallumus, and Tolbanus. And of Israel, of the chyldren of Kozo, Ol and Remias, & Seddias, and Melchias, Wicheus, Eleazarus, Jemmedias, and Bonas. And of the chyldren of Iolama. Chanias, zachary, Jeterus, Jodbus, Erumoth, and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jathoin, Eliadas, Lisamus, and Jochias, Larimoth, Dabbis, & Thebedias. And of the sonnes of Jeebus, Iohannes, Amarias, Jabbias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olamus, Walchus, Jedbus, Isab, Alabus, & Jeremoth. And of the sonnes of Adol, Aarus, & Woodias, & Calens, & Raanas, Waasius, Nathathias, Wefel, Wanus, & Wanalles. And of the sonnes of Aue: Aones, Ateas, Melchias, Dameas, Simo Ben Jamin, Walchus, and Narras. And of the sonnes of Alom Carianeus, Nathathias, Banus, Elthalach, Wanalles, Demet. Of the sonne of Banus Jerem, Woodias, Abzamas, Joell, Baneas, Wellaas, Jona, Warymoth, Eliastib, Nathancus, Eliazis, Orias, Dicus, Semedius, Jambus, and Ioseph. Of the sonnes of Robeus Iedus, Nathathias, Wabadus, Jechda, Sedmit, Jellus, and Banas. All these had taken oute landysse women to marriage, & they put them away with theyr chyldren. The p̄iestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israel, dwelte at Jerusalem and thowout all the lande, in the newe moneth of the tenth moneth, and the chyldren of Israel were in theyr dwellinges: And the whole multitude came together, vpon the floore at the East syde of the holpe porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Edoas p̄ p̄iest and reader, that he wold byng the lawe of Moyses: whych was geuen of the Lozde God of Israel. So Edoas the p̄iest broughte the lawe vnto the whole multitude, to man and woman, to all the p̄iestes that they myght heare the lawe. * In the newe moneth of the vii. moneth And he red in the floze that is before f̄ holpe porte of the temple, from the morning early vnto the eveninge, before men and women. And they applyed theyr mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Edoas the p̄iest and reader of the law

stode vpon a pulpet of woode, whych was made thesede, and vpon his ryght hand there stode by hym Nathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Ateas, Oredias, & Balsamus. Vpon his left hand stode Kaldens, Misael, Malachias, Abulchas, Wabus, Wabadias, and zachary. Then toke Edoas the booke before the whole multitude, for he was the p̄yncypal and had in most honour of them al. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode al streyght vpon theyr seite. So Edoas prayd the Lozde the most hest God, the Almyghty God of hostes. And al the people answered: Amen: and helde vp theyr handes, fell downe flat vpon the earth, & prayd the Lozde. And Jesus, Deneas, Warchias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Wabbathus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozabus, Ananias, and Hilias, the Leuites lift theyr handes vpwarde and bowed theyr faces to the ground, & prayd the Lozde. Those were they whych taught the lawe of the Lozde, & red the lawe of the Lozde in the congregacion: and euery man set them before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Edoas the p̄iest and reader, and to the Leuites that taught the multitude, saying: Thyrs daye is holpe vnto the Lozde, and all they that had heard the lawe wepte. So Edoas sayde: * Depart your way then, and eate the best and dypche the sweetest, and send giftes vnto them that haue nothing: for this daye is holpe vnto the Lozde, & be ye not loze, for the Lozde wyl byng you to honour. Then went they theyr way euerychone, and dyd eate and dypche, and were merry, and sente rewardes vnto them that had nothing, that they also myght eate with gladnes: for they were excedyng reioysed thowte the wordes that were redde vnto them in the lawe. And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feast, accordyng to the couenaunt of the Lozde God of Israel.

Uke be vnto the Illur, thou that hydeste the vnyghteous

happeth troublous by the. Thou wycked people remembre: what I dyd vnto Sodome; and Gomorre, whose lande is turned to pyrch and ashes: Euen so wyl I do vnto al the, that heare me not, sayth the almyghty Lord. Thus sayth the Lord vnto Eldras: tell my people, & I wil geue them the kyngedome of Ierusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel: They glozy also wyl I take vnto me: and geue them the euerlasting tabernacles, which I had prepared for thole. The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete synelinge opntement: they shall nether labour nor be wepy. So ye poure waye, and ye shall receaue it. Wray for your selues a few dayes that they maye dwell therein.

Howe is the kyngedome prepared for you therfore watch. Take heauen and erth to wytnes for I haue broken the euell in peeces, and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lord. Wo ther embrace thy chyldren, and bynge them vp wyth gladnes: make theyr fete as fast as a pylle, for I haue chosen the sayth the Lord.

And those that be deade wyl I raise vp againe from theyr places, and bynge them out of the graues. For I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren for I haue chosen the sayth the Lord. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruantes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctyfyed and prepared for the. xii. trees with diuers frutes, and as many weis: flowing with mylke and honny. & vii. mountaynes, wherupon there growe roses & lylies, wherin I wyl fyl my chyldren with ioye. Execute iustyce for the widowe be indge for the fatherles, geue to the poore, defende the comforytes, clothe the naked: heale the wounded, and syche: laughe not a lame man to scoyne, defende the crepel, and let the bynd come into the lycht of my clernes: wher soeuer thou syndest & dead, take them and burye them, and I shal geue the, the fyrst place in my resurrection. Holde styl (O my people) and take thy rest for thy quietnes is come. Kede thy chyldren, O thou good nurse, stablyshe theyr fete. As for my seruantes whom I haue geuen the, there shall not one of them perishe, for I wyl seke them fro thy nombze, were not thy selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heauynes cometh, other shall wepe & be sozowefull, but thou shalt be mery and plentous. The heathen shalbe gelous but they shalbe able to do nothig agaynst the, sayth the Lord. Wy handes shal couer the, so that thy chyldren shal not fe the fyre euerlastyng. Be ioyful, O thou mother wyth thy chyldre, for I wil deliuer the sayth the Lord. Remembre thy deade chyldren, for I shal byng them out of the earth, & shewe mercy vnto them for I am mercifull, sayth the Lord Almighty. Embrace thy chyldren, vntyll I come and shewe merce vnto them, for my welles runne ouer: and my grace shall not fayle.

I Eldras receaued a charge of the Lord vpon the mounte Oreb, that I shulde go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naught, and dyspyled the commaundemente of the Lord. And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen that hear and vnderstand. Loke for your shepharde, he shal geue you euerlastyng rest, for he is nye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the worlde. Be redy to the rewarde of kyngedome, for the euerlastyng lycht shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Ale the shadowe of this worlde, receaue the ioyefulnes of youre glozy. I testyfe my sauour openly: O receaue the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, geunge thanckes vnto hym: that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Arise vp, and stande fast: beholde, the nombze of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lord whych are departed from the shadowe of the world, and haue receaued glozyous garmentes of the Lord. Take thy nombze O syon, and shut vp the purtyfyed, whych haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lord. The nombze of the chyldren whom thou londest for, is fulfilled: be seche the power of the Lord, & the people which haue bene called from the begynnyng, maye be halowed.

* I Eldras sawe vpon the mounte syon a greate people whom I coulde not number, and they al prayled the Lord with songes of thankes geuyng. And in the myddest of them ther was a yong ma of an hie stature, more excellent the all they, & vpon euery one of theyr heades be set a crowne, and was euer byer and byer, whych I maruelled at greatly. So I asked the Angell, and sayde: wy: what are these? he answered & sayd vnto me: These be they, that haue put of mortal clothing, and put on the immortall and haue testified and knowleged the name of God. Howe are they crowned & receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the Angell: what ponge person is it, & crowmeth them, and geueth them the Palmes in theyr handes? So he answered, and sayd vnto me it is the sonne of God, whom they haue knowleged in the world. Then began I greatly to comende them, that stode so styly for the name of the Lord. And so the angel sayd vnto me: So thy way, and tel my people, what manner of thynges: and howe greate wonders of the Lord thy God, thou hast sene.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

The wonderous watcher whiche God send for the people are tryed. Eldras maruelled that God suffer the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are synners all.

In the xxx. year of the fall of the cite I was at Babylō, and lay troubled vpon my bed, & my thonghtes came vpon my herte: for I sawe the desolacion of syon, and the plentous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylō, & my spyt was soze moued, so I began to speake fearfull wordes to the most hysell, and sayde O Lord Lord, thou spakest at the begynnyng whē thou plantedst the earth (that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundemente vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whych was a creature of thy handes, and hast byethed in hym the byeth of lyfe, and so be lyued before the, & thou leddest hym into Paradyce: whych garden of pleasure thy ryghte hande had planted, & euer the earth was made: And vnto him thou gauest commaundemente commandement to loue thy waye wherebye he transgressed, & immediately thou appointedst death in hym, & his generations. And thus came nations: trybes, people, and kynnedes, oute of number. * And euery people walked after their owne will, and bydynce thynges befoze the: & as for thy commandementes they dispised the.

But in procelle of time thou broughtest the water froude, vpon those that dwelt in þ world and destroyedst the. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was the water froude also in these fewertheles one of them thou ledest, namelye Noe, with his household, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened þ when they þ dwelt vps the earth, beganne to multiplye, & had gotte many children, and were a great people, they bega to be more vngodly then þ fyrste froue when they all lyued so wyckedlye be-foze the, * thou dydest chose the a man frome amonge them: whose name was Abraham: him thou louedst, and vnto hym only thou shewedst thy will, and madest an euerlasting couenaunt with hym, promysynge him that thou woldest neuer for sake his seide. And vnto him thou gauest Isac: vnto Isac also thou gauest Jacob, and Esau. As for Jacob, thou dydest chose hym, and put back Esau. * And so Jacob becam a great multitude.

And it happened that when thou leddest his seede oute of Egypt: thou broughtest them vp to the mount syon, doynge downe the hea-uens setting fast the earth, moung the ground makynge the depthes to shake, and troublinge the world. And thy gloze went thowowe four portes of fyre, and earthquakes, and wyndes & colde: that thou myghte geue the lawe vnto the seede of Jacob, and bypence vnto the generation of Israel. And yet tokest thou not away frome them that wycked herte, that thy lawe myght bypne forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed: and was ouercome, and so be al they that are bozne of hym, * Thus remayned weakenes with the lawe: in the hertes of the people, with the wyckednes of the roote: so that the good departed awaye and the euell abode still. As the tymes passed awaye, and the yeres were broughte to an ende. * Then dydest thou rayse the vp a seruant called Dauid, * whome thou comman-dest to buyde a cytye vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifice vnto the therein Thys was done nowe many yeres. Then the inhabytors of the citie forsoke the, & in al thynges bydeuyn as Adam and al his generacions had done, for they also had a wycked herte.

And so thou gaueste thy cytye ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous then thy people that they shall therfore haue the domynion of syon: for when I came there and sawe their vngodlynesse, and so greute wyckednesse: that it coulde not be named: yee, when my soule sawe so many euell doers: in the xxx. yeres my herte sayled me, for I sawe, howe thou sufferdest them in suche vngodlynesse, and spareddest the wycked doers, but thyne owne people hast thou coted oute, and preserued thyne enemyes, and thus hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceaue howe thys happeneth. Do they of Babilon then better: then they of syon Or is there any other people that knoweth the saynge that people of Israel: Or what generacyn hath so belueued thy couenautes, as Jacob: And yet they rewarde appereth not, and they labour hath no fruite. For I haue goone heare and there thowowout the heathen, and I le that they be cych and welthy, and thynke not vpon thy commandementes: Weyte thou therfore our wyckednesse nowe in the balauce and they also that dwell in the world, and so wal-thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, that hath not synned befoze the: Or what people hath so kept thy commandementes: Thou shalt fynde that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes: but not the other people and heathen.

The. liii. Chapter.

The Angell reproueth Esau, because he smeth to m-ter into the profounde iudgements of God.

As the Angell that was sent vnto Ime (whose name was Criel) gaue me an answer and sayde: thy hert hath taken to much vpon it in this world, and thou thynkest to comprehende the waye of the byesse. Then sayde I: Yee, my Lorde. And he answered me, and sayde I am sente to shewe the the wayes and to sette forth the sympletydes befoze the, wherof yf þ canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the way, that thou desyrest to se. And I shall shewe the frome whence the wycked herte cometh.
And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: So thy waye, weye me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me the blaske of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I, and sayde: What man bozne, is able to do that: Why requirerest thou such of me:
And he sayde vnto me: If I shuld aske the how depe dwellynges are in the see: Or howe greute waterspynges are vpon the firmamente: Or howe greute waterspynges are in the begyn-nyng of the depe: Or whyche are the out goyn-ges of Paradyce: Peradventure thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe or hell, neyther dyd I euer clyme vp to heauen, neuerthelesse nowe haue I asked the but only of fyre, and wynde, and of the daye, where thowowe thou hast tranapled, & from the which thou canst not be separated, and yet canst thou geue me none answer of them.

He sayde moore ouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and such as are growen vp with the canst þ not know: howe shuld thy vessel then be able to comprehend the waye of the byesse, and nowe outwarde in the corrupte world, to vnderstande the corrupcyon that is cnydent in my syghte: Then sayd I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all: then that we shulde lyue in wyckednes, and to suffer, & not to know wherfore. He answered me and sayde: I wente in a wod

In a wood, and the tree toke such a deuice, & sayd: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynste þe see that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we maye make vs yet moore wooddes.

The floudes of þe see also in lyke maner toke thys deuice, and sayde: Come let vs go by, and fyghte agaynste the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thoughte and deuice of the wood was but vayne and nothyng worth, for the fyre came & consumed the wood: The thoughte of the floudes of þe see, came lyke wyse to noughte also, for the lande stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge nowe betwixt these two, whom woldest thou iustifye, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & sayde: Cleerly it is a folye thoughte that they both haue deuised. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and þe see also hath hys place to beare hys floudes. The answered he me, and sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, and the see to his floudes, euen so they þe dwell vpon earth maye vnderstande nothyng but that wyche is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, may onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseeche the, O Lord let me haue vnderstanding: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of such as be daily medle withal, namelye wherfore that Israel is blasphemed of the heathen, & for what cause the people (whom thou hast euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodly nations: and why the lawe of oure fathers is brought to noughte and the wyrtten couenantes come to none effecte, and passe awaye oute of the world as the grechoppers, & oure lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to optayne mercy. What wilt he do then vnto hys name, wyche is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked questyon.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The moze thou seardest, the moze thou shalt maruell, for the woode hath fast to passe awaye, & can not comprehend the thynges that are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come, for this woode is full of vnrightheousnes and weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges whereof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euill is sowne, but the destruction thereof is not yet come. If the euill nowe that is sowne, be not turned vnto good, and if the place where the euill is sowne, passe not awaye, then can not thyng come that is sowne with good. For the corne of euill seede hath bene sowne in the hert of man fro the begynnyng, and howe muche vngodlynes hath be brought vp vnto thys tyme: and howe much shall be yet byngne for the vntyll he come into the barne.

Wende nowe by thy selfe, wylt þe come of euill seedis cut doone, howe grate a barne shall it be? I answered and sayde: Howe & when shall these thynges come to passe? Wherfore are oure prayes seide And euill? And he answered me, say-enge: Hadst thou so much vpon the best, for thy halpynge to be aboue him is but vayne, thou mayest to muche do. Wylt not the soules also of the ryghteous aske questyon of these thynges in their holynes, saying: Howe longe shall I hope of this fashion? When cometh the frute of my barne and my reward? And vpon thys Jeremiell the Archangel gaue them answer, and sayde: Euen when the nombze of the seedes is fylled in you, for he hath weyed the world in þe balance: in measure & nombze hath he measured the time and moueth it not vntill the same measure be ful fylled. Then answered I & sayd: O Lord Lord nowe are we full of synne, & for oure sake paraventure it is not, that the barne of the righteous shall not be fulfylled, because of the synne of the that dwell vpon earth.

So he answered me & sayd: So thy wyfe to a woman wyth chylde, & aske of her, when she hath fulfylled her tyme monethes, if her chyld be born may kepe the byrth any longer within her. The sayd I: No Lord, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secreete places of soules are lyke the pynne chambze of a woman that trauyleth, and maketh hast, when the tyme of necessitye of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doth the hast to deliuer it is chympted vnto her. Like what then desyrest to se, it shall be shewed the fro the begynnyng. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue sounde grace in thy syght and if it be possible, & if I be meete therfore, shewe me then whether there be mo to come the is past, or moze past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, & I shall expounde þe symilitude vnto the. So I stode and behold, an whote burnynge ouen went ouer before me: & it happened þe when the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there wente ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe muche rayne with a strome: & when þe strome rayne was past þe droppes remayned dry. The said he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is moze then þe droppes, & as lyke exce-deth þe smoke, eue so the measure of the thynges that are past hath the vpper hande. Then went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayde & sayde: maye I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? he answered me, and sayd: As for the tokens wherof thou askest me, I maye tel the aparte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

¶ The v. Chapter.

Elias and the Angell comen together.

Euerthelesse, as concernynge the tokens, marke this: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shall be taken in a greete nombze, and the wyfe of the true shall be byd, & the lande shall be barr from sayth: but iniquyte shall haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast seene nowe, and as thou hast heard longe ago. And the lande that thou seyst nowe to haue rule, shall thou shortly se wast. But of

God God

God graunt the to lyue. thou shalt se after the thy detromper that I summe shall suddenly come agayne in the nyghte, and the more that tymes in the daye, & bloude shall drop out of the wood, and the stone shall geue hys voyce, & the people shalbe in quyet: & euen he shall rule, whome they hope not, & dwell vpon earth, & the foules shall flyt & I wold myghty see that cast out his fyre, & make a noyse in I nyghte, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a consulyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, & the wyld beastes shall go theyr way, and monstrous we-men shall haue monstres, and salte waters shal-be founde in the founte: one frende shall fyghte a-gaynst another: then shal wyte & vnderstandyng be hyd and put asyde into theyr secreete places, & shalbe sought of many, & yet not be founde: then shal vnyghteousnes & voluptuousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shall atke another, & saye: Is vnyghteousnes gane tho-rowe the? And it shal say: No, & the same tyme shal men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shal laboure, but theyr wayes shall not prosper.

To shewe the such tokens I haue leue and pf thou wilt praye agayne, and wepe as nowe, and faste seven dayes, thou shalt beare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, & a fearefulness went thowow all my bodye, & my mynde was feble & carefull, so that I almost sowned wythall. So I Aungel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete.

B And in the seconde nyghte it happened, that Salathiel the capytayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Wher hast thou bene? and why is thy countynance so heuy? knowest thou not that Israel is commytted vnto the in the lande of theyr captiuitie? Wher then and eate, & forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth hys flocke in the handes of the wyched wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: So thy wayes from me & come not nye me: and he herde it, and as I sayde: so wente he hys waye frome. And I fasted seuen dayes, mournyng and wepyng, lyke as Elyel the angell commanded me. And after seuen dayes it happened that I thoughtes of my hert were very geryous vnto me agayne, and my soule recea-ued the sperte of vnderstandyng, and I begane to talke with the moost hyghet agayne, & layd O Lorde Lorde, of euery wood of the earth and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one only vncyparde: and of all landes of the whole world, thou hast chosen the one pt, & of floures of the grounde, thou hast chosen the one lylle: & of all the depthes of the see: thou hast fylled the one cyner: and of al bypided cyties thou hast halowed Shon vnto thy selfe: & of al the foules & are created, thou hast named the one doue, and of all the cattell that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe: & amonge al the myltitude of folkes: thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto thys people whome thou loudest, thou gaueste a lawe, that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou greeued thys one people aucto maner? And vpon the one root thou hast prepared o ther, and why hast thou scattered the one onelye people amonge many, whych treade them downe, yee, whych be haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes.

And thoughte thou were enemy vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punyssh them wyth thyne owne handes. Nowe when I had spoken these wordes, the Aungell that came to me the nyghte afoze was sente vnto me, and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynges that I saye and I shall tell the moze. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art soze vered and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then him that made the?
And I sayde: No Lorde: but of very grete and compassion haue I spoken. For my raynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experience of the waye of the mooste hyghet, and to seke out parte of hys iudgemente. And he sayde vnto me: that thou makeste not. And I sayde: Wherfoze Lorde? Wherunto was I bozne then?
O: why was not my mothers chyldbedd then my graue? So had I not sene the myserye and trouble of Jacob, and the tranaple of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Rombye the thynges that are not yet come: gather me toget her I dropes: that are scattered abrode, make me the floures grene agayne, that are wythered, open me the thyng that is closed: and byng me forth the wyndes, that are shut vp, shewe me I ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thyng, that thou labourdest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not hys dwellyng wyth men.
As for me, I am vntoyle: how may I the speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me.

Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgemente o: in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde, O Lorde, yet arte thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shal they do that haue bene besoze me, o: we that be nowe, o: they that shal come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyl lphen my iud-gement vnto a spynge. Lyke as there is no lack-nesse of the last, euen so is there no wyfenesse of the fyrst. So I answered and sayde: couldest thou not make those that haue bene made, and be nowe, and that are to come) in one, that thou myghtest thewe thy iudgemente the soner?
Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haue aboue the maker: neyther maye the world holde them at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: howe hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruant, & thou lphing maker, hast made the creature lphing at once, & the creature bare it: euen so myghte it nowe also beare them I be pyesent, at once. And he sayd vnto me: I the chyldbedd of a woma, & say vnto her: P I byng all for the chyldren, why dost thou it not together, but one after another? Whaye her therfore to byng to bringe forth. & children at once. And I saide he can not, but must do it one after another.

Then saide he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childer vnto the earth: for those that be fallen vnto it by proceste of tyme. For lyke as a ponge childe maye not bringe forth the thyngges that belonge to the aged: euen so haue I geuen the world wher I made.

And I asked and saide: Wherfore thou hast not geuen me a wap. I wil speake befoze the, for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me is yet ponge. And nowe the daye with nye vnto age he annuiered me and saide: I she a woman & beareth children, & she shal tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they: whome thou haste not brought forth like those & were befoze & but lesse of stature? And she shal aunswere the:
They that be bozne in & youth of strength, are of one fashyon, & they & are bozne in the tyme of age, (when the childer sayleth) are other wyse.
Consider nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were befoze you, and so age they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures which nowe begin to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strengthe of yowthe. Then saide I: Lozde I beseeche the, if I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe the thy seruante, by whome doest thou viset thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ The Angell instructeth Esdras, and geueth hym aunswere to his questions.

I Ad he saide vnto me: In the beginnyng when & grounde was made befoze the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blew, befoze it thondred, & lychtened: or euer the foundacions of Paradise were layde, befoze the faire floures were sene, or euer & moueable powers were stablyshed, befoze the innumerable multitude of Angels were gathered together, or euer & bygh meles of the apye were listred vp, afore the measures of the firmat were named, or euer & chimneis in Sion were hote, & or the present peares were sought out, & or euer the inuencions of the & nowel synne, were put asyde, befoze they were sealed & now gathered saith for a treasure: the did I consider & ponder al these thynges, & all they were made thezowe me, & thezowe none other: by me also they be ended, & by none other. Then aunswere I & saide: which shal be the parting asunder of the tyme? Or when shal be the ende of the firle, & the begynnyng of it & foloweth And he saide vnto me: From Adam vnto Iaac, when Iacob & Esau, were bozne of him, Iacob haue helde firle the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Iacob is the begynnyng of it that foloweth. The hande of man her wyxt the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I aunswere then & saide: O Lozde Lozde, if I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beseech the shewe the thy seruante the ende of thy tokens wherof thou shewest me parte the last night so he aunswere and saide vnto me: Heaude uppon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce & saith. There shall come a greete moeyon, but the place wher thou standest shal not be moued.

And therfore when thou hearest the wordes be not afraied, for of the ende shal the worde and foundacion of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trebleth and quakerbe for it knoweth, & it must be chaunged at the ende.
And it happened, & when I had herde it, I stode uppon my fete: and berkened, & beholde, there was a voyce, that spake, & the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it saide: Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, & to viset them that dwell vpon earth, & wyll begynne to make inquisypon of the, what they be that haue burne equite with vnrightheousnes, & when & I lowe estate of Sion shal be fulfilled: & wher & world, & shal vanishe away: shal be ouersealed, the wil I do these tokes.

The booke shal be opened befoze the firmament, & they shal se all together, & the children of a yere olde shal speake with their voyces: the women with childer shal bringe forth vnto mely children of thre or foure monethes olde, & they shal lyne: & be raised up: and sodenly shal the lowen places appere as & vntowne, the ful holes shal sodenly be founde emptye, and the trompete shal geue a sounde, whiche when euer ye ma heareth, they shal be hastily afrayde.
* At that tyme shal frenches figyte one against another lyke enemyes, and the earthe shal stan-de in fere with them.

The springes of the welles shal stand still, & in iii. houres they shal not renne. Whosouere remayneth from all these thynges? I haue tolde & shal escape, and se my saluacion, & the ende of youre worlde. And the men that haue receaued shal se: they & haue not tasted death from their byth: & the heit of the indwellers shal be chaunged, & turned to another meanyng, for euil shal be put out, & dyscrete shal be quenched. As for saith, it shal flourish, corrupciō shal be overcome & the truth, which hath bene so long wout frut, shal be declared. And it happened wher he talked w me, & I looked demurely vpon him befoze wher I stode, & these wordes saide he vnto me: I am come to thewe & the tyme of & night so to come.

If thou wilt praye yet moare, and sake seuen dayes agayne: I shal tell the moare thin-ges, and greater then befoze: for thy voyce is hearde befoze the highest for why? the myghetie hath sene thy ryghteous dealyng, he hath sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sence thy yowthe & therfore hath he sente me to shewe the all these thynges, & to saye vnto the. & Be of good comforte, and feare not, & haste not with the tymes that are paste to thincke vaine thynges, & make not haile of the latter tymes.

And yt happened after this, that I wepte agayne, & saked seuen dayes in like maner, that I myght fulfil the thre weches: whiche he tolde me. In the viii. night was my hert vexed with in me agayne. And I began to speake befoze & highest: for my spye was greatly set on fere, & my soule was in distresse, & I saide: O Lozde, & spake vnto thy creature from the begynnyng

The. iiii. booke.

Gen. 1. 1 (then the first day) and sayd: Let braven and earth be made, and the world was a perfect worke. And then was there the spere, and the hatchnelles were yet on every syde, and still there was no man's voyce as yet. Then commaunded thou a sayr lighte to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke myghte appeare and be seene.

¶ Upon the second day thou madest the spere of the firmament, and commaunded it to part a sunder, & so make a diuision betwixt & waters, & the one part myghte remaine above, and the other beneath. ¶ Upon the .iii. day thou brought-est to passe, & the waters were gathered in the vii. part of the earth. vi. partes hast thou dried vp and kepte them, to thyntente that men myghte sow & occupy husbandry therein. As soon as thy worde went forth, the worke was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable frut and many diuerse pleasures and despyres of temptacion, shoures of changeable colour & smell, and this was done the .iii. daye.

Gen. 1. 2 ¶ Upon the .iiii. daye thou commaundedst that the sunne shoulde geue his wyne, and the moone her light: & staues dydst thou set in order, and gauest the a charge, to do seruyce euen vnto man & was for to be made. ¶ Upon the .v. daye thou saidst vnto the .vii. parte: where the waters were gathered, & they shoulde bringe forth diuers beasts, fowles & fishes. And so it came to passe, that the dome waters: and without soule brought forth liuing beasts, at the commaundement of God that all people myghte prayse thy wonderous workes. Then dydst thou preserve two soules, & one thou caldest Enoch: & the other Leuiathan, and dydst separate the one from the other for the .vii. parte: (namely where the water was gathered together) myghte not holde them both vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dried vp the .iii. daye, & he shuld dwell in the same part, wherein are a. G. hylls. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the .vii. part, namely the moyst and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wilt and when. ¶ Upon the .vi. daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, & before the, it shuld bring forth beasts, cattell, and all fereye, and (besyde this) Adam also, whom thou madest lord of all thy creatures. Of him come we all, and of people also, whome thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayde nowe and spoken before the, that I myghte shew how the worlde is made for our sake. As for the other people whiche also come of Adam thou hast sayde & they are nothyng, but be lyke a ppytie, & hast lyened the abundance of them vnto a drop: & fallen from the rofe of the house.

¶ And nowe, O Lorde: the heathen whiche haue euer bene reputed as nothing, haue begon to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuour vs: but we thy people (whome thou hast called the spylle doome, thy only begotte, and thy seruente loue) are geuen into thy handes and power. ¶ If the worlde nowe be made for our sake, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the wyse. How longe shall this endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

Gen. 2. 1 ¶ The Angel sheweth vnto us many thynges to come.

¶ As it happened after that I had spokt out these wordes there was sente vnto me an Angel, whiche had bene by me also the nyghtes afoze and he sayde vnto me: Gode bless and heare the wordes that I am come to tel the. And I said I praye on Lord my God. Then sayde he vnto me. The see is set in a wyld place that it myghte be deape and greate, but the entraunce is narrowe and small lyke a ryuer.
For who wolde go into the see, to looke vpon it, and to rule it? If he went not thowgh the na-rowe, howe myghte he come into the wyde?

¶ Item an other: A cyte is buylded and set vpon a broad felde, and is full of all goodnesse the entraunce is narrowe and sodayne, lyke as if there were a sye at the ryghte hande, and a depe water at the lefte, and as it were onely one strait pathe betwixt them both so small that there coude but one man go there.

¶ If this cyte nowe were geuen vnto an heye and he neuer wente thowgh the parlous waye, howe wolde he receaue hym encreptaunce And I sayde: It is so Lorde. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porcion. And why for they? I saye haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyng Judged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrowe, full of sorrowe and trauaile. They are but fewe and euell, full of perilles and labours. For the en-traunces of the wyde worlde were wide and sure, and brought in innumerable fruyte.

¶ If they nowe whiche are entred into this worlde, maye not comprehend these strait and vaine thynges, much lesse maye they comprehend & vnderstand the secret thynges. Why disquie-test thou thy selfe then seing thou art but a cor-ruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe where as thou art but mortall? And why haste thou not receaued into thyne herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

¶ Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, & thou hast ordeyned in thy lawe, that the ryghte-ous shoulde inherite these thynges, but that the vnlawfull and vngodly shoulde perishe. Reuerthlesse, the ryghteous shall suffer strait thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffered strait thynges, shall not le the wyde.

¶ And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstanding aboue the wyse. For there be many perishe, because they disuise the lawe of God & in set foze them. For God hath geuen strait commaun-dement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and howe they shoulde lyue: and if they hepe this, they shoulde not be punyshed.

¶ Neuertheles, they were not obedient vnto him, but spake agaynst hym: imagined vaine thynges, and purposed to lyne, and sayde mai-ner, & there was no God, and God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, by lawe

lawe haue they dyspleyd, and benyfed hym nomyles: in his statutes and ordynances haue they not bene faythfull and steadfast, and haue not persequed his woiches.

And therfore Elias vnto the full, plenty and to the empty, emptinesse. Schole the time shall come, that these tokens which I haue told the, shall come to passe, and the byrde shall apere and the earth shall not be passeth awaye, shall be wred: and whosoever is deliuered fro the enelies, shall be my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall openly declared, with those that be with hym & they that remaine: shall be my in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the woilde shall be turned into the olde sylence seuen dayes, lyke as in the foze Judgements so that noman shall remaine. And after seuen dayes, I woilde that yet a walch not, shall be raised vp, and shall be corrupt. And the earth, shall receiue those that haue slepe in her: and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylence, and the secret places shall deliuer those that be committed vnto them.

And the moost hyghdest shall be openly declared vpon the seate of Judgemente, and all miserie shall vanishe awaye and longe suffering shall be gathered together. But the Judgement shall continue, I truch shall remaine, and sayth shall be strong, I woiche shall folowe, & I reward shall be wred: I ryghteousnes shall watch, and the vnryghteousnes shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: * Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, * Moses for the fathers that synned in the wyldernesse, & he that came after him for Israel, in the tyme of Ahas, & Samuel: and * Dauid for the destruction, & Salomō for them that came into the sanctuary, * & I as for those that receaued rapyn, & for the dead that he myghte liue, & Ezechias, for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and by these other in lyke maner, whych haue prayed for many.

Even so now, seying the corrupt is growen vp, & wychednes increaled, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so nowe also?

He answered me, and sayde: This present woilde is not the ende, there remaineth muche honour in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shall be the ende of this tyme, & the begynnyng of the immortalite for to come, wherin all corrupcion is vanisshed all voluptuousnes is loked al mychelse taken away, rightousnes growen, & the verite spreg vp. Then shall no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, nor oppresse him that hath gotten the victory. I answered then, & sayd: This is my first and last sayng: I it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: as els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym that he shulde not synne. For what profit is it for men now in this presente tyme to lyue in heynesse, and after death to loke for punishment? O thou Adam, what haste thou done? For thought it was thou that synned, thou art not fallen alone but we al that come of the. For what profit is it vnto vs, if there be promysed an immortal tyme: where as we meble wyth deadly woic-hes? And if there is promysed vs an everlasting hope, where as oure selues are euell and wayne and that there are layde vp for vs dwellynges of helthe and freedom, where as we haue lyued euell, and that the woild wyppre of the hyghdest is kepte to defende them whych haue led a paciente lyfe, where as we haue walked in the most wyched wayes of all? And that there shall be shewed a Paradise, whose scrupit mounceeth for euer, where in is freedom and medecyne, where as we shall not goo in: for we haue walched in vnplesant places: And that the faces of the whych haue abstayned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as oure faces shall be blacke and darke: For whyle we lyued and dyd vnrighteously, we considered not, that we shulde suffer deathe.

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consyderacyon and thoughte of the battyle, whych the man hath vpon earth: that if he be overcome, he shall suffer as thou hast sayd.
But if he get the victorie, he shall receaue the thyng that I saye. For this is the lyfe, wherof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, sayng: * Chuse the lyfe that thou mayst lyue: * Dan. 12.3 Auerchelesse, they beleued him not, neither the Prophetes after hym.

So, now me whych haue spoken vnto them, that heynesse shulde not reache vnto them, to they destruction, lyke as tope is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be intourmed in saluacyon.

I answered then and sayde: I knowe I ord, that the hyghdest is mercifull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, whych are not yet in the woilde, and vpon those also that walke in his lawe: and that * he is patiente and longe suffe-ryng towards those that haue synned in the woiches, and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyeth: and that he is of grate mercy, for he multiplied his louing kindnesse towards those that are presente, and that are past, and to them whiche are for to come.

For if he multiplye not his mercyes, the woilde shall not be made lyuyng, with those that dwell therein. He geueth also, for if he gaue not of his goodnes that they whiche haue done euell, myghte be cased, from they wychednes, the ten thousand part of men shuld not be made lyuyng. And if I Judger forgane not those that be dealed with his woide, & if he wold destroye the multitude that strueth, there shuld be very fewe left in an vnumerable multitude.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

Elias prayed God rather to luke vpon his crime than vpon the synners of the people.

And he answered me, sayng: I The mooste hyghdest made this woilde for many, but he woilde to come for se. I will tell the almyghtyde, Elias: As when thou askest the earth, it shall Bbb iii saye

100. 7. 1. 2.

saye vnto the, that it groweth muche moule wheet of earthen vessels are made, but wylle of it that gold cometh of. Euen so is it with the woyche of thy woylde. There be many created, but fewe shall be preserved. Then answered I & sayde: Then shall be vnto the wyte (thou soule) and denoure the vnderstanding, for thou art agreed to hearken & to geue care, & wyllyng to prophesy: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but onely to praye, O Lord, wylt thou not geue thy seruauit leaue, that he may pray before the, and that thou mayest geue seed vnto ouer better, and buyde ouer vnderstandinge that there may come fruite of it: and that eury one whiche is corrupte, and beareth the state & and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, and we al are one woyche makyp of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayde & lyke as the body is fashyoned nowe in the mothers wombe, & geuest the membres & the creature is preserved in tyme & water: & nyne moonethes doth the woyche suffer the creature which is fashyoned in her: but the thyng that is preserued, and it that is preserved that bothe be kept together: and when tyme is, the wombe deliue-reth the thyng that is kept and growen in her.

For thou hast commanded the byestes to geue milke vnto the frue, that the thyng which is created and fashyoned, maye be nuryshed for a tyme: & then thou dyspolest & ordrest it wth thy mercye, byngest it vnto the ryghteous-nesse: nurystest it in thy lawe, and reformest it wth thy vnderstanding, mortifiest it as thy creature, & makest it liuyng as thy woyche. Seyng then that I destroyed him, which with so great laboure is created & fashyoned thowow thy chmaudement, & couldst lyghtly ordayne also, & the thyng whiche is made myght be preserved.

And this I spake now of all men in general as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am soyy: & of thine inheritaunce for whose cause I mourne: & of Israel, for whō I am wo-ful: and for Jacob: for whose sake I am grieved therefore begin I to pray before I, for my selfe & for the, for I see the sal of vs: euen of vs, & well vnderstod. But I haue herd I swiftnes of I iudge which is to come: therefore heare my voice, & vnderstande my wordes: & I shall speake before the.

This is the begynnyng of the wordes of Elohas, before he was receaued: O Lord thou that dwellest in euerslastyngenesse, whose eyes are lyfte vp in the ayre, whose steele is exceadyng hye, whose gloire and magnetye maye not be comprehended, before whom the hoodies of heauen stande wth trembllyng, whose hepyng is turned in wyne and lyre, whose word is true whose talkyng is steadfast, whose commandment is stronge, whose ordynauces is fearful, whose looke is dysyth vnto the depthes, whose myght maketh the mountaynes to melte away and whose truth beareth witness: O heare the prayer of thy seruauit, and marche wth thyne ouer the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue I wyl speake, & so longe as I haue vnderstanding, I wyl aunswere & loude vnto the synners of the people whiche stande in the trespasse. Haue no respecte vnto the tyched studies of the heathen, but to the wytysse of those that kepe thy testimonyes wth loyaltes. Thynke not vpon those that haue walched farydye before the, but vpon them, whych wyl haue knowne thy grace.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy them, whiche haue had brasty maners, but to looke vnto the that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacyon at them, whiche are vboyste the beastes: but loue them, & alway put they trust in thy righteounes and gloire: for we and oure fathers haue all the same synnes & disease, but because of oure synnes I shall be called merciful.

For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called merciful, where as we haue no wor-thes of ryghteounes: for the ryghteous whiche haue layde vp manye good woyches together, shall ouer of the I dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, & thou shouldest take dyspleasure at him? O what is I corruptible mortal generation, & thou shouldest be so rough toward him?

For of a truth there is no man among the that be bozne, but he hath deale wychedly, and among the faythfull there is none whiche hath not done amysse. For in this (O Lord) thy righ-teounesse and thy goodnesse shall be prayed & declared, yf thou be merciful vnto them, whiche are not ryche in good woyches.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spoken a ryght, & accordyng vnto thy wordes it shall be. For I wyl not verily consyder the woyches of them, whiche haue sinned before the death, before I iudgement, before destruction: but I wyl reioyse ouer the woyche & thought of the righteous. I wyl remembere also I pylgrymage, I holpe makynge & I reward. Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as I husband man soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sowed or planted is not al kept safe, neyther doth it al take roote: Enf so is it of them that are sowed in the woylde, they shall not all be preserved.

I answered then and sayd: Yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake lyke as the husbunde manes seede perpereth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to muche rapyn vpon it: Euen so perpereth man also whiche is created wth thy handes, and is lyke vnto thine owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto the husbunde mans seede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lord: but spare the people & haue mercy vpon thine ouer inheritaunce O be merciful vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Thyn-ges present are for I present, & thynges to come for such as be to come. For I lackest yet moche seyng thou mayest loue my creature about me.
I haue oftymes drawn ny vnto the, but neuer to I vnrightheous. In this also I art maruylous before the lyke in that thou hast humbled thy self, as it becometh the, and hast not regarded thyne

thyne owne selfe, that thou art bad in such a bonour amonge the righteous. Therefore shall grete wretchednesse and miserie come vpon them & in the latter tyme shall dwell in & world, because they haue walked in grete payne.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke into gloyp for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradise opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, & tyme to come is prepared, plentifullnesse made ready, a cytie is buylded for you, and rest is prepared: yet, perfect goodnesse and wylledome.
The rote of euil is marched from you, the weakenesse and moeth is hyd from you, & into helly eth corruption in for getfulness. Sojournes are banished away: & in pende is drowed & creatur of immortallprie. And therefore aske & no moze questiōs concerning & multitude of the that perish. For they haue takē liberte, despised & diest thought scozne of his law, & forsake his wayes

Whereouer, they haue troden downe hys righteous, & sayde in thep: herre, that there is no God: yea, and that wittingly: for they dyed. For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is thyng and payne prepared for the. For it was not his wil men shoulde come to naught: but they whiche he created, haue despised the name of hym that made them, and are vntouchfull vnto hym, whiche prepared lyfe for them. And therefore is my iudgement now at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe nameye vnto the and such as be lyke the.

Then answered I & sayde: Beholde, O Lord nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the rokens, which thou wilt begyn to do at the laste: but at what tyme & when thou shalt shewe me.

Chapter.

¶ The first chapter.

I answered me then, and sayde: Wherefore thou the tyme diligent in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde the before, so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherein the hyeste wyll begynne to vyl-et world, which he made. And whē there shalbe lene an earthquake & vylde of the people in the world, then shalt thou wel vnderstande & the most hyeste spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen fro the begynnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest: Euen so the times also of the hyest haue playne begynnynges in wonders, and sygnes, and the ende in woche and in tokens. And every one that shalbe saued, and shalbe able to escape by his woche and by sayth: wherein ye haue belimed, shalbe preserued from the sayde perys and shal se my sauour in my lande, and within my borders, for I haue palowed me fro the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche nowe haue abused my wayes, and they that haue caste them ouer by spertfullie, shall dwell in paynes.

For such as in thep lyfe haue receaued be reueres, & haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fre home, and when they had yet open leysure of amendement & conuersyon, and vnder stood not but bypasse it: the same muste knowe it after death in payne. And therefore be thou nomoze careful, howe the vngodly shalbe punished, and howe the righteous shalbe saued, and whole the worlde is: and when it is. Then answered I: & sayde: I haue tolde before, & nowe I speake & wyl speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche perishe, then shalbe saued, lyke as the floure is greater then the byppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the seide: as the floures be, so are the coloures also: such as the woche man is, such is the woche: and as the husbandman is him selfe, so is his husbandry also, for it was the tyme of the worlde.

And when I prepared for them that are nowe, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they shoulde dwell, then was there no man that withstode me. Nowe when every one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is nowe prepared, and the moneth that cealeth not, and the lawe whiche is vnsurcheable: thep maners were corrupte. So I considered the worlde, & beholde, there was peryl, because of the thoughtes, that were come into it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wyne-berpe of the grapes, & plante, from among many generacions. Let the multitude perishe then, whiche are growen vp in dayne: & let my grape and wyneberpe be kepte: euen my plante for wyth great labour haue I made it vp.

Nevertheless, if thou wilt take vpon the yet leue dayes mo (but I shal not fast in them) go thy way then into the felde of floures, where no house is builded: and eate only of the floures of the felde, eat no fleshe, bypnt no wyne, but eate wyne vnto the hyeste continually: so wil come, and talke with the.

So I wente my waye and came into the felde whiche is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & byd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of & same sacrificed me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my berre was vered within me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth and began to talke before the hyeste, and sayde O Lord, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast declared & opened thy selfe vnto our fathers, in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou spakest sayng: Heare me O Israel, and make my wordes thou seide of Jacob. Beholde, I saw my lawe in you, & it shal bring frute in you, & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For our fathers whiche receaued the lawe kepte it not, & obserued not the ordynan-ces & statutes, and the frut of the law was not declared: for it might not: for wher it was shone * For they receaued it, perishe because they kept not the thyng that was sown in them.
It is a custome when & ground receaueth seed

And when I considered these thynges in my herte after this maner, I looked aboute me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryghte syde, "I sawe a woman, whiche mouened longe, made greate lamentacion, and wepte wyth lowde voyce: her clothes were rente in peces, and she had ashes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayd: wherefore wepest thou? Why art thou so sorow and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me: Sy: let me be-waille my selfe, and take yet more sorowe: for I am sore vnder in my minde, and broughte very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? O: who hath done any thyng to the? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene vnfruteful and bar-ren, and haue had an husbände thirtie yeares.
And these thirtie yeares I doo not bringe elles bape and myghte, and all houres: but make my prayer to the best. After thirtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden, and looked vpon my miserye, considered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of hym, so was my husband also and all my neyghbours, and we gaue great honour vnto the mightye. And I nourished him with great traunple. So when he grew by and came to the tyme, that he shoulde haue a wyfe, I made a feast.

Chapter.

Celina is the woman that apparently went to buy cocaine together.

And it happened, that when my sonne wente into hys chamber, he fell downe, and byrd: then ouerthwe we we all the tyghes, & all my neyghbours rose vp to comfort me.

Then toke I my rest vntill the seconde day at nighe: & when they had al rested, & they myght comfort me, I rested & also rose vp by nighte, & said, I am come herber into this feyre as a picke & am purposed not to come in the cye, but to re mayne here & nether to eate nor drinke, but con tinuallye to mourne and faste, vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditations and thoughts fall that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou tolpe the woman: seest thou not our beautie and mourning, and what happeneth vnto vs: howe dy on our mother is all meale and soze: and how she is cleane brought to doore and in misery: seeing we be all now in beautie and make our mone (for we be all soe full.) As for shee, because I thou takest: it is but for one sennie. Demaunde the earth and the heaue the the it is the wyche ought by reason to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the beginning all men are born of sin, and others shall come and be polar they walk almost all into destruction, and many of them shall be rooted out.

Althow muche then (by reason) make more mourninge then he, that hath losse so greate a multitude, and not thou whyche arte soye: but for one. But yf thou woldest say vnto me: My mourninge is not lyke the mourninge of the earthe: for I haue losse the fruyte of my booke, whiche I barre with heynesse: but the earthe is according to the maner of the erth, and the pre-sente multitude goeth agayne into her as it came to passe: Then saie I vnto the lyke an haste booke, with transpile and sorowe, such is the earth also frome the begynnynge geueth her fruyte vnto man, for hym that made her. And therfore wythholde thy sorowe and heynesse by thy selfe, * & loke what happeneth vnto the beare it strongly. For if thou iudgeth the marke and ende of God, to be righteous and good, and receaueste his counsaile in tyme, thou shalt be comended therein. God thy waye then into the cite to thy busbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyl I not do:
I wyl not go into the cytie: but here wyl I dye.
So I communed more with her, and sayde: do not so, but be reconcayled, & folowe me, for howe many failes hath Syon: Be of good comforte because of the sojorne of Ierusalem. For thou seest that oure Sanctuarie is layed wast, oure auler broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playings of instrumentes and singing layde downe the chancelis paynge put to silence, oure myght is vanisshed a waye, the lighte of oure candel-tyche is quenched, the Arche of the couenaunt is taken from vs, al oure holpe thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpo oure vs, is dishonoured: oure chyldren are put to shame our yeaeres are dyente: our Leuytes are caried a waye into captiuitie: our virgins are defiled, and oure wyues rauished: our ryghteous men spoyled: and oure chyldren destroyed: oure yonge men are broughte in bondage, and oure strong woorthyes are become weak: and Syon (which saie is the grea test of al) is loosed vp from her woorthyppe: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therefore spoke of thy great heavyness and put awaye the multitude of sorrowes: that the mightye maye be merciful vnto the: & that the lyght maye geue the wille from thy labours and trowaile. And it happened, that when I was talking wth her, her face dyd shine and glister, so that I was affrayed of her and misde what it might be. And immediately she cast out a great voyce, verye fratchfull, so that the earthe shook at the noyse of the woman: and I looked, & beholde, the wound appered vnto me homelye, but there was a crye blubbery, and a place was threwen from the grounde and foundation.

Then was I affrayd, and cryed, with a loude voyce, and sayde: Where is Giel the Angell, which came to me at the first? For he hath can-led me to come in many conyteracions & bygd thoughtes, & myne ende is turned into corrup-cion: and my playce to rebuke. And so I was consequer

speaking these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me: and I laye as one that had bene deade, and myne vnderstandyng was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and comforted me, and let me vpon my sele, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth thee? and why is thine vnder standyng verryed? and the vnderstandyng of thy herte: and wherefore arte thou soory? And I sayde: Because thou haste forsaken me, and I haue doone & accordyng vnto thy wordes, I went into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. he sayd vnto me: Stande vp, and be manlyfe, and I will geue thee exhortacyon.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my Loide, forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and heard that I do not knowe. O: Shall my vnderstandyng be discerned, and my mynde? But nowe I beseeche the that thou wylt shewe the thy seruauit of this wondre. he answered me then, and sayd heare me, and I shall enfortune the, and tell the wherefore thou art afrayed, for the hyest hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

he hath sene that thy wayes are epyght, and that thou takest sorowe continuallye for thy people: and makest great lamentacyon for sy-on: and therefore vnderstande the visyon, which thou sawest a litle while ago after this maner.
Thou sawest a woman mountynge, and thou hast comforted her: neuertheless no we seest y the likenesse of y woman nomoze, but y thought there was a cytie buylded: and lyke as the tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so this is y an-swere. The woman to home thou sawest is sy-on: and where as the tolde the, that she hath ben thyrtie yeres vnfertellfull and barren, those are the thyrtie yeres wherin there was no offering made in her.

But after thyrtie yeres, Salomon builded her and offered, and then bare the barren a sonne.
And where as the tolde the: that she noysshed hym with labour, that was the dwellyng of Ierusalem. But where as the tolde y her sonne died when he came into her chambze, that is y fall of Ierusalem. And thou sawest her lykenes howe she mourned for her sonne: & what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art soory in thy mynde, and suffrest for thy herte for her, & so hath he shewed the her clerenesse, & the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therefore I had the remain in the felde where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the hyest woulde shewe thes vnto the: therefore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundation nor building is. For in the place where the hyest wyl shewe his cytie, there shal be no man buyldyng. And therefore feare not, and let not thine herte be afrayed, but goothy waye in, and see the glayous saye buyldyng and howe greute it is and howe great thou thinkest it, after the measure of thyne eyes, & then shalt thou heare as muche as thyne eares may comprehend. For thou arte blessed aboue many other and art called with the hyest as the fewe that to morow be at nyght thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the hyest shewe the visyon of thynges, which we wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earth, in the last dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

The xi. Chapter.

In this chapter and in the nexte ensuing he sheweth of certain visyons, and of the interpretacyon thereof.

Then sawe I a dreame: and beholde, I there came by from the sea an Eagle whiche had twelue wynges, and thre heades: And I sawe and beholde, he spredde hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, & so they were put together agayne.

And I behelde, and oute of his fethers there grew out other lytle contrarie fethers, yhedes rested, the head in the mydd was greater then the other, yet rested it with the respydue.

Whereafter I sawe, that the Eagle flew with hys wynges, and ragyned vpon earth, & ouer all theim that dwell vpon the earth: And I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were sub-iecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynst hym no nor one creature vpon earth. I sawe also y the Eagle stode by vpon hys elawes, and gaue a sounde with hys fethers, and a voyce sayng after this maner: watche not all together, leaue euery man in his owne place, and watche for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last.
Neuertheless, I sawe, that the voyce went not oute of hys heades, but from the myddest of his bodye. And I nombred his contrarie fethers, and beholde, there were epyght of them. And I looked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether: and ragyned ouer all the earth.
And it happened, that when it ragyned, the end of it came, and the place thereof appered nomoze.
So the nexte folowynge stode by, and ragyned and had a great tyme: and it happened, y when it ragyned, the end of it came also lyke as y first so that it appered nomoze.

Then there came a voyce vnto it, and sayde heare thou that hast kept in the earth so longe this I saie vnto the: before thou begynnest to appeare nomoze. There shal none after the at-tayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thirde and ragyned as the other afore, & appered nomoze also. So went it with all the respydue one after another, so that euerye one ragyned, and then appered nomoze. Then I looked, and beholde in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered no moze: for some of theim were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked and beholde, the twelue fethers appered nomoze and the two wynges, and there was no moare vpon the Eagles body, but two heades that rested and syre fethers. Then saw I also that the syre fethers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpon the ryght syde: for the four continued in theyr place. So I loked, and beholde: they that were vnder y wyngges, thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. The third was there one set up, but shortly it appeared nomore, and the seconde was there a while then the first. And I beheld, and loe, the two thought also by the same law to raigne, & while they so thought, behold, the same one of the beades that were at rest: namelike, it that was in the middle, for that was the greater of the two beades. And then I sawe, that the two beades were fylled with hym, & the beade was turned with them, & were by hym, & had eat up the two vnder wynges & would haue raigned.

But thes beade put the hole earthe in feare and bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelte vpon earthe with muche labour, and he had the gouernance of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I looke, and beholde the head & was in the myddest, sodaynly appeared nomore, lyke as the wynges. then came the two beades, whiche ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I behelde, and loe the beade vpon the ryghte syde deuoured & was vpon the lefte syde. And I heard a voyce which sayde vnto me: loke befoze the, and consyde & thyng that thou seest. Then I sawe and beholde as it were a Lyon that roareth, rynnynge hastily out of the wood, and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Agie, and saide: heare thou: I wyll talke with the, & the hyghest shall say vnto the: Is it not thou that hadde the victorie of the foure beades, whom I made to raigne vpon earth and in my worlde, & that the ende of their tynes myght come thowoe them?

And the fourthe came, and ouer ranne al the beastes that wer past, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulness, & ouer the hole compasse of the earthe with the moste wretched labour, and so longer tyme dwelte he vpon the earthe with opesure, and the earthe halfe thou iudged not with trust. For thou hast troubled the miche: thou hast putte & peacable and quiet: thou hast loured spere, & destroyed the dwellinges of them that broughte soude feare, and hast caste downe the walles of such as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongfull dealynge and blasphemie come vnto the highest: & thy wyrd vnto the myghty. The hest also hath lohed vpon the proude tynes, & beholde they are ended and they: abominacions are fulfilled. And therfore appere no more thou Agie, and thy hostile thynges, & thy wicked sedens, & thy vngierous beades, & thy synful clawes, and all thy vaine body, & the earth may be refreshed, & come agayne to her selfe: when she is deliuered from thy violence: & that she maye hope for the iudgement and mercye of hym that made her.

As it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Agie I sawe, and beholde, the beade that also had the upper hande, appeared no more: neyther dyd the fourthe wynges appere any more, that came to hym and were set up to raigne: & they: kyngdome was small and full of bypoure. And I sawe & beholde they appeared nomore, and the whole body of &

Agie was bynt, and the earthe was in greute feare. Then I awaked out of the trauance of my mynde, & from great feare, and sayde vnto my spyrte: Lo, this hast thou geut me in that thou searchest oute the wayes of the byest: lo, yet am I wey in my mynde, and verie weake in my spyrte, and lytle strenght is there in me, for the greute feare that I receyued this nyght. Therfore now I wyll helpe the byest that he wyll comfort me vnto the ende: & I sayde Lo, Lord, if I haue founde grace befoze thy syght and if I am iustified with the befoze many others, & if my prayer be come vnto befoze thy face comforte me then, and geue me thy seruante the interpretacion and plain byfference of this horrible syght, that thou mayst perfectly comforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worsthy to geue me the last of tynes.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The Agie whome thou sawest come vnto the sea, is the kyngdome whiche was sene in the visyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him: for now I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboute all kyngdomes that were befoze it. In the same kyngdom shall twelue kynges raigne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raigne & shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: & this doo the twelue wynges signifye, whiche thou sawest. Is for the voyce & spake, and that thou sawest goo oute from the beades, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after & tyme of the kyngdome there shall aryse greute strynges, and it shall stande in parrall of falling. Neuerthelesse, it shall not yet fall, but shall be set into his begynnynge. And the eyght vnder wynges which thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, & in hym there shall aryse eight kynges, whose tyme shall be but smal, and they peres swifte, and two of them shall perishe. But when the myddest tyme cometh, there shall be foure kept in the tyme, when his tyme begynneth to come, & it maye be ended, but two shall be kept vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest the beades resting: this is the interpretacion. In his laste shall the hest rase vp the kyngdomes, & call many agayne into them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those & dwel therein, with much labour aboute all those that were befoze them. Therfore are they called & beades of the Agie: for it is they that hal byng fast by wychednesse agayne, and & shall perishe and synne his laste. And where as thou sawest that the great beade appeared nomore, it signifyeth: that one of them shall dye vpon his bed and yet with pain, for the two & remain shall slayne with the sword. For the sword of & one shall deuoure the other, but at the laste, shall be fall theow the sword hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnder wynges vpon the beade that is they, whome the hest hath kepte vnto they: ende: this is a small kyngdome, kingdome & full of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest rising up, oute of the wood, and roaring and speaking vnto the Regie, and rebukinge hym for his vnygheousnesse, is the wynde whiche the hyghest hath kepte for them and for theyr wyckednesse vnto þe ende he shall requyre them, & rent them asunder befoze them. For he shall set them lpyng befoze the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the respone of my people shall be deliuer with trouble, these þe be perserued ouer myn endes: and he shall make them iorfall, vntyll the comyng of the daye of iudgement: wher of I haue spoken vnto þe from the begynning. This is the dreame þe thou sawest: and this is þe interpretation. Thou only hast bene mete to know the secret of the hyest.

And when all the people percepued, that the seuen dayes were past, & I not come again into the cite, they gathered them al together, from the leest vnto the moste, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? & what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and sprest here in this place? For of all the people, thou only art leste vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candle in a darcke place, & as an haueu & shippe perserued from þe tempest. Haue we not elles aduersitie ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs: that we had bene brennt wyth dyon? For we are not better then they that dyed there: and they wept with loude voyce. Then answered I them, and sayde: Be of good comfote, O Israel, & be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath pou in remembrance, & the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptation. As for me I haue not forsaken you, nyther am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye, because of the impietie of Israel, that I myghte seeke mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarie. And now go your waye home euery man and after these daies wyll I come vnto you. So the people went theyr waye into the cite, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the feld seuen dayes, as the Angel had me, and dyde eat only of the flowers of the feld, and had my meate of the herbes in those daies.

¶ The xiiii. Chapter.

As it happened after the seuen dayes that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the sea, that it moued al the floures therof. And I looked, and beholde, the man was stronge, and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned his countynance to consyder, al the thynges trembled that were vnder hym: and when the voyce went out of his mouth, all they brennt & brarde hym lyke as the earth when it seeth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered together a myltitude of men oute of numbre, from the four wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynst the man that came out from the sea. And I looked and beholde, he graced hym selfe a great mountayn, and stode vp vpon it. But I wold haue sene þe border of place wherout the hyll was grauen, and I could not.

I sawe after these, that al they whiche came to fyght agaynst hym, were soze afrayed & yet they durst fyght.ouerthelasse, when he sawe the fearcenesse & violence of þe people he neither lyfte vp his hande nor belde a swerde nor any weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sente oute of his mouth as it had bene a blaske of fyre & oute of his lippes the wynde of the flame: & oute of his tong he calte out sparches & stormes: & they were all myte together: the blaske of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, & the great storme, and fell with a rushe vpon the people, whiche was prepared to fyght, & brennt them vpon euery chone so that of the innumerable multitudine there was nothing sene, but only duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same manne come downe from the mountayne, and calling vnto hym another peacable people, and there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad some were soze, some of them were bound, so þe they were carped and brought forth.

Then was I so che choro to great feare, and I awoke, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruauant all thy wonders, from the begynnyng and haste counted me wothy, that thou myghtest receyue my prayer: wherfore me nowe yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I consyde in my vnderstandyng: woe vnto them þe shall be leste in those daies, and much more woe vnto them that are not leste behynde, for they that were not leste were in heuynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter daies whiche shall happen vnto them, and to those that are not leste behynde. Therfoze are they come into great paylles and many necessities lyke as these dremes declare. Yet is it easer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe a waye as a cloude oute of the wynde, and nowe to see the thynges that shall happen in the laste.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretation of the fyght that I shewe the, and I wyll open to the, the thyng that thou hast requyred. For thou haste spoken of them that are leste behynde, & this is the interpretation. He that taketh a way the parrell in that tyme, hath kepte hym self. They that be fallen into harme are such as haue wothes and say the vnto the mooste myghty. Knowe this therfoze, that they whiche be leste behynde, are more blessed then they that be deade. This is the meaning of the visyon. Where as thou sawest a man coming vp from the depe of the see, the same is he whome God the hyghest hath kepte a great season: whiche by his owne selfe shall deliuer his creaturs creature and he shall orde them that are left behynde. And wher as thou shalt see, that out of his mouth there came a blast of wynd, tye and frowne: and howe that he lyt vpon neither the as-nos weapon, but that the ruyninge of hym be-stroyed the hole multitude, that came to fyghe against hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come when God will deliuer them face vpon earth and in a trauance of mind that he come vpon the that dwel in the earth. And one shall undertake to fyghe agaynst another, one ctyle agaynst another, one place agaynst another, * and one people agaynst another one realme agaynst another till this cometh to passe, the which tokens the I shewed before: & then shall my sonne be declared, whome thou shalt clyme vp as a man.

And when all the people heare his voyce, every man shall in theyr owne lande leaue the battayle that they haue one agaynst another, and an innumerable multytud shall be gathered together as they that be wylling to come, & to overcome hym by fyghtyng. But he shall stande vpon the toppe of the mount Syon. & euery heile, & Sion shall come, and shall be shewed, beyng prepared and buylded for all men like as thou shalt the hyl grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people, that are come for theyr wychednesse, with the tempeste: and for theyr euill ymagynacions: and theyr paynes wherewith they shall be punyshed, are phened vnto the flame: and without any labour shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And wher as thou shalt see, that he gathered an other peacable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes which were carryed away prisoners out of theyr owne lande, & in the tyme of Dias the kyng, whom Salmanaar the king of Assyria toke prisoner, and carryed them ouer the water, and so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them thes counsaile, that they shoulde leaue the multytude of the heathen and to go forth into a farther countrey, wher neuer mannynde dwelt: that they myght there keepe theyr statutes, whiche they neuer kepte in theyr owne lande. And so they entred in at the narrowe passages of the water of Euphrates, & so God shewed tokens for them, & heid styl the shouders they were passed ouer, for thozow the countrey, there was a great way: namely of a yere, and a halfe journey for the same region is called Marseth. Then dwelt they there vntill the latter tyme: & when they came forth agayn the hyghest shall holde styl the spynges of the streame agayn, that they may go thozow, ther fore shall thou the multytud with peace. And they that be left behynd of the people, are those that be sounde within my border. Howe when he destroyeth the multytude & is gathered together, he shall defende his people & remayne, and then shall he shewe great wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I seene the man commynge vp from the deape of the see? And he saide vnto me: Lpke as thou canst seper seke oute noz knowe these thynges that are in the booke of the see, euen so much thou shalt see my sonne, of those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the dayes.

This is the interpretacion of the dreame whiche thou sawest, therfore thou only arte lyghtened for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, & applied thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it.
* Tytyle haile thou ordered in wysdome, and haile called vnderstandyng thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyghest. After the dayes, I wyl shewe & more and talke with & more at large: yea, heuyn and wonderous thynges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth vnto the selde, genyng praise and thankes greatly vnto God, becaule of this wonder whiche he byd in tyme, and becaule he gouerneth the same, and such as is in tyme, and there I sat the dayes.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

God appereth to Elias in the bush, & sheweth him what he shall do Vnto the thirde day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush and said: Elias Elijah: And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and kneede vpon myn knees. Then spoke he vnto me: & in the bush byd I apper vnto Moses, and talked with hym when my people serued in Egypte. And I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought hym vpon the mount Syon, wher I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous wozhes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the end, and commaunded hym sayng These woordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I sape vnto the, that thou lay vp in thyne heretide dreames & thou shalt see, and the interpretacions whiche I haue shewed the, for thou shalt be receyued of all, thou shalt be turned, and remayne with my counsell, and with such as be lyke the, vntill & tymes be ended. For the woilde hath loste his youth, and & tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is dryded into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alreedy, and halfe of the tenth parte yet remayneth there & whiche is after the halfe of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and orde thy house, and reforme thy people: comfort such of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruction, let go from the, most all thoughtes: cast a waye burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes & are most beuy vnto the, and haile the to fye from these times: for such euill & wychednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shall they do muche woyle.
* For the weaker & the woilde and the tyme is the moze shall synne and wychednesse increse in them & dwell vpon earth. For the truth is fled farre a way & lyeing is hard at hande. For now dalleth the vylson to come, & thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyl goo as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme & people which are pysent. But they & shall be daye after daye, in. Elias.

who wylt rebuize or rebuize them? Thus the worlde is set in darkenes and they p dwel therein without lyght, for the lawe is hyndled: because no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or p shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the hoie ghoite into me and I shall wyte all that hath bene done in the worlde syns the beginning whiche was wyrtten in thy lawe, p men maye synde p path, and p they which wyl lyue in p latter daies, may lyue

And he answered me sayng: Soth wape gather the people together, and late vnto them that they seke the not for forty daies, but loke thou gather many bore trees, and take with p Harea, Dabzia, Selemia, Ecanus, and Asiel: these fyue whiche are redy to wyte swifely, & come herther, and I shall lyght a candle of vnder standyng in thyn heart, whiche shall not be put oute tyll the thynges be performed whiche p shalt begyn to wyte. And then shalt p declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, & some thynges shal thou the we secretly vnto p wyle. To morow this houre shalt p begyn to wyte.

Then wente I forthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together & sayd heare these wordes. O Israell: Our fathers at the beginning were straungers in Egypt from whence they were deliuered, and receiued the lawe of lyfe: whiche they keepe not, whiche ye also haue trasgessed after them. Then was this lande, & the lande of Syon parted amonge you by lot to possesse. But your fathers and ye poure schiars also haue done vnyghteousnesse, and haue not kept the wayes whiche the hyghest commaunded you. And for so much as he is a righteous Iudge, he toke from you in tyme the thyng that he had geuen you. And now are ye here and your brethren amonge you. Therefore ys so be that ye wyl subdue your owne vnderstandyng, and reforme your herte ye shal be kept almye, and after death shal ye obtaine mer cy. For after death shal the iudgement come, when we shal lyue agayn: & then shal p names of the righteous be manifest, and the woiches of p vngodly shalbe declared. Let no man therfore come now vnto me, nor aske any question of me these fortye dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the felde, and remayned there. The nexte daye a voyce called me sayng Eldras: open thy mouth, and drynke p I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde: he reached me a full cuppe whiche was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronke it, my hert had vnderstanding and bydoome grewe in my brest: for my spete was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and shue nomore. The hyghest gaue vnderstandyng vnto the fyue men, p they wrote the lye thynges of the myghte, whiche they vnder stode not. But in p nyghte they vnderstode head as for me I speake in the daye and helde not my tounge by nyghte. In fortye dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure booke.

And it happened when the fortye dayes were fulfilled, p the hyghest spake, sayng: The first that thou shalte do is to open p the woiche and vnto p maye reade it. But kepe the lye. Iasse, p thou mayest shewe it onely to suche as be wyle amonge thy people. For in them is p spyrng of vnderstandyng the fountayn of wisdom & the streame of knowlage. And I did so.

The xv. Chapter.

The purpose of this chapter is to shewe that the people shall have a knowledge of the lawe of the Lord.

Behold, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophesie which I wyl put in thy mouth, say eth the Lorde: and cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. I care not the pimaginations agaynst the. Let not the vnsaythfulnesse of them trouble the, p speake agaynst the. For all the vnsaythfull shal dye in they: vnsaythfulnesse. Behold, saith the Lorde I wyl byynge plagues vpon the worlde, the sword, hunger, death, and destruction, for wychednesse hath the vpperhand in all p earth and they: shamefull woiches are fulfilled.

Therefore sayeth the Lorde: I wyl holde my tounge nomore vnto they: wychednesse, whiche they do so vngodly: neyther wyl I suffer them in the thynges, that they deale withall so wyckedly. Beholde, p the innocent blood of p righteous complayn continually: & therefore (saith the Lorde) I shal surely avenge: & receyue vnto me all the innocent blood from amonge them.

* Behold, my people is led as a flocke of shepe to be slayn. I wyl not suffer them now to dwel in Egypte but wyl byynge them oute with a mighty hande & a stretched out arme, and smite it with plagues as afore and wyl destroye all p lande of it. Egypt shal mourne and the foundacyons of it shalbe smytten with the plague & punishment that God shal byynge vpon it.

They that tyll the ground shal mourne, for they: seedes shalbe destroyed the lowe the blasyng and haile, & an horrible star. Alas worthy p worlde and them p dwel therein, for p sword & they: destruction draweth nye, & one people shal stand vnto pght agaynst another & swarthes in they: handes. For men shalbe vntedfast & some shal doo violence vnto other: they shal not regard they: kyng and prynces, the wayes of they: doinges and handlynges in they: power. A man shal desyre to go in the cytie and shal not be able. For because of they: pryde & cyties shalbe broughte in feare, the houses shal shake & men shalbe afraid: A man shal haue no pitie vpon his neyghboure, but one shal prouoke another vnto battayle to spoile they: goodes, because of the hunger of bynde, and because of the greates trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth, whiche are from the vpper syng, from the South, from the East, and I p damns to turne vnto them, and restore the thynges p they haue geuen the. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my cholen, so wyl I do also, and recompense them in they: bolome. Thus saith the Lord God: My ryght hande shal not spare the the synners, and my sword shall not cease to draw blood from the foundations of the earth. The fyer is gone out from my mouth, and hath consumed the foundations of the earth. The fumer is the strawe that is kindled. Who wortheth that synne, and hee perissheth by my commaundment. saith the Lord. I will not spare them. So your wage ye chyliden from violence, desyle not my sanctuary: for the Lord knoweth all them synne agaynst hym, and therefore delivereyth he them unto deathe and destruction: For now are the plagues come upon the world, and ye shall remain in them. For God shall not delivere you because ye have synned agaynst hym.

E Beholde, an horrible vision cometh from the East, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of Arabies with many charrettes, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde upon the earth that all they whiche be there ragynge in theyr wrath, make feare and be afrayd, and as the wynde bores out of the woodde, so shall they go oute, and with great power shall they come, and stande fyghtyng with them: and shall waite the poiseyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragons have the upper hande, and not remembre their byrth, and shall turne about swearely together in a great power to persecute them. But they shall be afrayed, and kepe salience at theyr power, and shall flee, and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shall beseege the and consume one of them, and in their holte shall be feare and drede, and stryfe amonge theyr kynge.

B Beholde, cloudes from the East, and from the North, unto the South, and they are very horrible to loke upon, full of wrath and storme They shall smite one upon another: and they shall smite at the great barre upon earth and theyr barre, and the bloude shall be from the sword unto the helpe, and the smoke of man unto the Cam-eles spiter: And there shall be greates fearfulness and trembling upon earth, and theyr is the wrath, shall be afrayde, and a trembling shall come upon the.

And then there shall come great raines from the South, and from the North, and parte from the West, and from the stormy wynde from the East and shall whet them up again, and the cloud which be raised up in wrath, and the barre to cause feare toward the East and West wynde shall be destroyed: and the great cloudes shall be lyfte up, and the myghtye cloudes full of wrath and the barre, that they may make all the earth afraid and them that dwell therein, and they may poure out over all places an horrible barre, fyer and hail, and dryng swarden, and many waters: that all feldes may be full, and all ryvers, and they shall breake downe the cities and walled, and townes and bylles, all trees, woodde, and the grasse of the meadowes, and all their frute. And they shall go straight unto Babylon, and make her afraid: they shall come to her and beseege her: the barre and all wrath shall they poure out upon her.

E And shall see howe and smiche go up unto the heaven and all theyr shall be about her: shall be-hoode her: and they shall remain under her shall be sent unto them that have put her in feare And thou I say, that comforte the thy selfe also upon the hope of Babylon, and arte a worshipper of her perillous: Alas be unto the world, because thou hast made thy selfe like unto her, and hast drec thy daughters in whoredome, and they might trumphe please thy lovers, which have alway desyred to commit whoredome with thee: thou hast followed the abhominable cytie in all her way-es and inuencions.

Therefore saith God: I will sende plagues upon the, we bowed, poverte, hunger, warres and pestilence, to wast thy houses with destruction and deathe, and the glory of thy power shall be dyed up as a flower, when the heate ryseth that is sent over the: Thou shalt be lyche as a poore wyfe that is plagued and beaten of women: so that the myghtye and lower shall not be able to receyve the. Alas I hate the saith the Lord: if thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, craltynge the stroke of thy handes, and layde over theyr deathe, when thou wast drunken: set forth the dewtye of thy countenance.

The reward of thy whoredome shall be recompensed the in thy dosome, therefore shalt thou receyve rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done unto my chosen, (saith the Lord) even so shall God do unto the, and shall delivere the into the plage. Thy chyliden shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall thowth the sword. Thy cities shall be broken downe: and all thyng shall perishe with the sword in the feide. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, and eat theyr owne flesh, and drinke theyr owne bloude for very hunger of breade and rust of water. Thou unhappy shalt come throw the see, and receyve plagues agayn.

In the passage they shall caste downe the slayne cytie, and shall rose oute one parte of thy lande: and consume the poiseyon of thy glorie.
They shall treade the downe lyke stuble, and they shall be the fyre, and shall consume the: the cities and thy lande, thy woodde and thy frute-full trees shall they burne with fyre. Thy children shall they carrie awaye captives, and loke what thou haste, they shall spoyle it, and make the beweye of thy face.

C The xvi. Chapter.

Al be unto the Babylon and Asia, and be unto the Egypt and Siria gyde your selves with clothes of sacke and heare, and mourne your chyliden, be soze, for your destruction is at hand. A swerd is set upon you, and who will turne it backe? A fyre is kindled amonge you, and who will quenche it? Plagues are sent unto you, and what is he that will dyspue the a waye? May any man dyspue awaye an hony Lyon in the woodde? May any man quenche fyre in stuble when it hath begunne to burne Wage one curne agayn the arrowe, for shot of a stronge archer? The myghtye Lord sendeth the plagues, and what is he that will dyspue them a waye? The fyre is kindled and gone forth in

hys wraeth, and what is he that wyl quench it? he shall caste lygherunges: and who shall not feare? he shall shonder and who shall not be a-fraied? The Lozde shall threaten, and who shall not betterly be beaten to powder at his ptesence? The earth quaketh, and the foundacyon thereof the see aryleth up wyth waues from the depe, & the floudes of it are vnquyet and the fithes ther of also befoze the Lozde, and befoze the gloze of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghe hande & holdeth the bowe, hys arrowes that he shoteh are sharpe, and shall not misse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

Behold, the plagis are sente, and shall not turne agayne, til they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled and shall not be put out, til it consume the foundacions of the earth. Lyke as an arrowe whych is shot of a myghty archer, retu- neth not backward: euen so the plagis that shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Who is me, who is me, who wyl deliuer me in those dayes? The begynnyng of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnyng of death and great death, the begynnyng of warres, and the pow- ers that stande in feare: the begynnyng of euils and they shall trybble every one. What shall I do in these thynges: when þ plagis come? Behold hunger, and plage, trouble, & angurthe are sent as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shall not turne from theyr wicked- nes, nor be awayne mynde full off the scourges.

C Behold, vntaples shall be so good chepe vpon erth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case, & euen then shall myschefe grow vpon earth, warres, death, & greute dysquety- nes. For many of them that dwel vpon earth shall perishe of hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shall the swerde destroye, and the dead shall be cast out as donge & there shall be no man to conforzte them. For the earth shall be wa- sted, and the cyties shall be cast downe, there shall be no man left to tyll the earth and to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall pluche them of and gather them? The grapes shall be ry- pe, and who shall treade them? For al places shall be desolate of men, so that one man shall de- lyte to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole cytye there shall be ten left, and two in the felde: whych shall hyde them selues in the thynke bushes, & in the clyffes of stonys, lyke as when there remaine theiour souer olpues vpon the olpue tre, or as when a vyneparde is gather- ed, there are lesse some grapes of them that dy- lygently soughte theiourde the vyneparde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shall be theiour souer left for them that search theyr houses with the swerde. And the earth shall be left wast and the felde therof shall wate olde, and her wayes that al her pathes shall growe ful of thornes: he cause noman shall trausple there theiourwe. The daughters shall mourne, haupnge no hyde grow- nes: the wemen shall make lamentacion, haupng no husbendes, theyr daughters shall mourne ha- upnge no helpe of theyr hyde growme. In the war- res shall they be destroyed, and theyr husbendes shall perishe of hunger. Oye seruautes of the Lozde heare these thynges, and make them. Beholde, the worde of the Lozde. O retrace it: beholde the plagis draw ne, and are not slake in taryng. Lyke as a trauaplyng woma which after the nyne moneth byngeth forth a sonne, when the houre of byrth is come an houre two or thre afore the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chyld commeth to the byrth, they ta- ry not the twynchlyng of an eye. Euen so shall not the plagis be slake to come vpon erth, and the worlde shall mourne and sorowes shall come vpon it, on euerye syde. O my people heare my worde: make you redy to the battell: and in all euil brent as pylgryms vpon erth. & he þ selleth let hym be as he that steth his way, and be that byeth as one that wyl lease.

Who so occupieth marchaundyce: as he that wynteth the nor, and he that buydeth: as he that shall not dwel therein, he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that twynneth the vyneyard as he that shall not gather the grapes, they that mary, as they that shall get no chyldren, & they that mary not: as the wyddowes: and therefore they that labour, labour in vayne. For stra- gers shall reape theyr frutes, and spoyle theyr goodes, ouerthowowe theyr houses, take theyr chyldren captiue, for in captiuite and hunger shall they get chyldren. And they þ occupieth their marchaundyce to robbery, how longe deke they theyr cities, their houses: theyr possessions, and persons: the more wyl I punyssh them for theyr synnes: sayth the Lozde. Lyke as an whoze en- uereth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte, when she dekeheth her selfe, & shall accuse her to her face: when she commeth that de- sebeth, which shall make inquisition for al synne vpon earth. And therefore be ye not lyke therun- to, nor to the woiches thereof: for or euer it be- longe iniquyte shall be taken a wape out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall ragne amog you.

Let not the synner say, that he hath not syn- ned: for toles of fyre shall burne vpon hys head which sayth befoze the Lozde God and hys glo- ry: I haue not synned. Beholde the Lozde know- eth all the woiches of men, theyr ymagynac- ons, theyr thoughtes, and theyr hertes.

* For he spake but the word: let the earth be made, & it was made, let the heauē be made and it was made. In hys worde were strres made and he knoweth the number of thei. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures there of: he hath mesured the see, & what it containeth he hath shut the see, in the myddest of the wa- ters, and wyth hys worde hath he hangd the erth vpon the waters. He spredeth out þ heauē like a vawte, vpon the waters hath he found it. In the desert and hye wyldernes hath he made springes of water, and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaines, that the floudes myght power downe from the stony rokes to water the earth he made man, and put his hert in the myddest of the bodye, and gaue hym byrth, lyke and vnder standyng, yet, and the syete of the Almyghty God, whych made all thynges, and hath leasched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

 He knoweth your ymagynacions and thyn-G. thons, and what ye thynke when ye synne and wolde hyde your selues. Therefore hath f Lord searched and sought out all your woiches, and he shall bewaie you all. And when poure syn-nes are broughte forth, ye shalbe ashamed before men, and poure owne synnes shalbe poure accusers in that daye. What wyl ye do (o) how wyl ye hyde poure synnes before God, and his Angelles? Behold, God him selfe is the iudge feare hym, leaue of from poure synnes, and forget poure vncyghteousnes, and medle no mo-

The booke of Tobias.

The first Chapter.

Tobias beinge taken prisoner, tarried nathe labyr of tressche. The merce and charite of Tobias, a the maner of hym in his youth. He taketh Anna to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He is couerth abel with maner. He and his oer forne to the, but after the death of Sennacherib they retorne agayne.

Tobias was of the trybe and cytye of Nephtali, which lyeth in the hye countreyes of Galile aboue Naalon, the waye to arde the west hauyng the cite of Sephet vpon the lefte syde.
 Though he was taken prisoner in the dayes of Salmana-sar kynge of the Assyrians, neuertheles beinge in captiuite, he forsoke not the waye of truthe In so much that whatsoeuer he myghte get, he parted it dayly with his fellowe prisoners and brethren that were of dys hyneed. And though he were yonger then all the trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe chydly helpe in dys woiches. And when all the other wente to the golden calues, which Ieroboham the kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fledd all they companies, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde, and there woz hyppped the Lorde God of Israel, saythfully praying of all his tpyste frutes and tpydes, so that in the tpyde yeare he mynyshed all the tpydes vnto f straungers and conuertrs. These and such lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordyng to the lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke out of dys owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whome he called after dys owne name, and taught him from dys youth vp, to feare God, and to restryne from al synne.

Nowe when he with dys wyfe, dys sonne and with all dys kyndred was come into capti-uite vnto hetye of Ninue, what tyme as they al did eate of the meates of the he arth, he kept dys soule, and was neuer despyled in they meates. And forsomuch as he was myndfull of the Lorde in all dys bette, God gaue hym sauoure in the spyghte of Salmanasar the kynge, which gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do whatsoeuer hym lyst.

So wente Tobias vnto all them that were in pryson, and comforted them, and gaue them wholsome exhortacions. And when he came to Ragas, a cytye of the Medes, hauyng ten ta-lentes of syluer of thynges wherewith the kynge had honoured him, & saue amonge a great company of people of his kyndred, one Sabeus which was of dys owne trybe beinge in necessyte he gaue hym the sayde weyght of syluer vnder an hande weyngt.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib dys sonne reigned in dys steade: which hated the chyldren of Israel. Tobias went dayly thowowoute all his kyndred, and comforted them, and gaue dys goodes to euery one of the, as much as he might he fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and buryed the deade and slayne and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came a-gayne & fled out of Jewye what tyme as God punished hym for dys blasphemye and in dys wrath slew many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was told the kynge, he commaunded to slaye him, & toke awaye all dys goodes. Neuertheles, Tobias w dys sonne and with dys wyfe fled dys waye was hyd naked, for there were many that loued him. But after .xv. dayes the king was slayne of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to dys hous, and all dys goodes were restoyed to hym.

The ii. Chapter.

Tobias bretheth such of his frendes as frere God to a hart what as he. He is captiue of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge, he receaueth bynd by the permyt, & on the instance of .xv. dys brethelike muche hym.

After those thynges vpon a solemne day of the Lord, Tobias made a good feaste in his house, and sayd vnto his sonne: Go thy waye and bring hether some of our tribe, such as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father, that one of his children of Israel lay slayne vpon the strete. And immediately he leapt fro his table left the feaste, came fastyng to the dead carcase, toke him and bare him pzeuile into his house, & when the sunne was downe he myghte safely burye hym. And when he had byd the carcase, he did eate his meate with mounyng & feare, remembryng the wordes, that the Loide sayde by the pphete Amos: pour hye feakes shal be turned to sorow and heynesse.

But when the sunne was downe, he went his waye and buried hym. Then all his neyghbours rejoyced hym, sayyng: It is not longe sence it was commaunded to slaye the: because of this matter, & haste scarce escaped the danger of death, & buryest thou the deade agayne: Heretofore, Tobias feareinge God moare then thekyng, tooke the bodys of the slayne, & byd them in his house, & buried them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buried the deade, & was wepyng, came home, & layde hym downe by the wall and slepte. And wyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme dunge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blinde. This temptaciō did God suffer to happē vnto him, that they wpych came after myghte haue an example of his pacencelike as of holie Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from his yowth vp, and kept his commaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that the plage of blindenes chaunced vnto him, but remained steadfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

For lyke as blessed Job was had in derisyon of kynnes, euen so was he laughed to scozne of his eldres and kynfolkes, whiche sayde vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes, & buried the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, & spake: Saye not so, for we are the children of holy men, and looke for the lyfe, whiche God shall geue vnto them that neuer turne they belefe from hym. Anna his wyfe wente dailye to the weawynge woole: and looke what luyng she coulede get with the labour of her handes, she broughte it. And it happened that she toke a kynd and broughte it home.

And when her husbāde hearde it crye, he sayd: looke that it be not stolē, restoze it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eate, or to touche anye thyng of theste. Then was his wyfe angrie and sayd: Howe is thy dooce become dayne openly, and thy almes dedes are manys fe. What chere and luche lyke woordes byd she caste hym in the tere.

¶ The iii. Chapter.

The prayer of Tobias. Anna the daughter of Raguel is chaunced of her fathers seruantes. The prayer and fastyng of Anna. And also the innocency and chastite of her. The prayer of Tobias and Anna for health.

When Tobias toke it heuilly, & with a tearefull beganne to make his prayer sayyng: O Lord, thou arte ryghteous, & all thy iudgementes are true, all thy wayes are merce, faithfulness and iudgement. And now O Lord: be mindeful of me, and take no vengeance of my synnes, neither remember my misdeades, neither the mysdeades of my eldres. For we haue not bene obediēte vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captiuitie, into death, into derision, & shame vnto all nacrons, amonge whome thou haste scattered vs. And now O Lord, thy iudgementes are great for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundementes, neither haue walked innocēte before the. And now O Lord, deale with me accordyng to thy wyl, and commaunde my spere to be receaued in peace, for more expedient were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At the same tyme it happened that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Ragas a city of Medes was selaundered of one of her fathers hand-maydens: namelye, that we shulde haue had seuen husbādes, which as sone as they were gone in vnto her, weat slayne of the deuill called Asmodeus. Therfore, when we rejoyced the mayden for her saute, she answered her sayyng: God let vs neuer se sonne nor daughter of the more vpon ea. & thou tiller of thy husbādes. Wilt thou slay me also, as thou hast slaine seuen men? At this voyce went Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and there dayes & the nyghtes we nether eate nor dranche, but continued in prayer and besoughte God wpych teares that he wolde deliuer her from this rebuke.

Vpon the thyrde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayled the Loide sayyng: Blessed be thy name, O God of our fathers, whych when thou arte wroth: the best merce, & in tyme of trouble thou shal geue the saluacion of them, & call vpon the. Vnto the O Lord turne I my face, vnto the lufe I vpin myne eyes, I beseeche the O Lord, lose me oute of the bondes of this rebuke, or elles take me utterlye a waye from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord that I neuer had desire vnto mā, & that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly lufe, I haue not kepte companye wpych those & passe their tyme in sport, neither haue I made my selfe partaker wpych them & walke in light behauiour. Neuerth. lesse an husbāde haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Howe parauenture ether haue I bene unworthy of them, or elles were they vnmete for me, for thou happily hast kept me to another husbāde. For why: thy counsell is not in power of man. But whosoener loueth the and serueth the ryghter, is sure of this, that yf he lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryng and yf he endure in pacence, he shall haue a reward and be hyghly crowned: and yf he be in trouble, than God (no doubte) shal deliuer him and yf his lyfe be in chastyng, than he shall haue leane to come vnto thy merce.

¶ Ecce For thou

For thou hast no pleasure in our bondage: why? after a while thou shalt see the waye of thy prayer: after weeping & bewailing thou shalt see great joye. The name of God of Israel be praised for ever. At the same tyme both their prayers were in the sight of the most high God. And Raphael the holy Angel of the Lord was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God.

The. iiii. Chapter.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be heard, he might saye. he called vnto him his sonne Tobias and sayd vnto hym. My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, & laye the in thine herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, bury thou my bodye & holde thy mother in honour all the dayes of her life. For I oughte to remember what and howe great paines she suffered for the in her wombe. And whē she hath also fulfilled the tyme of her life, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy life, and beware lest at any tyme thou fall vnto synne, & lest thou let slip the commaundementes of the Lord our God. Gene almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: so shall it come to passe that the face of the Lord shall not be turned away from the. Be merciful after thy power. If I haue much, geue plentifully: if thou haue little, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of thy litle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good reward in the day of necessitye. For mercy deliuereth fro all synne & from death, & suffereth not the soule to come in darkness. A greates comfote is mercy before the hygh God, vnto all them that shewe it.

My sonne, kepe the wel from all whoredome & (belyde thy wyfe) so that no fauour be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde beganne all destruction. Whos euer watcheth anye thyng for the, immediatly geue hym hymselfe, & loke that thy hye seruantes wages receyue not by the ouerpyghte. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou woldest not another man shoulde do vnto the. Eate thy bread with the honger and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothe. Wet thy bread and wyne vpon the buryall of the ryghteous, & do not thou eate and drynke thereof with the synners. As the euer counsell at the wyse.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseeche hym that he wyll order thy wayes, & that what soeuer thou deuysest or takest in hand, it maye remayne in hym. I certifie the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I deliuered ten talentes of silver vnto Sabelus, at Ragas a cite of the Medes, and bys hand thyngge haue I by me. And therefore seeke some meanes, howe thou mayest come by him, and receaue of hym the sayde wynghe of silver and geue hym his hande wynginge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: true it is, we leade heare a poore life: but greates good shall we haue, if we feare God, and departe from all synne: and do well.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ The shewyng of pouer Tobias to his father, whereby he cometh to Ragas. An Angell accompanyeth with hym in his journey.

When answered Tobias his father and sayd: father: all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do & that diligently. But howe I shall requyre this money I can not tell. Whether doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What toulde I geue him? And as for the waye whether I neuer knewe it. Then his father answered hym, & sayde: I haue his hande wynginge by me which when thou shewest hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now, & get the some saythfull man to go with the for an hye, that thou mayest receaue the monye, whyle I am yet lyving. Then went Tobias out, & vnder the steepe he founde a sayde pong man standing, gyded by, and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knew not that it was an Angell of God, but saluted hym and sayde: From whence arte thou, thou good pong man. He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye I leade vnto the countrey of the Medes? He answered I knowe it well, & all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Sabelus, & dwelleth in Ragas a cite of the Medes, which lieth vnder the mount Egbaranis. Tobias sayde vnto him: I pray the tary for me, tyl I haue told my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father meruailed and prayde, that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Nowe when the Angell came in, he saluted him, and sayd: Joye be with the for ever moare. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that lyt here in darkness, & se not the light of heauen? The pong man sayd vnto hym: Be of good chere, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst thou byng my sonne to Sabelus, vnto the cite of Ragas in Medea? And when thou comest againe, I shall paye the thy hye. And the Angell sayde vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne & byng him to the agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me I pray the, of what house or of what tribe art thou? The Angell Raphael sayd vnto him: I shall after I hymned of an hye lyng, & I shall be a gyde for thy sonne to go with hym. But I make not careful, I am Iarias the sone of great Hananias. And Tobias answered & arte come of a great kindred: but I pray the be not displeased, I desire to knowe thy hymned. The angel said vnto him: thy sone that I leade forth shortly, & byng him hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias and sayd: wel go on your waye, and God be in your iourney, & his Angel bea you company. So when they had prepared all thynges, & they wolde take with them in theyr iourney: Tobias had his father and his mother his mother farewell, and they wente on theyr waye hither together. Nowe when they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The state of oure age hath thou taken awaye, & sente hym frome vs. Wolde God that mony had neuer ben, for the whyche thou hast sente him awaye. If we had bene contente wyth our pouertie, this had bene great ryches vnto vs. We sawe oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se him. For I truste, that the good Angel of God shall beare him companye, and order wel all the thynges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother left of from wepyng, and helde her tongue.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Young Tobias is aduised from the spirit by the Angel, the Angel sheweth Tobias to take Anna to his wyfe.

Tobias wente on his waye, & a dogge folowed hym, and the fyrste nyght they abode by the water of Egypt. Then wente he oute to walke bys feete, and beholde there came forth an horrible fyre to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayde: and cryed with a lowde voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and drawe him to the. And he dyd so, and drew hym vpon the lande. And the fyre beganne to leape at his feete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto him: take oute the bowels of this fyre, & as for the herte, the gaul and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medicine. Tobias dyd so, & toke the fyre, & they toke hym with them in their ioueney: & residue they salted, as much as was sufficient for them, tyl they came to Raguel a cytie of the Medes. The Tobias asked the Angell, & sayde vnto him: I praye the brother Azaria tell me whereto are these thynges good of the fyre & thou hast bydden me kepe.

The Angell answered hym, and sayde: If thou layest a peece of the herte vpon the coales, & smoke thereof draweth awaye all maner of euell spertes, whether it be from man or from woma so that from thenceforth the same shall come no more vnto them. The gaul is good to annoint or to styke the eyes withall, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shall be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym, where wyle thou & we remayne? The Angell answered and sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thine, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hath neither sone nor daughter but her. All this good belongeth vnto the & thou must marry her, & thefore desyre her of her father, & he shall geue her the to wyfe. The answered Tobias & sayd: As I vnderstand, she hath bene married vnto vs. But whos dead, & they al are dead: & I haue herd saye the deuyl slew the. I am afrayd therfore, lest such thynges happed vnto me also: whiche if it came to passe (sayng I am the only sonne of my father & my mother) I shuld byng hym in their age with sorrowes to their graues.

Then sayde the Angell Raguel vnto him: Heate me & I wyl tell the what they be, of whiche the deuyl hath power. Namely, they that receaue marriage of such a fashyn, & they whiche God out seeth them, & seeth they be: & geue the selues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, whiche haue no vnderstandyng: vpon such hath the deuyl power. But when thou takest her, & arte come into the chamber, withholde thy selfe from her the dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto studyng but vnto prayer to her.

And in the fyrste nyght, rest the lyuer of the fyre, & the deuyl shall be drawen awaye. The seconde nyght walke thou be receaued into the company of the holy patryarches. The thyrde nyght shalt thou optayne the blessing of God so that whole chyliden shall be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the frate of God: and more for the desire of chyliden, the for any fleschly luste: that in the seed of Abraham & mayest optayne the blessing in chyliden.

¶ Young Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguel, he requyeth Raguels daughter to wyfe, and sheweth her.

When went they into Raguel, whiche receyued them ioyfully. And whē Raguel looked vpon Tobias he sayd vnto Anna his wyfe. How lyke is this yonge man vnto my sisters sone? And when he had spokē this he sayd whence be ye good byerthen? They sayde: Of the trybe of Nephtali, oute of the captiuitie of Nineue. Then sayd Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They said: yee, we know him wel. And whē they had spoken much good of him, the Angell sayd vnto Raguel Tobias of whome thou achest is this yonge mans father.

Then Raguel bowed him selfe downe: and wepte, toke him aboute the necke, & kysed him, & sayd: Gods blessing haue I my sonne, for thou arte I somme of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wepte also. Now when they had talked together, Raguel bad kyll a weether, & to make a feast: And when he prayed them to sit downe to dyner, Tobias sayd: I wyl nether eate nor drynke here this day except I first graunt me my petition, & promise me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguel herde this, he was astonied: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other. vii. men, & went in vnto her, & he began to feare, & it shulde chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, & gaue I yonge man no answer, the Angell sayde vnto hym: Feare not to geue hym thy daughter, for vnto this man I seareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none of her haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doubte not but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in bys syghes, and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intente, that thys daughter of myne, myghte be married in her owne kynred, accordyng to the lawe of Moses.

And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyl geue her vnto the: soo he tooke the righte hande of his daughter, & gaue her into the righte hande of Tobias, and sayde. The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you, I praye you together, and fulfill his blessing in you. And they took a letter & made a writing of the mariage: And then made they merke, and praised God.

And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto him, and had her prepare another chamber, and whether he brought Sara his daughter, and the wyfe. Then sayd he vnto her: Be of good cheere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen geue the toy, for the heavynesse that thou haste suffered.

The viii. Chapter.

¶ The Angel by which the boye, Tobias, was sent to praye: and they praye that Raguel desired.

Owe, after that they had supped, they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angel: & tooke out of his bagge, a peece of the leuer of the fish, and layde it vpon the hote coles. So the Angel Raphael toke holde of the deuyll, & sente hym awaye, & bounde hym in the wyldernesse of the hylles of Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & sayd: My daughter, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, to morowe, and enermorowe: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconforte oure selues with God, and when the thyrde holly nyght is past, we shal sojourn together in the bryde of mariage. For we are the chylde of holy men, and we may not come together, as the heathen, that knowe not God.

Even soode they vp bothe together, and besought God earnestly, that he wold plesure them. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of our fathers, praye for thou of heauen and earth of the see, welles and founteyns, and of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the earth, & gavest hym: Qua say an helper. And now Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse that I take this lyfster of myne to wyfe but onely for the loue of children, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd haue mercy vpon vs. O Lord haue mercy vpon vs: & let vs bothe come hile and sounde together to a good age.

And aboute the cocke crowyng it happened, that Raguel called his seruantes, & they wente with him to make a graue. For he sayde it is chaunced now vnto him paradiuente, as it byd vnto the other seven men, that went in vnto her. And when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her sende one of thy maydens, to take yf he be deade, that I maye burye hym afoze the lyghter daye: And she sente a mayden to se, which when she came into the chamber, founde them hile & sounde, sleepe together. And so she came agayne, and brought good tidynge. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe praised the Lord, and sayde: Praise be thou O Lord God of Israel for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou haste healede mercifully with vs, and put a hope from vs the enemy that persecuted vs, & haste geue mercy vnto pouer & to belowed. O Lord cause them to magnifye & praise thy perfectiue, and offer the sacrifice of thy grace, and of their health: that all people maye knowe that thou onely arte God in all the earth.

And immediatly, Raguel commaunded his seruantes to fill the graue & they had made with earth afoze it was lyghter. & had his wyfe prepare a feaste, and to make ready all thinges that were necessarye for meate, to such as went by the waye. He caused two fat hyne also, and foure wethers to be slaine and meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remaine with him two weekes. As for all the good & he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, & made this writinge, that the halfe which remained, shulde fall vnto Tobias after they death.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ The Angel goeth to Sabelus at the house of Tobias, which he bought the letter, and receaued the monye.

When Tobias called vnto hym the Angel whom he thoughte to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Saryas, I praye the heren vnto my wordes: If I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruante, I shal not deserue thy prouidence. Reuer the selfe, I beseeche the & thou wylte take the deales & the seruantes, & go vnto Sabelus in Rages the cytye of Weedes, & deliuer hym his hande wytyng, & receaue the mony of hym, & praye hym to come to my mariage. For thou knowest thy selfe, & my father dothe nombe the dayes: & yf I tarye one daye to longe, he wyl be soze in his mynde. Nowe seyst thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I can not saye hym nay.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruantes, and two camels, and wente vnto Rages the cytye of the Weedes: & when he had founde Sabelus, he gaue him his hande wytyng, and receaued all the monye. He tolde hym also of Tobias the sonne of Toby, howe all thynges had happened, & caused hym to come wyth hym to the mariage. Nowe when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sitting at the table: & he leaped vp, & they kissed one another: and Sabelus wepte, & praised God, and sayde: the blessing of the God of Israel, haue thou for thou arte the sonne of a right vertuous and iuste man, & of one that feareth God, and giveth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyf and poure elders, that ye maye se your chylde & your chylde's chylde, vnto the thyrde and fourth generation, & your seed be blessed of the God of Israel, to the ragyneth woyle with oute ende. And when they all had sayde Amen: they wente to the feaste, but wyth the feare of the Lorde helde they the feaste of the mariage.

The x. Chapter.

Owe whyle ponge Tobias made long taryng by reason of his mariage his father was ful of care and heavynesse, and thoughte what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so long.

¶ On the

Why shulde he be kepte so long there? For Sabelus is dead, and no man will geue him the mony. Thus beganne he to be very sorrowful, he and Anna his wyfe with him, and beganne to weepe bothe together, because their sonne was not come againe vnto them at the daye appointed. As for his mother, she wepte with dyscomfutable teares and sayde: Who is my sonne? Oh what ailed vs to sende the awaye into a straunge countrey, thou lyght of oure eyes, thou trust of oure age, thou comfort of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seeinge all the thynges y<sup>e</sup> we haue are onely in the we shulde not haue sente the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tongue, and be not discomfited, oure sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sente hym wythall is saythfull ynough. Reuerthelisse, he might in no wise be comforted but dayly wente oute, looked aboute, and went aboute all the stretes, whereby he thoughte he shulde come againe: that (if it were possible) he might se him commynge a farre of. But Raguel said vnto his sonne in lawe: O tary heere, & I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias to tell him that thou arte in good health. Tobias said vnto him: I am sure, y<sup>e</sup> my father, & my mother counte euery day, & y<sup>e</sup> their hertes are sope.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias wyth manye wordes, and wold in no wyse heare him be deliuered Sara vnto him, & the halfe parte of all his good, in seruantes, and hande maydens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kyne, & much mony, & so sente him awaye fro him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holye Angell of the Lorde be with you in your iourneye, & byngte you forth safe and sounde, that ye may finde all thynges in good case wyth your eld. & as that myne eyes may se your chyldezen afoze I dye. So the elders embraced the daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honour her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbande, to rule wel her houshold, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe sawlesse.

¶ Yonge Tobias buyng his wyfe and housholde in the myddaye, commeth to the Angel. & he became of his mother looking after her sonne. He is ioyfully receaued of his father and mother. Sara commeth seuen dayes after.

They were nowe gorynge home warde agayne, vppon the .xi. daye, they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Sinure. And the Angel sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the, we toweyll go befoze, & let the housholde wyth thy wyfe & the cattel come softre and sayer after vs. And when Tobias was contente y<sup>e</sup> they shulde go befoze, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gaulle of the fywe wyth the, for it shal be necessarye. So Tobias toke of y<sup>e</sup> gaulle, & they went their way. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppes of an hyll, from whence she might se farre about her. And while she was waytynge there, for hys commynge, he looked a farre of and anone she perceaued her sonne commynge, and ranne & told her husband sayynge: Beholde thy sonne cometh. And Raphael said vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest into the house, immediately wythpasse the Lorde thy God, and geue thanckes vnto him: then go to thy father, and kisse him, and striche hys eyes ouer with the gaulle of the fywe, y<sup>e</sup> thou hast broughte with y<sup>e</sup>. For be sure, that his eyes shall theyghte wyse be opened, and thy father shall se the lyght of heauen, and shal reioyce at the syght of the. Then the dog y<sup>e</sup> had bene wyth them in theyr iourney, ranne befoze, & came as a messenger, and wagged his taile for gladnesse.

So the dysnde father arose, and beganne to runne and rombled with hys feete, and gaue a seruante hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed hym, he and his wyfe and they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Nowe when they had wythpypped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of y<sup>e</sup> fillys gal, & annointed his fathers eyes: & taried halfe an houre, & then began the blempe to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene y<sup>e</sup> wythe sayn of an egge: which Tobias toke, and drew from his eyes: and immediately he receaued his sight.

Then they prayed God, he and hys wyfe and all they that knew him. And Tobias sayd: O Lorde God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thanckes, for y<sup>e</sup> hast chastened me, and made me hole. And loo nowe I do se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sounde wyth all the householde & catrell, with Camels and muche moneye of dys wyues, and with the moneye that he had receaued of Sabelus, & he tolde hys father & his mother all the benefytes, whych God had done for hym, by the man that led him. Achoz also and Rabath, Tobias sister sonnes came, and were glad, and reioiced wyth hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, & and were ryghte ioyfull euerychone.

¶ The .xii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias rebuked by vnto his father the pleasures that the Angell had hym. He offered vnto the Angell halfe the gooden that he broughte wyth hym.

Then Tobias called hys sonne vnto him and sayde: What may we geue this holy man, that went wyth the? Tobias answered hys father and sayde: Father, what rewarde shall we geue him? O what thyng can deserue his benefytes? he hath bene my guide, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the mony from Sabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue the euil spyte from her, he hath bene an occasyon of gladnesse to her father, and mother: he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fywe: he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, yea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Nowe shulde we woorthely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, y<sup>e</sup> thou wyllste desire him, y<sup>e</sup> daylye he wyl vouchsafe, to take wyth hym the halfe of al that we haue broughte.

So the father and the sonne called hym, take him aside, and began to play upon that he might be content to take in good worth the half part of all that they had to do.

25 Then sayde he secretly vnto them. I praye the God of heauen, and geue thanks vnto him before all men I praye, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde the longest secrets, but to shewe and praye the wonders of God, it is an honourable thing. Fasting is good with fasting, and mercy is better then to haue up treasures of golde. For mercy helpeth from deapth, cleneth frome, and causeth to finde cutting off. But they that do sinne & vnrightiousnesse, are the enemies of their owne soule.

Wherfore I tell you the trueth, and will C hyde nothing from you. When thou prayest with teares, and buryest the dead, and leste thy dyner, & bydest the dead in the house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myghtest burye the in the myght: I offered thy prayer before the Lord.
 And because thou walke accepte and beloued of God, it was necessarye, that temptacion shoulde trye the. And nowe haue the Lord sente me to heale the & to deliuer Sara thy lones wyfe fro the cruel sperte. For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seven that stande before God.

When they heard this, they were sore affraid, and trembled, and fell downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayde the Angel Feare be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene with you, it is the wyl of God: geue walfe D and thanks vnto hym.

You thought that I should eate and dryncke with you. but I vse meate that is inspyble, & dryncke that cannot be sene of men. So the fore is the tyme that I muste turne againe vnto him, that sente me. but be ye thankfull vnto God. and tell ouer all his wonderous workes.

And when he had spoken those wordes, he was taken a waye oute of theyr syghte, so that they sawe him nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces, by the space of the houre, & praised God, when they arose vpon they tolde all thys wonderous working.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouth and praised the Lorde and sayde: Grate arte thou O lorde for ever more, and thy kyngedome worlde without ende: for thou scourgest & healest, thou ledest vnto hel, and bringest out agayne: there is none that maye escape thyne hande. O gude thancher vnto the Lorde, pe chyldren of Israel, & praise him in the synge of the Heathen. For among the heathen wyse chylde hym nat hath he scattered you, to the intent þe shoulde stonde furthe bys mercuriouse woorkes, and cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghty but he. He that chasteneth vs for oure myserdes, & for his owne mercy sake shall be saue vs.

5 Consider then, howe he hard dealeth wth you, and praye him wth care and dyce, and magistric the curia synagoga in your doo-then I will praye hym euen in the lande of my captiuitie. for he hath redeemed his maiestie out of synfull people. Tene ye therefore O ye sinners, & do righteousnes before God, & he shal p be wyl to shewe his mercy vpon you. Ag for me, and my soule, we wil crye in God. O praise the Lord alle ye wyse chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, & be thankfull vnto hym, O Ieru-salem & cytie of God, the Lord hath purged the for the workers of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lord in thy good thinges, & geue thurs to the curia kyng God, & he maye buyde the from habacuque agayne in the, & he maye call againe vnto the, al such as be in captiuitie, and p thou maye the haue sope for euermore. With a laper lighte shalt thou thyne, and al the endes of the world shal honour p. The people shal come vnto the from farre, they shal bypge gyften, and wooshypp the Lord in the, and thy lande shal they haue for a sanctuary, for they shal call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that dyspyse the, and all that blasfeme the, shalbe condemned: but blessed shall they be that buylde the vp. As for the thou shalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shalbe blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all that loue the and that be glad of thy peace. Praise thou the Lord O my soule, for the Lord oure God hath deli-uered his citie Jerusalem from al her troubles.
I wyl counte my selfe happye, if my sted re-maigne to see the clearenesse of Jerusalem. The gates of Jerusalem shalbe buylde wth Su-ppre, & Somaugde, and all the compass of her walles wth precious stones. Al her streets shalbe paued wth white marble stone, & in al the streets shall Alleluya be songe. Praise be the Lord, whiche hath exalted her, & his kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talhyng.

Charles prospered in the destruction of Dixie. It is found in records at Raleigh after the death of his father & mother.

And after Tobias had gotten his sight againe, he spued. xlii. yeres, & sawe his chylders chyldren. Some when he was, C. ii. yeres olde, he died a most iustice honorable man.

Amine. For whē he was lvi. yeres of age he lost the syghte of his eyes, & whē he was lx. yere olde, he gat his syghte agayne. The residue of hys lyfe led he in ioye, and increased well in the fearre of God, and departed in peace. But in the houre of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, & .viij. yonge spryngalden hys sonnes & chylidren, & sayde vnto them: The destruccyon of Amine is at hande, for the woorde of the Lord cannot faile: and our birthes þat are scattered out of the land of Israel, shall come togeder agayne And þat hole lāde of it þat hath ben wast, shall be filled: & the house of God þat was hyent in it, shall be buylded agayne: & all such as feare God, shall returne togeder: & heauen also shall soylake their pooles and come to Iherusalem, & dwel there, & all the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, and worshippe the Lord God of Israel.

And therefore

And therfore my chyldren, heare yowre father: serue the Lorde in the truth, seke after his will, and do the thyng that pleaseth hym.
Commaunde your chyldren, that they do righte geue almes: be myndefull of God, and euer to be thanchefull vnto hym in truth, & with al theyr power: heare me now therfore my chyldren, and abyde not heare: but in what daye soeuer ye haue buried your mother besyde me, get you from hence. For I se that the wychednesse of it shall byynge it to destruction and ende.

After the death of hys mother, Tobias departed awaye from Ninue, with his wyfe and chyldren, & with his chylders chyldren, & came agayne to his father & mother in lawe, & found them hole & in good age, & toke the care of them.
And he closed their eyes, & was heyre vnto Ra-gules goodes, & sawe the syfte generation, and hys chylders chyldren. And when he was. xcij. yeare of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, & his kynnsfolkes buried hym. And all hys posterite continued in a good lyfe, & holy conuersacion so that they were loued & accepted both of God and man: and of all the people of the lande.

The fyrste Chapter.

The byrthing of Eglathanis. The victorie of Nabu-chodonosor against Arphaxat. The messengers of Nabu-chodonosor are dyspyssed.

Arphaxat the kyng of the Me-des subdued manye people vnto hys dominion, and buylded a noble stronge cite, whiche he called Eglathanis: The walles of it made he of fre stone, four square, seuentye cubi-tes hygh, and thyrtye cubi-tes bryde. He made towres there vpon an hundred cubytes hye. But vpon the four corners every syde was twentye foote bryde. He made the portes in the heygth, lyke as the towres.
This kyng trusted in hys myghty boost, and in his glorious charettes.

So in the twelue yeare of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, whiche raygned in the great cy-tie of Ninue, foughte agaynst Arphaxat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Bagau, besyde Euphrates & Tygrys, and Iadalan in the feide of Erpeth the kyng of the Elphen.

Then was the kyngedome of Nabuchodo-nosor exalted, and his bert was lyfte vp: and he sente vnto al them that dwelte in Celycia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the heathen that dwelte in Carmel & Cedar, & to suche as dwelt in Galile in the great felde of Edozion, to all them that dwelt in Hamaria, and beyond the water of Iordane vnto Ierusalem and the hole lande of Iesse, vnto the mountaynes of Etyo-pya. Vnto all these byd Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consent wolde not agre vnto him, and sent the messengers agayne emptye and put them awayne without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indignacion at all these landes, and swore by hys thron, & by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all these countreys.

The ii. Chapter.

Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor to subdue all the countreys, The preparation and perfect of Holofernes.

At the thyrtyeth yeare of kyng Na-buchodonosor, vpon the twelue day of the fyrste moneth, it was deuilled in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defende him selfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, al his captaynes, and men of warre and shewed them hys secreete counsaile, and tolde them that his purpose was, to byynge the hole earthe vnder his domynyon. Nowe when they were all contente with hys sayinge, Nabuchodonosor the kyng called Holofernes, the chiefe captayne of hys warres, and sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the Weste, and specially agaynst those that haue dyspyssed my commaundemente. Thou shalte spare no realme, all stronge cyties shalte thou byynge in subieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called toge ther all the captaynes, and rulers of all the power in Assya, and mustred the souldiers vnto the hooste lyke as the kyng commaunded hym, namely an hundred and twentye thousande fygthpugs men vpon foote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All hys ordynance sente he afoze w an innumerable multitude of camels: so that the hooste was well prouyded for wy-choren, and small cattell, and that without nomber. He caused coyne to be prepared oute of all Assya for his hooste. Muche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he tooke hys iourneye, he and all hys hooste with charettes, horsemen, & archers, of whome there were so many, that they covered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grethoppers.

And when he was gone paste the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, whiche lye vpon the lefte syde of Celycia: & so he wente vp into all theyr castels, and wanne every stronge holde. As for the welthe cite of Melothus, he brake it downe and spoiled all the chyldren of Tharsis, and the Assalytes, whiche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the South syde of the lande of Cheton. He wente ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hygh cities that were there, from the bryke of Hamaze tyl a ma come to the see: & he tooke the borders in frome Celycia, vnto the coastes of Iaphet towarde the South: he caried awaye all the wyppantes, and spoiled all theyr goo-des, and whosoever wythstode hym he slewe them with the swerde.

After this he left downe into the feild of Damascus in the tyme of harvest, and byente vp al the coyne and all the treys, and caused the bynes to Cec iiii he cut be cut doone. And the feare of him fell vpon al them that dwelt vpon the earth.

The .iiij. Chapter.

How Nabuchodonosor king of Babilonia came to Jerusalem and besieged it.

In the hynges and princes of al cytyes and landes sente they Embasadors: nameley they of Egypte, & Mesopotamia, Siria, Gobal: and Lybea, and Cecilia, which came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease to-warde vs. It is better for vs to serue the grete hyngre Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we shulde dye and be slayne: and receaue grent hurte. All our cyyes and possessions, al mountaynes and hylles, fildes, great and small cattell, wepe goates horses, and camels, all our goodes, and householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subieccyō be it altogether. We our selues also, & our chyldren wylde thyne owne, come vnto vs a peceable lord, and vse our scrupce at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes, downe from the mountaynes with hoxslemen, & grete power, and conquered all stronge defended cyyes and all that dwelte in the lande and out of al cyyes he tooke stronge men, and soche as were mete for the warre to helpe him. There came suche a feare also vpon those countreies, that the indwel-lers of all the cities, the princes and rulers, and the people together wente forth to mete him as he came, & receaued hym honourably with garlandes, & torches, & daunces, tabyettes & pipes.

Reuer thelesse, though they dyd this, yet myght they no waye hys rigorous stomache: but he destroyed their cities, and he wed downe their woodes. For Nabuchodonosor the kinge had commaunded hym that he shulde roote out all the goddes of the land: to the intente that he onely might be called and taken for the god of the nations: which Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So went he thowde Siria, Gobal, and thowde all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, and came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Sabaa, and Beptopolie, and toke they: cyyes and remayned there thre dayes wherein he caused all the hole multitude of hys hoost to be gathered together.

The .liii. Chapter.

How the chyliden of Israel & dwelt in Jewry herd this, they were soze afraid of hym.

When the chyliden of Israel & dwelt in Jewry herd this, they were soze afraid of hym. There came suche trembling also & feare vpon them that they lozowed he shuld do vnto the cyye of Jerusalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cyyes and their temples. So they sent into all Samaria round about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, and made faste the townes with walles, and prepared coyne, for them agaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the preaste, wote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Egipten: which li-eth our agaynst the grete felde by Dothaim) and wote all those by whome men myght haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of & mountaynes, wherby there myght be anye waye and passage to Ierusalem, & that they shulde holde dylygent watche tohere anye trayes was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyliden of Israel dyd as Eliachim the preaste of the Lorde had commaunded them. And al the people cryed earnestly, and humbled they: sou-les with fastynges and prayers, they and their wyues. The preastes put on beery clothes, and layde the yonge habes befoze the temple of the Lorde, and couered the auter of the Lorde with an beery cloth. And with one accorde they cried vnto the Lorde God of Israel, that they: chy-lden shulde not be geuen into a praye, and their wyues into a spoyle, that their cyyes shulde not be layed waste, and that they: Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be as shame and rebuke vnto the heathen.

Then Eliachim the hye preast of the Lorde wente rounde aboute al Israel: and spake vnto the saying: Be ye sure, that the Lorde wyl heare your prayes, & ye continue steadfaste in fasting and prayers in the syghte of the Lorde.
Remember Moyses the seruaunt of the Lorde, whyche ouerthrew the Amelechites (that trusted in their myghte and power, in their hooste in their wydes, in they: charettes & hoxslemen) not with weapons, but with holy prayers.
Euen so shall all the enemies of Israel be, & ye continue in thys worchie that ye haue begonne.
So vpon this exhortacion, they continued in prayer befoze the Lorde: In so muche that they which offered burnt sacrifices vnto the Lorde offred the offerynges vnto the Lorde, beynge araied in beery clothes, & had a shew vpon their heades. And they al besoughte God from they:
hole herte, & he wolde viset his people of Israel.

The .v. Chapter.

How Holofernes in discontented the Ierus. Achioz the chiefe of the chyliden of Israel, and how he caused the Ierus: for the which thing the rulers of the Idumeans were very angry with hym.

Ad worde came to Holofernes the pryncer of the warre of the Assiris that the chyliden of Israel prepared them selues to make resistance, & howe they had stopped the wayes betwixt the mountaynes. Then was he exce-dyngre wroth, and called all the prynces of Won, and the captaynes of Ammon, and sayd vnto them: Tell me, what people is this, that he-peth in the mountaynes? Of what maner of cities are they? What is they: power? Of what maner of hooste haue they? Who is they: cap-tayner? And why do they byspye vs (more then all those that dwell in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, that they myghte receaue vs with peace? Then Achioz the captayne of al the Ammonytes answered, and sayde: Wyl, & I please the to heare, I wyl tel the truth befoze concerning this people & dwel in the mountaynes, and there shal no lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generation of & Chaldees, they dwell first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde

wolde not folow the goddes of theyr fathers: & so forsoke they the custome of theyr forefathers (whyche had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heauen & earth: whiche also commaunded them that they shoulde goo from thence, and dwel at Haran. Now when there came a birth into the hole lande, they went downe to Egypte and there they dwelte foure hundred yeres, in the whiche they multiplied greatly, that theyr hoste myghte not be nombred. And when the kyng of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued them in buyldyng of hyrcities wryth making of clate and byrche, they cryed vnto God theyr Lord, whiche punished y hole lande of Egypte with dyuers plagues.

Nowe when the kyng of Egypte let them goo theyr waye, and the plage ceased, and then folowed after them, to take them and to bring them agayne into his seruaue, whyle they were slpyng a waye, the God of heauen opened the see so that the waters floode faste vpon bothe sydes as a wall, and these wente thowre the botome of the see byr the wodde. In the whiche place when an innumerable people of y Egyptians, folowed vpon them, they wer so ouerwhelmed with the waters: that there remayned non one to tell them that came after, howe it happened. So when thys people was passed thowre the red see, they came into the wilderness of mount Synay, where neuer man myghte dwell afoze, and wher the sonne of man neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myghte drinke, and forty yeres had they meat from heuen. Wherfore they went (without bowe and arrow, without buckler or sword) their god fought for them, & caused the to haue the victorie. Yea, no man was hable to hurt this people, except it were y they departed unfaithfully from the worshyping of y Lord their God. But as oft as they worshipped any other besyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, and to be put to confusyon. Neuerthelesse, as ofte as they were sore for theyr departing from y worshyp of their God, the same god of heauen gaue them power and strengthe to withstande theyr enemies.

Whereafter, they slue the kyng of the Canaanites, Jebusites, Hethites, Hethites, Euphrates, and Amozites, & al the myghtie in Helebon and toke theyr landes and cyties in possession: and so longe as they synned not in the syghte of theyr God, it went well wryth them, for theyr God hateth vnyghteousnesse. For in tymes past when they went out of the waye whiche God had geuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuers battayles of many nacyns, and many of them were carped awaye prysoners vnto a straunge countrey. But nowe lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lord theyr God, & are come together again out of the countreys where they were scattered abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwel therein: and as for Jerusalem where y Sanctuarie is, they haue it agayne in possession.

And therfore my Lord, make diligent inquisition, yf this people haue done wyckednes in the syghte of theyr God, then let vs goo vnto agaynst them, for double lesse theyr God shal deliuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not displeased their God, we shal not be hable to withstande them, for theyr God shal defende them: and so shal we be a shame to all the worlde.

Now when Achior had spoke out these wordes all the great men of Holofernes wer wroth and thought to slay hym, & said one to another: What is he thys, that dare saie, y the chyldren of Israel are hable to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kyng, & his hoste: where as they are vnyweapened people, without strengthe, or understandyng of the seates of warre: That Achior therfore maye know that he hath disceined vs, we wyl go vnto the mountaynes: when y myghty men of theim are taken, he also shal be sicke with the sword, that all people maye know, y Nabuchodonosor is the god of the earth, & that there is none other withoute hym.

¶ The vi Chapter.

¶ Achior is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is led to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

When they had lefte of speaking, Holofernes toke soze indignacion, & said vnto Achior: For so much as y hast praphecied vnto vs sayng: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of theyr God, I wyl shewe the y there is no god but Nabuchodonosor. Yea, we shal slay them all as one man, & also shalte pryphe with them thowre the sword of the Assyrians, & all Israel shalbe destroyed w the, and then y shalte fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the lord of the whole earth. Then shal y sword of my knyghte go thowre thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe styte amonge the wounded of Israel, & shalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be utterly destroyed with them. But yf thou thynkest thy praphecy to be true, why dost y then change thy colour why art thou afeard? Thynkest y that my wordes ar not hable to be perfourmed? But that thou maiste knowe that y shalte fele these thynges with them, behold: from this houre forth wyl I sende the to yonder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (whiche they haue wythely deserved) falleth vpon the, thou mayst be punished with them.

So Holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achior, & carpe hym to Bethulsa, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruantes tooke hym and wente thowre the playne felde. But when they dæwe nygh vnto the mountaynes, the syngers casters came out agaynst them. Neuerthelesse, they gat them a way by the syde of the mountayne, and bounde Achior hande and foote to a tree, and so left hym bounde with wy thes. and turned agayne into theyr Lether.

 For withstandinge, the chylidren of Israel wente downe from Bethulia, came into hym looked hym, broughte hym into Bethulia: sette hym in the mydd of the people, and asked hym what the matter was, that the Assyrians had sette hym bounde.

C Othias, the sonne of Micha: of the trybe Iumeon, and Charuin (whiche is also called Sothoniell) were the principall rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achioz stode in the myddest of the Senauncers, & before them all: he tolde them, what answer he gaue Holofernes to thynge that he asked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayng: & how Holofernes hym selfe was wrothe, & commanded hym for þe same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame þe chylidren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achioz: also to be put to deathe with dyuers toj-nementes, because he sayde the God of heauen is theyr defender. And when Achioz had playne-lye tolde oute all these thynges, all the people fel downe vpon theyr faces, praisynge the Lord and poured oute theyr prayres together vnto the Lord, with a generall complaynt and wepyng, and sayde: O Lord God of heauen and of earth, beholde theyr pynde: and looke vpon oure lowlynesse, & consider howe it standeth w-thynges, & make it to be knowne, that þe for sakest not those, whiche holde them fast: by the and howe that thou hyngest them lowe þe owne strength. So when the wepyng & prayer of the people, whiche they had made the hole daye longe, was ended, they comforted Achioz sayng: The God of oure fathers, whose power and strengthe thou hast prayed, shall so re-warde the, that thou shalt rather see theyr de-struccyon. When the Lord our God then shall geue his seruantes this lyberte: God be also with the amonge vs: so þe it please the, thou with all thyne, maist dwell with vs.

Now when Othias had ended the counsaile: he toke hym into his house, and made a greate supper, called the elders to it: & so they refreched them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together which made theyr prayers all the night longe in þe congrega-cyon, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The vii. Chapter.

¶ Bethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people request helpe of God. They of Bethulia make game ouer the citty for want of water. The prayer of the people was towarde a lamentacyon.

The next daye Holofernes commaunded his hoste to go vp agaynst Be-thulia. There was an. C. and. xxi. W. syghyng men on foote, and xxi. W. horsemen, besyde the preparyng of them that were wonne: and came to them on euery syde out of the countreyes & cittyes whiche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battaile agaynst the Israelites, and came on the hyll side, vnto the top þe loereth ouer agaynst Bethulia, from the place whiche is called Belus, vnto Bethulon flyeth toward Bethulon.

Nowe when the chylidren of Israel sawe so greate a multitude of the Assyrians, they fell downe flat vpon the ground, strowed ashes vpon theyr heades, & prayed with one accord, þe God of Israel woulde shewe his mercye vpon his people. And so they toke theyr weapens and sat betwene the mountaynes in the narrow place, & kepte the daye, daye and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was gong about, he found the water spyrng, whiche from the south syde was conueyed into the citty by a condyte: this commaunded he to dyrecte an other waye, and to cut theyr condyte in sonder. There were welis also not farre from þe wallen, whiche they used secretly, moze for pleasure then for necessity.

Then wente the Amontes, and the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and said: The chylidren of Israel truste nether in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes & hylles. That thou mayst ouercome them therfore, withoute the stryking of any battaile, set men to kepe the welles, & theyr draue no water oute of them: so shalt thou destroye them withoute swearde, or at the lesse theyr walbe so feble, that they must be sayne to geue ouer the citty, which they thinke not hable to be wonne: for so much as it lyeth in the mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and all his menne of warre, and he sette an hundred that euerie well rounde aboute.

And when this wathe had endured twen-tye daies, the Cyterens and al þe had water, say-led them þe dwelte in the citty of Bethulia, so þe in the hole citty they had not drynke ynoughe for one daye, for the people had water geuen the daye in a measure. Then came the menne and women, yong persones, & chylidren all vnto Othias, and sayd all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast delt euell wys: thou woldest not speake peceably wyth the kynge of þe Assyrians, therfore hath the God solde vs in their handes, & there is no man to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe before theyr eyes in thurst and great destruccyon. Therfore gather nowe together all the people that be in the citty, & we maye all yelde oure selues wyl-lynglye vnto the people of Holofernes, for better it is that we be captiue and mayle þe Lord with our lyues, then to be slayne and perishe, and to be laughed to scorne & shamed of euery man, when we se our wyues & chylidren be before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde: & the God of our fathers (which punyssheth vs accordyng to the deservynge of oure synnes) and geue you warnynge, that ye geue vp the citty nowe into the power of Holofernes hoste, that our ende maye be shorte with the swearde, whiche els shall endure longe, for want of water and for thurst.

When they had spoken out these wordes, there was a greate wepyng & howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man: and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto god with one voyce, sayng: we haue sinned with our fathers the haue done amysse, we haue desyre wyllyngly. Thou arte gracious, haue mercede vpon vs. pynne our vnepghetousnesse wth thine owne scourge, and geue not those ouer þ knowlage þ vnto a people whiche know þ not, lest they lay amonge the heathen: where is they? God.

And when they were so werpe with theys crying and weeping, that they helde theys tonges. Othas stode vp with watry eyes, and saide: O take good hertes vnto you, (dere bryethen) and be of good chere, and let vs waite per these fyue dayes for mercede of the Lorde peraduenture he shall put away his indignacion, and geue glo rie vnto his name. But yf he priue vs not wth these fyue dayes are past, we shall dooe as ye haue sayde.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the vertuous woman Iudith, which repposeth the aucthyores because they tempted the Lorde. Also also moueth them to encourage and breuen the people, and sheweth her counsel against the conspiracy of the Jewes.

And it happened when these wordes came to the eares of Iudith a wydow, whiche was þ daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Othas, the sonne of Elap, the sonne of Jammoz, the sonne of Iedeon, þ sonne of Rayhoim, the sonne of Achib the sonne of Belchia, the sonne of Euan, þ sonne of Rathania, the sonne of Malathiel, þ sonne of Simeon the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly haruest. For whyle he was bindyng the sheues together in the feld the beate came vpon his head, and he died at Bethulia, his cyrie, and there was he buried besyde his fathers.

So was Iudith his desolate wydow these petys and syxe monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a pryue chambze, where she dwelt, bring closed in with her maydens. She ware a smocke of heare and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbodes, and newe mones: þ the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayer and bewtyful person. Her husband also had left her greafe ryches, a plenteous howsholde, great vnmorable posselions and many catel. This Iudith was a woman of a very good repute with enery one, for she feared the Lorde greatly, and there was no bode þ spake an euell woide of her.

When this Iudith heard, howe Othas had promysed the people, that after the fyfte day he wold geue vp the cyrie vnto the Assyrans, she sent for the elders Chambyr, and Charmy, and when they came to her, she saide, what thyng is this, wherein Othas hath consented, þ yf God helpe not wth in fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer þ cyrie to the Assyrans. What are ye þ ye tempt the Lorde? This deuyer oprayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hym to wrath and dyspleasure. Wyl ye let the mercede of the Lorde a tyme, and appointe hym a daye after your wyl?

Aruerthelisse, for so muche as the Lorde is pyente, let vs rather repente, pourpyge oute teares, and beseechyng hym of grace. For God sheweth not as a man, neithe wyl he be pyn-ned vnto wrath as the chylde of men. And therfore let vs partysal doome before hym, & serue hym with a meke sperte, and wth wepyng eyes saye vnto the Lorde þ he deale wth vs according to his owne wyl and mercy: þ yf he as our herte is nowe bereb, and brought lowe tho-row the pyde of them, it maye be so comforted thowwe his grace: in somuche as he solow not the synnes of our fathers, whiche forsoke they God, & worshipped other goddes: for the whiche synne they perished with the sword, were spole d and brought to shame, of all theys enemyes.

As for vs we knowe none other God but onely him, for whose comforte let vs tary wth me he nelle. We shal requyre and make inquisition for our bloude, from the veracions of our enemyes he shall bring downe all the heathen, that eyle vs agaynst vs, and put them to dishonour, eue the Lorde our God.

Therfore dere bryethen, seying ye are the honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whome all the people haue respecte, and vpon whome the lyfe of the people standeth, lyfte vp theys hertes wth your exhortacion that they maye call to remembraunce, howe our fathers also in tymes past were tempted, þ they myght be proued, yf they worshipped theys God a ry-ghte. They ought to remember, howe our father Abraham beyng tempted, and tryed tho-row many tribulacions, was founde a loue: and frende of God. So was Isac, so was Jacob, so was Moyses, and all they þ pleased God being tryed thow many troubles, wer found stedfaste in faythe. Agayne, they that receyued not theys temptacions wth the feare of God: but putte theim selues forth, with vnpanyency and murmuring agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shuld not we undertake to be auenged for the thyng þ is done vnto vs, but consyde: that all these punyshmentes are lare lesse then oure synnes and misdeedes. Selepyng also that this correccyon cometh vnto vs, as to the ser-uautes of God, for amendemente, and not for oure destruccyon.

Then sayde Othas, and the elders vnto Judith: all that thou spakest, is true: and no man ca repyue thy wordes. Pray þ for vs now the fore vnto God, for thou arte a holy woman, & fearest God. And Iudith sayde vnto them: Sepyng: ye knowe þ my wordes are of God, then pyone my counsel & deuisse, yf it be of God: & beleue god þ he wyl bring my counsel to good end.

Thus haue I deuyled: Ye shall stande thys nyghte before the poite, and I wyl goe forth wth Abiamy mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God: that he wyl graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyons of it: tyll I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothing els but pray vnto the Lorde poure God for me. Then Othas, the pynce of the people of Iuda, saide vnto her Gode thy waye in peace, the Lorde be wth the-
that that we maye be awenged of our enemyes. And so they wente from her agayne.

The .ii. Chapter.

¶ The prayer of Iudith for the victory.

*ps. cxxxviii.
v. 12. & 13.*

And when they were gone they waxe, Iudith went into her closet: put on an hearme smocke, drawed a shewe upon her head, fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto him sayng: O Lorde God of my father: & myneon whiche gauest hym a swerde for a defence a-gainste the enemyes that vsed violence & wylfulnesse, and that rauyned the vyrgyne and put her to bythensyte. Thou that gauest they: wy-ues into a pray, and they: daughters into cap-tiuitie, and all they: pray for a spoule vnto thy seruauntes, whiche bare a zeile vnto f: helpe me wyddom, O Lorde my God I beseeche the. For thou hast done all thynges from f: beginning and loke what thou hast taken in hand and de-uysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgements are done in thy euertlastyng soeknowlage. O loke now vpon the armyes of f: Assirians lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpon the hoste of the Egyptians, when they beynge weaponed, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put they: truste in they: charrettes, horsemen: and in the multy-tude of they: men of warre. But thou lokest vpon they: hoste, castyng a thycke darchenelle before them: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euen so Lorde let it go with these, f: truste in the power & multytude of they: men of warre in they: charrets, arrows, and speares, & know not that f: only art our God, whiche destrouest warres from the beginning, & that thou arte f: Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as e-uer from the beginning, & in thy power byng they: power to naught: cause they: myghte to fall in thy wrath. They make they: bolle, that they wyl vnhalow and despyle thy Sanctuary and to waste the tabernacle of thy name, & to caste downe f: house of thyne aulter, with they: swerd. Byng to passe, O Lorde f: the pyde of the enemye be cutte downe wth thy owne swerd, that he maye be taken with the snares of his eyes in me, and f: thou mayst smyte hym with f: lyppes of my lone. O grue me a stedfast mynd, that I may dispyse hym and his strengthe and f: I maye destroueyne hym.

4

This shall byng thy name an euertlastyng remembraunce, of the hande of a woman once-throw hym. For thy power, O Lorde standeth not in the power of men, neyther haste thou any pleasure in the strengthe of hostes. There was neuer proude persone that pleased f:, but in the prayer of the humble and meke, hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lord of all creatures, heare me poore woman: callyng vpon the, and put-tyng my truste in thy mercye. Remembre thy conuauente. O Lorde: and minister wordes in my mouthe, & stably the thyss deuyce in my heart that thy house maye continue still in holynesse and that all the heathen may knowe that thou art God, and that there is none other but thou.

The .iii. Chapter.

¶ Iudith becomyth her selfe to go to Bethulie. The lastyng that she sheweth vnto Iudith. & howe she is receyued.

And when she had leste of cryng vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from f: place where she had lyen flat before the Lorde: and called her mayden, wente downe into her house, layde the heary cloth from her, put of the garmentes of her wyddowhede: washed her bodye, anoynted her frise with precious thinges, of swete sa-noure: byoyded & platted her heare: set an hone vnto her head, & put on suche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, sylppers vpon her fete, ar-meletes: spanges, earpynges: syngerynges, & be-hed her selfe with all her best arape.

The Lorde gaue her also a special bewtye & fayernesse: for all this deckyng of her selfe, was not done for any voluptuousnesse, & pleasure of the fleshe: but of a ryght discrecyon and vertue therfore byd the Lorde increase her beutye: so that she was excedyng ampyable, & well sauou-red in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayde also a hottel of wyne, a pot with opile: portage, cake byade and chele, & went her waye.

Howe when she came to the poste of the cy-tie, she founde Osphas, and the elders of the cy-tie waytyng there. Whych when they sawe her, they were astonied, & maruelled greatly at her bewty. Agerthelesse, they asked no questy-on at her, but let her goo, sayng: The God of oure fathers grue the thyss grace, and wyth his power persourme all f: deuyce of thy heart, that Ierusalem maye reioyce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombze of the holy & ryght-eous. And all they that wer there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and went out at f: poste the and her mayde.

And as she was goyng downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the spyng of f: dape, the lypes of the Assyrians met wth her, and toke her, sayng: whener comest thou?
O whether goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of f: hebrues, & am fled from them: for I know that they shal be geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thought scozne to selde them selues vnto you, that they myghte fynde mercy in poure sygh. Therfore haue I deuy-sed by my selfe after this maner: I wyl go be-foze the kynge Holofernes, & tell hym all thete secretes, and wyl weete hym, howe he may come by them and wyne them, so that not one man of his hoste shall perpye.

And when these menne had hearde her wordes, & consydered her fayre face they were astonied (for they wondred at her excellent bewty) & sayde vnto her: Thou haste saurd thy lyfe by syndyng ouer this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to oure Lorde: & be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreat the well, and thou shalt please hym at the better do they

So they brought her into Holofernes' chamber, and tolde hym of her. And when he came in before hym, immediately he was overcome, and taken with her bewtie. Then saide his seruantes: Who wolde despyse the people of Iewes, that haue so fayre women? Shuld we not by reason lyge agaynst them for this? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes, lpyng in a canopye, that was wrought of purple lyne: gold & maragde, & pcyous stones, she looked fast vpon hym and fell downe vpon the earth. And Holofernes seruantes toke her by agayne at thyr Lozdes commaundement.

The xi. Chapter.

Holofernes requereth of Iudith the cause of her coming, which giveth hym a iustell answer.

When sayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyn herte, for I neuer harre man, & wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge.

As for the people, yf they had not despyed me, I shulde not haue lyfe vpon my speake agaynst them. But tell me now, what is the cause that thou art departed from them, and wherfor art thou come vnto vs.

And Iudith sayde vnto hym: Myr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden, for yf thou wilt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lozde shall byng thy matter to a prosperous effect. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lozde of the lande lyueth, & as truly as hys power lyueth, which is in the to punishment of all men that go wronge, all men shall not only be subdued vnto hym chozowrbe, but all the bestes of the felde. For all the people spake of thy prudent actus: and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou only arte good and myghtye in all thy kyngdome, and thy dyscrepon is comendyd in all landes.

The chynge is manifest also, that I chozowrbe spake, and it is wel knowe, what thou commaundest to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a surtie, that our God is so wiaich with vs: by the reason of our synnes, that he hath thewed by hys prophetes vnto the people, howe yf for they synne he will deluyter them ouer vnto y enemye. And for so muche as the chyldzen of Israel, knowe that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are soze afrayed of the.

They suffer great hunger also, & for want of water, they are deade now in a maner. Howe ouer, they are apoynted to slaye all theyr cattell that they maye dyspuse the bloude of them, and are purposed to spend all the holy ornamentez of theyr God, which he hath forhydden them to touch for cozne, wyn, and oyle. Seyng nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, yf they must nedes be destroyed. Whiche when I thy handmayden perceyued, I fled from them and the Lozde hath sent me vnto the, to thewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden dozowrbe shipped God euen now here besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I will make my prayer vnto God, & he shall tell me when he will reward them theyr synne: then shall I come and thewe the and byng y chozowrbe the middest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt haue all y people of Israel, as the wepe withoute a wep-berd: there shall not so much as one dogge backe agaynst the, for these thynges are thewed me, by y prouidence of God: & for so much as God is displeased wth the, he hath sct me to tel the y same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruantes, which merueled at y wysdome of her, & sayde one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon earth, in bewtye & discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hether be-foze thy people that thou mayst geue them into our handes. And for so much as thy promise is good, yf God performe it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and y shall be excellent and great in the court of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

Holofernes commaundeth that Iudith be well entreated. She by frendly lycens to go out in the night season to praye, & prayeth at Agao's tent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, and for chynge. Holofernes is iudged.

When commaunded he her to go in where hys treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde haue her dwellinge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from his table. Iudith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it, as nowe (lest I displease my God) but will eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then saide Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thynges that thou hast brought with the sayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou lyueth my Lozde thy handmayden shall not spende all this tyme, yf God haue brought to passe in my hand the thynges that I haue deuyfed.

So his seruantes brought her into the tent where as he had appoynted. And as she was going in, she despyed that she might haue leaue to go forth by nyght, and before daye to her prayer and to make intercession vnto y Lozde. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the myght season she went forth into the valley of Bethulia, & washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she by y besoughte the Lozde God of Israel: That he wolde prosper her waye, for the deluyterance of hys people. And so she went in, & remained cleane in her tente, tyll she toke her meate in the euening.

Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruantes, & sayde vnto Agao hys chamberlayne: So thy way, and counsell this hebyuelle, that she may be willing to consente to hepe company w me. For it were a shame vnto all y Assyrians that a woman shulde so laughe a man to scoyne that she were come from hym vnmiedied withal.

Then went Agao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come into my Lozde, yf she maye be honoured before hym.

hym that she mighte see and dayntie wyne, and be merie with hym. And whome Judith answered: Wilho am I, that I shoulde saye my Lozde naye / what so euer is good befo: thy eyes, I shall do it: and looke what in his pleasure, that shall I thinke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So she stode vp, and deckt her selfe with her apparell, and went in and stode befoze hym. And Holofernes herbe was whole moued, so þe went in the desyre toward her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: dayntie now and lye downe and be merie, for thou haste founde sauour befoze me. Then sayde Judith: My Lozde, I wyll dayntie for my mynde is merie to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and byd eate and dranke befoze hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merie with her, and dranke wyne, the euer he byd afoze in all his lyfe.

Holofernes supeth for very drunkennes, and Judith cutteth off his heade: and girtheth therwith to her owne people of Iudaea the is certified with hope. They gaue charytes vnto God for their deliuerance. Judith speareth vnto Achybor: whiche messenger she at her feate done vnto Holofernes.

I*N Owe when it was late in the nyghte, his seruantes made fast euery man to his lodgyng. And Agas shutte the chambze doozes, and wente hys waye, for they were all overladen w wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed al dounken, and of very drunkennes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden to stande wythoute befoze the doze, and to waite. And Judith stode befoze the bed, makinge her prayer with teares, & moued her lippes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lozde God of Israel, and haue a respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this our, that thou mayest let vp the cytie of Ierusalem, lyke as þu haste promysed. O graunte that by þe I may perfourme the thyng, whiche I haue deuyled thozowe the belce, that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken thus, she went to the bedsteade, and lowed the swerde that hangd vpon it, and drew it oute. Then toke she holde of the heary lockes of his heade, and sayd strengthen me, O Lozde God in this houre and with that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote off his heade. Then toke she the canapp away, and rolled the deade body asyde. Immedyately she got her forthe, and deliuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, & bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forthe together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye and so passed by the holte, and came thozow the valley vnto the porte of the cytie. And Judith cryed a salue vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (saide she) for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed his power vpon Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytie together. And they came all to mete her: lytle and greute, yonge and olde for they thought not that she shoulde haue come in soone. So they lyghted candles, & gathered about her euery chone: but she went vp into an hye place & caused silence to be proclaimed.

When euery manne nowe helde his tongue, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lozde our God for he hath not dyspyled, nor forsaken thym, that put theyr truste in hym, and in me his handmaiden he hath perfourmed his mercy, whiche he promysed vnto þe house of Israel: yee, in my daye this same nyght hath he slaine þe enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the wallet, & she shewed it thym saying: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captain of þe Assyrians, & this is the canapp, where in he laye in his drunkennes: where the Lozde our God hath slaine hym by þe hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lozde lyueth, his Angel hath kepte me goyng thether, remaynyng there, and comming bether againe from thence. And the Lozde hath not suffered me his handmaiden to be dyspyled, but withoute any fleythyng of synne hath he broughte me agayne vnto pon: and that with greute victoize, so that I am escaped, and deliuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euery chone, for he is gracys and his mercye endureth for euer.

So they praised the Lozde all together, and gaue thankes vnto hym. And to her they sayde: The Lozde hath blessed the in his power, for thou rowe þe: he hath brought our enemies to naught. And Elias the chiefe ruler of þe people of Israel sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lozde þe hye God, above all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lozde, the maker of Heauen and earthe, whiche hath gydded the a ryghte to wounde and smyte of the heade of the captayne of our enemies. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shal neuer come oute of the mouth of men, whiche shall alwaye remembre the power of the Lozde: saying thou haste not spared thyne owne selfe, but put the in iopardye: conspyding the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so haste helped theyr fall befoze God our Lozde. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achybor also was called, and he came. Then saide Judith vnto hym: The God of Israel vnto whome thou gauest toptnesse, that he wolde be aduenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this nyghte thozow my hande: smytten of the heade of all the vnsapthall. And that thou mayest see that it is so, beholde: this is the heade of Holofernes, whiche in his presumptuous pryde: dyspyled the God of the people of Israel, & threatened the with destruction, sayinge: When the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause the al to be stycke with the swerde. When Achybor sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde, for very anguysh & feare so that he sounded withall.

But after þe he was come againe to hym selfe he fell downe befoze her: and prayed her, saying: Blessed arte þu of thy God, in al the tribulations of Jacob: for al the people þeate of thy name, shal praise þe god of Israel because of the

The. xlii. Chapter.

¶ The countrey of Judeth. Achys being an heathen man turneth to God. The Assyrians are stricken of the Jews.

Judith saide vnto all the people: bze then, deare me. Wycke vp thy head vpon our walles, & when the sunne aryseth, take euery man his weapon, & fall out violently: not as though ye wolde go helyde them, but to runne vpon them with violence. When the tynes in the tentes se this, they shal of necessity be compelled to fye backward, & to rase vp theyr capayne to the battayle. So when theyr captaynes come into Holofernes paulisyn, & find the dead body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulness shall fall vpon them, & when ye perceyue they fye, folow them without all care, for God shal deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achys, seing the power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his heaten yde belef, and put his trust in God, and let hym self be circumcised: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel he and all his posterite vnto this daye.

Now allone as it was day, they steyt vp holofernes head vpon the walles, & euery man toke his weapon, and so they went out with an horrible crye. When the spies saw this, they came vnto holofernes tent, and they were within the tent, came before his chambze, & made a greates ruyding to wake hym vp, because they thought with noise to haue called him. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the captaynes and pynces: and all the chefe in the kyng of the Assyrians hoste came together, they sayd vnto the chamberlaynes: Go pour way in, and wake hym vp for the myse are crepte out of theyr holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto battayle.

Then went Agao into his chambze, stode before the bed, & clapped with his handes, for he thought he had be slepyng with Judith.

But when he had herkened perfectlye with his eares, and coude perceyue no sterynge, he wente nygher to the hedde, and lyfte it vp: and then sawe he the deade bodye of holofernes lyng there without a head, welterd in his bloud vpon the earth. Then cryed he with loude voyce and with wepyng rent his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lepte oute vnto the people & sayde: one woman of the Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people vnto shame. For loo, holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hath no heade.

When the chefe of the Assyrians hoste heard that, they rent theyr clothes, and there fel an intolerable feare and tremblyng vpon them so that theyr myndes were sore afraid. And there was a grete crye in the hoile hoste.

The. xlii. Chapter.

¶ The flight of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after the heathen belongeth vnto the people of the Assyrians. Judith is praised of Iohannan and of the people.

Now when all the hoste heard that holofernes was headed, theyr myndes & concell fel from hym, and suche a feare came vpon them that they undertooke to defende thym selfes by flyng away: one spake not to another but hanged downe theyr heades, lest al be hind them: and made haste to escape from the hebrues: for they heard, that they were hastnyng to come after with theyr weapons, and so they fled by the waies of the selbes, & thozow al the fore pathes of the dales. And when the chyldren of Israel saw that they fled, they folowed vpon them, & went doune with trumpets blowyng, and making a grete crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no order: and kept not them selues together, but fled theyr way. Neuerthelesse the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one company and order, & discomfyed as many as they myght get. And Olias sent messaugers vnto all the cyties & countreies of Israel.

So all the regyons and euery cytie sent out theyr best men alter the in barnes, & smote the with the sword, tyll they came to the vtmostte parte of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians and toke all, that they which fled had left behynd them, and so they found grete good. And they came agayne to Bethulia from the battayle, toke wth them suche thynges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombre of the cattell, and of the costlye Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hygheste, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachym the hygh priest at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia wth all the elders that they myght se Judith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to praise her with one voyce, sayng: Upon worshyp of the cytie of Jerusalem, & hope of Israel, & honoure of our people, & haste done manly, & thy heart is comforted, because thou hast loved cleynnesse & chastyte, & hast known no man but thine owne husband: therefore hath the hand of the Lord comforted the: & blessed shall he be for ever. And all people saide so be it, so be it.

In thyspe dayes conlde the people of Israel scarce gather vnto the spoyles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto holofernes, & had ben his, specially (whether it were of golde, of syluer, precyous stones, clathynge, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, both women, maydens, & yong people: with pypes and harpes.

¶ The songe of Judith for the victorye. After the victorye obtained, the people cometh to Jerusalem to worship and praise God.

When songe Judith thys songe vnto the Lord: Begynne vnto the Lord vpon the taberretes, syng vnto the Lord vpon the cymbales, & syng vnto hym a newe songe of thankesgeyunge, be ioyfull: and call vpon his name. It is the Lord that destroyeth warres: euen the Lord is his name. Whiche hath ptyched his tentes in the myddeste of his people, that he myght deliuer vs from the hande of all our enemyes. ple stopped the water brooke, and they had couered y<sup>e</sup> walls. he purposed to have burnt up my lande, & slay my yongemen wth the sword.

B He wold haue carped awaye my chyldren & byrgens into captiuitie, but the Almyghtye Lorde bynded hym, and deliuered hym into y<sup>e</sup> handes of a woman, which brought hym to cuthulpon. For the y<sup>e</sup> myghtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Eytan y<sup>e</sup> slue hym, neyther haue the great Spau-ntes set theim selues agaynst hym: but Iudith the daughter of Merary wyth her knyfe betwix bath discoloured hym, & brought hym to naught. For she layde awaye her wyddowes garment: and put on the paret of gladnesse to y<sup>e</sup> respyng of the chyldren of Israhell. She annoynted her face, & bounde up her heart in an houe to begyle hym. Her sylppers ranshed his eyes, her bewtye captiuatyd his mynde, wyth the swarde smote she of his necke. The Perceps were astonied at her stedfastnes, & the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when my symple appered. Dye of thyself. The sonnes of y<sup>e</sup> daughters haue pearled them thow & slayn them as fugitiue chyldren: they perished in the battayle, for the verye feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs syng a song of thankeguyng vnto y<sup>e</sup> Lorde, a new songe of praisse wyl we syng vnto our God: Lorde Lorde, thou art a great God, myghtie in power, whome no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shalbe serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, & they were made: thou sentest thy spiere, & they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundacions wyth the waters, the stonye rockes shal melt befoze the lyke wate. But they that feare the shalbe great wyth the in all thynges. Woe vnto the people, y<sup>e</sup> ryle up agaynst my generacion, for the Almyghtye Lorde wyl aduenge hym selfe of them, and in the day of Iudgement wyl be vylet them. For he shal graueyer and wormes into theyr fleshe, that they may burne and sele it for evermore.

D After this it happened, that after the vycrope, all the people came to Ierusalem, to geue praisse and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purisfyed, they offred all theyr burnt sacrificys, & theyr promysed offerynges. And Iudith offered all holofrenes weapons, and all the Jewels that the people had geuen her, and canap that she toke from his bed, and hanged them up vnto y<sup>e</sup> Lorde. The people was ioyfull as the vse is: & this ioye by reason of the vycrope, wyth Iudith endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, euery man went home agayne, and Iudith was in great reputacion at Bethulia, & ryght honourably taken in all the lande of Israhell. Vnto her vertue also was chaastyte ioynd, so that after her husbande was slayn, she neuer knewe man all y<sup>e</sup> dayes of her lyfe. Vpon y<sup>e</sup> solempne dayes she went out wyth greute wo:shyppe. She dwelt in her husban- des house an hundred and fyue yeres, and lefte her handmayden fre, and dyed: and was buried besyde her husbande in Bethulia. And alle the people mourned for her. vii. dayes. So long as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israhell, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherein this vycrope was gotten, was solemplye holden: and reckened of the Jewes in the nombze of the hoipe dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of y<sup>e</sup> Jewes euer sence vnto this daye.

The. xi. Chapter, after the Laryn.

The byname of an ardocheus.

M Ardocheus the sonne of Jate, the sonne of Semel, the sonne of Esai of the trybe of Ben Jamin, a Jew which had his dwelling in the cite of Susis, a man of great reputacion and excellent among all them that were in the kynges court. (Heuerdelesse, he was one of the prysoners, whome Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had carped awaye from Ierusalem vnto Babylon wyth Iechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the second yere of the reaigne of great Artaxerxes in the fyfthe daie of the moneth Nisan, had this Ardocheus such a dreame: he thought he heard a greute tempest horrible thonderclappes, earthquakes, & great vpyoure in the lande, and that he sawe ii. great dragons redy to fyght one agaynst another.

Theyr crye was great. At y<sup>e</sup> which roaryng and crye all y<sup>e</sup> beathen were up to fight agaynst the ryghteous people. And the same daye was full of darkenesse, and verye vnclefull of trouble and anguysh, yea: a great fearfulness was there in all the land. The ryghteous were amaled, for they feared the plage and euil that was dryssed ouer them, and were at a point wth them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: & while they were crying: the lytle well grewe into a great ryuer: and into many waters. And with that it was daye and the sonne rose up agayne. And the lowly were exalted, and denoured the gloypous and proude.

Nowe when Ardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his dreame, what God wolde do, and so he desired to knowe all the matter, and his mynde was there vpon, vntill the nyght.

The. xi. Chapter.

Ardocheus vnto the kyng was dryssed agaynst the ryghteous and to the lytle remoued of hym.

S The same tyme dwelte Ardocheus wyth Bagatha and Tarsis, in the kynges court, the kynges chamberlaynes and postres of the palace. But when he heard the deuce, and had dysgenely consyded their pyn- gination their cruel habes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes: & so he certified the kyng thereof. Then caused the whe they had graunted it, they wer put to death.

This þing caused to be put in þe Cronicles for earth, & what wonderous thynges so euer is vnder the heauen: thou arte Lord of all thynges, & there is no man that can resiste thy maiestye (O Lord.) Thou knowest al thynges, thou wo-test Lord that it was nether of malice, nor presumpcon, nor for anye desyre of glorie, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor woithypp proude presumptuous Aman: for I wolde haue bene contente, and that wth good wyl yf it myghte haue done Israel anye good, to haue hys euen bys foote steps) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not let the honour of aman in the stede of the glorie of God: & because I wolde woithypp none but only the my Lord, And thus haue I done in no wyse nor presumpon.

And therfore O Lord thou God and kyng haue merce vpon thy people, for they pmygn howe they may bypnyng vs to naught: yea, they mynde & desyre is to destroye, & to ouerthrowe thy people, & hath ben euer thyne encreptance of olde. O dyspyse not the porcion, whych thou hast deliuered & broughte oute of Egypt for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, & be mercyfull vnto thy people whom thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complainte & sorowe into ioye, that we may lyue, O Lord, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffer not the mourthes of them that praiseth the to be destroyed.

Al the people of Israel in lyke maner, cryed as earnestly as they coude vnto the Lord: for they death & destrucciō stode before thei eyes.

The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of her people.

Quene Esther also beyng in þe battayle of death, reioyced vnto þe Lord, laide away her glorious apparel, & put on þe garmentes þe serued for syghing & monnyng. In þe sted of precious ointment, she scattered ashes & dong vpon her head: & as for her bodye, she habyled it w fastig, & brought it very low. Al þe places wher she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she w the berre & the plucte of her selfe. She praid also vnto þe lord God of Israel w these wordes O my Lord, þe only art our kyng, helpe me desolate womā, whych haue no helper but þe, for my misery & destrucciō is hard at my hand. From my youth vpon I haue hard out of þe hyndred of my father, þe thou sohest Israel sed amōg al people (& so haue our fathers of their soelders) that they shuld be thy perpetual encreptance & loke what þe dydest promyse the, þe hast made it good vnto the. Nowe lord, we haue sined before þe, therfore hast þe geuen vs into þe handes of oure enemyes because we woithypped thei gods. Lord, þe art ryghteous. Nevertheless, it satisfieth them not, þe we are in bytter & heuy captiuite and oppressed amōg them, but þe hast lapde their hādes vpon þe handes of their gods: so þe they begyn to take away þe thyng þe thou w thy mouth hast ordeined & appoynted, to destroy thyne encreptance, so

Out and stop the mouthes of them þat praiſe þe quene the glorie & worthip of thy houle, & thyne alter, & to open the mouthes of þe that they maye praiſe the power and vertue of the gods, & to magnify the archyking for eu-er.

C Lord geue not thy ſepter vnto them þe him. But deliuer vs to thine hand, & helpe me thy handmaide, which haue no deſce nor helper but onely the Lord, þe knoweſt al thinges, þe wo-teſt þe I loue not the glorie and worthip of the vayn thinges, and þe I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncyrcumciſed, and of all heathen.

D Thou knoweſt my neceſſitee, þe I hate the token of prehemine & worthip which I beare vpon my head, what tyme as I muſt ſhewe my ſelfe & be ſene, and þe I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and þe I were it not when I am quyet & alone by my ſelfe. Thou knoweſt alſo, þe I thy handmaiden haue not eaten at I mans table, & that I haue had no pleaſure nor deſire in þe kinges ſeaſte, þe I haue not dronke the wine of the bynche oſterpynge & that I thy handmaiden haue no tope ſence the day that I was brought herther, vntil this daye, but onely in the Lord.
O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghty God aboue all, he are the voyce of them, þe haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the bande of the wyched, and deliuer me oute of my feare.

And vpon the thirde daye it happened, þe Eſther as one þe was teder: þe other folowed her, & bare þe traine of her vesture. The ſhine of her bewtye made her face roſol conred. The ſymilitude of her face was chearfull & amiable, but her herte was ſorrowfull for greates feare. ſhe wente in thorow al the doores, & ſtoode before the kyng.

quene downe, was pale and ſaynt and leane her ſelfe vpon the head of the mayd, þe went to her Remertheles, God turned for kynges mynde that he was gentyle, that he leaped oute of his ſeate for feare, and gat her in bys armes, and helde her vpon tyll ſhe came to her ſelfe agayne. he gaue her louinge wordes alſo, and ſayd vnto

Then ſayd ſhe: I ſawe the (O Lord) as an Angell of God, & my herte was troubled, for feare of thy maieſtye and cleareneſſe. For excellent & wonderfull arte thou (O Lord) and thy fact is

¶ The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Wherfore thou oughtest to searche and enquire after God, and knowe his will that synner thou. And the holy ghost. And ought to lye frome belyfing and murmuring. &c.

Det your affection vpon right reasonnesse, ye that be Judges of the earth. Haue a good opinyon of the Lorde, & like hym in the synghenesse of hert. For he wyl be found of them that tempte him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. As for fro-ward thoughtes, they seperat fro God: but ver-tue (if it be allowed) resourmeth the vntoyle.
And why wyldome shall not enter into a frowarde soule, nor dwel in the body þ is subdued vnto synne. For þ holy Ghost abhorreth fap-ned nurtour, and wythdra wech hym selfe from the thoughtes þ are without vnderstandyng, & where wychednesse hath the upperhande, he fly-eth from thence, for the spyrte of wyldome is louynge, gentle & gracious, & wyl haue no pleasure in him þ speaketh euell with his lippes.
For God is a wytnes of hys saynes, a true scar-cher out of his hert, & an hearer of his tong. For the spyrte of the Lord fylleth the round compass of the world: and the same þ upholdeth al thin-ges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

¶ Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges can not be hyd: neither maye he escape the iudgement of reprove. And why inquisition shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reprove of hys wordes shall come vnto God, so that this wychednesse shalbe punished.
For the care of gelousye heareth all thynges, & the noyse of the grudginges shall not be hyd.
Therefore beware of murmuringe, whyche is nothyng worth: and refrayne your tounge from flaunder. For there is no woiche so darthe and secrete, that it shal go for noughte, & the mouth that speaketh lyes, flapeth the soule.

¶ Like not your owne death in the errour of youre lyfe: destroye not your selues thowre the woiches of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, neyther hath he pleasure in the destruction of the liuyng. For he created all thynges, & they myghte haue theyr beinge: yea, all þ people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue heath, & there shulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngedome of hell shulde not be vpon earth: for righteounes-se is euerslastyng & immortall, but vnryghteounnesse byngeth darthe. & neuerthelesse, the vngodlye call her vnto them bothe wyth woiches and woiches: and whyle they thynke to haue a frende of her they come to naught: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

¶ The ii. Chapter.

¶ Ddd ii The many

¶ What tyme now as Iman, the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a stranger here lye of the Persians bloude, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among vs as an aleant and had obtayned the frendshipp that we be are towarde all the people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hygh honoure of e-uerie man, as the nexte and principal vnto the kyng, he could not forbeare him selfe from his pyde, hath vnderaken, not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.

¶ With manyfolde dysceate also hath he de-spoyed to destroye Wardochus oure helper and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all thin-ges: and innocent Esther the lyke partaker of oure kyngedome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken them oute of þ waye, and robbed vs of them) by thys means to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Jewes (whyche were accused of the wyched, & they myghte be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vs resonable and ryght lawes, and þ they be the children of the mooste hygh liuyng God by whome the kyngedome of vs and oure progenitours haue bene well ordred heretofore.

¶ Wherfore, as for the letters and commaunde-mentes that were put forth by Iman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do wel, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp and in-uented the, hangereth at Shulis before the porte, with all his kyned: and God, (whyche hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hi after his deservynge.

¶ And vpon this ye shall publyshe and set vp the coppe of this letter in al places, that the Jewes maye frelye and wythoute byndraunce hold them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and þ vpon the thre & twentye daye of the twelue moneth I dar, they maye be aduenged of them, whiche in the tyme of theyr anguysh and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that governeth all thynges, hath turned to lope the daye, wherein the cholen people shulde haue perished.

¶ Moreover, amonge the hygh solempne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shal holde thys also with all gladnesse, that now & in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good, for all such as loue the prosperite of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destrucyon to those that be sedycious vnto vs.

¶ All cityes and landes that do not this, shal be ryblye perished and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shal not onely be nomore inhabited of me, but be abhoired also of the wyld beastes and foules.

The ende of the reast of the booke of Esther.

Of the vngodlye talke and ymagyn thus amonge them selues (but not ryght). The tyme of oure lyfe is but thorte & tedious: and when a man is once gone, he hath nomaie tope nor pleasure, neither knowe we any man that turneth agayne from death: for we are bozne of nought, & we shalbe hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure breath is a smoke in oure nostrils, & the wordes as a sparke to moue oure heere. As for oure body, it shalbe very alyen & acc quenched, & oure soule shal vanyshe as the soft ayre. Our lyfe shal passe away as the trace of a clowde & come to nought as the mist that is diuen awaye with the beames of the sunne, and put dothone with the heate thereof. Our name also shalbe forgotten by litle and litle, and no man shal haue oure woordes in remembraunce.

For oure tyme is a very shadowe & passeth awaye: & after oure ende there is no returnyng, for it is fast sealed: so that no man cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that there are, and let vs sone vse the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs fyll oure selues wth good wyne and opyntment, & let there be no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne oure selues wth roses afore they be withered. Let there be no saynt medow, but oure luste go thowoe it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure volup teousnesse. Let vs leue some token of our pleasure in euery place, for this oure portyon, els get we nothing. Let vs oppresse the poore ryghteous, let vs no spare the wyddowe nor olde man let vs not regarde the heades that are gray for age. Let the lawe of vnyrghteousnesse be our ancherite, for the thyng that is feble is nothing woerth. Therefore let vs defraude the ryghteous: and wher he is not for oure profyte: yea, he is cleane contrarye to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendyng agaynst the lawe, and laund: eth vs as transgressours of all nurture. He murthereth his booke to haue the knowledge of God: yea he calleth him selfe gods sonne. He is the be wyayer of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to looke vpon hym, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of another fashion. He cōfiterth vs but vayne persons, he wythdroweth hym selfe from oure wayes as frome sylth: ned he commendeth greatlye the latter ende of the iust, & maketh his booke that God is his father. Let vs se then if his woordes be true, let vs proue what ende he shal haue. For yf he be the true sonne of God, he wyll receaue him: and deliuer hym frome the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examine him wth dyspytefull rebuke and cōmentyng, that we maye knowe his bygnitie and proue his patience. Let vs condemne him wth moost shameful death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shal he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do the vngodlye ymagyne and goo astraye, for they owne wychednesse hath blynded them. As for the mystryes of God they vnderstande them not: they neyther hope for the reward of ryghteousnesse, nor regarde the woorth that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vnderstode: yea, after the ymage of his owne lykenesse made he hym. Heuerthelesse, thowoe enuy of the deuyl, came death into the world: and they that holde of his lyde do as he doth.

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the conuersion and assurance of the ryghteous. Of the woordes of the sayntfull.

As the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shal not touche them. In the syghte of the vnylyte they appeared to dye, and they ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vter destruccid, but they are in rest. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is their hope full of immortalitie. They are punyshed but in fewe thynges, neuerthelesse, in manie thynges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and findeth them mete for him selfe: yea, as the golde in the furnace, doth he tye them: and receaueth them as a burnt offering, and when the tyme cometh, they shalbe looked vpon.

The ryghteous shal lyne as the sparkes that runne thowoe the red bushe. They shal iudge the nacjons, and haue domynyon ouer the people, and they Lord shal raygne for euer. They that put theyr truste in hym, shal vnder stande the truth, and such as be sayntfull, wyll agte vnto hym in loue: for his chosen shal haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodlye shalbe punyshed accordyng to theyr ymaginacions, for they haue dyspyled the ryghteous: & forsaht the lord.

Whoso dyspyllyeth wysedome and nurture he is vnhappye: and as for the hope of such, it is but vayne: they labour vnfayntfull, and they woordes vnyfyttable. They wyues are vnyfyttable, and they chyldren mooste vngodlye. They creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the barren and vndespyled, which hath not knowe the synfull bed: she shal haue fruyte in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whiche wth his handes hath wrought no vnyrghteousnesse, nor ymagyned wyched thynges agaynst God. For vnto hym shal be geuen the speyal gyfte of saynt, and the moost acceptable portyon in the temple of God. For glayous is the fruyte of good labour, and the roote of wysedome shal neuer fade awaye.

As for the chyldren of adouersers, they shal come to an ende, & the seed of an vnyrghteous bedde shalbe rooted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shal they be nothing regarded, and they last age shalbe without honoure. If they dye hastily, they haue no hope, neither shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowlege. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnyrghteous.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Of the chastitee of the sayntfull, and of theyr folyes. Of the loathe of the vnyrghteous, and of the condemnation of the vnyrghteous.

Howe

Qhowe saye is a chaste generation with vertue. The memorial thereof is immoztall, for it is knowe with God & with men.
When it is present, men take example therat, and yf it go away yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honoure, and winneth the rewarde of the undefyled hartayle. But the multitude of vngodly chylzen is vnpofitable: & the thynges þ are planted w̄ whoredome ſhal take no depe ro-te, nor laye any ſaſt foundacy. Thought they be greue in þ bzaunches for a time, yet they ſhal be ſhaken w̄ the wynde: for they ſtand not faſt, & thozowe þ vehemēcy of the wynde they ſhal be roted out. It is v̄ perfect bzaunches ſhal be broke they: frute ſhal be vnpofitable & ſower to eat. yet, mete for nothyng. And why? al the chyldren are borne of þ wyched, muſt beare recorde of þ wychedneſſe agaynſt they: fathers & mothers when they be aſked. But thought þ righteous be ouertaken with death, yet ſhal he be in reſte.

Age an is honourable thyng: neuertheles it ſtandyth not onely in the length of time, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyſedome is the grape beare, and an undefyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleaſed God, and was beloued of him: ſo that where as he lyed among ſynners, he translated him. * Yea, ſodenly was he taken awaye, to the intende that wychedneſſe ſhulde not alter his vnderſtandynge and that hypocrisy ſhulde not begyle his ſoule. For the craftye betwytyng of lyen make good thynges darke, the vniſcofaſtneſſe alſo and wychedneſſe of vo-luptuous deſire, turne aſide the vnderſtandynge of the ſymple. Though he was ſone dead, yet fulfylled he muche tyme. For his ſoule pleaſed God: therfore haſted he to take him a waye from among the wyched. His the people, and v̄- derſtande it not: they lay not v̄ ſuche thynges in they: hertes: howe that the louyng fauoure and mercey of God is vpon his ſaynctes, and that he hath reſpecte vnto his choſen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deade, condem-neth the vngodly whiche are lypynge: and the youth þ is ſoone bzoughte to an ende, the long lyfe of the v̄ryghteous. For they ſe the ende of the wyſe, but they vnderſtande not what God hath deuyſed for him, and wherfore the Lozde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they ſe hym and deſpyſe hym, therfore ſhall God alſo laugh them to ſcozme: ſo that they them ſelues ſhall bye heare after (but w̄thout honoure) yea, in ſhame amonge the deade for euermore. For withoute anye voyce ſhall he buſte thoſe that be puſte v̄, and remoue them from the foundacyons, ſo that they ſhal be lapde waſte vnto the byghthe. They ſhall moune, and their memoryall ſhall perſhe. So they beynge aſrayde, ſhall remember they: ſynners: and they: owne wychedneſſe ſhall betraye them.

uyngt inwarde ſozowe, & mournynge for verpe anguyſhe of mynde. Theſe are they, whom we ſometime had in diſciſſe, & teſted v̄. We ſoſles thought their life very madnes: & their ende to be w̄out honoure. But lo, howe they are coſted among the chylzen of God, & they: pozcyon is among þ ſaynctes. Therfore we haue erred fro the way of truth, þ light of righteouſneſſe hath not ſhined vnto vs, & þ ſhine of vnderſtadyng roſe not vpon vs. We haue werped oure ſelues in the waye of wychedneſſe and deſtructyon.
Tedyous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lozde we haue not knowen it.

What good hath oure wyſdome vnto vs?
O what proſyte hath the pompe of rycheſſe bzoughte vs? Al theſe thynges are paſſed awaye lyke a ſhadowe, & as a meſſenger runnyng be-foze: as a wypp that paſſeth ouer the wanes of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace ther of cannot be founde, neether the path of it in the floudes. O: as a byrde that flyeth thozowe in the ayre, & no man can ſe any token where he is flowne, but onely heare the noyſe of her wyngges, beatyng the lycht wynde, partynge the ayre thozowe the vehemēcy of her gopyng, and flyerch on ſhaking her wiges, where as after ward no token of her waye can be founde. O: lyke as whē an arrowe is ſhot at a marke it parteth the aper, whiche immediatly cometh together again, ſo þ a man can not knowe where it went thozowe. Euen ſo nowe in like maner as ſoone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to dya-to oure ende, and haue ſhewed no token of ver-tue, but are conſumed in our owne wychedneſſe.

Suche wordes ſhall they that haue ſyn-ned ſpeake in the hell: for the doope of the vngodlye is lyke a byrde Thyrſtyle floure (or duſte) that is blowe awaye w̄th the wynde: lyke a thyne ſcome that is ſcattered abzoade w̄th the ſtozme, lyke as the ſmooke whiche is diſperſed heare and there w̄th the wynde, and as the re-membzaunce of a ſtraunger, that carpeſh for a dape, and then departeth. But the ryghteous ſhall lyue for euermore: they: rewarde alſo is with the Lozde: and they: remembzaunce with the hyghthe. Therfore ſhall they receaue a glorious kyngedome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lozdes hande: for with his ryghte hande ſhall he couer them: and w̄th his owne holpe arme, ſhall he deſende them bys gelouſye alſo ſhal take awaye the harnelle, and he ſhal weapon the creature to be aduenged of the enemyes. he ſhall put on ryghteouſneſſe for a bzest plate and take ſure Iudgemente in ſteade of an helmete. The inuincible ſpyde of equitye ſhall be shall fyghte wth hym agaynst the unwyse.

D Then shall the thonder voltes go oute of the lyghtnynges, and come out of the raygne bowe of f cloudes to the place appoynted: oute of the harde stonny indignacion, there shall fall chyche hailes, & the water of f see shall be wyrb agaynst them, and the floudes shall runne roughlye toge ther. Yea, a myghty wind shall stand vp agaynst them, and a storme shall scatter them abroade.
 Thus f vnrighteous dealing of the shall bring all the land to a wylderhesse, and wychednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellnynges of f myghtye

The vi. Chapter.

The callinge of kynge, wyse and Judges, which he also requyres to reach wyseme.

Wisdom is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is moze worthy then one f is stronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynge) and vnder stande: O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of the earth. Seue care ye that rule the multitudes, and deliue in much people. For f power is geue you of the Lorde, & the strength from the hyghest: whych shall tye your wo hes, and searce oute youre ymagynacions: howe that ye being officers of his kyngdome haue not executed true Judgemente, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnesse, nor walked after the wyll of God. Horriblye, & that ryghte sone shall be appeare vnto you: for an hard in dgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Her eys is graunted vnto the simple, but they that be in auctoryte shall be soze punyshed. For God which is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans personne, neyther shall he stande in awe of anye mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small and greate, and careth for all a lyke. But the myghtye shall haue the sozer punyshement.

Unto you therfore (O ye kynge) do I speake that ye maye learne wysedome, & not go amysse For they that kepe by a ryghteousnesse, shall be ryghteouslye iudged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make du fference. Wherfore, let your lust vpon my wo des, and loue them, so shall ye come by nortoure

Wysedome is a nobler thyng and neuer fauorbe a waye: yea, she is enseyne lene of them C lone her, & founde of such as seke her. We pre sienteth them f despyse her, f we maye first shew her selfe vnto them. Whoso a waketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greare trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttinge readye at his doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandynge: and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe: and that sone. For she goeth about, sekyng such as are mete for her. We with her selfe cheerfully vn to them in theys goynges, & meteth them with all diligence. For the vnspayed despye of refo marcon is her begynnynge: to care for nortoure is lone, & lone is the keepynge of her lawes. Now the keepynge of f law is perfectio, & an vncozrupt lif: & an vncozrupt lyfe maketh a man familer to God. And so f despye of wysedome leadeth to the kyngedome euerylastyng. If your despye be then in roall seates and septers (O ye kynge) of the people) let your luste vpon wysedome, that ye maye raygne for euermore. O loue the lyghte of wysedome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you: and wyll not hyde the mysteries of God from you: but wyll seche her oute frome the begynnynge of the creatur and byng the knowlege of her into lyghte, and wyll not kepe backe the tynthe: Neither wyll I haue to do with consumynge enuye, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wysedome. But the multitude of the wyle, is the welfare of the woulde, and a wyle kynge is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nortoure then thow my woyses, and it shall do you good.

The vii. Chapter.

Wysedome oughte to be preferred aboue all thynges.

I myselfe am also a mortall ma, like as all other, & am come of f earthye generacyon of hym that was fyrlie made, & in my mothers wombe was fashioned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes was I broughte toger her in blonde thowwe the seed of man, and the com modious appetyte of slepe. When I was bozne I receaued like ayre as other men, and fel vpon the earth (which is my nature) cryng and we ping at the fyrst as al other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, & brought vp w greare ca res. For there is no king f had any other begyn nyng of birth. Al men then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge oute in lyke maner.

Wherfore I desired, & vnderstandynge was geuen me: I called and the spyrte of wysedome came vnto me. I set moze by her then by kyng domes & roall seates, and counted rychelesse no thyng in comparison of her. As for petyous stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but granell vnto her, & pluer shall be counted but clay before her sight. I loued her about wel fare & bewtye, and purposed to take her for my light, for her light can not be quyched. Al good thynges come to me with her, and innumerable rychelesse thowwe her handes. I was glad in the all, for this wysedome dwente before me, and I knew not f she is the mother of al good thynges.
 Now as I myselfe learned vnspayedlye, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her rychelesse from no man: for she is an infinite trea sure vnto men, which whoso vse, become parta kers of the lone & frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto him for the gyftes of wysedome.

God hath graunted me to talke wylfelle, & conveniently to handle the thynges f he hath graciouslye leute me. For it is he, f leadeth vn to wysdome, & teacheth to vse wysedome aright.
 In hys hande are bothe we and oure woyses: yea, al our wysdome, our vnderstandynge & know lege of all oure woyses. For he hath geuen me the true seynce of these thynges, so f I knowe, howe the woulde was made, and the powers of the clementes: the begynnynge, endynge, and myddeste of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, howe one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled, f course of the yere: the ordinaun ces of the res of the starres: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furpousnesse of beastes: the power of wyndes: & pmaginations of men: & diversities of yong plantes: the vertues of rootes, and all suche thynges as are secrete and not lohed for, haue I learned: For I woorkemaster of al thin-ges hath taught me wysdome. In her is I spiet of vnderstandyng whiche is onlpe, manyfolde, one onelpe, subtyll, curteous, discrete, quicke, vndefyled, playne, swete, louyng that is good, warpe, whiche forbyddeth not to do well, gentle, kinde, stedfast, sure, fre, haunyng al vertues exceimpe in all thynges: receauyng all spi-rytes of vnderstandyng, beyng cleane and warpe. For wysdome is nymler then all nymlble thynges: she goeth thowowe and attapneth to all thynges, because of her cleanness. For she is the byet of the power of God, and a pure cleane expresseyng of the cleanness of Almyghtye God. Therefore can no vndefyled thyng come vnto her: for she is I byghthenesse of the euersla-styng lyghte, I vndefyled myroure of the ma-iesty of God and the ymage of hys goodnesse.

And for so muche as she is one, she maye do all thynges, & beyng stedfast her selfe, she renneth all: & amonge I people conuapeth her selfe, into the holpe soules. She maketh Gods frendes & prophetes: for God loueth no man, but hym in whome wysdome dwelleth. For she is moare beuifull then the sunne, & geueth moze lighte then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vnto the daye cometh night.
But wychednesse cannot ouercome wysdome:
and folpshenesse maye not be with her.

The viii. Chapter.

The effectes of wysdome.

Wysdome teacheth frome one ende to another myghtely, and louyng ly both the order all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I byd my dylgence to marye my selfe wyth her, such loue had I vnto her betore. Who so hath the com-panye of God, commendeth her nobyltye: pea, the Lozde of all thynges hym selfe loueth her.
For she is the scolmasteresse of the noutroure of God, and the choler oute of hys woiches. If a man wolde desyre rychesse in this lyfe, what is richer then wisdom, that woicheth al thynges?
Thou wylt sape: vnderstandyng woicheth.
What is it amonge al thynges, that woicheth moare then wysdome? If a man loue vertue 's rightousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hath greute vertues. And why? she teaceth sobrenesse and pyndence, ryghtousnesse and strength, whiche are suche thynges as men can haue nothyng moze profitable in their lyfe.
If a man desyre muche knowlege, he can tell the thynges that are passe, and dyscerne thynges for to come: he knoweth the subtyles of weides, and can expounde darthe sentences.
He can tell of tokens, & wonderous thynges of euer they come to passe, and the endes of all times: & ages. So I purposed after this maner

I wyl take her vnto my compayne, & comune louyngely with her: no doubte, she shal geue me good counsaile, & speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse & grete. For she sake shal I be well & honestly taken among the commens & lozdes of I counsaile. Though I be yong, yet shal I haue warpe vnderstandyng, so I shal be meruelous in the syghte of great men, & the faces of pyncers shal woder at me, whi I holde my tonge, they shal abyde my leysure: when I speake, they shal loke vnto me, & if I talke much they shal lape theys handes vnto theys mouth.

Moreover, by the meanes of her I shal obtaine immortalyte, and leaue behynd me an euerslastyng memorail amonge the that come after me. I shal set the people in order, and the nacyons shalbe subdued vnto me. Hozyble tyrauntes shalbe a rayde when they do but heare of me, amonge the multitude I shalbe counted good, and myghtye in battayle. When I come home, I shal synde rest with her: for her com-panye hath no bitternesse, and her felowshyppe hath no tchypousnesse, but mythe and ioye.

Howe when I considred these thynges by my selfe, and pondred them in my herte, howe I to be ioynd vnto wysdome is immortalyte, and greute pleasure to haue her frende shyppe, howe I in the woiches of her handes are infinite rychesse: howe that, whoso keperth company with her shalbe wylle, and that he wyche falleth wyth her, shal come to honoure: I went about seking, to gather her vnto me: For I was alad of a ripe wyt, & had a good vnderstandyng.
But when I grewe to moze vnderstandyng, I came to an vndefyled booye. Auerthelesse, when I perceaued I I coulde not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me, (and that was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whose gyfte it was) I stepped vnto I Lozde: & besought him & with my whole hert I said after this maner.

The ix. Chapter.

A prayer of Salomon to obtayne wysdome.

God of my fathers, & Lozde of mer-cyes (thou that haste made all thynges wyth thy woide, and ordeyned man thowow thy wysdome: that he shulde haue dominion ouer the creature which thou hast made: I the shulde order the world accordyng to equitie & ryghteousnesse, & execute iudgemente with a true herte) geue me wysdome, whiche is euer about thy seate, and put me not oute from amonge thy chyldren: for I thy seruante and sonne of thy handmayden am a feble person, of a shorte time, and so yong to the vnderstandyng of iudgemente and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amonge I chyldren of men, yet if thy wysdome be not with him, he shalbe nothyng regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kyng vnto thy people, & the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buyld a temple vpon thy holy mount, & an alter in the cytie wherin thou dwellest: a lykenesse of thy holpe tabernacle whiche thou hast prepared for me the begynnyng, and thy wysdome with the, which all knoweth

I knoweth thy workes which also was with the when thou madest the world, and knewe what was acceptable in thy sight, and right in thy commandementes. I sende her oute of thy holy beuens, and from the throne of thy maiestie that she maye be with me, & labour with me: I maye knowe what is acceptable in thy sight For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thinges: and she shal leade me soberly in my wayes, & preferre me in her power. So shall my workes bee acceptable, & then shall I gouerne thy people righteously, & be worthy to sit in my fathers seate. For what man is he I maye knowe the counsaile of God? For who can thynke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortal men are mesurable, & our foresightes are but vncertaine. And why? a mortall & corruptible bodye is heuere vnto the soule, & the earthly mansion kepeth downe that vnderstanding that museth vpon many thinges. Alcepe hardlye canne we deccene the thinges that are vnder earth, & great labour haue we, & we can fynde the thinges whiche are before oure eyes: who will then seke oute the grounde of the thinges that are done in heauen? Oh Loyde who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandynge & meanyng except thou geue him wisdom, & sende thy ho-lye ghost from aboue that the wayes of them which are vpon earth, maye be reformed: that men maye learne the thinges that are pleasaunte vnto the, and be preferred thowhe wysedome.

The .x. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the righteous commeth thorow wysdome.

Wysdome preferred the firste man, whome God made a father of the world, when he was created alone broughte hym oute of hys offence toke him out of the *moulde of the carthe, & gaue hym power to rule all thinges.
* When the vnrightheous wente awaye in hys wraoth from the wysedome, the booted per-fured thowhe the wraoth of murder. Agayne, when the *water destroyed the whole world, wysedome preferred the righteous thowhe a poze tree, where of he was gouernour her selfe.
* Howeuer, wher wickednesse had gotten the v-perhande so the nacjons were pulsed vpon pyre the kyng the righteous, preferred hym lautelesse vnto God, and lapde vpon sure mercye of hys chyldren. He preferred the righteous, * when he fled from the vngodlye that perished what tyme as the fyr fel downe vpon the fyue cypres: A pye as yet this daye the vncorruptfull waste, and smokyng lande geueth testimonie of theyr wychednes: yet, the vncorrupte and vnei-meyle frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the unfaithful soule, there standeth a pillar of salte For all such as regarded not wysdome gat not ouer this herte, that they knewe not the thin-ges whiche were good, but also leste behynde them vnto men, a memorial of theyr foolyhenes: so in thinges wherein they synned, they coude not be hyd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, the shal deliuer them fro sorow

* When the righteous fled because of hys brothers wraoth, wyle come led hym the rightewaye. Hewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue hym knowledge of holie thinges made hym ry-che in his laboures, & broughte to passe the thin-ges that he wente aboute. In discretfulnesse of suche as defrauded hym, the stood by hym and made hym ryche. He saued hym from the ene-myes, & defended hym from the deceauers. He made hym stronge in battayle, & gaue hym the victorye, that he myght knowe howe that wis-dome is stronger then all thinges. * When the righteous was solde, he forsoke hym not, but deliuered hym from synners. He wente downe with hym into the dongeon, & sayled hym not in the bandes, * tyll he had broughte hym the scepter of the realme, and powre agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accused hym, he declared the to be lyers, & broughte hym to perpetuall worthynesse.

* He deliuered the righteous people and fautles sede, from the nacjons that oppressed them.
He entred into the soule of a seruant of God & stood by hym in wonders & toke agaynst a horrible kyng. He gaue the righteous the warde of their laboures, & led them forth a me-nelous way: on the day tyme he was a shadow vnto them, & a light of starres in the nyght season. * He broughte the thowhe the red see, & caried them thowhe the great water. He browned theyr enemyes in the see, & broughte them out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoiles of a vngodly, & prayled thy holy name. O Loyde & magnified thy victorious hand w one accord * For wysedome openeth the mouth of the domme, maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

The .xi. Chapter.

The synners downe by Israel. The vengeance of prophets. The great power and mercy of God.

She adyzed theyr workes in the ban-des of thy holy prophete: * so that they went thowhe the wyldernes that was not inhabited, & pyched theyr tentes in the waste deserte.
They stode agaynst theyr enemyes, and were aduenched of theyr aduersaries. * When they were thysly, they called vpon the, & water was geuen them oute of the moost hye roche, & theyr thysly was quenched oute of the harde stonne.
For by thinges were thowhe theyr enemyes were punished, were the chyldren of Israel helped in theyr nede, to their comforte. For vnto enemies thou gaueste many bloude in strede of lyuyng water. And where as they hadde scarnesse in the rebuke, when the chyldren were slaine, thou gaueste vnto thyn owne a plenteous water vnto the: declarynge by the thyslye that was at the tyme howe thou woldest byng thyn owne vnto honoure, & slaye theyr aduersaries.

* For when they were tayed and nourished with fatherlye mercye, they knowledged howe the vngodlye were iudged & punished thowhe the wraoth of God. These haue thou exhorted as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a vngodly kyng, lapde harde to theyr charge, & condemned the. Alceper they were absent

are absente of presente, they punymente was alpe. For they grete was double: namely, mourning, & the remembrance of thynges past. But when they perceived that they pun-ymentes dyd them good, they thoughte vpon the Lozde, & wondered at the ende. For at last they helde much of hym, of whome in our casting they thoughte scorne, as of an abiect. Ne-uertheless, the righteous dyd not so when they were chastyte: but even lyke as the thoughtes of the folyte were, so was also the wychednes.

* Where as certayne men now (thowder-cours) dyd wozthyp dome serpentes & vaine beastes thou sendest a multitude of dome beastes vpon them for a vengeance, that they myght knowe, that loke where withal a mansyneth by the same also shal be punished. * For vnto thy Almyghty hande, that made the worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende emog them a praye of beares, or wood Lyons, or cruell beastes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vn-knowne, or spoute fyre, or caste out a smokynge dyeth, or those horrible sparkes out of their eyes which myght not only destroye them with purtyng, but also to kyll them with theyr horribie syghe. Yea, without these beastes myghte they have bene slaine with one wynde, being perle-cuted of theyr owne wozkes, & scattered abode thowt the dyeth of thy power.

* Neuertheless thou haste ordred all thynges in measure, nombze & wyghe. For thou haste euer had great strenght & myghte, & whome may withstand the power of thyne arme. And why lyke as the smal thyng that the balauce wey-eth, so is the worlde before the: yea, as a droppe of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou haste mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: & makest the as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they shoulde amende. For thou louest all thynges that are, and haerest none of them wch thou hast made: neither bydest thou ordeyne or make any thyng of euell wyll. Howe myghte a-nye thyng enduce yf it were not thy wyll? Or howe coulde anye thyng be preferred, excepte it were called of the? But thou sparest all, for all are thyne (O Lozde) thou louer of sonles.

¶ The xii. Chapter.

* The myrre of God caloued synners, the wozkes of God are uncomparable. God gawth lypnes to repect vs.

Lozde, howe gracyous & swete is thy spyte in all thynges?
Therefore chastenest & them measurably that go wrong, & war-nest them concerning thynges wherein they offende: thou sprakest vnto them (O Lozde) & exhorteest them to leue their wychednesse, & to put theyr trust in * As for those olde inhabytors of the holy land thou myghtest not a waye with them, for they committed abominable wozkes agaynst the, as wychednesse, forcery, & Idolatry, they slew theyr owne chyldzen without mercy: they dyd rate vp mens howels, and deuoured the blood: yea, because of suche abhominacyons, misdele-ners, & offringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: & the lande whiche thou louest aboue all other, myghte be a dwelling for the chyldzen of God.

Neuertheless, thou sparedest them also, as men) and sendest the forerunners of thine hoste euen homettes to destroye them out by lytle & lytle. For that thou wast vnable to subdue the vngodly vnto thyngheous in battayl: or with cruell beastes, or with one rough wynde to de-stroye them together: * But thy mynde was to dwyne them out by lytle & lytle, geuyng them tyme & place to amende: knowyng well, that it was an vnyghteous nacyon, & wyched of nature, & yf their thought myght neuer be altered.
For it was a cursed lede from the begynning & feared no man. Yet haste & pardoned theyr syn-nes. For who wyll saye vnto the: why haste & done that? Or who wyll stande agaynst thy iud-gement? Or who wyll come before thy face: an aduenger of vnyghteous men? Or who wyll blame the, yf the people peryt, whome & hast made: For there is none other God but thou: & carest for all thynges: & thou maist declare do that thy iudgement is not vnyghte. Ther bare neither hyng, nor tyraunte in thy syght requyre acompters of them whom & hast deliuered.

For so muche then as thou arte myghteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges wyghteously * and punyweste euen hym that hath not des-erued to be punished, & takest him for a straunger and an alcaunt in the lande of thy power. For thy power is the begynnyng of righteourneesse and because thou art Lozde of all thynges, ther fore arte thou gracyous vnto all.

When menne thynke the not to bee of a full strenght thou declarest thy power: and boldly delyuerest thou them ouer, that knowe the not.
But thou Lozde of power iudget quietly, and ordrest vs with great wozthyp, for thou maist do as thou wyll.

By suche wozkes now haste thou taughte thy people, that a man also shoulde be iuste and louyng: and haste made thy chyldzen to bee of a good hope: for euen when thou iudget, thou ge-uest to come to amende from synnes.

For in somuche as thou hast punyshed, and with suche dyspence delyuered the enemyes of thy seruantes, whiche were wozthye to dye, (where thow thou gawest them tyme & place of amende) & they myghte turne from theyr wychednes) with how great dyspence then punydest thou thyne owne chyldzen vnto whose fathers thou haste swoyne and made conuenauntes of good promises: So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punywest our enemyes by urle wates, to the intent that when we punish we shuld remembre thy goodnes: & wch we our selues are punished to put our trust in thy mercy.

¶ Therefore, where as men haue lured ygnorrauntly and vnyghteously & hast punished the foze, euen thow we the same thynges that they wozthipped. * For they went astray very long in the waye of erreure, and helde the beastes: (which euen their enemyes dyspised) for goddes Wdd v. luyng luyng as children of no vnderstanding. Ther-foze hast thou sent a scoinefull punishment emong the chyldren of ygnorance. As for such as wold not be reformed by those scoines and rebukes, they felte the worst punishment of God. For the thynges that they suffered they bare them vnpaciently, beyng not contente in them but vnmillyng. And when they perished by þe same thynges þe they toke for goddes, they knowlaged then, þe there was, but one true god whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfoze came the ende of theyr dampnacion vpon them.

The xiiij. Chapter.

All thynges be made, excepte the knowledge of God, Iohannes and Iohannes are made.

Roma. 11.

Vyne are all men, whiche haue not knowlage of God: as were they that out of the good thynges whiche are sene, knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is eucla-ring. Rather toke they somuch regarde of the woorkes that are made, as to know, who was the crafterman of them, but some toke the fyre, some the wynd or ayre, some the course of the starres, some þe water, some toke sunne and moone, or the lightes of heauen whiche rule the earth, for gods. But though they had suche pleasure in their bewtie that they thoughte them to haue bene goddes: yet shoulde they haue knowen, how muche more faynter he is that made them.

For þe maker of beestes hath ordeined al these thynges. Or yf they maruailed at the power & woorkes of them, they shoulde haue perceiued ther-by, þe which made these thynges, is mightier then they. For by þe greatnesse and betwpe of þe creature, þe maker therof may plainly be know-en. For withstanding they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, & wolde fynde hym and yet mysse. And why: for so muche as they gooe aboute in his woorkes and seke after them, it is a token, that they regarde and holde muche of his woorkes that are sene, howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For yf they vnderstanding & knowlage be so great: þe they can deserue the world & the creatures, why do they not rather fynde out the Lord therof?

Gen. 1. 1.
Iohannes. 1. 1.

But vnhappy are they, and among the dead in theyr hope, that cal them gods which are but the woorkes of mens handes, golde, syluer, and the thyng that is founde out by connyng, the similitude of beastes, or any wayne stone that hath bene made by the hande of olde. Or as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of þe woode, and parteth of the barke of it conningly, and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vssed, and dysecteth meate with the resydue. As for the other parte þe is left, whiche is profitable for nothing (for it is a cracked peece of wood and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thowme his vanite, and accordyng to þe know-lage of his connyng, he geueth it some proposion, sayng: I will make it like some beast, or maketh it like some beast, or maketh it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spotte win is he collecteth some coloure vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuerpente tabernacle for it, setteth it in a wall, & maketh it faste with pyon: prouidyng so for it, lest it happe to fall: for it is well knownen, þe it can not helpe selfe. And why: it is but an ymage, & must of necessity be helped. Then goorth he & offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his chyldren, and for his wyfe: he se-keth helpe at it, he asketh counsell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it, þe hath no soule: for dealeth, he maketh his petition vnto hym that is sicke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto hym þe is dead he calleth vpon hym for helpe þe is not hable to helpe hym selfe: & to sende hym a good iourney he prayeth hym that maye not goo. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hand (whether it be to obtayn any thyng or to worke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

The xliij. Chapter.

The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages. A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The murther that cometh of idolatrye.

Sayne, another man purposing to saile, and begynnynge to take his iourney thowme the ragynge se, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weaker then the tre that beareth hym. For as for it, countynesse of money hath founde it oute, and the crafterman made it with his connyng.

But thy prouidence, O father governeth all thynges from the begynnynge: For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of the waues: declarynge thereby that thou hast power to helpe in al thynges, yea though a man went to the see withoute shippe.
Nevertheless, that the woorkes of thy wysdome shoulde not be vayne, þe hast caused an Arke to be made: and therfoze do men comit their liues to a smale peece of woode, passynge ouer the see in a shippe, and are saued.

For in the olde tyme also when the proude gynantes perished, he (in whome the hope was left to encrease the world) went into the shippe whiche was governed thowme thy hande, and so lest he bechynne hym vnto the world.

For happye is the tre where thowme ryghteousnes commeth: but cursed is the ydolle that is made with handes, yea both if þe that made it, he because he made it: & if because it was called God, where as it is but a fraile thyng. For þe vngodly & hye vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God. Eue so þe woorkes and he þe made it also, shalbe punished together. Ther-foze shall there a plague come vpon the ydolles of the heathen: for out of the creatures of God they are become abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for þe setc of the vnwise. And why: þe sekynge out of ydolls is the begynnynge of whoredome, and the byn-nyng up of them is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnynge, neither shal they contynue for ever. The welch ydellnes of men hath found them out vpon earth, therfoze shall they come shortly to an ende. When a so-ther mourned for his sonne þe was taken a waile from hym, he made him an ymage (in al þe hall) of his

of his deade sonne: and so beganne to worship him as a god, whiche was but a deade manne, and obeyed his seruantes to offer vnto hym Thus by proces of tyme & thowme an vngra-cious custome, this error was kept as a lame and tirantes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those that were so farre of that men myght not worship them plesent-ly, they picture was brought from farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge, whome they wolde honour) to the intent that wth grete diligence they might worship hym which was farre of, as though he had bene plesent.

Again the synghuler conning of pcraftesman gaue the ymaginante also a grete occasyon to worshippe ymages. For the woikeman wyllyng to do hym a pleasure set hym a woiche, laboured with all his conynge to make the ymage of the best fayson. And (so thowme the betwixt of the woiche) the comen people was deceyued, in so much that they toke hym now for a god, whiche a litle afore was but honored as a man. And this was pccour of many lyfe, whē men (ether for to serue they owne affectyon, or to do some pleasure vnto the kynge) ascribēd vnto stones & stoches the name of God, whiche ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Wherefore, thys was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlage of God: but where as they liued in grete warres of ymaginante, those many and great plages called they peace for ether they due they owne children, & offered them, or byd sacrifice in the nyght season vnto the belde vnreasonable watches: so that they kept neither lyfe nor mariage cleane: but ether one slue another to death maliciously, or elles griued his neyghboure with aduoutre. And thus were all thynges myxt together, bloud, manslaughter, thefte, dissimulacion, corrupcion, vnfaithfulness, sedicion, perjury, disquy-eting of good men, vnchanchfulness, despying of soules, chaungyng of byrth, vnstedfastnesse of mariage, misorder of aduoutre and vnclennesse. And wher the honcuryng of abhominable ymages is the cause, & begynning and ende of all euill. For they that worshippe ydolles: either they be mad when they be met, or pro-phete lyen: or lyne vngodly, or elles lyghtlye forswere them selues: For in so much as their trueth is in the ydolles (which haue neuer soule nor vnderstandyng) though they swere falsely yet they thynke it shall not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a grete plage vnto them and pwoydeh, for they haue an euill opynion of God, geuyng hede vnto ydolles swearing vnto lyfe to deceyue, and despying righteoufnesse. For they swearing is no vertue, but a plage of them that lyne, and goeth euil wth the offerer of the vngodlye.

The xlii. Chapter.

¶ The wyse of the synghuler, geuyng the merye of God for the ymaginante that they haue not plesent.

Bet thou (O our God) arte swete longe sufferyng, and true, & in merce adydelle bet thou all thynges. Though we lyne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strenght. If we lyne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is perfecte righteoufnesse Pea, to knowe the righteoufnesse and power is the rote of immortalitye. As for the thyng that men haue founde oute thow wth thyne science it hath not deceyued vs: as the paintyng of the pycture (an vnproffitable labour) and carued ymage, whiche coloures, whose synge entylecth the ignorant: so pbe honoureth & loueth pycture of a deade ymage & hath no soule.

Nevertheless, they that loue such euil thynges are worthy of the death: they that trust in them, they pmake them, they ploue them, and they phonour them. The potter also taketh tempereth softe earth, labourereth it, and geueth it the fashio of a vessel, whatforner serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruyce, and some contrary. But where, to euery vessel serueth, pknoweth the potter hym selfe. So wth his vayne labour he maketh a god of the same claye: thys doth euil he, whiche a litle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and within a lytle while after (when he dyeth) turneth to the earth again.

Not withstandyng, he careth not the more because he shall labour, nor because hys lyfe is shorter: but stryngeth to excell goldsmithes, the syluer smithes and cooper smithes, and taketh it for an honoure to make vaine thynges. For hys herte is ashen, his hope is but vayne earth, and his lyfe is more vyle then claye, for so much as he knoweth not hys owne maker, pgaue hym hys soule to worke, and byrthed in hym pbyrth of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a pastyme, and our conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be gettyng: and that by euill means. Howe he that of earth maketh traile vesselles and ymages, knoweth hym self to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of ppeople, and that holde them in subieccion, are vnto ppe, vnhappye, and exceedyng proude vnto they owne soules: for they iudge all the ydolles of the heathen to be goddess, which netter haue eye synge to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor synge or handes for to grepe: & as for they fete, they are to slowe to gooe. For man made them, and he phath but a boyowed spete, fashioned them But no man can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seying he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall pbe maketh wth vnrighteous handes he hym selfe is better then they whome he worshippe, for he lyued though he was mortall so byd neuer they. Pea, they worshipped beas-tes also, whiche are most miserable: for compare thynges, that can not fele vnto them, and they are worse then those.

Pet is there not one of these beastes, that wreth hys synge can beholde any good thyng, neither haue they geuen praye nor thanke vnto God.

The xlii. Chapter.

¶ The punishment of ymaginants, and the benefite of the synghuler.

For these and such other thynges haue they suffered: and the multitude of heathen are they coted out. In the which of which punishments thou hast graciously ordeined thine owne people and geuen them they desyre that they longed for a newe and straunge tast, & preparing them quailles to be they meat: to the intent that (by the thynges which were shewed and sente vnto them) they that were so greedy of meate, myght be withdrawen from the desyre that was necessary. But these within shorte tyme were brought vnto pouerte, and tasted a newe meat. For it was requisite that (without excuse) be struccyon shuld come vpon those which vsed tyranny, and to shewe only vnto the other, howe they enemies were destroyed.

For when the cruell woodnesse of the bestes came vpon them, they perished thow the thynges of cruell serpentes. For withstanding thy wathe endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a litle season, & they myght be reformed, haupnge a token of saluacion, to remembre the comaundement of thy law. For he & converted, was not healed by the thing & he sawe, but by the, O saupoure of all. So in this thou the worst thine enemies, that it is & which deliuerest from al euil. As for them: when they were bitten with greschoppers and flies, they dyed. For they wer worthe to perishe by such. But neyther the teeth of dragons nor of venomous wormes overcame thy chyldren, for thy mercy was euer by them, and helped them.

Therefore were they punished to remembre thy wordes, but hastely wer they healed again lest they shulde fall into so depe forgetfulness, & they myght not vse thy helpe. It was nether herbe nor plaster & restored them to helthe, but thy worde (O Lorde) which healeth all thynges. It is thou (O Lorde) & halte power of lpe and deathe: & thou ledest vnto deatnes dose, & byngest vp agayne. But man thow the wylfulness slayth his owne soule & when his sperte goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, nether may he call agayn the soule that is taken a waye. It is not possible to escape thy hande. For the vngodly that wolde not knowe the, were punished by the strength of thyne arme: to straunge waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thow the fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng & fyre myghte doo moze then water which quenched all thynges but the worde is the auenger of & righteous. Some time was the fyre so tame, & the bestes which were sent to punishe the vngodly, dyent not: and & because they shulde se and knowe, & they wer persecuted to the punishment of God.

And sometyme byente the fyre in the water on every syde, that it myght destroy the vneightrous nacion of the earthe. Agayne thou hast fed thyne owne people with Angels lode, and sente them bye de cody from heauen (withoutte they labour) byng very pleasant & a good of taste. And to shew thy riches & sweetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest every one they best, so & every man might take what liked him best. But the snow and yse abode & ypolence of the fyre and melted nor: & they myght knowe, & the fyre burning in the hayle & raine, destroyed the frute of the enemies, the fyre also forgat his strengthe again: that & righteous myght be nortyfed. For the creature & serueth the (which arte the maker) is feare in punyng the vngodly, but it is easye & gentyle to do good, vnto such as put they trust in the.

Therefore dyd all thynges alter at the same tyme, & wer all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the nurse of all thynges, according to the desyre of them & had nede thereof: & thy chyldren (O Lorde) whome thou louest, might knowe, & that it is not the nature and the growynge of frutes that sedeth men, but & it is thy worde, which preserueyth them that put they trust in the. For loke what myghte not be destroyed in the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a spyle. Sunne beame, it melted: & all men myght knowe & thanke ought to be geuen vnto & before the Sunne rise, & that & oughtest to be worshipped before & day lpyng. For the hope of the vnrhankefull shall melte a waye as the wynter yse and perishe as water & is not necessary.

The xvii. Chapter.

The iudgements of God vpon the Egyptians.

Reate are & thy iudgements (O Lorde) & thy counsels can not be expressed therfore men do erre, & wyl not be reformed to thy wysedome. For when & vnrightheous thoughte to haue thy holy people in subiection, they wer bounde with the bandes of darckenesse, & longe nighte. But vnder the rose, thinking to escape the euerlastynge wysedome. And whyle they thoughte to be byd in the darckenes of they synnes, they were scattered abode in the very middell of the darke couering of forgetfulness, put to horrible feare and wonderous & vexed: for the corner where they myght not hepe them fro feare (because the sounde came downe and vered them) yea, many terrible and straunge visyons made them afayed.

No power of the fyre myghte geue them lpyghte, neyther myght the clere flammes of the starres lpyghten & horrible myght. For there appered vnto them a sodayne fyre, very dyedefull. At the which (when they sawe nothyng) they were so afayde, & they thought & thyng which they sawe, to be the moze fearefull. & so for the sojcery and enchauntement & they vled it came to verisyon, & the proude wisdom was brought to shame. For they that promysed to byrue a waye the fearefulness and dyede from & weake soules were syche for feare & them selues, and & with scozne. And though none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afayed at the bestes which came vpon them, and at the byssing of the serpentes. In so muche that they trembled & they sowned, and saide they sawe not the aye, which no manne yet mape escape.

E For it is an heuy thyng, when a mans owne conscience beareth recorde of his wycheuynesse & condemneth hym. And why? A vered & troubled conscience, rather cruelly thynges in hande. * Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to an other for hym selfe. And loke howe much lesse the hope is within, the more is the uncertayntie of the matter, for: & whiche he is punished. But they that came in the myghte nyght, slept the sleep that fell vpon them from vnder and from above: sometyme were they afraide thozowe & feare of the wonders, & sometyme they were so weak that they fownd shall: for an hasty and sodain fearfulnesse came vpon them.

D Afterwarde, yf anye of them had fallen, he was kepte and hurte in pyloure, but wythout chaynes. But yf any dwelte in a byllage, yf he had ben an herde or husbandleman, he suffered intollerable necessity: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darkenesse.

Whether it were a blasfyming wind, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thycke bryanches of the trees, or the vehemency of halp running water, or grete noyse of falling dome of stones, or the platynge & running of beastes: whom they sawe not, or myghte noyse of roaring beastes, or the sounde pauns wereth again in the hye mountaynes: it made them lowne for very feare. For al the earth shined wth clere light and no man was hyndred in his labour. Only vpon them there fell an heuy nyght, an ymage of darkenesse & was to come vpon them. Yea, they wer vnto them selues the moste deuile and horrible darkenesse.

The xviii Chapter.

The fyre lyght that the Hierarchy had in Egypt. The persecution of the faithful. The Lord smote all the fyre borne of Egypt. The fraye of the people in the wilderness. Aaron stood before the Lord & the dead, but his comfort.

N Euerthelesse, thy sayntes had a very grete lighte: & the enemies heard they voice but they sawe not the sygne of them. And because they suffered not the same thynges they magnified & and they & were vered aloze (because they were not hurte nor) & thanked the, and besought the: God & there myght be a difference. * Therefore had they a burning pyller of fyre to leade them in the unknowne waye, & thou gauest them the shewe for a fre gyfte without any hurte. Reason it was & they shoulde wante lyghte, and be put in the pylon of darkenesse, whiche kepte thy chyldren in captiuyte, by whome the vncorrupt lyghte of the lawe of the word was for to be gotten. * When they thought to slay the babes of the ryghteous, one beyng layde out, and preferred to be leader vnto the other. * & & broughte oute the whole multitude of the chyldren and destroyed these in the myghte water. Of that nyghte were oure fathers certified aloze, that they knowyng vnto what other they had geuen credence, myghte be of good chere. Thus thy people receyved the brith of the righteous, but the vngodly wer destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast & prynces in whom thou calledst aloze. For the ryghteous chylde of the good men offered secretly and obeyed the law of righteuousnes vnto vnter that the iuste shoulde receyue good and euell in like maner, synging praises vnto & father of al men. Again, there was heard an vncorrupt voice of & enemies, & a pyteous crye for the chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruant wer punished in like maner. For they altogether had innumerable & died one death.

* After that were the lyunge sufficente to C burpe the dead, for in the twyncklyng of an eye the noblest nacyon of them was destroyed. As ofte as God helped them aloze, yet wolde it not make them belient: but in the destruction of the spalte boine they knowlaged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges wer styll and when the nyghte was in the myddest of her course, thy almyghty worde: O Lorde leape downe from heauen oute of thy roiall thron, as a rough man of watre, in the myddest of the lande that was destroyed: & the sharpe swearde perforemed they: & rayte commandment standyng and sylling all thynges wth death: yea it stode vpon the earthe and reached vnto the heauen. Then the lyghte of the euell dreames vered them sodenly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vntowares. Then laie there one here, another there, halfe dead, halfe quicke, & shewed the cause of his death. For the visyons & vered them shewed them these thynges aloze: for they were not ignozant, wherfor they perished.

Then temptacon of death touched the D ryghteous also, and amonge the multitude in the wilderness there was insurrection, but the word pendured not longe. For & blameles man went in all the haste, and tooke the battayle vpon hym, brought forth the weapon of his mystracyon: euen prayer and the censoures of reconstyng: set hym selfe agaynst the wrath, & so broughte the mylce to an ende: declaringe thereby that he was thy seruante. For he ourt came not the multitude wth bodelye power, nor wth weapons of myghte: but wth the word he subdued hym & vered hym, puttynge them in remembrance of & othe & couenant made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen do wne by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddes, pacified the wrath, and parted the waye vnto the liuing. * And why in his longe garment was all the betwixt, & in & foure rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiesty was written in & crone of his head. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place and was afraid of them: for it was only a temptacon wothye of wrath.

The booke.

For he knewe before what shoulde happen vnto them how that when they had consented to let theringe, and had sente oute to ych grete bylygence they wold repent and folow vpon them ¶ For when they were yet mourningge and making lamentacyon by the graues of the deade, they dryed another folowynge: so that they persecuted them in theyr flyng, whome they had caste oute afore with power. Whiche necessity also broughte them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten þe thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thyng that was wantynge of theyr punishment, was requyte so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormentes, that thy people myghte haue a maruelous passage thowoe, and þe these myghte fynde a straunge deathe.

¶ Then was euery creature fashoned agayn of newe, accordyng to the wyll of theyr maker, obeying the commaundementes that thy chyldre myght be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouer shadowed theyr sentes, and the dyle earth appered, where afore was water: so that in the red see, there was a way wythout impediment and the great depe became a grene felde: where thowoe all the people wente that were defended with thy hande synging thy wonderous and maruelous wothes.

For as the doxes so were they fed, and leaped lyke lambes, praisynge the O Lorde which haddest deliuered them: And why they were yet myndefull of thy thynges that happened while they dwelte in the lande: howe þe ground brought forth theyr feede of catel: and how the ryuer scauled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fshes.

¶ But at the laste they sawe a newe creature of byrdes, what time as they were deceiued wyth lustre, and desyred delycate meates.

For when they were speakynge of theyr appetyte, the quaples came vnto them from the see, and punishmentes came vpon the synners not withoute the tokens whiche came to passe afore by the vehemencye of the streames, for they suffered woithely accordyng to theyr wickednesses, they deit so abhominably and curiously wyth strangers. Some receyued no vnkownen gestes, some brought the strangers into bondage þe did them good. Beside all these thynges there were some, þe not onely receyued no strangers with theyr wyll, but persecuted those also, and dyd them muche euell, that receyued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with byndenesse, lyke as they that were couered wyth sodayne barchenelle at the doyes of the rpygheous, so þe every one soughte the entraunce of his doye.

Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrumente of musyke, and yet all the residue hepe theyr melodye, whiche maye easily be perceyued, by the syght of the thynges that are come to passe.

The dyle lande was turned into a waterpe and the thyng that afore swamme in the water, wente nowe vpon dyle grounde. The fyre had power in þe water (contrary vnto his owne vertue) and the water forgot his owne kynde to quench. Again, the flames of nopsome beastes hurte not the flesh of them that went with them, neyther melted they the ffe, whiche elles melteth lyghtly. In all thynges haste thou promoted thy people (O Lorde) and brought them to honour: þe haste not despised them but alway and in all places hast þe stonde by them.

The booke of Iesus, the sonne of Sirach/ which is called in Latin Ecclesiasticus.

¶ The prologue of Iesus the sonne of Sirach vnto his booke.

My and grete men haue declared wysdome vnto vs oute of the lawe, oute of the prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended by the reason of doctryne and wysedome: Therfore, they that haue it: and reade it, shoulde not onelye them selues be wyse there thowoe, but serue other also with teachyng and wityng.

After that my graundesfather Iesus had geuen diligente laboure to reade the lawe, the prophetes, and other booke that were left vs of oure fathers, I had well receyved hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wyte some thyng of wysedome and good maners, to the intent that they whiche were wylling to learne & to be wyse myght haue the moze vnderstandyng, and be the moze apte to leade a good conuersacion.

Wherfore, I exhorte you to receyue it louyngly, to reade it wth diligence, & to take it in good wyth though our woordes be not so eloquent as the famous orators. For the thyng þe is wyrtten in þe hebreu tynge, soundeth not so well when it is translated into another spech. Not only this boke of myne, but also þe lawe, the prophetes, & other booke sounde far otherwyse, then they do, when they are spoken in theyr owne language. Nowe in þe xxxviij. yere when I came into Egypt in þe time of Ptolomy Euergetes: I continued there all my lyfe, I gat liberte to orde & wyte many good thynges. Wherfore I thoughte it good & necessary, to bestow my diligence & traunple to interpret this booke. And consyderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and byd my best to perfourme this booke, & to byng it vnto lyghte: þe strangers also which are disposed to learne, myghte apply them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde.

The xij. chapter.

Wysdome speaketh and comforteth of God. A prayer of the feare of God. Righteousnesse is a light to come by wysdome.

All wysdome cometh of God the Lord, and hath bene euer with hym, & is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the lande of the see, the droppe of rain, and the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heygth of heuen, the bredth of the earth, and the depeneth of the sea? Who hath sought out the grounde of Soddes wysdome, which hath bene afore all thynges? Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandynge of prudence from euerylasyng. (Soddes worde in the heygth is the wel of wysdome, and the euerylasyng comendmentes are the entraunce of her.)

Unto whom hath froot of wysdome bene declarid? O who hath knowen her wys? Unto whome hath the doctryne of wysdome bene discoverid and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the hygheste the maker of all thynges, the Almyghty, the hyng of power, of whom men oughte to stande greatly in awe, whiche syteth vpon his throne beyng a God of domynon: he hath created her thow the holy ghooste: he hath sencher, nombred her, and measured her, he hath powred her out vpon all hys wothes, and vpon all fleshe, accordyng to his gyfte: he geueth her ryche vnto them y loue hym: The feare of the Lord is wysdome and triumph, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lord maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Whoso feareth the Lord, it shall go well with hym at the laste, that in f day of his death he shall be blessed.

The loue of God is honourable wysdome looke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it for they se what woderous thynges it doth. The feare of the Lord is the begynnyng of wysdome, and was made with the saydefull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with chosen women, and shall be known of the ryghteous and saythfull. The feare of the Lord is the ryghte Goddes serper, that preserueh and susteyneth the bert, & geueth mirth and gladnesse. Whoso feareth the Lord shall be happy, & when he hath neede of comfort, he shall be blessed. To feare god is wisdom & maketh rich, & byngeth all good with her. She filleth the whole house with gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lord is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and helth. He hath sene her & nombred her: (bothe these are the gyfts of God) knowlage, and vnderstandynge of wysdome hath bene poured out as rayne, and vnto that helde her faste, hath he brought vnto honoure.

The feare of the Lord is the roote of wysdome, and her branches are longe lyfe. In the treasure of wysdome is vnderstandynge and deuocyon of knowlage, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the Lord dyuerteth oute synne, for he is without feare can not be made ryghteous, & his wyfull boldenes is hys owne destruccyon. A pacient man wyll suffer vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyll hyde by wordes for a tyme, & manye mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasure of wysdome is the declaracyon of doctryne, but synner abhorreth the woorth of God. My sonne, yf thou desyre wysdome, kepe the comendmentes, & God shall gene her vnto the: for the feare of the Lord is wil dom & nourtour, he hath pleasure in sayd & louyng mekenesse, & he shall fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaithfull to the feare of the Lord, & come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an hypocrite in the syght of menne, & take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall & byng thy soule to dishonour, & so God discover thy secretes, & cast the doune in the myddest of the congregacyon: because thou woldst not receyue the feare of God, & because thy herte is full of fapnednes and dyscrete.

The ii. Chapter.

The exhortacyon the seruantes of God to righteousnesse, loue, vnderstandynge, and pacientie, & exhortacyon vnto that feareth God, to beleue, to hope, and to loue, because God neuer confoundeth any faithfull them that truste in hym. A crosse vpon the sette, feare, and unpapient of iustice.

My sonne, & yf thou wilt come into the temple of God, stande fast in ryghteousnes and feare, and arme thy soule: a temptacyon: sette thyne hert & be pacient, bow downe thine eare, receiue & wothes of vnderstandynge, and synne not awaie, when thou art entised. Holde the fast vpon God ioyne thy selfe vnto hym, & suffer that thy lyfe may encrease at last. What soeuer happeneth vnto the, receyue it: suffer in penyence, & be pacient in thy trouble. For lyke as golde & syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornaice of aduersite. Beleue in God and he shall helpe the: order thy waye aright, & put thy truste in hym. Holde faste his feare and grow therein. O yf thou feare the Lord, take sure holde of his mercy: synne not away from him that ye fall not. O yf thou feare the Lord, beleue hym and your reward shall not be emptye. O yf that feare the Lord, put your trust in hym, and mercye shall come vnto you for pleasure. O yf that feare the Lord, let your loue vpon hym, and your hartes shall be lyghtened.

Consider the olde generacyons of men: O yf chyliden and marke them well: was there ever any one confounded, & put his truste in the Lord? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? O whome dyd he euer dyspyle, & called fapthfully vpon hym? For God is gracious and merciful, he forgereth synners in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them yf seke him in the tynge. Alas he vnto hym, that hath hath a double heart, wyched lypes and euell occupied handes, & to the synner that goeth two maner of wayes. Whoe be vnto them þat loose of herte, whiche put not theyr trust in God, and therfore thal they not be defended of hym. Whoe be vnto them that haue lost pacyence, forsaaken the ryght wayes, and are turned backe into fro ward wayes. What wyll they do when þe Lord shall begynne to vylset them?

C They that feare the Lord wyll not mistruste his woordes, & they that loue hym, wyll kepe his commaundement. They þe feare the Lord, wyll seke oute the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto hym, & they þe loue hym, thal fulfill his lawe. They þe feare the Lord wyll prepare theyr hartes, & humble theire soules in his sight. They þe feare the Lord, kepe his commaundementes, & wyll be pacient tyl they se hym selfe saynge. Better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lord, then into þe handes of men: for his mercye is as great as hym selfe.

C The .iii. Chapter.

To our father and mother ought we to geue double honoure of the blessing and curse of the father & mother. No man oughte ouer curiously to searche out the secretes of God.

A The chyldren of wysedome are a congregation of þe righteous, and they receyve is obedience & loue. Heare me your father (O my dere chyldre) and do after that ye maye be safe. For þe Lord wyll haue the father honoured of the chyldren: and looke what a mother commaundeth her chyldren to do, he wyll haue it kept. Whoso honoureth his father, his synnes shal be forgiven him. And he that honoureth his mother: is lyke one that gathereth treasure together. Whoso honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne chyldren & when he maketh his prayer he shal be herd. He þe honoureth his father, shall haue a longe lyfe: & he that is obedient for the Lordes sake, his mother shall haue ioye of hym.

B He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his father and mother, and doth theim scrupel, as it were vnto the Lord hym selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in woerde and in all patience, that þe mayst haue goddes blessing, and his blessing shall abyde with the at the laste.

C The blessing of the father buyldeth vp þe houses of the chyldren, but the mothers curle rotech out the foundacions. Receyve not when thy father is reproveth, for it is not honoure vnto the but shame. For the worshippe of a mans father is his owne worshippe, & where the father is withoute honoure, it is the dishonour of the sonne. My sonne, make muche of thy father in his age, & greue hym not as longe as he lyueth. And if his vnderstandyng fayle, haue patience with hym, and despise hym not in thy strength. For the good dede þe thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not bee forgotten, & when þe thy selfe wantest it shalbe rewarded the (& for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed with good, for it shalbe founded for þe in ryghteousnes: & in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remembered: thy synnes also shall melte awaye lyke as the yce in the saye warme wyther.

He that forsaketh his father shall come to shame, and he that despeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne perfourme thy worship with louyng mekenesse, so shalt thou be beloved aboue other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy selfe (in all thynges) and thou shalt synde fauour in the syghte of God. For grete power belongeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

* Seke not oute the thynges that are aboue thy capacite, and searce not the ground of such thynges as are to mighty for the: but loke what god hath comaunded the, thinke vpon þe alway and be not curious in many of his woordes. For it is not needfull for the to see with thynne eyes the thynges þe ar secret. Make not þe to much searce in superfluous thynges, & be not curious in many of his woordes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the alreadye, which be aboue the capacite of men. The medlyng with suche hath begyled many a man, & tangled their wyttes in vanprie. Now be þe loweth paret thal perseye therein.

An harde harte shall fare euell at the laste, (and he that loneth daunger, shal perseye therein) an harte þe goeth two wayes, shall not prosper: and he that is frowarde of harte wyll euer be worse and worse. A wyched harte shalbe laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner wyll beape one synne vpon another. The counsel of the proude hath no health, for þe plant of synne shalbe rooted oute in theim, and not knownen. The bert of hym that hath vnderstanding shal perceyue þe thynges, & a good care wyll gladly berken vnto wysdome. An harte þe is wyle & hath vnderstandyng, wyll abstaine from synne and encrease in the woordes of ryghteousnesse. Water quenched burnyng fyre, & mercye reconcyleth synnes. God hath respect vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym against þe tyme to come: so that when he faileth, he shall synde a stronge hold.

C The .iiii. Chapter.

Allmes must be done with all mekenesse. The study of wisdome and her frute. A iudge ought to be merciful. An exhortacion to eschue euell and to do good.

A sonne, & defraude not the pooze of his almes, and turne not awaye thynne eyes frome hym that bathe nedde. Dyspise not an hongry soule and desye not the pooze in his necessitye: greue not the herte of hym that is helpelesse, and wythdrawe not the gyfte frome the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face frome the nedye. Caste not thynne eyes asyde from þe pooze for any euell wyll, that thou geue hym none occasion to speake euell of the. For if he complayne of the, in the bytternes of his soule, his prayer shalbe heard, euen þe that made hym: shall heare hym. Be curteous vnto the compayne of pooze: humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy heade to a manne of worshippe. Lette it not greue the to bowe downe thine care vnto þe poze, but paye thy dette, & geue hym a frendly answer, and that w mekenesse.

Delpurer

Of Iesus the sonne of Syrach. Fol. xxiiij.

* Del puer hym that suffereth wronge from the hnde of the opprellour, and he not saynt her ted whan thou lyest in iudgement. We mercy ful unto the fatherles as a father, & be in steade of an husbnde unto their mother: so walt thou be as an obrepente sonne of the hyell: & he thal lone the mote then thy mother doth. Wisdom bietheth lyfe into her chyldren, receaueth them that seke her, & wyl go before them in the waye of ryghteounes. He y loueth her, loueth lyfe, & they that seke her diligentely, thal haue great ioy. They that hepe her, thal haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she entred in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her, thal be the seruantes of the holpe one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geneth eare unto her, thal iudge the heathen, and be that hath respecte vnto her, thal dwell safelye. He that beleueth her, thal haue her in possession, and his generacyon thal endure: for wha he falleth he goeth with hym, and closeth hym amonge the best. Feare, dyde, and temptacyon thal be bynne vpon him, and tye hym in her doctryne, tyll he haue proued hym in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then thal she stablye hym, bynne the ryghte way vnto him, make him a gladman, the w hym her secretes, & deape vpon him p treasures of knowlege, vnderstandynge of ryghteounes. But yf he goo wronge, she thal forsake hym, and geue hym ouer into the handes of his enemye.

My sonne, make muche of the tyme, eschue the thyng that is euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that byngeth synne, and there is a shame that byngeth wozthyp & fauoure: * Accept no personne after thyne owne wil, p thou be not confounded for thyne owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersitie, & hepe not backe thy counsel whan it maye do good, nether hyde thy wylfedom in her bewty. For in the tong is wylsome knowen, so is vnderstandynge knowlege and learnynge in the talhyng of the wyse and stedfastnes in p woordes of ryghteounes. In no wyse speake agaynst the woide of truth but be ashamed of the lyes of thyne owne igno- rance. Whome not to confesse thyne erreure, & submyt not thy selfe vnto every mā because of synne. Wythstande not the face of the myghtye and styue thou not agaynst the streame. But for ryghteounesse take paine with al thy soule and for the truth stryue thou vnto death, & God thal fyghte for the agaynst the thyne enemyes. Be not halffe in thy tounge, neiether slacke and neglygent in thy woordes. Be not as a Lyon in thyne owne house, destroyng the housholde folkes, and oppressing them that are vnder the * Let not thine hand be stretched out to receaue, and quyte whan thou shaldest geue.

The v. Chapter.

* Truste not vnto thy riches, * and say not I am rich, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it thal not helpe in the tyme of vengeaunce thy temptacion.) Followe not the lust of thine other herte in thy strength, and saye not: I haue, howe haue I had strength, or who wyl bynne me vnder because of my woordes? For doubtles God thal adyrnge it. And saye not: I haue synned, and what euell hath happened me? For the Almyghtye is a payente rewarde.

* Because thy synne is forgiven the, be not therfore wythoute feare, neyther heape one syn ne vpon another. * And saye not: In the tyme of the Lord is greater, he thal forgive me my synnes, be they neuer so many. * For lyke as he is mercifull, so goeth wozth, frodum also, & his indignacyon cometh downe vpon synners.

Make no tarping to turne vnto the Lorde & put not off from daye to daye: for sodenly thal his wozth come, & in the tyme of vengeaunce he thal destroye the. * Trust not in wyched ryches for they thal not helpe the in the daye of puny- mente & wozth. Be not carped aboute to euery wynde, and go not into euery waye: for so doth the sinner that hath a double tong. Stand fast in the waye of the Lorde, be stedfast in thy vnderstandynge, abyde by the woide, & folowe the woide of peace & righteounes. Be gentle to be are the woide of God, that thou mayest vnder- stande it, and make a true aunswere with wyl- dome. * Be wylle to heare, but dow & patient in geuyng answere. If thou haste vnderstan- dyng, haue thy neyghboure an answere: If no, laye thy hand vpon thy mouth lest thou be trap- ped in an vndiscrete woide, & so confounded. Ho- noure and wozthyp is a mans wyse talkynge but the tonge of the vndiscrete is owne destruc- cyon. * Be not a pryue accuser as long as thou ly- nest, and vse no flander wyth thy tonge. For shame and sorowe goeth ouer the cheere, and an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but he that is a pryue accuser of other men, thal be hated, enuyed and confounded. Se that thou in styfe the small and greate a lyke.

The vi. Chapter.

* It is the propertie of a sinner to be trust conge. The do- strine and good counsel of the wyse is to be embraced, wyl- dome thal be searched for. The pryue theore.

BE not thy neyghbours enemye for I thy frende sake, for who so is euell, thal be the byrde of rebuke and disho- noure, & whosoever beareth enuye and a double tonge offendeth. * Be not proude in the deuyce of thyne owne vnder- standynge (leaste thy strength be hurte by fool- lyshenesse, and) leaste thy leaues wyther, and thy fruite be destroyed, and so thou belesse as a drye tree (in the wyldernesse.) For a wyched soule destroyeth hym that hath it, maketh him to be laughed to scoone of hys enemyes, (and byngeth him to the poceyon of the vngodlye.) * A swete woide multiplieth frendes, and pa- cifieth them that be at variannce, and a thanke full tonge wyl be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendeshyppe with manye, neuer thelesse haue but one counseller of a thousande.

If thou gettest a frende, * proue him fyrst, & be not hasty to geue him credence. For some mā is a fiede, but for a tyme, & wyl not abyde in the daye of daye of trouble. And there is some feyned that turneth to enemye, and rather part against the. yf he knowe any fault by the, he reuoketh it out. * Agayne some frende is but a companion at the table, & in the daye of neede he continueth not. But a true frende wyl be vnto the euen as thine owne selfe and deale faythfulllye with thy household folke. Yf thou suffer trouble and aduersitye, he is wyth the, and hydeth not hym selfe from the. Departe frome thyne enemyes, yea, and be ware of thy frendes.

C A faythfull frende is a stronge defence, who so synnderh suche one, synnderh a treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare. the weyghte of golde & siluer is not to be compared to the goodnes of his fayth. A faythfull frende is a medecyne of lyfe & they that feare the Lord shall synde hym. Altho so leaureth the Lord shall prosper with frendes. and as he is him selfe, so shall his frende be also. Wy sonne, receaue doctrine from thy pouthre wy, so walte thou synde wysedome tyl thou be olde. So to her as one that ploweth and soweth, and wayte paciently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her woche, but thou shalt care of her frutes epyghte soone. O howe excedynglye warpe is wysedome to vnclearned men: an vntedfast bodye wyl not remayne in her. Vnto suche, she is as it were a touchstone, and he casteth her from hym in all the haste, for wysedome is with him but in name, there be but fewe that haue knowledge of her. (But with them that know her, she abydeth euen vnto the apperayng of God.)

Gue care (my sonne) receaue my doctrine, & refuse not my counsell. But thy foote into her linkes, & take her pocke vpon thy necke: haue downe thy shulder vnto her, beate her pacientlye, and be not weyre of her bandes. Come vnto her wyth thy whole herte, and kepe her waped with al thy power. Seke after her, and she shall be thyne: and when thou haste her, forsaue her not. For at the last thou shalt synde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy greute lope.

D Then shall her setters be a stronge defence for the, and her pocke a glozious raiment. For the bewte of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the couplinge together of saluacion. Yea, a glozous raiment is it, thou shalt put it on, and the same crowne of lope shalt thou weare.

Wy sonne, yf thou wylste take heede, thou shalt haue vnderstandyng. and yf thou wylste applye thy mynde, thou shalt be wyse. If thou wylste bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine, and yf thou desyrt in hearyng, thou shalt be wise. Stande with the multitude of suche elders as haue vnderstandyng, and consente vnto theire wysedome with thine herte. * that thou mayest heare al godly sermons and that the woorthye sentences cleape the not. And yf thou seyst a man of dyscrete vnderstandyng get the same vnto him, and let thy foote treade vpon the stepes of his doozes. * Let thy mynde be vpon the comaundmentes of God, & be earnestly occupied in his lawes: so that he stablysh thy herte, & geue the wysdome at thine owne desyre,

Labour not vnto man for anye Lordshyppe, neyther vnto the kyng for the seate of honoure. * Justifye not thy selfe before God, (for he knoweth thy herte) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kyng. Make no labour to be made a Judge excepte it were so, that thou couldest myghtely put downe wickednes for if thou shouldest stode in a we of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest fayle in geuyng sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the cytye, and put not thy selfe among the people. * Wende not two synnes together, for in one synne shalt thou not be vnpunished. Make not: tush, God wyl looke vpon the multitude of my oblacions, and whan I offer to the hygheste God he wyl accepte it.

Be not saynter herted whan thou makest thy prayer, neyther slacke in geuyng of almes. Laugh no man to scoyne in the pounelle of his soule, for God (whiche seyth all thynges) is he that can byng downe, & set vp againe. Accepte not lea syng agaynst thy brother, neyther do the same agaynst thy frend. Use not to make any maner of lie, for the custome of lyes are not good. Make not manye wordes when thou arte among the elders: * & when thou prayest, make not much babling. * Let not laborious woche be tedious vnto the, neyther the busydye which the Almightye hath created. Make not thy boast in the multitude of thy wickednes, but humble thy selfe euen from thine herte: and remember that the wrath shall not be longe in taryng and that the vengeance of the fleshe of the vngodlye is a verpe type & woone. Geue not ouer thy frende for any good, nor thy faithfull brother for the best golde.

* Dispyse not the sermons of such elders as haue vnderstandyng, but acquaynt thy selfe with wise sentences of the, for of them shalt learne wyddome and the doctrine of vnderstandyng, showe to serue great men without complaint.
So not from the doctrine of the elders: for they haue learned it of their fathers. For of the thou shalt learne vnderstandyng, so & thou mayeste make answer in & tyme of neede. Kindele not the * Serue not wyth hym that is angrie and cruell, and go not wyth hym into myld-nesse: for bloude is nothyng in hys syght, and where there is no helpe he shall murder the.

* Take no counsell at foolles, for they loue nothyng but the thynges that please them selues.
Make no counsell before a straunger, for thou canste not tell what wyl come of it. Open not thyne heart vnto euery man, lest he be vnthankfull to the, and put the to reproffe.

hyndled as it were a fyre. In aduouterous woman shalbe trodden vnder fote as myxe, of eu-rye one that goeth by the waye. Wanye a man wondering at the betwyte of a straunge womā goeth it well. * As the iudge of the officers: & loke what manner of man the ruler of the cite is, such are they that dwell therein also.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God: and all iniquitie of the people is to be abhorred: & when his tyme is, he shall set a prosytable ruler vpon it. In the hand of God is the power of man, & vpon the scribes that he laye his honour. * Remember no mouinge of the neygh-bour, & meele not thou with no vnyghteous worches. Pryde is hatefull before God & man, & al wickednes of the heahte is to be abhorred.

Because of vnrightrous dealinge, wronge blasphemies, dyuers dystrates, a realme shall be translated from one people to another.

There is nothing worse the a courteous man Why art thou proude, O thou earthy aches: Ther is not a more wicked thinge, then to loue mo nye. And why? suche one hat his soule to sell, ye is he but tylltyme dounge while he lyueth.

And though the Physicion shew vs helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusyon it goeth after this maner, to haue a hyngt, to mow deede. For whan a man dyeth, he is the prey of serpent, beastes, and wormes. The begyn-nyng of mannes pyde is to fall awaye from God. And why? his herte is gone from his maner, for wyde is the ogyrnall of all synne.
Who so saith he holde thereof, shall be filled with curlynges, and at the laste it shall ouerthrowe him. Therfore hathe the Lorde broughte the congregacions of the wyched to dyshonoure, and destroyed them to the ende.

God hath destroyed the seat of pride 22 yntes, & set up the meke in the y<sup>e</sup> steade: God hath wettered the roots of the proude heathē & planted the lowly among them. * God halbe ouerpowen the landes of the heathen, and de stroyed them vnto the grounde. He hath caused them to wither away, he hath brought them to naughte, & made the memorial of them to cesse from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, & left the name of the hum ble of mynde.) Wyde was not made for man, neither withouten lawe for mens chyld. The seed of men praise God, halbe brought to honour, but the seed which transgressed the commaun dementes of y<sup>e</sup> Lord halbe named. He is the ruler amonge hierthen, & holden in honoure amonge them, and he that regardeth luche as fraite y<sup>e</sup> Lorde. The glasse of the cyche of the honourable, and of the paye is the fraise of God.

Dispyre not thou the lull poore man, and magnifye not the ryche vngodly. Grete is the iudge and myghtie in honoure, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God. * Unto the Irruauer that is dyscrite, shall the free do seruice. * He that is dysse and well nurthured, wyl not grudge when he is resourmed, and an igno-raunte bodye shal not come to honoure. We not proude to do thy woiche, and dyspayre not in time of aduerfite. * Better is he that laboureth and haue plentroufnesse of all thynges, then he that is gorgeous, and wanteth breade.

My sonne, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her, her due honour. Who shal iustify hym & synneth agaynst him selfe: Who wyl honour him, & dishonoureth his owne soule? The poore is honoured for his faithfulness and truthe, but the rich is had in reputaciō because of his good des. He that ozbereth him selfe honestly in pouer tye, howe muche more shall he behaue hym selfe honestly in riches. And who so ozbereth hi selfe dishonestly in riches, howe muche more shal he behaue hym selfe dishonestly in pouertye.

The xi. Chapter.

• The people of Jerusalem. After the outward appearance ought not to judge. Of deeds and rather judgments.
The rule is not without offence. All things come of God.
All men are not to be brought into thine house.

The wylsdom of hym þ is brought lowe, shall lyfte vp hys heade and shall make hym to lye among great men. Commende not thou a man in hys bewtye, neþther dyspyse a man in hys utter apperance. The Be is but a smal beast amonge the foules, yet is her frute excedyng sweete. Be not proude of thy rayment, & exalte not thy selfe in the dape of thy honour for þ woꝛches of þ dyest only are woꝛful þea, glorioꝛs, secrete, & unknowen are hys woꝛkes. Many tꝛyauꝛtes haue bene sayne to sit downe vpon the erth. & the vnlykely hath woꝛne the crowne. Many myghty me haue ben brought lowe, & the honourable haue bene deliuered into other mens haꝛdes. * Edeꝛmpne no mā befoꝛe þ haue tꝛyed out the matter, and wꝛan thou hast made inquisition, then resourme tꝛgedously. * Seue no sentence, befoꝛe thou hast hard the cause, but fyrste let men tell oute theyꝛ tales.

Of Iesus the sonne of Syrach. Icol. xxxv.

God, love and the wayes of good are with him. Errorre and backenelle are made for synners (and they that exalte them selues in euil, wage albe in euil.) The gyfte of God remaineth for the ryghteous, and the good wyll shall geue prosperite for euer. Some man is ryche by lyuynge vngardly, and that is hys porcion of his rewarde, in that he sayeth: * nowe I haue gotten rest, and nowe wyll I ease and dyncke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he cometh to death, that the tyme hath wryte nye (and death appoacheth) that he muste leaue all these thynges vnto other men, and dye him selfe. Stande thou faste in thy couenaunte, and exerceyse thy selfe therein, and remaine in the woiche vnto thy age. Corinthe not in the woiches of sinners but put thy trust in God, & hyde in thyne estate for it is but an easie thyng in the syght of God to make a poore man ryche, and to denye. The blessing of God hasteth to the rewarde of the ryghteous, and maketh his frutes sone to flourish & prosper. Waxe not what helpeth it me: what shall I haue the while? Againe, saye not: I haue ynough, howe can I wante? When thou arte in wisdome, forget not aduersite, & whyle thou art not wel with the, haue a good hope, that it shall be better. For it is but a smal thyng vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euery man according to hys wayes. The aduersite of an houre maketh one to forgette all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, his woiches are disconforted & waste, no bodye befoze hys deathe, for a man shall be knowen in hys chyldren.

Wynge not euery man into thyne house, for the displeasur lappeth wyte dyuersly. Lyke as a partych in a maunde, so is the herte of the proude: & like as a spyre that loketh vpon the fall of hys neyghboure. For he turneth good vnto euil, and slandereth the chosen. Of one sparke is made a great fyre (and of one dysceatfull ma is bloude increased) & an vngodlye man lappeth wyte for bloude. Beware of the dysceatfull for he ymagyneth wycked thynges, to bynne the into a perpetual shame. If thou takest an alcaunt vnto the, he shall destroye the in vnguetnes, and bynne the from thyne owne wayes.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

When thou wyte do good, knowe to whom thou doest it, and so shalte thou be greatly thancked for thy benefytes. * Do good vnto the righteous and thou shalt fynde great rewarde though he not of hym, yet (no doubte) the Lord shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alway occupied in euil & greueth no almes, for the best hateth the synners, and hath mercy vpon them that be we the woiches of repentance. Geue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receaue not a synner. As for the vngodlye & sinners, he shall receaue ven graunce vnto them, & kepe them to the daye of wyckednes. Geue thou vnto the good, & receaue not the synner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodly. Let not the herte be greued bym, & he be not myghtyer then thy selfe therein. As lo shalte thou receaue as much euil, in all the good that thou doest vnto hym. And why? the hygher hateth synners, and walterwarde vengraunce vnto the vngodly. In prosperite, a frende shall not be knowne & in aduersite an enemye shall not be byd. For when a man is in wealth, it greueth hys enemies, but in heynnes, & trouble a man shall knowe hys frende. Trust neuer thyne enemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth hys wickednes. And though he make much crouching, and knelynge, yet kepe well thy mynde and beware of hym. Get hym not by the nether let him lye at thy ryghte hande lest he turne hym, get into thy place, take thy rowme & take thy seat, & so thou art placed remember my wordes, and be pricked at my saynges.

* Bynd not two synnes together, for there shall not one be unpunished. Who wyll haue pittie of the charmer, that is stunged of the serpent or of all suche as come npe the beasts. Euen so is it wyth him that kepeth company wyth a wycked man, & lappeth him selfe in his synnes. For a season wyll he bide with the, but yf thou som tyme, he sayeth not. * An enemye is swete in his lippes, he can make many good wordes & speake many good thynges: Per, he can weape with his eyes, but in hys herte he ymagyneth, howe to chawbe the into the pyt: & yf he maye find oportynite, he wyll not be satisfied wyth bloude. If aduersite come vpon the, thou shalt fynde him there fyrt and though he paretend to do the helpe, yet shall he vndermyne the. He shall wake hys heade, and clappe hys handes ouer the for verpe gladnesse: and whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall dysguyse hys countenance.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ The companyes of the proude & the ryche are to be shunned. The loue of God, lyke as a charyte wythout spotte.

Who so toucheth pyrch, shall be fylled wythall: and he that is sampliar wyth the proude, shall clothe hym selfe with pyrch. He taketh a burden vnto hym, that accompanieth a more honozable man than him selfe. Therefore haue no samplaryte wyth one that is rycher then thy selfe. Howe agre the keel and the pot together for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other it shall be broken. The ryche dealeth vngodlye, and threateneth wyth all: but the poore beinge oppressed and wronged shal be dealt with all, suffereth scarcenelle, and greueth saye wordes. If thou be for his profyte, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shall forsake the. As longe as thou haue anye thyng of thyne owne he shall be a good felowe wyth the: yea, he shall make the a bare man, and not be soye for the.

If he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: and (with a pryue moche) shall he put the in an hope, and geue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame the in hys meate, vntyl he haue sayte the clauie vnto the pyt of thyng, & at the last shall he laughe the to scorn. Afterwarde, when he seyth that Euerie beaste loueth hys like, euen so let euerie man loue his neyghbour. Al the wyll refeste to the: lyke, and euerie man wil bepe as panpe wyth luche as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth wyth the lambe, so doth the vngodly wyth the ryghteous. * What feloweshyppe shulde an holie man haue wyth a dogge? How can the ryche & the poore ager together? The wyld A le is the lyons praye in f wyldernesse, euen so are prye men f meat of the ryche. Lyke as the proude may not adway wyth lowlynes, euen so do the ryche a boze the poore. If a rich m f al, his frendes let him vp agayne: but when the poore falleth, hys acquayntaice forsake him. If a riche man fal into an croure, he hath many helpers: he speareth poudre wordes, and yet men iustify hym.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is puny shed: yea, though he speake wysse, yet can it haue no place. What the ryche man speareth, euerie man holdeth hys tonge: & looke what he sayeth, they playe it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore m f speake, they saye: What felow is this: & yf he do amysse, they shall bestrope hym. Ryches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in hys conscience, & pouerte is a wyched thinge in the mouthe of the vngodly: The bette of a man chaungeth hys countenance, whether it be in good or euil. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good bette, for elles it is an hearde thynge to knowe the thought.

The xiii. Chapter.

Of the effe of the tongue. When is best a tongue that is kepte in subiect company in wysdomme.

Lest in the man * f haue not fallen in the word of his mouth and is no pyched wyth the countenance of synne. Wapye in be f hath no heymes in hys mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It cometh that a courteous man & a nigate to be rich: & what shulde a nigate do to gallye f wyth all hys carefullnes heareth together veryghterously, gathereth for other folkes, and another man shall make good cheare wyth his goodes: he that is wicket vnto him selfe, howe shuld he be good vnto other m f? howe can there be any pleasure of his goodes? There is nothinge worse, then whē one dissauogeth him selfe: & this is a rewarde of his wychednes. Yf he haue any good he doeth it not knowynge ther of, & agaynst his wyll, & at the laste he declareth his vngreatynesse. A nygarde hath a wyched eye he turneth away hys face, & dyspyseth his owne soule. * A courteous m f eye hath neuer pyngh in the poise of wychednesse, vntill the tyme f he wyth away, & hath loste his owne soule.

A wyched eye spareth bread, & there is scarcen vpo his table. Wy lone do good to thy selfe of f thou hast, & geue the Loyde hys due offerynges. Remember that death tareth not, and howe f the cōuenant of f graue is shewed vnto f, for f cōuenant of thys world that by the death. * Do good vnto thy frend before f dye, & accordyng to thy ablyte reach out thine hande & geue vnto the poore. Be not dysapoynted of f good day & let not f poise of f good day ouerpass f: what f nor leane thy trauals & labour vnto other men? In the deuyng of the perytage geue & take & sanctifye thy soule. Wylche f ryghteousnes before thy death, for in the hell there is no meate to synde. * All flesh shall fade away lyke grasse, & lyke a flozpyng leafe in a grene tree. Some growe, some are caste downe euen so is f generacyō of all fleshe & bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is bozne. All tran sitory thynges that sayle at f laste, & the woche her the of wal go withal. Euerie chosen woche shalbe iustified, & he f medled wythal, shal haue honour therein. Blessed is the man f heperth him in wysdomme, & excretyeth hym selfe in vnderstandyng, & wyth dyscrecyō shal he thynche vpon the forknowledge of God, wyche consy dereth the wayes of wysdomme in his hert hath vnderstandyng in hys secretes, goeth after her (as one f lekerth her oute) and continueth in her wayes. he locher him at her wyndowes, and har hert at her doozes. he taketh his rest besyde her house, and fasteneth his stake in hys walles he shall pytche his tentenpe vnto her hande, & in hys tente shal good thynges reste for euer moare. he shal let his chyldren vnder her coueringe, and shal dwel vnder her byaunches. vnder he couerynge shal he be defended frome the heat, and in her glozpe shal he rest.

The xv. Chapter.

Of the profite that foloweth hym that he stoweth his wealth secretly and cōceyted of the pte. * God is not the father of any.

E f seareth God, wyll do good & and who so heperth the law, shal obtayne wysdomme. As an honorable mother shal he mete him & as a wygyn shal he receaue hym. * Wylth the heade of lyfe and vnderstandyng shal the f d him. * & geue him the water of wholsome wysdomme to drynke, yf he be constant in her, he shal not be not be moved: and if he holde hym selfe false by her, he shall not come to confusion. And shall bringe hym to home amonge his neyghbours, and in the myddell of the congregacyon shall he open his mouthe. With the spere of wysdome and vnderstandyng shall he syl hym, and clothe hym with the garment of gloie. And shall heape the treasure of myrth and loye vpon hym and geue hym an euerlastyng name to heretage. Folythe men wyl not take holde vpon her: but suche as haue vnderstandyng, wyl mete her. (Foolyshe men shall not se her,) for she is farre from wynde and dyscreete. Wher that go aboute whyles, wyl not remembre her: but men of truthe shall be founde in her, and shall prosper euen vnto the beholdyng of God. Wyse is not semely in the mouth of the vngodly, for he is not sent of the Lorde. For of God cometh wysdome, and the wyse shall stande by the wysdome of God, and shall be plenteous in a faythfull mouthe, and the Lorde shall geue her vnto hym.

Saye not thou: it is the Lordes faulte that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thyng that God hateth. Say not thou: he hath caused me to do wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodlye. God hateth al abhominacyon of erroure & they that feare God wyl loue none such. God made man from the begynnyng and lefte hym in the hande of his counsell. He gaue his commaundementes and preceptes: yf thou wylt obserue the commaundementes, & kepe acceptable faythfulness for euer, they shall prelerue the. He hath set water & fyre before the, reache oute thyne hande vnto wyche thou wylt. Before man is lyfe and death, good and euill: loke what hym lyeth, shall be geuen hym. For the wysdome of God is grete and myghtie in power and beholderth all men continually. The eyes of the Lorde are vpon them that feare hym and he knoweth al the woyses of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodlye, neyther hath he geuen any man space to synne.

The xvi. Chapter.

C Of behaue and weches chyldren. No man shal hyde hym selfe from God. An exhortacyon to the vnderstandyng of the creature.

IDdyl not thou in the multitude of vngodlye chyldren, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Truste not to theyr lyfe, & regard not theyr labours for one sonne that feareth God, is better, then a thousande vngodlye. And better is it for a man to dye wythoute chyldren, then to leane beddyne hym suche chyldren as are vngodlye. For by one that hath vnderstandyng, make a whole cytie be upholden, but though the vngodlye be many, yet shall it be blaied thowse them. Many such thynges hath myne eye seene & greater thynges then these haue I hearde w myne eares. In the congregacyon of vngodly shall a fyre burne, & amonge vngodly full people shall the wynd be hyndled.

The olde gyantes optrayned no grace for theyr synnes, which were destroyed, trustyng to theyr owne strengthe. Neither spared he them, amonge whome Loth wyfch was a stranger, but smote them and abhoyred them: because of the payde of theyr woyses. He had no pytye vpon them, but destroyed all the people that were so stout in synne. And for so muche as he overcame the fyre hundred thousande, that gathered them selues together in the hardenelle of theyr herte: it were macuell yf one drynge hardenched, shoulde be fre. For merce and wythe is with him: he is bothe myghtye to forgyue and to powre out dyspleasure. Ape as his merce is grete, euen so is his punishment also. He iudgeh a man accordyng to his woyses. The vngodly shall not escape in his people, and the longe paycyence of hym that he weth merce, shall not byde behynde. Al merce shall make place vnto euery man accordyng to the wythynes of his woyses, and after the vnderstandyng of his pylgrimage.

Saye not thou: I wyl hyde my selfe fro God for who wyl chynche vpon me, fro aboute I shal not be knowe in so great an heape of people, for what is my soule amonge so manye creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee, the heauen of heauens the depe, the earth, and all y therein is shalbe moued at his ptesence, the mountaynes, the dyllies, and the foundacyons of the earth shall shake for feare, when God dyspleth them. These thynges doth no better vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth every hert, and who vnderstandeth his woyses? A man seyth his sonnes, and the moste part of his woyses are secrete. Who wyl declare the woyses of his ryghteousnes? Or who shall be able to abide them? For y conmaune is farre fro some, & tryng out of men is the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon suche thynges: but an vnyse and erronous man casteth his mynde vpon foolyshe thynges.

Of sonne, hearken thou vnto me, & learne vnderstandyng, & merke my woyses wyth thyne herte. I wyl geue the a sure doctryne, & playnly shall I instructe the (make my woyses then in thyne herte: for in ryghteousnes of the spere do I speake of the wonders that God hath shewed amonge his woyses from y begynnyng. And in truth do I the w knowledge of him) God hath set his woyses in good order fro the begynnyng and part of them hath he sundryed from the other he hath garnished his woyses fro euerlastyng and theyr begynnynges accordyng to theyr generations. None of them hyndyeth another, neyther was any of the dyslobedpene vnto his woyses. After this God lohed vpon the earth and fylled it wyth his goodes. Wythal maner of lyuyng beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they shalbe turned vnto earth agayne.

He made al fieshe to stande in awe of him, so that he had the domynion of al the beastes and foules. * He made one of hym a helper to hym selfe, and gaue them by- screepon and tonge, eyes, and eares, and a herte to vnderstande, and fylled them with instructiō and vnderstandynge. He created for them also knowledge of the spere, filled theyr hertes with vnderstandynge, and the seed the good and euell. He set his eye vpon theyr hertes, declaring vnto them his great and noble woorkes: that they shoulde prayse his holy name together: reioyce of his wonders, and be tellynge of his noble actes. * Besyde this he gaue them instruction, and the lawe of lyfe for an heretage.

Geue thou thanks in thy lyfe: yea, while thou arte lyuynge, and whole walke thou geue thanks, and prayse God, and reioyce in his mercy. O howe greate is the louynge kyndnesse of the Lord, and his mercifull goodnesse vnto such as turne vnto hym: For all thynges, maye not be in man: and why? the sonne of man is not immortal and he hath pleasure in the banyshe of wychednesse. What is more cleare then f soune? yet shall it saye. O what is more wyched then the thyng that fieshe & bloude hath ymagined: and that same shalbe rejoyced. The Lord seyth

The xliii. Chapter.

¶ The conuersation of man, the myghte and wyse domes of man. Agayn God ought we not to complaine, f we must be continually.

¶ He lyueth for evermore, * made f all thynges together. God onelye is ryghteous, and remayneth a vpyctuous hyng for ever.

* Who shalbe able to expresse the woorkes of hym? Who wyl seke out the grounde of his noble actes? Who shall declare the power of his graces? O who wyl take vpon hym to tel out his mercede? As for the wonderful woorkes of the Lord, ther maye nothyng be taken from them, nothyng maye be put vnto them, neyther maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath done his best, he must begynne agayn and wyl he thynketh to come to an ende he must go agayne to his laboure. What is man? What to is he woorth? What good or euell can he do? * Of the nombre of a mans dayes be almost an hundred yere it is much.

Lyke as dropes of rayne are vnto the see, & as a grauell stone is in comparyson of the sand:

* So are these fewe yeres to the dayes euertlastynge. Therfore is the Lord pacient with the and poynteth out his mercede vpon the. He saue and perceaueth the thoughtes and ymagynacions of theyr herte, that they were euell, therfore hea- ued he vp his mercifull goodnes vpon the, and thewed the the waye of ryghteousnesse. The mer- cye that a man hath, reacheth to his neyghboure: but the mercy of God is vpon all fieshe. He cha- steneth, he teacheth, and nurroreth: yea, euen as a shepheard turneth agayne his flocke, so dothe he all them that receaue chastenynge, nourtour, and doctryne. * Mercifull is he vnto them, that stande in awe of his iudgements.

¶ My sonne, when thou doest good, make no grudgynge at it: and whatsoeuer thou geuest speake no dyscomfutable woordes. What not the deue coole the deue? euen so is a word better the a gyfte. * Is not a frendlye woorde a good honest gyfte? but a gracious man geueth them bothe. * A foole shall caste a man in the teth, and that roughly, and a gyfte of the nygarde purteth out the eyes. Set f ryghteousnesse before thou come to iudgement. Learne before thou speake, and go to ppysshe or euer thou be syche: * examen & iudge thy selfe, before the iudgemente come, and so shalte thou fynde grace in the syghte of God. Humble thy selfe before thou be syche, & in tyme of thy displease thewe the conuersacion.

* Let not to praye alwaye, and stande not in feare to be reformed vnto deathe, for f rewarde of God endureth for ever. Before thou prayelle prepare thy soule, and be not as one that temp- teth God. Thynke vpon the watchfull indygnacyon that shalbe at the ende, and the houre of vengraunce, wyl he shall turne awaye his face.

* When thou hast ynough remembre the tyme of hunger and when thou art ryche, thynke vpon the pon the tyme of pouertye and scarcenes.

D Frome the morninge vntill the euyngge the tyme is chaunged, and all such thynges are soue done in the syght of God. A wyse man feareth God in all thynges, & in the dayes of transgressyon he kepeth hym selfe from synne. A dyscreete man hath pleasure in wysdomme, & he that synneth her, maketh much of her. They þ have had vnderstandynge, haue dealte wyll in woordes, haue vnderstande the truth and righteoussnes: and haue sought out wyse sentences & iudgements. * Kolo we not thy lustes, but turne þ from thyne owne wyll, for þ thou geuest thy soule her despyes, it shal make thyne enemyes to laugh the to scoone. Take not thy pleasure in greute voluptuousnes, and medie not to muche wyth all. Make not to great chere of the thyng þ thou hast toonne by aduantage, lest thou sale into pouertye, and haue norþynge in thy purse.

The. xix. Chapter.

Wysdomme and vnderstandynge men to pouerte, in the woordes must thou hie dyscrecyon. The dyscrecyon of the wysdomme of God and man, whereby thou mayest knowe what is in man. For recepyon must be used wythout anger.

A Laborynge man that is geuen vn to bronchennesse, shal not be ryche and he that maketh not muche of small thynges, shal fall by lytle & lytle. * Wyne and women make thy men remygates, and put men of vnderstandynge to reproche, and he that companyeth aduounerers, shal become a wycked man. Wothes and woymes shal haue hym to herpage, yee, he shalbe set vp to a great example, and his soule shalbe coted out of the number. * He that is hasty to geue credence is lyghte mynded, & dothe agaynst hym selfe. Wholo reioyseth in wickednes, shalbe punyshed: he that hateth to be reformed: his lyfe shalbe shortened, and he that abhorreth dablynge of woordes, quengeth wikednes. He that offenderth agaynst his owne soule shal repent it: and he that reioyseth in wickednes, shalbe punyshed.

Rebearse not a wycked and churly the word to wyse, and thou shalte not be hyndred. Whewe thy secretes nether to friend nor foe, and yf thou hast offended, tell it not. For þe shal herken vn to the and marke the, and when he findeth oportynite, he shal hate the (and so shal he be alway aboute þ). * Yf thou hast heard a word agaynst thy neyghboure: let it be dede wythin the and belure, thou shalt haue no herme thereby. A sole traunpleth with a word, like as a woman that is payned wyth berynge of a chylde. Lyke as an arrowe shot in a dogges thygh, so is a worde in a foolles herte. * Tell thy frende þys saute least he be ignozant, and saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue spoken: that he do it nomete. Reproue thy neyghboure that he hepe þys tonge, and yf he haue spoken, that he say it no more.

Tell thy neyghboure þys saute, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and geue no credence to euerye worde. A man faller he sometyme wyth þys tonge, but not wyth þys wyll. * For what is he, that hath not offended in þys tonge, geue thy neyghbour warnynge, befoze thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the lawe of the Lorde. The feare of God is all wysdomme, and he that is a lyghteous man, kepeth the law. As for the doctryne of wychebnesse, it is no wysdomme and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wychebnesse and abhomy nacion and blasphemynge of wysdomme. A symple man of smal vnderstandynge: that feareth God is better then one that hath much wysdomme, & transgresseth the lawe of the hyghest, A craftie softe man can be wyse: but he is vnryghteous, and wyth gyftes he wasteth the open and manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humblye, and can duche wyth þys heade, yet is he but a disceuerer wythin he hideth þys face * and dysguyleth it: and because he shuld not be knowen, he pccuentereth the.

And thoughte he be so wreake that he can do þ no harme, yet when he maye kinde oportynite he shal do some euell. A man maye be knowen by his face, and one that hath vnderstandynge maye be perceaued by the looke of þys countenance. * A mans garment, laughter: and going declareth what he is.

Of the correction and repentance. Of the gyfts of the wyse man, and of the soule, & of lynges.

Some man * reproveth þys neyghboure ofte tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some man holdeth his tounge and he is wyse and dyscrete. It is much better to geue warning and to reprove, then to heare euell wyll: for þe that knowlegeth hym selfe openly, shalbe preserved from hurt & destruction. Lyke as when a gelded man thowowe desyre and luste desyleth a mayden, even so is it wyed hym that vseth vpolence: and vnryghteousnes in the lawe. O how good a thyng is it, a man that is reprovod to thewe openly þys repentaunce, for so shal thou escape wyllfull synne.

Somme man kepeth scyencer, and is founde wise, but he that is not ashamed, what he sayth is hateful. Some man holdeth þys tounge, because he hath not the vnderstandynge of the language, and some man kepeth scyencer, wayting a conueniente tyme. * A wyse man wyll holde his tonge tyll he se oportynite, but a wanton & vndyscrete bodye shal regard no tyme. He that vseth many woordes, shal hurte þys owne soule and he that taketh auctoryte vpon him vnryghteouslye, shalbe hated. Some man hath ofre tymes prosperite in wycked thynges, Agayne some man getteth much, and hath harme & losse. There is some gyfte, that is nothyng worthe, Agayne, there is some gyfte, whosere warde is double, Some man getteth a fall for beynge to proude, and some cometh to woorthynesse from lowe estate, Some man byeth much for a lytle pryce, and some must paye for it seven folde.

* A wyse man with his woordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauoure of foolys, shal be poured ouer. The gyfte of the vnwyse shal do the no good, for þys eyes are leuenfold. * He shal geue lytle, and say he geneth much: þe ope neith bys mouthe and retyeth out, as it were one that crieth out wyne. To haue he leueth, in mo-row as he be agayne. And then man is to be hated. The sole sayd I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for al my good dedes: yet, when they fear my bycote, speake no good of me. Whome ofte, of howe many shal he be laughed to scooner he taketh a more perillous fall by such wodes then yf he fell vpon the ground: euen so shal the faller of the wyched men come hastily. In the mouthe of hym that is vntaught: are manye vncoumment and vnnete wordes. A wyle sentence shal not be allowed at the mouthe of the sole, for he speakeh not in due season.

C Some man synneth not because he hath not wider wythall, and in his cast he shalbe stinged.
Some man there is that destroyeth bys owne soule wyth shame, and for an vnwyle bodyes sake destroyeth he it, a wylde accepting of perill shal he vndo hym selfe. Some man promyseth bys frende a gyfte for verie shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for naught. A lye is a wiked shame in a man, yet shal it be euer in the mouthe of the vnwyle. A thet is better, then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they both shal haue de-struccyon to herpytage. The condicions of liers are vnhonest, and their shame is euer wyth the colle, as lyke one y gathereth stoonen in wynter * The congregacion of the vngodly is lyke a stubble gathered together, thet ende is a flamme of fye. The waye of the vngodlye is set wyth stones, but in thet ende is hel, darchenes, and paynes. He that keperh the lawe, wyl holde fast the understandynge therof: and the ende of the fear of God is wyle dome and understandynge. He that is not wyle, wyl not be taughte in good but the vnwyle man aboundeth in wychednes and where bytternes is, there is no understand-ynge. The knowlege of the wyle shal flo we lyke water that renneth ouer, and bys counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

T he herte of a foole is lyke a broken vessel he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of under-standynge heareth a wyle woide: he shal commende it, and make much of it. But yf a volupteous man hear it, he shal haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde bys backe. The talkynge of a foole is lyke an heupe burthen by the waye but to heare a wyle man speake, it is a pleasure.
Where a doubt is in the congregacion, it is asked at the mouthe of the wyle, and they shal ponder bys wordes in their hertes. Like as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wyle dome vnto to a sole. As for the knowlege of y vnwyle, it is but darche wo: des. Doctryne is vnto hym that hath no understandynge, euen as letters about his fete, and like manicles vpon his right hand * A sole listeth up his voyce with laughter, but a wyle man shal scarce laugh secretly.

Learnynge is vnto a wyle man a Jewell of golde, and lyke an armelet vpon bys ryghte arme. A folthe mans fote is lone in his neyghboures house, but one that hath experyence, shal be named at the perion of the mightie.
A sole wil pepe in at the window into the house, but he that is wel nourtered, wyl stand wyth out. A folthe man standeth berkenyng at the doze, but he that is wyle wyl be ashamed.

T he types of the vnwyle wil be tellinge so like thynges, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstanding, shalbe wayed in the balauce. The best of soles is in their mouthe, but the mouthe of the wyle is their hert. When the vngodlye cur-seth the blasphemers he curseth bys owne soule.
* A pryue accuser of other men shal despyle his owne soule, and be hated of every man: (but he that heperh his tonge and is discrete, shal come to honoure)

The. xxii. Chapter.

C The purgacion of the flesh. Of the soules that haue haunted, we must haue byscarpous holme and so we must we ought to praye, of forsyngynge vpon the deade. A foole do not so he maye rather in hel. Synners, and the synners do bycote synners synners and synners.

Slothfull bodye is moulded of a stone of claye, and every man wyl speake to bys dyspayle. A slothful bodye is made of the donge of oxen and euery one that toucheth hym mult maketh bys handes agayn. A mynistered sonne is the bysonous of the father. A soolye daughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she p cometh to dishonour, bringeth her father in derisyon. A daughter that is pale shame, dishonoureth both her father and her husband, the vngodly that regard her, but they both that dispyle her. The playng of musycke is not mete vnder heuyn: such is such correction & doctrine of wisdom euer vnpleasunt vnto foolys.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that cleweth a porcherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that prayeth hym not, and as one that rayleth a man out of an heuyn slepe.

Who so telleth a foole of wysedome, is euen as a man, which speaketh to one that is a slepe. Wylde he hath tolde his tale, he saith: what is þ matter? When one dieth, lamentacion is made for hym: because the lyght fayleth hym, euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandyng. Make but lytle weeping because of the dead: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is worse then the death. Seuen daies doo men mourne for hym that is dead, but þ lamentacion ouer the vnyse & vngodly shal endure all the dayes of the lyfe.

Talke not muche with a foole, and goo not with hym þ hath no vnderstandyng. Beware of hym lest it turne the to transyle, and thou shalte not be despoiled with his synne. Departe from hym, and thou shalte fynde reste and shalt not be dysauwen backe into his foolishnes. What is heuyn then leade? And what shulde a foole be called elles but leade? * Wande, salte, and a lumpe of yron is easie to beate, the an vnwise fooly the, and vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of woode bound together in the foundacyon of the house cannot be lowed, euen so is it wylde þ herte that is stablished in the thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse shal nethef feare nor be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayer plastered wall in a wynter house, and an hye dupleynge, maye not abyde the wynde and storme: euen so is a foolys herte straped in his ymaginacion, he feareth at euery thyng, and can not endure. (A wauerynge hert in the ymaginacion of a foole wyl not euer stand in a we, but he that abideth in the commaundementes of God, wyl alway feare.) He þ nypeth a mans eye byngeth for teares, and he that ppyeth the harte, byngeth for the meynyng and thought. Who so casteth a stone at þ bydes frayeth them away: and he that blasphemeth his frende, breaketh the frende wyppye though thou dywest a sword at thy frend yet dispaire not, for thou mayst come again to thy frende. If he speake lowly, feare not for ye maye be agreed together again, excepte it be þ thou blasphemest hym, disdain hym, open his secretes and wound hym trayterously for al such thynges shal depue away a frende.

See saythfull vnto thy neyghboure in his pauertie, that thou maist reioyce with hym also in his prosperite. Abide stedfast vnto hym in the tyme of his trouble, that þ maist be hepye with hym in his heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the oven before the fyre euen so euill doyns, rebukes and threatenynge go before bloudsheddyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyl not tude my face fro hym though he shulde do me harme. Who soeuer heareth it shal beware of hym.

* Who shal set a watch before my mouth and a sure seale vpon my lippes, þ I fall not with them, and that my tonge destroy me not?

The xxii. Chapter.

It praye againste synne, lecherie, a glotony. Of aches, Mallice, and vnyse, and of the synne of pryde. Of the synne of envye. Of the synne of covetyse. Of the synne of wrath.

Lord, father and goneroure of my lyfe, leaue me not in the ymaginacion and counsell. O let me not fall in suche reprofe. Who wyl kepe my thought with the scourge, & the doctrine of wisdom in myne herte: that he spare not myne ygnorance, þ I fall not with them lest myne ygnorances increafe, that myne offences be not many in number, and that my synnes excede not. lest I fall before myne enemies and so my aduersary reioyse. O Lorde: thou father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in the ymaginacion. O let me not haue a proude looke but turne awaye all volupcieousnesse from me. Take from me the lustes of þ body, let not þ desires of vncleannes take hold vpon me, & geue me not ouer into an vnchamefast & obstinat minde.

Hear me (O pechydien) I wyl geue you a doctrine, howe you shal order your mouth who so kepeth it, shal not perpe the thow his lippes, nor be hurte thow he wyched wordes. As for the synner, he shalbe taken in his owne vanytie: he that is proude and cursed, shal fall therein. * Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearynge, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namyng of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not with the names of sainctes, for thou shalte not be excused of them) for lyke as a seruaunt which is ofte punished cannot be wythoute some foote, euen so what to euer he be that sweareth & nameth God shal not be cleane pouged from synne: A man þ vseth muche swearynge, shalbe fylled with wychednes, and the plage shal neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon hym, if he knowlage not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and if he sweare in dayne, he shal not be found ryghteous: for his house shal be full of plagis.

* The wordes of þ sweare byngeth deeth (God graunte þ it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschewe all such, and lye not welterynge in synne. * Ale not thy mouth to vnyse and flychyd talking, for in it is þ word of synne. Remember why father & thy mother when thou arte set among greafe men: lest God forget the in the ymaginacion lest thou doynge in thy custome suffer a hurt, and wythe not to haue bene doynge so curse the day of thy natyuite. * The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemie, wyl neuer be reformed all the dayes of his lyfe. twyfe is to much, but the third bringeth forth a destruction. In hys house he cannot be ched: euen lyke a burning fire, for he hath loved up some thing: euen so an hypocrite man hath no rest in his fleshe, till he haue kindled a fire.

D All hynde is swete to an whozmonger, he wyl not leaue of tyl he haue his purpose. And that whereth we blacke, and regardeth not his soule, but saith: * Tyme, who seyth me: I am compassed about with barchene, the walled couer me, no bodie seyth me: whome nebe I to fear: The bigdest wyl not remembre my syn-nes. He vnderstandeth not that hye seeth all thynges, for all such feare of men dotheth away the feare of God from hym: for he feareth only the eyes of men, and considereth not yf the eyes of the Lorde are clere then the sunne, behol-dyng all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokyng euen to mens hertes in secret places. The Lorde God hiewe all thynges as euer they wer made, & after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon the all. * The same man shal be openly punished in the stretes of Ierusalem: and shal be chased ab:ade lyke a younge horse foale: and when he thynketh leaue vpon it, he shal be takē. Thus shal he be put to shame of every man, because he wolde not vnderstand the feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it gooe also with euery wyfe, that leaueh her husband and getteth enberptaunce by a strange mariage. * Kythe she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the hyghest. Secondly, she hath forsaken her owne husband. Thirdly, she hath playde the whoze in aduouerie, and gotten her chylidren by an other man. She shal be brought oute of the congregacion, and her chylidren shal be lohed vpon. Her chylidren shal not take roote and as for frute, her braches shal byng forth none. I shamefull reposit: that she leaue behynd her, and her dishonoure shal not be put oute.
And they that remaine, shal know that there is nothing better then the feare of God: and yf there is nothing sweeter then to take hede vnto the commandmentes of the Lorde. A great wo: wyffe is to folow the Lorde, for longe lyfe shal be receyued of hym.

The xxiii. Chapter.

*A parable of wysdome pryncyng forth of the mouth of God.
As the water and yf. as the water and yf.*

Wysdome shall praysie her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the myddelste of hye people: In the congregacions of the hyghest shal she open her mouth, and reioyce in the beholdyng of his power: In the myddelste of her people shal she be exalted and wondred at in the holysynesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shal be commended, and among such as he blessed she shal be praysed, and shal saye: I am come oute of the mouth of the hyghest, I prayse hym before all creatures. I cauled the lyght that sapiereth not to arys in the heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloude, My dwelling is about in the hegyth, and my seate is in fpyllet of fcloude. I my self alone haue gone round aboute the compass of heauen and praised the grounde of the depe: I haue walked in the flo-des of the sea, and haue stande in all landes: my dominyon is in euery people and in euery na-yon, and with my power haue I troden downe fdestes of all, both hye and low.

In all these thynges also I soughte reste, and a dwellyng in some enberptaunce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a commandemente: and he that made me, appointed me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwellyng be in Jacob, and thyne enberptaunce in Israel, and roote thy selfe among my chosen. * I was created from the begynnyng, and before the woylde, and shal not leaue of vnto the woylde to come. * In the holpe habitacon haue I ser-ued before hym, and so was I stablished in Gion. * In the holpe cytie rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalem was my power: I tooke rote in an honourable people euen in the pozepon of the Lorde and in his heretage, and heper me in the fulnes of the Saintes. I am set vpon an hye lyke a Cedar vpon Libanus, and as a Cypress tree, vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke as a Palme tree in Cadex, and as a Rose plante in Jericho. As a saye Olive tree in the feld, & am exalted lyke as a Plantayn tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes, as the Cynamon and I am me, that hath so good a saoure: yea, a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrr of the beste.

I haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of Rosen, Galbanum, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not betwen downe, and my odoure is as the pure Salme.
As the Cypres haue I stretched out my brach-es, and my braches are the braches of ho-noure and longyng saoure. * As the vyne haue I brought forth frute of swete saoure and my floures are the frute of honour and yf-ches. I am yf mother of bewtie, of loue, of feare, of knowlage, and of holy hope. * In me is all grace and lyfe and truthe. In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue.

O come vnto me all ye that be despyzed of me, and fyll yowr selues with my frutes: for my spyrte is swete then honye: & so is myne en-berptaunce more then the honye combe: the re-berptaunce of me endureth for euer moare. They that eate me, shal haue the moare hunger, and they that drynke me, shal thyrste the moare.
Whoso berkeneth vnto me shal not come to offense. They that make me to be knowen, shal haue euertalpyng lyfe. R

All these thynges are the booke of lyfe, the couenante of the hyghest, and the knowlage of the truthe. * Moses commaunded the law in the preceptes of ryghteousnesse for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and committed the promys-ses vnto Israel. * Oute of Dauid his seruante he ordeined to rayse up a moare myghty kyng spyrtyng in the seate of honour for euer moze.

* This spyllet with wysdome lyke as the floud of Bysson, and as the floud of Euphras, when the new fruytes are growynge.

Thys byngeth a plenteous understandyng lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp, as Jordane in the tyme of haruett. This maketh nurture to breake forth as the lyght, and as the water Sydon in the haruett. The lyght hath not known her perfectye, no more shall the laste seke oute the grounde of her. For her thoughte is fuller then the sea, & her counsell is p[ro]founder then the greates deepe.

I wyse dome haue caste oute floudes. I am as a great waterbooke oute of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Doxer, and as a water condite am I come oute of the garden of pleasure. I sayde I wyll water the garden of my ponge plantes and tyl p[ro]fue of my birth: So my waterbooke became excedyng greates, and my ryuer appo-ched vnto p[ro]fue. For I make doctryne to be vnto all men as lyght: as p[ro]fue moorning, & I shall make it to be euer p[ro]fuer. I wil peace thow to all the lower partes of the earth. I wyll loke vpon all suche as be a slepe, and lighten al them that put theyr truste in the Loyde. I shall perpore out doctryne, lyke as p[ro]phecy & leaue it vnto suche as seke after wysdome, & their generacyons shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holly uerlastyng worlde. * Beholde how that I haue not laboured for my selfe only, but for all them that seke after the treuth.

The xxv. Chapter.

Of those thynges which please God, and of those which be harmful. Of those thynges that be not to be suspect: and of the treth, chiefly of the malice of a woman.

Ihye thynges there are, & my spierite fauoureth, whiche be also alowed before God and men. * The vnyte of byethen & floue of neyghbours, * a man and wife & agreeeth wel together. These thynges there be whiche my soule hateth, & I utterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A pooze man is p[ro]uide. A rich man that is a ly-er, and an olde body & doctryne, and is vnchaste.
If thou hast gatred nothing in thy yowth what wilt thou fynde the in thine age? How pleasunt a thyng is it when greye headed men are discrete, and when the elders can geue good counsaile? How comelie a thyng is wysedome vnto aged men: pea, understandyng and counsell is a gloriouse thyng. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience & the feare of God in theyr wysewyse.

There be nyne thynges, whiche I haue indged in myne herte to be happye, and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tongue. I man that wyll be lyuer, hath hope of his children, and seyth the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an houswyfe of understandyng, * and that hath not fallen with his tongue, and that hath not bene faine to serue such as are vnnete for hym. Well is hym, that syn-deth a faythfull frende: and well is hym, which talketh of wysdome to an eare & heareth hym.
Of some greates is he, that syndeyth wysdome & knowlidge: Pet is he not aboue hym, & feareth the Loyde. The feare of God hath set it selfe above all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto who it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shall he be lykened, & heareth it fast: The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue and the begynnyng of faith is to cleane fast vnto it.

The heynesse of the herte is all the punishmet and the wickednes of a woman goth a boue al All punishment and plage is nothyng in comparyson of the plage of the herte, euen so all wickednes is nothyng, to the wickednes of a woman.

Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a man is nothyng in comparison of it, that his euell wyflers do vnto hym: & all vengeance is nothyng to the vengeance of thyn enemye.

There is not a more wyched head then the head of the serpent, and there is no wyath a boue the wyath of a woman. * I wyll rather dwel with a Lyon and Dragon, then to kepe house with a wyched wyfe. The wychednesse of a woman chaungeh her face, she shall mustie her countenaunce as it were a beare, & as a sacke shall she dewe it among the neyghbours. Her husband is brought to shame among his neyghbours & when he heareth it, it maketh hym to sygh. All wickednes is but lytle to p[ro]fue wickednes of a woman, & porcion of p[ro]fue godly shall fall vpon her.

Lyke as to clime vp a sandy way is to p[ro]fue of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a styl quyet man. * Loke not to narrowly vpon the bewtye of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desire toward her. The wyath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusyon. If a woman get the mastery, then is she contrary to her husband. A wicked wyfe maketh a sozr herte, an he-nye countenaunce, and a deeth wound. * Weake handes and feeble knees is a woman & her husband is not the better for. Of p[ro]fue woman came the begynnyng of synne: and thow to her we all are ded. Seue thy water no passage, no not a litle: neith her geue a wyched woman her wyll. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confound the in the syght of thine enemyes. Cut her of the from thy flesh & she do not alway abuse the.

The xxvi. Chapter.

The praise of a good woman. Of the feare of these thynges, & of the faulte of the lecherous and warden woman. Of those thynges that can be feared, & of the thirde which is moost worthy.

A pype is the man that hath a verteous wyfe, for the nombze of his peres shall be double. An honest woman maketh her houshald a ioyful man, and she shall fyll the peres of his life in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyfte whiche shall be geuen for a good porcion vnto suche as feare god: Whether a ma be rich or pooze he maye haue euer a merie herte, and a cherefull countenaunce. There be the thynges that my herte feareth, & my fact is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a cytle, a sedycious people, and noisome tonges, all these are deuy-er then death. But when one is gelous ouer his wyfe, it byngeth payne and sozowe vnto the herte and a woman & telleth out all thynges, is a scourge of the tongue. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is as when an vnlyke paye of Oxen muste

Woman must dye together, & he that getteth her getteth a doxion. A broken woman is a great plague, for she can not cover her shame.

The whoredome of a woman maye bee knowne in the wyde of her eyes and eyeliddes. * If thy daughter be not chaste, holde her strait lye, lest she abuse her selfe & shewe ouer much lybertie. Beware of all the dishonestie of her eyes: and maruaile not if she doo agaynst the Lyke as one that goeth by the waye, & is chaste. So shall she open her mouth, and synke of euery nexte water that she maye get.

By euery hedge shall she synke downe, and open her quiver agaynst euery arrowe. A loyngye wyfe reioyseth her husbnde, and seeth his bones with her wysdom. A woman of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, & to all wel nurtered myndes maye nothing be compared.

An honest an manerly woman is a gyfte & bone other gyftes, and there is no weight to be compared unto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it ariseth, is an ornament in the vyrgbe beauen of the Lozde, so is a vertuous wife the betwile of al her house. Lyke as the clere lycht is vpon a holy candlestye, so is the betwile of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pylers are vpon a fetheres of spluer: so are the laye legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetuall are the foundacions that be layde vpon an hole stonpe rocke. * These are the comaundementes of God vpon a woman of an holy woman.

There be foure thynges that geue myn herte and the thynde is a displeasure come vpon me. When an experie man of warre suffereth scarcen and pouerty. When men of vnderstanding and wysdome are not set by: And when one departed from ryghteousnesse vnto synne. Who so doth such, the Lozde hath prepared hym vnto the swearde. There be two maner of thynges, whiche me thynke to be harde and parlous. A marchaunte cannot lychtlye kepe hym frome wzong, neither a fauener hym selfe from syn.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Of the good that maye be by the. The probacion of the man that is trulye God. The vncomfartines of a foole. The secretes of reuelen, are not to be secreted. The which pynagyneth quell whiche sheweth vpon hym selfe.

Because of pouertye haue manye one offended: & he that seeketh to be ryche turneth hye eyes asyde. Lyke as a nayle in the walle synketh faste betwixte two stones, then so dooth synne synke betwixte the buyer and the seller. If he holde hym not diligentely in the feare of the Lozde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one synketh, the synne synne remaneth in the syue: so remaneth there some vncleane thing in the thought of man. The ouer prouery the potters vessel. * So doth temptation of troublous ryghteous men. * The fee of the selde is knowne by his frute, so is the thought of mans herte knowne by his wordes. Whaple no man excepte thou haue heard hym, for a man is knowne by his wordes. If followed ryghteounes, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon the as a saye garment. And shall dwell with her, and she shall defende the for euer: and in the daye of knowlage thou shalt finde stedfastnesse. The birdes escape vnto theyr lyke: so doth the truth turne vnto them that be occupied therewithall. The lyon wayteth the praye: so doth the synners lurke vpon the woichers of wychednesse. The talkyng of hym that feareth God, is nothing but wysdome: as for a foole he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be among the vndiscrete, kepe thy wordes vntill a conuenient tyme, but amonge such as be wyse, speake on hardelpe. The talkyng of foolles is abhominacion, and theyr spozte is voluptuousnesse and mysynsture. * Muche swearing maketh the herte to stande vpon: and to styue with such stopper the eares.

The styfe of the proude is bloudesthedding and their blaspheming is deap to heare. * Who so discovereth secretes, leseth his credence, and synketh no frend after his wyll. Loue thy frend and hynde thy selfe in saythfulnesse with hym: but if thou betrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get hym agayne. For lyke as the man is destroyed by his enemye: so is he also that dealeth falsely in the frendshipp of his neighbour.

Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go oute of his hande, cannot take her again: Euen so thou if thou geue ouer thy frende, thou canst not gette hym agayne. Yea, thou canst not come by hym: for he is to farr of. He is vnto the as a Roo escaped oute of the snare, for hym soule is wounded. As for woundes, they may be reconcyled: but whoso betrayeth a secret of a frend, there is no more hope to be had vnto hym.

* He that wynneth with feyes, pynagyneth some euell, and no man shall take hym from it. When a arte present he shall byghly comende and praysse thy wordes: but at the laste he shall turne his tale, and slaunde thy sayng. Many thynges haue I hated, but not hyng so euell, for the Lozde hym selfe also abhorreth luche a one.

* Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon his owne head: and he that synketh with gyle, woundeth hym selfe: who so diggeth a pit shall fall therein: & he that slayeth a man, shall be slayd by a man. * Who so geueth a wyched counsaile, it shall come vpon hym selfe, & he shall not knowe from whence: The proude blasphemers and are scornfull, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a lyon. They perishe at the fall of the ryghteous, shall be taken in the snare: anguythe of herte shall consume them before they dye. Anger and rigourousnesse are two abhominable thynges, & the vngodlye hath them both vpon hym.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Of the ought not to be secreted, but to be kept the of. The ought not to be secreted, but to be kept the of.

* That seeth vengeaunce, shall synke in vengeaunce of the Lozde, whiche shall synke hym by his synne.

Forger

Angue thy neyghbour the hurt that he doo doe to the, and so shall thy synnes be forgiven the also, when thou prayest. A man þ beareth hatred agaynste another, howe dare he desyre forgiuenselle of God? he that theteth no merr ye to a man which is lyke hym selfe, how dare he aske forgiveness of vs synners? Þ he that abuseth helthe, beareth hatred and kepe it, who will intercede for his synnes? Remember þ end and lette enemyes passe, whiche sekerh deathe and destruction. and abyde thou in the commaund mentes. Remember the commaundementes for thei thou not bee ppgorous ouer thy neygh bour. Thynde vpon the couenaunt of þ high and forgeat the neighbours ygnorance & Beware of stryfe and thou shalte make thy ryuance, and the vngodlye disquieteth frendes and putteth discorde among them yf be at peace & The moze wood there is: the moze vehement is the fyer, and the myghtyer ymen be, the greater is the wrath, and the longer the stryfe endu-reth, the moze it burneth.

In halfe bzauyng kyndlerd a fyre, and an halfe keppe theder bloude. A tonge also that breath falle wytnes byngneth death. If thou blow the sparke, it shall burne. If p'spyr vpon it, it shall go forth: & both these out of th' mouth

The slaunederer and double tongued is cursed, for many one þ bee frendes settet to be at vary-nance. The thye de tonge hath disquetered many one, and dyspuch them from one lande to another. Stronge cyties of the ryche hath it brokē downe, and ourtthrowen the houses of greate men. (The strengthe of þ people hath it brought downe, and bene the decaye of mygthy nacions.
 The thye de tongue hath caste out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours.
 Whoso berkeneth vnto luche, shall neuer fynde reite, and neuer dwell safelpe. The stroke of the rodde maketh adders, but the stroke of þ tonge smyteth the bones in sonder. There be many þ pion, & the bande of it of stele. The death ther of is a very euell death hell were better for one then suchē a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not opprelle them that feare God. And the flamme thereof may not burne them. Suche as for sake the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be hable to quenchē it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, & deuourē them as a leopard. Thou bridgest thy goodes wth thoz nes, why doest thou not rather make doores and barres for thy mouth: Thou wapest thy golde and sinter, why doest thou not wape the wo des also vpon thy balauce? Beware that thou dree not in thy tonge, & so fall besyde thine en emyes, that laye wayes for the, (and thy fall bee incurable, euen vnto death.)

Chapter.

Of those who ought to love our money, I be already. Of a faithful servant and a loving friend. Of a mother and a brother.

Who so will be the mercye * let hym lende vnto hys neyghbour : and he that is able, let hym kepe the commaundemet. Lend vnto thy neygh-bour in tyme of his neede, and pay thou thy neyghbour again in due season. Kepe thy word, and deale faithfully with hym, and thou shalt alwaye fynde the thyng that is ne-cessarpe for the. There haue bene manye, that when a thyng was lente them, rehersed it to be founde, and made them trauaile and labour that had helped them. Whyle they receiue any thyng, they kysse the handes of suche as geue them, for theyr neyghbours good they humble theyr voyce. But when they shoulde pay again they kepe it backe, and geue euell wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the tyme : and though he be able, yet groweth he scarce the halfe again, and rehersed yf other to be found. And if he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemye of hym, and that vnderseed.

He pateth hym with curling and rebuke and getteth hym euell wordes for hys good dede.

¶ There be manye one which: are not glad for to lende, nor because of euell, but they feare to lese the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacyence with the simple, and withholde not mercy from hym. helpe the poore for the commaunde-mentes sake, & let hym not go emptye, from y<sup>e</sup> because of his necessite. Lese thy money for thy honor and neyghbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth

* Gather thy treasure after the commaundement of the hyghesse, and so shall it buyng the more profite then golde: 2 Laye vnto al melle in the hande of the poore, and it shall hepe the from all euill.

* A mans almshouse is as a pottle with hyem, & shall kepe a mans fauour as the apple of an eye and after ward shall it acise and pay eury man his rewarde vpon his head. It shall fight for the agaynst rhyne enemies, better then y<sup>e</sup> child of a gyant, or speare of the mightye.

A good honest man is suretye for his neygh-bour, but a wycked person letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshyppe of thy sure-tye, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodly bespyeth a good dede of his suretye and the vnrhankfull and vngodly aunte leaureth bys suretye in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghboure: and when he hath losse his honesty he shall forsake hym. Suretyeshyppe hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as the waues of the sea. Wyttyr people hath it diuyn a waye, and caused them to wander in straunge countries. An vngodly man trafgressing the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall into the suretyeshyppe: and though he force hym selfe to get oute, yet shall he fall into the iudgement. Helpe thy neyghboure out after thy power: and be ware, that thou thy selfe fall not in such dette. * The chiefe thing that hepereth in thy lyfe, is water, and byade, clothing, and lodging.

nyng & is wel at ease in him selfe. But an vnstable eater slepeth vnquietly, & hath ach & payne of the body. If thou fealest & thou hast eaten to much aryle, go thy way, cast it out of thy stomach, & take thy rest: and it shall ease the, so thou shalt bypasse no sicknesse vnto thy body.

My sonne, heare me, and dyspyle me not, and at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue tolde the. * In all thy woikes be dysligent and quicke so that there no speakes happē vnto the. * Who so is lyberall in dealyng oute his meate many men shall blesse hym, and prayse hym with their lyppes: and the same is a sure token of hys loue and faythfulnesse. But he that is vnfaithful in meate, the hole cyrpe shall complayne of him: & that is a sure experyence of hys infydelitee and wickednesse. * He not thou a wyne bybber, for wyne hath destroyed manye a man. The fyre proueth the harde piron, eue so doth wyne proue the hettes of the proude, when they be djonken.

* Wyne soberly djonken, quycheneth the lyfe of man. If thou dunchest it measurably, & thalt be temperate. What lyfe is it that maye continue without wyne? What taketh away lyfe: euen death. Wyne was made from the begynnyng to make men glad, & not for djonkennes. Wyne mesurably djonken is a reuoluyng of the soule & body. (A mesurable djonkyng is delith to soule & body.) But yf it be djonke with excesse, it maketh bytternesse and sojow vnto mynde. Djonkennes filleth the mynde of the solyste with shame & ruyne, minisheth & strength and maketh woordes. * Rebuke not thy neygh-boure at the wyne, and dyspyle hym not in hys myrthe. Seue hym no dyspylefull woordes, and please not vpon hym with contrary sayynges.

¶ The xxxii. Chapter.

¶ Of the excellencye and prayse of the preacher, and of the honour whiche he shal receyue, and of the honour whiche he shal receyue, and of the honour whiche he shal receyue.

Yf thou be made a Ruler, & prouide not thy selfe therein, but be thou, as one of the people. * Take dysligente care for them and looke well thereto: and when thou hast done al thy dueye, set & downe, that thou mayest be mercy to thy them, and receiue a crowne of honour. Take wysely and honestly, for wysedome becommeth the eyghte well. hyndre not myslyke. Speake not, where there is no audience: & pouer not forth wyldome oute of tyme, at an inoportune. Lyke as the Carbuncle stone which is set in golde so dothe a longe garneyne the wyne fraile: and as the Amaraube that is set in golde, so is the sweetnesse of wyslyke, by the myrthe of wyne.
(Seue care and be still, and for thy good behauour thou shalt be loued.)

Thou yonge man speake that becommeth the, and that is profitable, and yet scarce when thou art wyse asked. Comprehende muche with fewe woordes. In manye thynges be as one that is ignorant: geue care and holde thy tongue wall. If thou be amonge men of hyer auctorytie, desyre not to compare thy selfe vnto them: and when a wylde speake, make not thou manye woordes therin. Beside the thunder goeth high stormyng, and before murtour and shamefullnes goeth longe and sauoure. Stande by by tymes, and be not the last: but get the home soone and there take thy pastyme, and do what thou wilt so & thou do none euill, and desyre no man: but for all thynges geue thanckes vnto hym that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

Who so feareth the Lorde, wyll receaue his doctryne: and they that get them to him by tymes, shall fynde grace, he that seeth the lawe, shal be fylled wth all: As for hym that is but sayned, he wyll be offended therat. They that feare the Lorde shall fynde the iudgement and their righteousnesse shall be kindied as a lychte.
An vngodlye man wyll not be reformed, but can helpe him selfe with the example of other in hys purpose. A man of vnderstandyng dyspiseth no good counsayl: but a wylde and proude bodye hath no feare. (See, euen when he hath dealt rashlye with another man, but his owne dopnges shall be hys rebuke.) My sonne do nothyng without aduysment, so shall it not re-pente the after the dede. Sonot in y way where thou mayest fal, nor wher thou maist stumbe agaynst the stone. Seue not thy selfe into a labozyous slippery waye, and be ware of thy children, (and take heed of them that be thine owne householde.) In all thy woikes put thy trust in God, fro thy whole hert, for that is the keepyng of the comandementes. Who so beleueth God-des woide taketh heade to the comandemen-tes: and he that puereth hys trust in the Lorde, shall want nothyng.

¶ The xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ The excellencye of him that feareth God. The excellencye of the wyse. The lyke excellencye of a soule, which is in the hande of God: the which is in the hande of the potter. Who ought not to dyspyle oure felicitye to become subiecte to ordes.

Where shall no euyl happen vnto him that feareth God: but when he is in temptacion, the Lorde shall helpe him, and kepe him from euil. A wylde man hateth not the law, but an hypocrite is as a ship in ragyng water. A man of vnderstandyng gyueth credence vnto the lawe of God, & the lawe is faythful vnto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke thereof. Be wysely wel instructe, then mayest thou geue answer. The hert of the folyshe is lyke a cartewhele: and his thoughtes runne aboue lyke an axel tree. Lyke as a wild horse that neith vnder every one that sitteth vpo him, so is it with a scornful frende.
Why doth one daye excell an other, seynge all the dayes of the yere come of the Sonne? The wisdom of the Lorde hath so parted them a son-dye, and so hath he ordeyned the tymes, & solemne feastes. Some of them hath he chosen & halowed before other daies. And al men are made of the grounde, and out of the earth of Adam.
In the multitude of science hath the Lorde sondyed them, and made theyr wayes of diuers fas-syons. Some of the hath he blessed, made much of them, halowed them, & claymed them to hym selfe. But some of them hath he cursed, byonghe neede of hym, as of thy selfe. If thou intreat hym euell, and hepest hym hearde, and makeste hym that fraye God. By dreames we knowe of men. God best not allowe the woiches of an vngodlyfull man.*

I A wyse people begyle the selues with vayne and disceitful hope, and sooles the in dreames. Whoso regardeth dreames, is lyke hym that wyl take hold of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde. Eue so is it with the apperynges of dreames. Befoz the face, is the lyknes of a face. Whoso can beelfed of the vncleane: O what truch can be spoken of a lyer. Dorchayng, witchhafte, sozcerye and dreampnge is but vanite: lyke as toben a woman traueleth with chylde, and hath many fantasies in her herte. Wher as such vylpous come not of God, let not thine herte vpon them.

For dreames haue dysceined many a man, and fayled them that put theyr trust therein.

The lawe shalbe fulfilled wylhout lyes, & and wysdome is sufficient to a saythful mouth.
What knowledg hath he that is not tried? A wise man & is wel instruct, vnderstandeth much, & he that hath good experyence can talke of wysdome.
He that hath good experyence knoweth lyfe, and he that erret, causeth much wychednesse. He is not tryed, what thynges knoweth he? Whoso foloweth no rule is full of wychednesse.

Whil I was yet in erreour, I learned muche also: yee, I was solearned & I could not expresse it all, and came ofte in perill of death therfoze, till I was deliuered from it: thozowe the grace of God. Howe I se, that they which feare God haue the right spete: for their hope standeth in him, & can helpe them. And the eyes of the Lord are on them, that loue hym. Whoso feareth the Lord standeth in a we of no man, and is not a-frayed for the Lord in his hope and comfort.

Blessed is the soule of hym that feareth the Lord: In whome putteth he is truste. Whoso is his strenght: & for & eles of the Lord haue respect vnto them, that loue him. He is their might-ie protection, & strong grounde. A defence so the heat, a refuge for the hote noone daye, a suc-coure for sombyng, and an helpe for falling.
He setteth vp the soule and lighteneth the eyes.
He geueth lyfe, and blessing. He that geueth an offeryng of vnrpghtous goodes, hym offeryng is refused: and the scozefull dealing of the vnrpghtous please not God. The Lord is theyr only, that paciently abide him in the way of the trithe, and of rpghtousnesse. The hyest dothe not alowe & gyftes of the wicked. And*, God hath no deute in the offeringes of the vngodlye neither maye synne be reconspied in the multitude of oblations. Whoso byngeth an offeryng out of the goodes of & poodre, doth euen as one hylyeth the sonne, before the fathers eyes.

The head of the nedefull is the lyfe of the poodre: he & defraudeth hym thereof, is a man of bloude. Whoso robberth hym neyghboure of hym liuing, doth as great sin as though he slew him to death. * He & defraudeth the labourer of hym hyre, is a bloude shedder. When one buyldeth another bachelth downe, what profit haue they the but labour? Whil one praiseth & another cur-seth, whose voyce wyl the Lord heare? * He & waldeth him self because of a deed body, & toucheth the deed agayne, what doeth hym wailynge? * So is it with a man that setteth for hym synnes, & doeth them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer?
O what doeth hym fastynge helpe hym?

¶ The xxxv. Chapter.

It is well borne to praye, and to be sacrificer. The prayse of sacrifices, and of the wyddowes: and hym that humbled hym selfe.

Whoso keepeth the lawe & byngeth offeringes ynough. He & holdeth fast the commandement, offereth the rpght healt offering. He that is thankfull & recompenseth, offereth hyne flour. * Whoso is merciful and geueth almes, that is the rpght thanke

franch offeringe. God hath pleasure when one be parteth from sinne, and to forsahe vnyghte culnes, reconcyleth vs wth hym.

* Thou shalt not appeare empty before the Lord, for all such is done because of the commandemente of God. * The offeringe of the ryghteous maketh the aulier fat, and a sweete smell is it before the highdest. The offeringe of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto God: and shall neuer be forgotten. Gueve God his honoure with a chearfull herte, and kepe not backe the fruytles of thy handes. * In all thy gyftes be we a merciful countenance, and halowe thy thyngs vnto God with gladnesse. Gueve vnto God accordinge as he hath enriched and prospered the: and looke what thyne hand is able, geue with a chearfull eye: for the Lord recompenseth, and geueth the seven tymes as muche agayne.

* Gueve no vnyghteous gyftes, for such wyl be not receaue. Beware of wongfull offeringes, for the Lord is a ryghteous Judge: and regardeth no mans person: he accepteth not the prayer of the pooze: but he heareth the prayer of the oppressed. * He dyspyseth not the dryp of the fatherles, nor the wyddow, when she poureth out her prayer before him. Forth not God se the teares, that rine downe the chekes of the wyddow: Or heareth he not the complaynte ouer such as make her to wepe? For from her chekes do the teares go vp vnto heauen, and the Lord which heareth the doth accepte them. Whoso serueth God after his pleasur, shall be accepted: and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The prayer of him that humbleth hym selfe, goeth thowte the cloudes, tyll he come nye. * He wyl not be comforted, nor goo her waye, tyll the highdest God haue respecte vnto her, geue true sentence and persourme the iudgemente. And the Lord wyl not be slacke in commyng, nor say longe tyl he hath smytten in sounder the backes of the vnmereful, and aduenged hym selfe of the heathen: tyll he haue taken away the multitude of the cruell, and broken the Scepter of the vnyghteous, tyll he geue euery man after his woikes and rewarde them after theyr doinges: tyll he haue deliuered his people, mayntened theyr cause, and reioysed them in his mercy. O howe saye a thyng is merce in the tyme of anguysh & trouble: It is lyke a cloude of rayne, that cometh in the tyme of a drouth.

Whe mercy vpon vs O Lord, thou God of all thynges. Haue respecte vnto vs, weue vs the light of thy mercyes, & sende thy feare among the heathen & strangers, whiche like not after the, that they maye knowe howe that there is no God but thou, & that they may weue thy wonderful woiches. Lyste vp thine heade ouer the outlandyshe heathen, that they maye learne to knowe thy myght, and power. Lyste as thou arte halowed in vs before them, so byng to passe, that thou mayest be magnyfied also in the before vs: that they may knowe the, lyke as we haue we the. For there is none other God but onely thou, O Lord, Reue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderful woiches. Shewe thyne hande, and thy ryghte arme gloriously. Raise vp thy indignacion, and powere ouer thy wyathe. Take awaye the aduersaie and synne the enemye. Make the tyme shorte, remember thy conuainit, that thy wonderful woiches maye be praised. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them that lyue so carelesse: and let them perishe that doth the people hurte. Smit in sounder the heade of the pynters that be oure enemyes, and saye there is none other but we.

Gather all the trybes of Jacob together againe, that they maye knowe howe that there is none other God but onely thou, that they may weue thy wonderful woiches, and be thou thy peoples heretage, lyke as from the begynnyng. O Lord, haue merce vpon the people, that hath thy name, and vpon Israel, * whom thou haste lykened to a fyre boyme soune. O be mercifull vnto Ierusalem the cytye of thy sanctuarie. * the cytye of thy rest. Fyll it on wth thy unspeakable vertues, and thy people wth thy glory. Gueve witness vnto thy creature, whome thou madest from the beginning and saye vp the prophetes that haue ben shewed in thy name. Rewarde them that wayte for the, that thy prophetes may be found sayth full. O Lord, heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordinge to the blessinge of Aaron ouer thy people: & saye thou vs in the waye of righteousness: & that all they which dwel vpon the earth maye knowe that thou arte the Lord the eternall God, whiche is from euerylastyng.

The hely denoureth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as the rounge tasterh vnto some, & so dothe an herte of vnderstandyng marche false woices. A frowarde herte geueth heynesse, but a man of experience lyfeth hym vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better then another. A saye wyfe reioyseth her husbnde, and a man loueth nothyng better. If she be louyng and vertuous wythall, then is not her husbnde like other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: he is vnto him a helpe, and wyll where vpon he resteth, where no hedge is, there the goodes are spoyled: & where no houswife is, there the frendles mourneth. Like as there is no credde geuen to a robber, that goeth from one cytye to another: so is not the man beleued, & hath no nest: and must turne in, where he maye abyde in synne.

Of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Col. xliij.

Let the remembrance of the derde cease in hys rest, and comforte thy selfe agayne our prin, seynge his sperte is departed from hym. The wysdome of the scrpe is as conuenient tyme of reste: and he that cralleth from exerceise and labour shalbe wyse.

He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in p[ro]ddynge, and dryynge the oxen, and goeth about w[ith] such wo[or]kes, he can speake of oxen: he setteth hys herte to make sowes, and is diligent to gyue the h[er]ne fodder. So is every carpenter also and wo[or]kemaister that laboureth w[ith] hys h[er]te and daye: he carueth, graueth, cutteth oute, and hys desyre is in sonnyng conynge thynge, hys herte ymagineth howe he maye conynge cast an ymage, hys diligence also and wat[er]pyng perfourmeth the wo[or]ke. The proumythe, in lyke maner bydeth by hys styde, and dothe hys dyligence to labour the p[ro]m. The vapour of the fyre burneth hys scryp, he maketh fyghte w[ith] the heate of the tognar. The noyse of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, & his eyes loke w[ith] hys herte to the thynge that he maketh. He hath set his mynde thereupon, & he wil make out of his wo[or]ke, & therfore he wat[er]cheth, howe he maye let it out, & bring it to an end.

So doth the potter syt by hys wo[or]ke, he turneth the whele about w[ith] his fete, he is diligent and carefull in al doynge, & his labour and wo[or]ke is without nomb[er]. He fashoneth the clape w[ith] his arme, & w[ith] his fete he tempereth it. hys herte ymagineth howe he maye make it pleasaunte, & his dyligence is to clenche the ouen. All these hope in their handes, & every one thynketh to be conynge in hys wo[or]ke. Without these maye not the cities be mayntayned, inhabited, nor occupied: and they come not bye in the congregacion, nether sit they vpon iudgement seates: they vnderstande not the couenaunte of the lawe: they cannot declare equite & iudgement: they cannot finde out the darthe sentences, but thowow them shal the creature of the wo[or]ld be mayntened, they praye concerning onely the wo[or]ke and labour of conynge.

The xxxix. Chapter.

¶ A wyse man. The wo[or]kes of God. Into the good, good thynges profyte, but into the euill, euill thynges are euill.

That applyeth hys mynde to vnderstandyng the lawe of God, dothe dyligently seke oute the wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exerceiseth hym selfe in the p[ro]phetes. He heareth the saynges of famous men, & preachteth to vnderstandyng of darthe sentences of wysdome. He sekethe oute the mysterie of secrete saynges, and exerceiseth hym selfe therein continually. He doth serue among great men and appereth befoze the p[ri]nce. He goeth into a straunge countrie, & traunspareth thowowe it: loke what good or euill is amonge them, he p[ro]ueth it & sekethe it out. He purpoiseth in his herte to reioyce euer vnto the Lord that made hym & to praye befoze the best God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & praiceth for his synnes. W[ith] the great Lord wyll, he shalbe fylled w[ith] the sperte of vnderstandyng that he maye then put out w[ith] his synnes, & geue thankes vnto the Lord in his prayer. He shal order his deuyce, & leade w[ith] his knowlege a ryght & geue hym vnderstandyng of secrete thynge. He shal the w[ith] the science of his learnyng, and reioyce in the couenaunt of the lawe of the Lord. The whole congregacion shal commend his wysdome & it shal neuer be put out. The remembrance of hym shal neuer be forgotten, & his name shal be cleme fro one generacyon to another. His wysdome shal be spoken of among the people, & the whole congregacion shal openly declare his prais, while he liueth he hath a greater name then a thowad befyde: & after his death, the same name remaineth vnto hym. Yet wyll I speake of moo men of vnderstandyng. For I am ful as the mone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyliden) byynge for the fruite, as the Rose that is planted by the brookes of the seide, & geue ye a sweete smel as Libanus. Flourish as the Rosegardeyn syng a songe of prais. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all his wo[or]kes. Geue gloire and honoure vnto the Lord, geue hys prais w[ith] your leppes. Pre, euen w[ith] the songe of your leppes, w[ith] carpes, and playnge, and ingynge thankes vnto hym, saye after this maner. Al the wo[or]kes of the Lord are exceeding good, and all hys commaundementes are mete and conuenient in due season.

A man neede not to saye what is: what is that: For at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, & at the wo[or]d of his mouth the water stode still. In his commaundement is euerie thynge acceptible & reconpled, and hys healt cannot be mynyshed. The wo[or]kes of all floure are befoze him, & there is nothynge h[er]d from his eyes. He seyth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng & there is nothynge to wonderfull, or h[er]d vnto hym. A man neede not to saye then, what is this: or that: For he hath made al thynge to do good vnto man. hys blessing shal renne ouer as the stream, and moysture the earth lyke a floude of water. Like as he maketh water for yowth so shal his wrath fall vpon the heathen.

His wayes are playne & ryght vnto the iust but the vngodlye stable at them. For the good are good thynge created from the begynnyng & euill thynge for the vngodly. Al thynge necessarye for the lyfe of man are created from the beginning: water, fyre, yre, salt, meale, whete and hony, mylke, and wyne, oyle, and clothyng. All these thynge are created for the best to the faythfull. But to the vngodlye shal all these thynge be turned to hurt and harme. There be spertes that are created for vengeance, and in they rigourousnes haue they fastened their torment. In the tyme of the ende they shal put out they strength, & pacify the wrath of hym & made them. Fyre, halye, hunger, and deathe: all these thynge are created for vengeance. The seeth of wilde noysome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the swarthe are created also for vengeance, to the destructio of vngodly. ¶ All they shalbe

They shalbe glad to be in the world: and when neede is, they shalbe ready vpon earth: and when theyr houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commandment of the Lord.

Therefore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the begynnyng, and thought to put these thinges in writing, and to leane them behinde me. * All þe wordes of the Lord are good & he getteth euery one in due season, & whē neede is, so þat a man neede not to say: this is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasant & good: And therefore praye þe Lord with whole heart & mouth, and geue thanks vnto his name.

The .xl. Chapter.

¶ Of the myghte of the Lord in a mans lyfe. All thynges possibill are, but a fynde and a stable faphe to the myghte of the Lord. Of the myghte of the Lord and the myghte of the Lord.

The creature of all thinges is created for all men, and an heuyn pothe vpon all men chyldren, from the daye that they goo out of theyr mothers wombe, tyl they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the herte counsell, meditations, longynge, and desyre the daye of death: from the highest that sitteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and moost simple vpon the earth: from hym that is gorgeously arrayed, and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is but homely, and simply clothed. There is nothyng but wyathe, zeale, feartulnesse, vniquietnesse, & feare of death, reprouous, anger, & stryfe. And in the nyght, when one shulde rest & sleape vpon his bed, the slepe chaungeth his vnderstandynge & knowlege. A lytle of nothyng is bysrest, in the sleape as wel as in the day of labour.

He feareth and is dysquieted in the vision of his herte, as one that renneth out of a battaile and in the time of healt he awaketh and marueleth that the feare was nothyng. Such thinges happen vnto al fleshe, both man and beast: but leue folde to the vngodly. Whosoner, death bloudesthedynge, stryfe, and sweate, oppressio hunger, destruction, and punishment: * these chynge are all created agaynste the vngodlye & for theyr sake came the floude also. * Al that is of the earth, shall come to earth agayne: and al waters ebb agayne into the see. Al bydes & vniygteousnesse shalbe put awaye, but fapthfulnes and trouth shal endure for euer. The substance & goodes of the vngodly shalbe dyed vpon and synke awaye as the water floude, and they shal make a soude like a great thoder in fyre.

¶ The an the ryghteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressours be saynt, when theyr goodes vanyshe and consume awaye. * The chyldren of the vngodlye shal not obtayne many byaunches and the vni-cleane rootes vpon the hye rocken, shalbe rooted oute before the grasse by the water syde and vpon the ryuer bankes.

¶ A synnyfull and lyberallite in the increase and blessing of God, is lyke a paradise & garden of pleasure: such mercy also and kyndnes, endureth for euer. * To labour and to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasant lyfe and that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chyldren and to repayre the cytie maketh a perpetuall name, but an honest woman is moze worth then them bothe. A line and murtherer reioys the herte, but the loue of wisdom is aboue them bothe.

¶ Ppyng and harpyng make a swete nosp, but a frenchly tonge goeth beyonde them bothe. Thyne eye despyeth fauoure and beuote, but a grene seide tyme, rather then them both. A frend and companion come together at opportynite but aboue them bothe is a wife that agreeth with her husbende. One by other helpeth another in tyme of trouble, but alme: shall deliuer moze then them both. Gold and siluer fasten the seete but a good counsell is moze pleasant then them both. Tempozall substance and strength, lyfe vpon the mynde: but the feare of the Lord wanteth not pyng, and nedeth no helpe.

The feare of the Lord is a pleasant garden of blessing, and nothyng so bewtiful as it is. Whome leade not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loleth to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne lyfynge howe to vpholde his lyfe, for he seadeth hym selfe with other mens meate. But a wyle and wel nurtered mā wyl be ware therof. Begging is swete in the mouth of þe vngodly, but in his belly there burneth a fier.

The .xli. Chapter.

¶ Of the remembrance of death. Death is not to be feared. It curseth them that forsake the lawe of God. Good name and fame. An exhortacion to giue herte vnto wisdom. What thynges a man ought to be ashamed.

Deth, how bytter is the remembrance of the, to a man that seeketh rest and comfort in his substance and ryches, vnto the mā þat hath: orbing to bere him, and that hath prospered in all thinges, yet, vnto him þat yet is able to receaue meat. Death, howe acceptable and good is thy iudgement vnto the nedfull, and vnto him whose strength faileth, & that is nowe in the last age, and that all thinges is full of care and feartulnesse: vnto him also þat is in dyspayre, & hath no hope nor pacience. Be not then afraid of death remember them that haue bene before the: and that come after the: this is þe iudgement of the Lord ouer all fleshe. * And why woldest thou be agaynst the pleasure of the byester: Althether it be ten hundred, or a thousand peates: death asketh not howe longe one hath lyued.

The chyldren of the vngodly are abhominable chyldren, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The inheritance of vngodly chyldren shal come to naught, and their posterite shal haue a perpetuall shame and cursyon. The chyldren complaine of an vngodly father, and why? for theyr sake they are rebuked and dyspyed. Alas be vnto you, O ye vngodly whyche haue forsaken the lawe of the Lord: God: yf ye be bozne, ye shalbe bozne to cursyon: yf ye dye, the curse shalbe pouer poyson.

again: so go the vngodly also out of the crosse into destruction. The lazour of men is in theyr bodye: but the name of the vngodlye shall be put out. * Labour to get the a good name, for that shall conserue thee by the, then a thousande greater treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nobbe of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

* Wyth thyngs kepe thyselfe in peace for wisdom that is hye: and a treasure that is not sent, what profyte is in them both? A man that hyeth his soule by wisdom, is better then a man that hyeth his wisdom. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges & alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth must proue and measure it. Be ashamed of whoredome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lechery before the wynde & men of auctorite: Of sinne before the Judge and ruler. Of offence before the congregation & people: Of vnrightheousnes before a companion and frende. Of theste, before thy neighbours. * As for the truth of God and his conuynce, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thine elbowes vpon the breste: Be ashamed to looke vpon harlots: Be ashamed to turne away thy face fro thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue: Be ashamed also to looke vpo another manes wyfe, and to make anye triflyng wordes with her maiden, or to stand by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vphylde thy frende when thou geueste anye thyng, caste him not in the teeth withal.

¶ Secretes maye not be open. The lawe of God muste be caught. A daughter, a woman, God knoweth all thynges, men the secretes of thy heart.

Reache not a thyng twyse, & disclose not the wordes, yf thou hast heard in secretes. Be shamefast & well mannered in dede, so shall euery man fauoure the. Of these thynges be not ashamed, & accept no person to offend. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the conuynce of Judgement to byng & vngodly fro his vngodlines vnto rightheousnes: & to make him a good man: to deale faithfully wth thy neighbour & companion: to distribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to be diligent to kepe trewe measure and weyght: to be contente wher thou gettest much or lytle: to deale trulye with temporal goodes: in byng & sellyng, to byng vphylde with diligence, to correcte an euil seruante, to kepe thyne is from an euil wyfe to set a locke wher many pades are: what thou belyuerest and geueste out to be kepte, to tell it, & to wepe it: to wyte vp all thy oute geuyng & receayving: to enforme the vnlarned and vndis: Of the aged, that are iudged, of the yong. If thou be diligent in these thynges, truly thou shalt be learned & wyse and accepte of al men.

The daughter maketh the father to wathe secretly: and the carefullnes yf he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yea, in the pouthel he walde ouer growe hym: And when he hath an husbande, lest he shulde be hated: lest he shulde be despyed or caught in her vngodlynes, or got ten with childe in her fathers house: Or when she cometh to the man, lest she behaue her selfe not righthe, or conserue vnfaythfull. * If thy daughter be wanton kepe her straitly, lest she cause thine enemies to laugh the to scoorne, & the whole cite to gear the an euil reposte, & so thou be sayne to beare the name of euery man, & be confounded before al the people. * Beholde not euery bodyes bewte, and haue not to muche dwellynge amonge women. For lyke as the wyome & mothe cometh oute of the clothynge, so doeth wychednesse come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frenchie wife that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remember the wordes of the Lorde, and declare the thynges that I haue sene. In the wordes of the Lorde are his wordes. The sunne overlooth all thynges with hys wyne, and all hys wordes are ful of the cle arnesse thereof. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe that his wyntes shulde tell oute all his wonderous wordes, whiche the Almyghty Lorde hath stablished? Al thynges endure in his gloze. He scheweth oute the grounde of the deepe, & the herte of men, & he knoweth all their ymagi nation and wisdom. For the Lorde knoweth all science, and he looketh into the token of the time. He declareth the thynges that are passe & for to come, & discloseth thynges yf are secretes.

* No thought maye escape hym, neyther maye any word be hid from hym. He hath ga thyshed the hye excellent wordes of his wisdom, & he is from euerylastyng to euerylastyng. Vnto hym maye nothyng be added neyther ca he be minished, he hath no nede of any mans counsell. O, howe amiable are all hys wordes, and as a sparke to looke vpon. They lye all, & endure for euer: and when soeuer nede is, they are all obedyente vnto hym. They are double, one agaynst another: he hath made nothyng that hath faule or blemyshe. * He hath stablished the goodes of euery one: and who maye be satisfied with his gloze, when he seeth it?

The gloze of the hyght, is the saye and cleere spymament, the bewte of the heauen is hys gloriouse cleardnes. The sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the goyng out of it, a maruelous worke of the hyght. At noone it burneth the earth & who maye abyde for heat therof? Who so hepeeth an oven when it is hote the times moze doeth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, wher it bethereth oute the fyre beames & shyneth wth the hyghnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the Lorde yf made it, & in hys commaundement he causeth it to rume hally.

* The Moone also is in al, and at convenient season it sheweth the tymes & is a token of the time. * The token of the solymne feaste is taken of the Moone, a lyght yf minished & increaseth againe. The moneth is called after yf moone it groweth wonderously in her charyngge.

The army of heuen also is in the hyght in the firmament.

symmentes of heauen: it gruerh a cleare and glorious wyne. Thy is the cleareness of the starres, the bewyfull apperell of heauen, the apperell that the Lord lighteth in the depeyth In his holpe woche they contynue in theys order, and not one of them faileth in his watche.

Gen. 1.3 * Loke vpon the rayne howe, and prayse hym that made it: verp be wofull is it in his wyne. He compasseth the heauen aboute with his cleare nelle and gloire, the bandes of the hyghest hath bended it. Thow the hye commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thunder of his iudgemente to symre hastily. Thow the hye comaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the fowles. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and wofull the houle stones. The mountaynes melte at the syghte of hym the wynde bloweth accordyng to his wil. The sounde of his thoder beareth the earth and so dorch the skyme of the skoth: the whoyle wynde also lygeth downe as a fetherd foule catterth out and lygeth the snowe a brode: and as the grethoppers that destroy al, so fallerth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewyfe of the withnesse thereof, and the dette is affrayed at the rayne of it. He poureth oute the frost vpon earthe lyke salte, and when it is trofen, it is as sharpe as the pyche of a thysle.

Whenthe colde froz the wynde bloweth, harde Thys shall cometh of the water. He lygeth downe vpon all the gatherynges rogether of water, and putterth on the waters as a breast plate he deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wylbernes: & looke what is grene, he putterth it out lyke fyre. The medecyne of all these is whet a cloude cometh hastily: & when a dewe commeth vpon the heate it shall be refreshed agayne D In his woche he spillet the wynde: In his couuncel he setteth the depe, and the Lord Jesus planted is. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of the parcelles and harmes thereof, and when we heare it with oure eares, we maruaile thereat.
For there be straunge wonderous woches by uerse maner of nyce beastes & whalpyshes. Tho-rowe hym are al thynges set in good order, & par-fourmed, and in his woche all thynges endure.

I speake muche, but I cannot suffycently attayne vnto it, for he him selfe onely is the perfection of all woches. We shulde prayse the Lord after al our power, for he is grete in al his woches. The Lord is to be feared, per, very grete is he, * and maruelous is his power.
Prayse the Lord, and magnifye him as muche as ye may, yet doth he farre exceed al prayse. O magnifye hym with al your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able, suffycent ly to prayse hym. Who hath seene hym, that he myghte tell vs:

* Who can magnifye hym so greatlye as he is. For there are hyd pet greater thynges then these be: as for vs, we haue seene but fewe of his woches. For the Lord hath made all thynges and geuen wysdome to suche as feare God.

The. clif. Chapter.

Thy is the cleareness of the starres, the bewyfull apperell of heauen, the apperell that the Lord lighteth in the depeyth

I Et vs commende the noble famous men, and the generacyon of our forefathers. Many more gla-rious actes hath the Lord done, and he dede his grete power euer sence the beginning. The noble famous me ragged in theys hyngedomes, and bare excellent rule.
In theys wysdome and vnderstandyng, they followed the counsell thewed in the prophetes.
They led the folke thow the counsell & wysdome of the scribes of the people. Wyle sentences are found in their instruction. They sought the swerues and melody of musyke, & broughte forth the pleasaunte songes in scripture. They were ryche also, and coude comfort and pacify those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honourable men in theys genera-cions, and were well reposed of in their times.
These haue lefte a name behynde them, so that theys prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. Afterwarde, there were some, whose remembraunce is gone. * They came to naughte and perished as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene bozne: yea, & their chyliden also with them.

Reuerthelike, there are the lounge men, whose ryghteousnesse shall neuer be forgotten but contynue by theys prosperite. Theys chy-lden are an holpe good herpyage: Theys seeden dureth fast in the couenaunte. For theys sakes shall theys chyliden and seed continue for euer, & theys prayse shall neuer be put downe. Their bodpes are buried in peace, but theys name lyueth for euer moare. The people can speake of theys wysdome, and the congregacyon can talke of theys prayse. * Enoch walked ryghte and acceptably befoze the Lord: therfore was he translated for an example of a mendmente to the generacions. * Noe, was a stedfast & ryghtous man, and in the time of wyath he became a reconsylyng. Therfore was he lefte a remnaunte vnto the earthe, when the floude came.
In euerlastyng couenaunte was made wyth him, that all fleshe shulde pery the nomore in the water. Abraham was a grete father of manpe people, in gloire was there none lyke vnto hym. He kepte the lawe of the hyghest, and came into a couenaunte with him. He let the co-uenaunte in his fleshe, and when he was proured, he was founde fapthfull. Therfore woze God vnto hym, with an othe, & he wolde blisse all people in his seede, that he wolde multiplie and increase him as the duste of the earthe, and to exhalte his seede as the starres: per, and that his seede shulde haue the posseltyon, an inheritaunce of the lande from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the world.

* Wyth Isaac dyd he stablyshe the same couenaunt, for Abraham his fathers sake. Per, that gracpous blesyng, and helth of all mens couenaunte dyd he stablyshe wyth Isaac, and made it rest vpon the heade of Jacob, he knewe hym: in that he prospered hym so wel and rygh-ly, and gaue them an heritage and sundyed his popyon by it selfe, * and parted it amonge the twelue

the lawe of Moses. Wherefull men broughte he out of him, which found favour in sight of all flesh.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The people of Moses, Aaron, and Samuel.

Moses belovyd of God and menne, whose remembrance is in his praise hym that the Lord made hym in the gloire of the sayntes, and magnified hym, so that the enemyes stood in awe of hym. Therefore hym woordes be dyd great wonders. He made hym great in the sight of kynge, gave hym commaundement before his people, and the Lord hym his glorious power. He stablyshyd hym with faithfulnesse and mekenesse, and chose hym out of all men. For he herde hym voice, and he led hym in the darke cloude, and there he gave hym the commaundementes, yea, the lawe of lyfe and wysedome that he myght teache Jacob the covenante and Israell hym lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of the trybe of Leuy, exalted hym, and made hym suche lyke. An everlasting covenante made he with hym, and gave him the priesthode in the people. He made hym glorious in bewtyfull aray, and clothed hym with the garmente of honour. He put perfecte loye upon hym, and girded hym w strength. He deckt hym with shydelowes, and a tunicle, with an overbodie cote also, and a gyrdle. Rounde about made he hym belles of gold, and that many: for when he went in, the sound myght be heard, that they might make a noise in the Sanctuary, and geve the people warning. The holy garment was wrought and broidered with golde, velvet, syke, and purple. And in the brestlappes there was a goodlye woork, wherein was fastened lychte and perfectnesse.

Upon the same also there was a woork fastened, and set with costlye precious stones, all bounde with golde: and this he broughte in hym mynistracion. The stones were fastened for a remembrance, after the nombre of the trybes of Israell. Upon his myter there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen image of holynes, a famous and noble woork, garnished, and pleasant to looke upon. Before hym were there sene no suche saye ornaments, and these it be- honed hym alway to use. There myghte none other put them on, but onely hym chyldren and his chylders chyldren perpetuallye. Daily pre- fourmed he his burnte offerynges two tymes. Moses kyled his handes, and anoynted hym with holpe oyle.

Thys was no we confyrmid hym with an everlasting covenante, and to hym seide, as the dayes of heauen, namely that his chyldren should alway mynister before hym, and perfourme the offyce of the Priesthode, and wylle the people good in his name. Before all men liuyng chose he hym, for he shulde offer incense before the Lord, and make obours for a swete sauoure and remembrance that he shoulde reconyle the people of the Lord with hym again. He gave hym au- croptie also in hym commaundementes and in the covenante that he shulde teache Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enfourme Is- rael in hym lawe.

Therefore there stood by certayne against hym, and had enye at hym in the wilderness, namely they that were at Dathan, and Abirams side, and the surpous congregacyon of Choz. This the Lord sawe: and it displeased hym, and in hym wathefull indignacyon were they consu- med. A greates wonder dyd he upon them, and consumed them with the fyre. Besyde this, he made Aaron yet more honourable and glor- ous. He gave hym an heritage, and parted the fyre frutes unto hym. Unto hym specially he appoynted the bread for sustenance, for the Priestes dyd eate of the offerynges of the Lord: thys gave he unto hym and hym seide.

Elles had he no heritage nor poepon in the lande, and with the people. For the Lord hym selfe is his poepon and enderptance.

The third noble and excellent manys: why- nebes the sonne of Eleazar, whiche pleased the God of Israell, because he had zeale and feare of the Lord. For when the people were turned backe, he put hym selfe for the ryghte soone, and that with a good wylle, to pacifye the wra- the of the Lord towards Israell. Therefore was there a covenante of peace made with hym that he shulde be the pryncypall among the ryghte- ous and the people, that he and hym posterite shulde haue the offyce of the Priesthode for ever. (Lyke as there was made a covenante with Dauid of the trybe of Juda, that from among his sonnes onely there shulde be a kyng.) And that Aaron also and his seide shoulde be the herp- tage, to geue us wysedome in our hert, to sadge hym people in ryghteousnesse, that hym goodes shulde not come into forgetfulnesse, and that the honoure myght endure for ever.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The people of Josue, Caleb, and Samuel.

Milke and stronge in battayle was Jesus the sonne of Naue, whiche in steade of Moses the prophet was ge- uen to be a Capptaine of the people, whiche accordyng unto his name, was a great saupoure unto the electe of God to punyche the enemyes that rose up agaynst Israell, that Israell myghte obtayne the enderptance. O how great, noble and excellent was he, whē he leste by his hande, and drew out his sword agaynst the cyties. Who stood so manly before him: for the Lord him self brought in the enemyes. He stood not the sunne still at his commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two: he called unto the hyghest and moooste myghty, when the enemyes pleased upon hym on euery syde, and the Lord hearde hym with the dayle stoned. They smote the heathenlye people myghtely, and in the falling doune they slewe all the aduersaries, so that the heathen knewe his hoste, and all his defence, that the Lord hym selfe foughte agaynst them for he folowed by the myghty men of them.

In the tyme of Moses also, he and Caleb the sonne of Jephune, dyd a good warke, which Samuel the prophete beloued of the Lorde hys God: ordeyned a kyng, and anoynted the princes ouer the people. In the lawe of the Lorde he iudged the congregacion, and the Lorde had respecte vnto Jacob: The Prophete was found diligent in his sayefulnesse: yea, & he is knowne sayefull in his wordes, because he sawe the God of Ipyete. * He called vpon the Lorde Almyghty, when the enemyes pleased vpon hym on eueri syde, what tyme as he offered the lachyng lambes. And the Lorde thondered from heauen, and made his voyce to be heard with a greates noyse. He discomfited the Princes of Tyre, and all the rulers of the Philistynes.

Before hys last ende he made protectioun in the Ipyete of the Lorde, and hys annoynted that he couke neyther substance nor good of any man, no, not so much as a shor, and no man myght accuse hym. After this he tolde, that his ende was at hande, and shewed the kyng also hys ende and deathe, and from the earth lyfte he vpon hys voyce in the Prophecie that the vngodly people shoulde perishe.

Afterward in the time of kyng Dauid there rose vp a Propbet called Nathan: For he as the fat is taken awaye from the offeringe, so was Dauid chosen out of the chyldren of Israel. He tooke hys pastyme with the lyons, and with kyddes and with beastes, lyke as with lambes. * He was not a Spawne when he was yet but yonge, and tooke awaye the rebuke fro his people: what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, and smote downe proude Goliath with the syng: For he called vpon the highest Lord whiche gaue hym strength in his ryght hande, so that he ouerthrew the mighty Spawne in the battayle that he myght set vp the hoine of his people again.

The Lorde tooke away his synners, and exalted his hoine for euer. He gaue hym a covenant of the kyngdom, and a throne of wozshyppe in Israel. * After hym there rose vp the wyle sonne called Salomon, and for hys sake he droue the enemyes awaye farre of. This Salomon reined with peace in hys tyme (for God gaue hym rest from hys enemyes on eueri syde that he myght buyld hym an house in his name and prepare the Sanctuary for euer) lyke as he was wel instruct in his youth, and fylled with wyddome and vnderstandyng, as it wer with a water floude: He couered and fylled the whole land wth symylpentes & wyle prudent sentences.

Kings 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

He gathered golde as tyme, and he had as muche syuer as leade. * He was moued in inordinate loue to warde women, & was overcome in affection. He stayned his honoure & wozshyppe, hys posterite defyled he also in hyngyng the wrauth of the Lorde vpon his chyldren & sorrow after his tyme: so that his kyngdome was deuoyded, and Ephraim became an vnfaithfull and vncoustant kyngdome. * Neuertheless, God forsoke not his merce, neither was he vterly destroyed because of hys wothes, that he shoulde leaue hym no posterite. As for the seed he came vpon hym, whiche he loued, he brought it not vterly to naught but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Dauid out of hym.

14. Thus rested Salomon with his fathers, and out of his seide he lefte behynde hym a very foolpyness of the people, and such one as had no vnderstandyng: * Euen Roboam, whiche turned away the people thozow his counsell, & Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, which caused Israel to synne, & welred Ephraim & way of vngodlynes. In so much that they synnes & mysdoes had the vpper hande so soze, that at the laste they were dreyuen out of the lande for the same. Pea, he soughte oute and broughte vp all wychednes, tyll the vngedance came vpon them.

The xlviii Chapter.

The story of the kinges, Dauid, and Salomon.

Of Iesus the sonne of Sirach. Fol. xlvj.

Then stode vp * Eliah the prophete as a fyre, and his woordes brennt lyke a cresset. he broughte an hunger vpon them, and in hys zeale he made them fewe in nombere. For they myghte not awaue with the commaundementes of the Lorde. Thow so woide of the Lorde he shutte the heauen, and the tymes broughte he the fyre downe. Thus became Eliah honourable in his wonderous dedes. Whom al make his boast to be lyke hym. * One that was deedlye rased he vp from death, and in the woordes of the hyest he broughte hym out of the graue again. He cast doune hynges and destroyed them and the honourable from theyr seate. Upon the mount Syna he hearde the pynnyment, and vpon Horeb the iudgement of the vengeance. He prophesied recompensing vnto kynge, * of daryned Prophetes after hym. * He was taken vp in the strome of fyre, in a charet of hores of the Lorde. He was ordeined in the reppoynges in tyme to pacifye the wraethe of the Lorde, * to turne the heres of the fathers vnto the chyldre and to set vp the trybes of Jacob agayne. Blessed were they that sawe the, and were garnished in loue, for we lye in lyfe: (but after death we shall haue no suche name.)

* Elphas was conuered in the strome, but he lyfens was fylled with his spere. Whyle he lyed he was asraped of no bypnce, and no man myght ouercome hym. There coulde no woide discepe hym, * after his death his body prophesied. * He dyd wonders in his lyfe, and in death were his workes maruelous. For al the people amended not, neyther departed they from their synnes: * tyl they were carped away prysoners out of the lande, and were scattered abroad in all countreyes so that of them there remayned, but a very lytle people, * a bypnce vnto the house of Dauid. Howbeit some of them dyd ryght, and some heaped vp vngodlynes.

* Hezekias made his cytie stronge, conuered hym water into it, dygged thow so the stonye rocke with pyson, and made vp a well by the water syde. * In his tyme came Sennacherib vp, and sente Rabshakes, lyfte vp hys hande agaynst hym, and despyled them with greates pyde. Then trembled theyr heres and handes so that they sorowed lyke a woman traueylng wyth chyld. So they called vpon the Lorde whiche is mercifull, and lyfte vp theyr handes befoze hym. Immedyately the Lorde heard them ouer of heauen: (he thought nomore vpon their synnes, nor gaue the ouer to their enemies: but deliuered them by the hand of Elay. * He smote the hoste of the Assyrians, and hys Kinge destroyed them. For Hezekias had done the thing that pleased the Lorde, and remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid hys father. As Elay the greates and faithfull prophete in the spyrde of God had commaunded hym. * In his tyme the sonne went back ward: he lengthened the dayes lyfe. With a ryghte spyrte prophesied he, what shoulde come to passe at the laste, * to such as were so joyfull in hym: he gaue consolacyon, wherwith they myght comforte them selues for eueryng. He shewed theynges that were to come, and secrete, or euer they came to passe.

The xlv. Chapter.

¶ Of Iosiah, Dauid, Dauid, Jeremy, Ezechiel, and Iosaph.

The remembraunce of * Iosaphas is lyke as when the Apotecarpe maketh many pceious sweete smelling thinges together. His remembraunce shalbe sweete as honny in all mouthes and as the playng of Gulphe at a banket of wyne. He was appointed to turne the people a gayne, and to take awaye all abhomyacions of the vngodly. He dyrected his herte vnto the Lorde, and in the tyme of the vngodly he set vp the woorthyppe of God agayne. All hynges (excepte Dauid, Hezekias and Iosaph) committed wychednesse: for euen the hynges of Iuda, also forsoke the law of God. For they gaue theyr horne vnto other, theyr honour and woorthyppe also to a straunge people.

Therefore was the elect cytie of the Sanctu arpe brente with fyre, * and the stretes thereof lay desolate & wast in the hande of Jeremy, for they entreated hym euell, whiche neuerthelesse was a prophete ordeyned from hys mothers wombe, that he myght roote oute, breake of, & destroye: and that he myghte buylde vp, and plant againe. * Ezechiel sawe the gloze of the Lorde in a vision, whiche was shewed hym vpo the charet of cherubins. For he thought vpo the enemyes in the rayne, to do good vnto such as had ordeied theyr wayes aryght. And the bones of the twelue prophetes flozshed from out of theyr place for they gaue comforte & consolacion vnto Jacob, and deliuered the faithfully. * How shall we praise zozobabel, which was as a ryng in the ryghte hande?

* So was Iesus also the sonne of Ioseder: these men in theyr tyme builded the house, and set vp the Sanctuarpe of the Lorde agayne: whiche was prepared for an euerylastyng woorthyppe. * And Hechemias is alwaye to be commended, which set vp for vs the walles that were broken downe, made the portes and barres agayne and buylde the houses of the newe. * But vpo the earth is there no man created lyke Enoch, for he was taken vp from the earth. * And Joseph whiche was Lorde of his brethren, and the vpholder of his people: hys bones were couered and kepte. Set and Sem were in greates honoure among the people: and so was Adam about all the heastes when he was created.

Symon the sonne of Onias the hye priest, whiche in his lyfe set vp the house agayne, & in hys dayes made fast the temple. The begynning of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldyng and the hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the welles of water flowed out, and were exceeding full as the sea. He toke care for his people, and deliuered them from destruction

The booke.

struccyon. he kepte his selfe, & made it strange that it shoulde not be beleved. he dwelleth in honour and worship among his people, and enlarged the entrance of the house, and of courte he gaue light as the morning starre in the myddes of the cloudes, and as the Moone whē it is full. he shined as the Sunne in the temple of God. he is as bright as the raynbode in sayre cloudes, and as the flowers and roies in the spring of the yere, and as the feyers of water. Lyke as the bryanches vpon the mount Libanus, in the tyme of Sommer as a fyre and incense that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set with all maner of pprecious stones, and as an Olive tree that is frutefull and as a Cypresse tree, whiche groweth vpon hye.

When he put on the garment of honour and was clothed with all bewtye: when he went to the holie aulter to garnyshe the courtynge of Sanctuary: when he tooke the ppysons oute of the ppeasles hande, he hym selfe stode by the of the aulter, and his bryethren round about in order. As the bryanches of Cedre tree vpon the mount Libanus so stode they round about hym. And as the bryanches of the Olive tree, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in theyr gloire, and the oblacions of the Lorde in theyr handes before all the congregacion of Israel.
And that he myght sufficiently perfourme his seruyce vpon the aulter, and garnyshe the offeryng of the best God, he stretched out his hand and tooke of the brynholysing, and poured in of the wyne, so he poured vpon the botome of the aulter a good smel vnto the best Prynce.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to syng and to blowe with trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce & prayse vnto the Lorde. Then were all the people afrayed and fell downe to the earth vpon theyr faces to worshyppe the Lorde theyr God: & to geue thankes to the Almighty God. They song goodly also with theyr voyces, so there was a pleasaunt noyse in the great house of the Lorde. And the people in theyr prayer, besought the Lorde the best, that he would be mercifull vnto the honour of the Lorde were perfourmed, thus ended they theyr ministracion and seruyce. Then went he downe & stretched out his handes ouer the whole multytud of the people of Israel, that they shoulde geue prayse and thankes out of their lyppes vnto Lorde, and to reioyce in his name. he beganne yet once also to praye, & he myghte openly the thankegeyving before the best namely thus: O geue prayse and thankes (ye all) vnto the Lorde our God whiche hath done noble & great thynges: whiche hath en-creased our dayes from our mothers wombe, and deliue us according to his mercy: that he will geue vs the ioyfullnesse of herte, & peace for our tyme in Israel. Whiche sayethfully he-peth his mercy for vs evermore, and alwaye deliuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people that I ad-dresse from my herte: as for the thyngs whome I hate, it is no people. They that syt vnder the rayn of Samaria, the Philistines, and the so-lye people that dwell in Aschyma.

Iesus the sonne of Synach Eleazarus, of Jerusalem, haue tolkened up these informacyons and documentes of wysdome & vnderstandyng in this booke, and poured oute the wysdome of my herte. Blessed is he that exerceyth hym self therein: and who so taketh such to hert shalbe wysse for euer. If he doo these thynges he shalbe stronge in all. For the light of the Lorde leadeh hym.

The ii. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Synach.

I will thanke the O Lorde and kyng and prayse the, O God, my sauour.
I will prayse the vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper and hast preserued my bodie from de-struccyon, from the snare of traptuous counges, and from the lippes that are occupied with lyes. Thou haste bene my helper, from suche as stode vp against me, and hast deliuered me after the multytud of thy mercye, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from the roaryng of them that prepared them selues to denoure me, out of the handes of such as sought after my lyfe: from the multytud of them that troubled me and went about to sette fyre vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not brente in the myddes of the fyre: from the depe of hell, from an vncleane tonge, from liying wordes, from the wycked kyng, and from an vnerghteous tong.
My soule shall prayse the Lorde vnto death, for my lyfe is we nyghe vnto hell downeward.

They compassed me rounde aboute on eu-ery syde, and there was no man to helpe me. I lied aboute me, if there were any man I wolde sacour me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy, O Lorde, and vpon thy actes that thou haste done euer of olde: namely, if thou deliuerest suche as put theyr trust in the,
and riddest them out of the handes of the wycked. Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth and prayed for deliuerance from death. I called vpon the Lorde the father of my Lorde, that he wold not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude: I will prayse thy name continually, yeldyng honour and thankes vnto it: and so my prayer was heard. Thou saudest me from destruccyon and deliueredest me from vnerghteous tyme.
Therefore, will I acknowledge and prayse the,
and magnifye the name of the Lorde.

When I was yet but yonge, or euer I went astraye, I deliued wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, & sought her vnto the laste. Then sayed she vnto me as a grape that is lone tyme. My herte was in her, then went my foot to the ryght way: yet from yowthe vp, soughte I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receyued her. I found me muche wysdome: and prospered greatly in her.
Therefore will I ascribe the gloire vnto hym that graunteth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do the.

do thereafter. I will be gelous to cleave vnto þe thing that is good, so that I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift myne handes on hye, the way my soule lyghened the row to plesedome, that I knowlaged my foolysnesse. I ordred my soule after her, she and I wer one better from the begynning, and I found her in clemensse. And therfore that I not be forsaken

My heart longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Therow her the Lord hath geuen me a new song, wherewith I will praise hym. * Come vnto me ye vncleaned & dwell in þe house of wysdome: withdrowe not youre selues from her, but talke and comune of these thynges, for youre soules are very thyrske. I opened my mouth and spake: Come & by wysdome with out any money, bowe doune your necke vnder her poike, and your soule shall receiue wysdome. She is hard at hand, and is content to be found. Behold with your eyes, * how that I haue had but lytle labour, & yet haue found muche rest. Receiue wysdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnes of siluer & gold in possession. Let your mind reioyce in his mercy, and be not ashamed of his praise. Wozke his wozke by tymes, and he shall geue you your reward in due season.

The ende of the booke of Iesus the sonne of Sirach: which is called in Latyne, Ecclesiasticus.

The booke of the prophet Baruch.

The fyrste Chapter.

Baruch wrote a booke during the captivity of Babilon, which he sent before Ieremias and all the people. The Jewes sent the booke into money vnto Ierusalem, so they might buy it: to the intent that they shoulde pray for them.

And these are the wordes of the booke, which were wyttten by Baruch the sonne of Nechemias the sonne of Maasias, þe sonne of Gedechias, þe sonne of Se-berias, þe sonne of Belchias, at Babilon, in the fyfte yere, and in the viii. day of the moneth.

What tyme as the Chaldees toke Ierusalem, and brennt it vp with fyre. And Baruch dyd reade the wordes of this booke, þe Iechonias the sonne of Iochin kynge of Iuda myght heare: & in the presence of all the people that were come to heare the booke: yea, and befoze all the noble kynghes sonnes, befoze the Lordes of the council and elders: and befoze the hole people, from the lowest vnto the highest: befoze al them þe dwelt at Babilon by the water of Euphrate. Whiche when they herd it, wepte, fasted, & prayd befoze þe Lord.

They made a colleccion also of money, accordyng to euery mans pouer, and sente it to Ierusalem vnto Iochin the sonne of Belchias the sonne of Maasias, with the other prelates and to all the people whiche were with hym at Ierusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornaments of the temple of the Lord (þe were taken away out of þe temple) that they myght buyng them agayne into the lande of Iuda, the tenth daye of the moneth Syban: namely, the firste velleles (whiche Gedechias the sonne of Iochin kynge of Iuda had made) after that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon had taken Iechonias, with all his princes, lordes, & all the people, & led them captiue from Ierusalem vnto Babilon.

And they sayde: Beholde, we haue sent you money, * to buy you burnt offerings & incense withall: make you vncleaned by a be, and offere for synne vpon the altar of the Lord our God. * And pray for the prosperite of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, & for the welfare of Bal- thazar his sonne: that they daies may be vpon earth, as the daies of heauen: & God also maye geue vs strength & ligheten our eyes, & we maye lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, & vnder the protection of Balthazar his sonne: & we maye longe do them seruice, and fynd fauour in their syght. Pray for vs also vnto the Lord our God, for we haue synned against the Lord our God & vnto this day, is not his wrath turned yet awaye from vs. And se that ye rede this booke (whiche we haue sent to you to be reherced in the temple of þe Lord) vpon the hie daies, and at tyme conuenient.

Thus shall ye saye. * The Lord our God is ryghteous, but we are worthy of confusyon, and shame: lyke as it is come to passe this daye vnto all Iuda, and to euery one that dwelleth at Ierusalem: to oure kynghes, princes, prelates, prophetes, and oure fathers. We haue synned befoze the Lord our God, we haue not put our trust in hym, nor geuen hym credence. We haue not obeyed hym, we haue not harkened vnto the voice of þe Lord our God, to walke in þe commaundmentes that he gaue vs. Synne þe day that he brought our forefathers out of land of Egypt vnto this present day we haue ben enen a mil or leuing & an vnfaithfull people vnto the Lord our God: destroyng our selues vterly, & synnynge backe, & we shuld not heare his voyce.

* Wherefoze, there are come vpon vs grate plagues and dyuers curses. Lyke as the Lord deuised by Moses his seruant: which brought our fathers out of the lande of Egypt, to geue vs a lande that floweth with mylke & honye, lyke as it is to se this daye. Neuerthelesse, we haue not harkened vnto þe voice of þe Lord our God, accordyng to all the wordes of the prophetes, whome he sent vnto vs & to oure rulers: but euery man folowed his owne mynde & wicked ymagination: to offer vnto straunge gods & to do euill in the syght of the Lord our God.

The ii. Chapter.

The Jewes comfited that they shoulde with stand for their synnes. The ieremias comfited them, sayinge that they shoulde not be discouraged, for the Lord was with them. The laste part of the booke is a collection of all the wordes of the prophet Ieremias, which he spake vnto the people of Ierusalem, and vnto the kinges of Ierusalem.
